Women are in the professions of law, medicine, and theology. Journalism swarms with bright girl reporters on daily papers, and women in literature are as the locusts in Egypt. A woman was senior wrangler at conservative Cambridge; another took first honors from the same great college; Helen Reid won the Sargeant prize at Harvard; another woman passed the best examination three years ago in the Paris Law School; Florence Holland won a "double first" in Latin and English at the Calcutta University. There are now in the United States nearly three hundred women practicing law. More than eighty-five per cent. of all teachers in our public schools are women. Industrial schools for girls are being established in nearly every State. In this the South, led by Mississippi, took the initiative. In almost all first-class colleges women are entered on equal terms with men. They are also admitted to the theological schools of the Northern Methodist, the Congregational and Universalist Churches. The Free Will Baptist and other denominations accept women as delegates to their highest councils. The order of deaconess is recognized in both the Protestant Episcopal and Northern Methodist Churches. There are over seventy societies of women engaged in the different educational and philanthropic enterprises. The Woman's Foreign Missionary Societies, which have, with the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, belted the globe, raise and distribute over two million dollars of money each year, while the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, at home and abroad, spends as much in their over forty lines of work. The King's Daughters, going about "in his name," are touching the world's heart everywhere by their two hundred thousand quiet workers. The Society of Christian Endeavor and the Epworth Leagues, with their large contingency of women, make the influence of their work felt in every possible avenue of life. It is said that in the United States alone over 2,700,000 women earn their own living. In Chicago women are on the city School Boards, and are also sanitary inspectors. In almost all large cities women are acting as police matrons. In two States, Wyoming and Colorado, women vote at all elections, State and Federal, while in Kansas they have municipal suffrages. The States in which they have school suffrage are becoming so numerous that I can not keep count. Men of clear political insight say it will not be two decades before we will not think it strange to see women going to the ballot-box in every State in the Union, universal suffrage being the law.

In all this I see the danger spoken of at the outset of this article, and it seems to me it is time for thoughtful people to take their bearings. In my judgment these things should be left to the natural development of the forces at work. My fear is that woman, in the feverish excitement of the marvelous age in which we live, will forget the "weightier matters of the law;" so, in these papers we will not speak of woman's wrongs or political disabilities, but of her rights, keeping in the foreground a little child and the home as the great central figure, about which clusters all that makes life heavenly. A nation is held together best by the dependence of its people upon each other, and the knowledge borne in upon them of a common interest.

Happy is the child who has learned to speak the name "father," "mother," with a full and abiding faith, love, and confidence. The mother that shall have this star in her crown will have swayed the policy of her country a thousand-fold more than she ever will with a ballot, although I have nothing to say against the ballot as a secondary weapon of defense. To such children the fatherhood of God is not hard to understand. The present, the past and the future gather in such a home light which no darkness can dim, no misfortune destroy, and thus the victory over the world is established.

As torch-bearers between the old and the new time, there is great need that the torches be held steadily, so that the flames may cast a clear light. We must not separate the sun's rays from the sun, nor the dawn of day from the eternal life which it offers to the faithful. The great inquiry should be: What can each one do to make the home better, lift the world nearer to Christ, and make all the people a little happier and more worthy to enter into eternal habitations?

I shall be content if all the opportunities of the age in which we live shall bring to both men and women the clear-seeing power of love until it illuminates the world, as it must when the great romance of the nineteenth century, of which everyone of us is a part, shall have settled into the calm reality of an awakened parental conscience. This, and only this, will settle the vexed questions which threaten us to-day.

Victories more important than all the Waterloos are now being won in the quiet home between parent and child—victories which will strike the light for future generations. The woman who can weigh stars in the search for scientific truth has not accomplished for the world one-thousandth part as much as has the wise mother who, having studied the human heart and computed the value of the immortal soul, leads her little child by this knowledge into safe ways.

The world may hail the scientist and pass the mother by, but just over the way there is a time when eternal ages will forget the first and hail the other.

The Children Are at Work.

The children of Mississippi have gone to work in good earnest to build the boarding-hall for Millsaps College. They are in earnest, and they mean business, and they are going to accomplish what they have taken in hand. They need, ought to have, and, no doubt, they will receive the sympathy, encouragement and hearty support of their parents and the older people generally. Little folks can do great things when they are encouraged and properly directed in their work. Indeed, the world can not get along at all without the children. But for the children the world would soon come to an end. They keep the thing going. Here are two good letters:

McNair, Miss.

Rev. I. W. Cooper, D. D.—

My Dear Sir: I am a little boy twelve years old living near McNair, Miss., and I want to act as agent for raising money for the boarding-hall at Millsaps College. I expect to go to Millsaps College in about two years, and I want to do all I can to help build the boarding-hall, as my papa is not burdened with money. Please send me a subscription list.

Yours respectfully,

ARTHUR M. MASON.

You see that. This Mason wants to help build a hall for himself. Every boy who puts a dime in that hall will try to go to Millsaps College, and will want a room in that hall.

Read this letter:

Calhoun Station, Feb. 23, 1894.

Mr. Cooper—

My Dear Sir: Having seen the request of Mr. "Gilderoy" in the ADVOCATE that Millsaps College wanted agents among us little boys in every community to solicit money to build a hall for the accommodation of we poor boys to assist us in getting an education, and feeling a great interest in its success, I write to say that I will act as agent in this, Pearl River, neighborhood. I am thirteen years of age, and hope to be able to attend Millsaps College in a few years.

Very truly your friend,

CHARLIE P. MELTON.

P. S.—I am a son of J. W. Melton.

That is a good letter, and this boy has the right kind of grit in him. Give him one-fourth of a chance, and he will make a man. He comes from among the poor boys—the very class this hall is intended to help. Major Millsaps came from among that class, and he is doing all he can to help poor boys now.

Now, boys, give and collect all you can, and Major Millsaps will double it. God bless Major Millsaps! He knows how it is. He has been there, and he wants to help all the Masons and Meltons, and the other boys in Mississippi.

Your uncle, GILDEROY.

Prohibition in Columbus.

The struggle for temperance reform in Columbus, Miss., has resulted in the triumph of prohibition. The contest began a little over a year ago, when the dram shop keepers tried to get signatures to their petitions for retail licenses. The members of the W. C. T. U. began at once to get signatures to a counter-petition, which is a remarkable feature in our liquor laws.

Rev. George H. Inge, deceased, threw himself into the work with his whole soul, and employed all the power of his wonderful eloquence before large audiences to win his hearers to the prohibition cause.

Rev. J. M. Standifer, pastor of the Methodist Church here, had just been transferred from Greenville to this place, and was Mr. Inge's guide and mentor during the public meetings, and, while shrinking from unusual prominence, exerted a fine influence throughout the contest. The saloon power had been entbroned here for twenty-seven years, with the exception of one year, and seemed securely entrenched and invincible. The W. C. T. U. only obtained a majority of two after two months' hard work.

The liquor party boasted in January last that they would soon reopen the retail dram shops. A local option election was ordered to take place on the first of March, and the contest was renewed. Mr. Standifer was at once recognized as the leader of the temperance forces. By his gentle influence and his example he rallied other ministers to the cause, invited the temperance club to meet at his private study, encouraged the timid, brought to bear on all the power of prayer, and exhorted all Christians to vote as they prayed.

While a member of another church, I must bear testimony to his devotion to the principles inculcated by his own church, and his unswerving advocacy of prohibition.

The county voted against reopening the dram shops by an overwhelming majority, and Columbus by a majority of sixty-seven.

The people of Columbus and Lowndes county owe Mr. Standifer a debt of gratitude which it will be hard to repay, and the friends of temperance everywhere should rejoice that one more brave and true man has fought well the battle for deliverance from the tyranny of the saloon power and the evils of intemperance.

JOHN BROWNRIGG, M. D.

Guesses at Truth.

The stomach is the laboratory where the food is transformed into living force of both mind and body. Much, therefore, depends upon good digestion. A good speech, a fine essay, the solution of a difficult problem, or a correct course of reasoning, is often directly traceable to a well-digested meal. A well-nourished body, nerves and brain are the real causes of work often attributed to genius. The stomach is, on the other hand, a brake which plays upon the fly-wheel of the mental machinery. If too heavily loaded, it checks—may, indeed, almost stop—the higher mental operations. Who has not more than once defrauded himself out of an hour or two's valuable mind-work by too hearty a meal? He who would make the most of his talents, then, must be temperate and prudent in his eating as well as in other things. Besides, many of the lesser ills of life, such as dullness of feeling, abnormal stupidity, despondency and headaches, are the direct results of imprudence in eating. Nearly every case of the "blues" is due to a case of indigestion—the mental manifestation of indigestion.

J. L. BEESON.

Borrowing Trouble.

This is an evil propensity that grows with the progress of culture and civilization. Savages don't borrow trouble. They live from hand to mouth, and are less provident in regard to the future than some animals are. Children don't borrow trouble, because they trust in their parents to take care of them. It is the men and women of Christendom who are continually worrying about what will happen or may happen on the morrow. This kind of borrowing is condemned by our Savior in the most emphatic terms. He says, "Take no thought for the morrow." Here the rendering of the Revised Version is better: "Be not anxious for the morrow." Fretting about what it may bring of disappointment or disaster unfits us for the duties of to-day. The best preparation for the future possibilities is present fidelity. We ask in the Lord's Prayer, "Give us this day our daily bread." We do not ask for next day's or next week's supply in advance.

This is the spirit in which we ought to live—not improvident, and yet not anxious. He who has cared for us in the past, and cares for us now, can we not trust him for the future? He authorized Paul to tell us that all things work together for good to them who love him. Then the only thing we have to do is to love the Lord with all the heart. This love he not only helps us to exercise, but he reciprocates it. He adopts us as his children. And if we are the children of him who controls all things, what have we to fear? Borrowing trouble, then, is sheer atheism. It practically denies the universality of God's presence and providence. Let me repeat an old story.

In the days of the British Commonwealth, Cromwell sent one of his ablest statesmen on an important mission to Holland. But when the ambassador reached Dover there was such a storm raging that no vessel would attempt to cross the channel. The man chafed and fretted at the delay. He was so anxious that he could not sleep. Though a pious Puritan, he seemed to have lost his faith in the wisdom and love of God. His Scotch servant came to him as he walked the floor of his chamber, and said, "Let me ask you, good master, did not God send this storm?"

"Of course he did."

"And does not God know all about your mission and the importance of your speedy arrival at your destination?"

"Certainly."

"Then why can't you leave the whole matter in his hands, and be at peace? He governed the world for thousands of years before you were born. He no doubt will continue to govern it, and govern it well, long after you are dead. Then why not trust him to govern it during the brief years of your mortal life? You are detained in Dover, but he is in Holland, and just as soon as he sees that it is best for you to be there, too, he will arrest the storm and let you cross the channel."

The ambassador saw his folly—his impiety. He committed the whole matter in prayer to God and went to sleep. Alas! how many of us are like him. The antidote for anxiety is faith. Let us believe in God, and we will have a peace which nothing can disturb. "Let not your heart be troubled," said Christ to his disciples, and he said it for us as well as for them. The heart, if stayed upon God, can be free from agitation—from doubt and from fear under all circumstances. The tempests of this world only sweep over the surface of the soul of a true Christian. Beneath all their turmoil and tossings he enjoys a calm that is as waveless as the sea of glass that John saw before the throne of God.—Senex Smith, in Journal and Messenger

God's Plan.

It is sometimes a privilege to die, and it is sometimes a duty to live. If there is no more to be done, we should be ready to go. An aged person, or a person suffering from an incurable disease, however, may have a very important ministry. Such a one can not go until the opportunity to do the prescribed work is either used or fatally neglected. I knew a mother who was bed-ridden for a score of years, and no one could tell why she didn't die, neither the physician nor she herself. But it was impossible. She longed for the release which did not come. But while on her bed she drew her two boys to Christ, and within a week from the time when they knelt at her side and prayed, she closed her eyes and went to heaven. We must serve God in the way he sees fit, and not in the way we deem most desirable. One may seem to be long over due in heaven, if we count by years; but yet the hour does not strike because the plan of Providence has not been carried out.—Rev. George H. Hepworth.

Practical Praying.

True praying leads to true practicing. Let us be rid of the notion that praying revolves around itself. If our prayers do not go out of our rooms, it is doubtful that any special power comes from God into our rooms. John Tauler, of the fourteenth century, said: "Works of love are more acceptable to God than lofty contemplation. Art thou engaged in devoutest prayer, and God wills that thou go out and preach, or carry broth to a sick brother? Thou shouldest do it with joy." This mighty preacher believed, and believed rightly, that there is a practical side to praying. He believed that prayers for the poor, which did not issue in alleviating the poor, were poor prayers indeed. There are some good people who count it as a sign of great saintliness in one who spends the most of his time in praying and reading his Bible; but if such devotedness go no further, it is the mere husk of Christianity. We are to pray to get power to do some effective good to others. Let there be more practical praying.—Exchange.

An Imperative Need.

Here are words which demand most careful heed: "What we need to-day, more than anything, is faith in the doctrine of the Holy Spirit. We need to believe in God's presence around us in nature, God's presence within us in our souls—in one as in the other. He lives in nature; he also lives and moves in our hearts. If we would keep our souls open to him, he would send tides of vital heat into them. If we did not close our hearts, the heavenly Comforter would enter and dwell with us."

No power can be really substituted for the power of the Holy Spirit. We may talk daily and hourly on spiritual things, and yet we shall not be truly spiritually-minded unless we have the enduement of the Holy Spirit. We may wax warm over the question of personal holiness, and yet, unless we have the "vital heat," our contention for holiness of heart amounts to nothing good.—Exchange.

Agnosticism as a Steady Diet.

Skeptical thought may be attractive to some as a diversion, but very few would be willing to subsist upon it as a regular spiritual diet. This is the way the Interior brings out this point: "Why does not 'Col. Bob Ingersoll' take a regular pastorate? He thinks he has something better than Christianity, though we have never been able to find out what it is. Let him try two sermons and one prayer meeting each week to the same people, and let us see how long his little barrel will hold out. Let us see how long his congregation will stay with him. Ah! Colonel, you are a shrewd scamp. You know better. You know that at the end of the fourth week the echoes from the backs of the pews would be your only applause."

"Little by little, the tempter said,
As a dark and cunning snare he spread
For the young and unwary feet;
Little by little, and day by day,
I will tempt the careless soul away,
Until the ruin is complete."

HYGIENE.

How to Escape Contagion.

The sad case of Dr. Stebbins, of the Boston City Hospital, who died recently from diptheria, contracted while pursuing his professional duties as admitting physician to the hospital, may have brought to the minds of many the often-repeated inquiry as to the manner in which immunity from contagion is secured by doctors, nurses and others, whose business brings them so often in direct contact with infectious diseases.

The answer must be somewhat general, as well as a repetition of what has many times been given, but it is not the less worth heeding on that account.

The two greatest safeguards against infection are a strong vitality and carefully selected hygienic surroundings. The perfected human organism, constantly and properly nourished, and with plenty of fresh air, is almost invincible against the invasion of disease. It is simply a question of the survival of the superior. Disease, which is the weaker, is put to route by good health, just as darkness vanishes at the approach of light.

The strength of disease lies in taking its victim off his guard. In fact, its attacks are mostly made in ambush, as it were, insidiously and against the weakest spot in the armor of its victim.

Let a person, in no matter how good health, contract a slight cold or get over-fatigued, and immediately his very strength becomes a source of weakness. The stronger and more virulent types of disease find a vantage ground, and a fight begins which lasts the longer, and is the harder, as the opposing forces are the more equally matched in strength.

It is easy to see that even a physician, over-taxed with work and suffering somewhat from a consequent neglect of hygienic laws, may finally succumb to the disease amid which he lingers.—Youth's Companion.

The Air We Breathe.

It is said that "twelve thousand silkworms when newly hatched scarcely weigh one quarter of an ounce, yet in the course of their life, which only lasts about thirty-five days, they will consume between three and four hundred pounds of leaves."

This seems wonderful, but not more so than the quantity of air a man will consume. In one year he uses in his breathing one hundred thousand cubic feet of air, and purifies over three thousand five hundred tons of blood.

Suppose he does not breathe pure air? Then the impurities that he takes in go into his blood, and must be gotten rid of some way. Sometimes the blood carries them to the skin, and they come out in pimples or boils; sometimes they cause fevers or other diseases. So you can see how important it is to breathe good air. The air of the house is never quite so good as that out-of-doors, because stoves and furnaces make a gas that poisons the air more or less; then the breath sent out from the lungs is poison, so it is very important to have as good air as we can in the house, and to be out-of-doors, walking, riding, or working, as much as possible every pleasant day. At night there should always be fresh air in the sleeping-room. If there is not, the sleeper will wake up in the morning feeling very tired and unrested, and the reason is, he has been breathing air over again until there was no life in it. Remember, if you took back into your lungs one breath just sent out from them that had no fresh air mixed with it, you would die of suffocation in sixty seconds. Don't economize on air. Have plenty of it, and as good as you can get always.—New York Advocate.

To Break Up a Cold.

A mother writes to an exchange that she finds no better home remedy than to drink as much flaxseed tea as possible just before going to bed. To make this, boil two tablespoonfuls of whole flaxseed in a pint of water for fifteen minutes. Squeeze the juice of a lemon into a bowl over two tablespoonfuls of sugar, strain the tea boiling hot over this, and drink as hot as can be borne. The hot drink will cause a profuse perspiration, and the flaxseed, lemons and sugar will relieve a cough by soothing the irritation in the throat. If the cold begins to tighten the lung power, apply a mustard plaster to the chest. Make this plaster of one teaspoonful of mustard to three tablespoonfuls of flour mixed to a paste with the white of an egg, which will prevent blistering. Spread the paste on a piece of thin muslin or cheese cloth, cover with another cloth, apply to the chest, and over all put one or two thicknesses of flannel. Do not delay when you feel a cold coming on. The ounce of prevention is worth much more than the pound of cure.—Health.

AGRICULTURE.

BY REV. J. W. MCNEILL.

The Independent Farmer.

It is a fact undeniable, however much the stringency of money of late has effected many, it has not been so with some farmers. It is true some have been largely independent and free from debt, while others have been almost in want—liens on their stock, crops and land. The question arises, Why this great difference; what has been the difference of management that has caused such great difference of results? The answer might be made by simply pointing out the difference of management of the two cases mentioned. This, however, does not suffice; we have to enter into detail that the true cause may be clearly seen.

Franklin once said: "The way to wealth is as easy as the way to market if you desire it. It depends only upon two things: industry and frugality." The way to success of the Southern farmer is as easy if rigidly followed. It is given in one short sentence—Live at home. Yet this does not seem to be explicit enough. There are some things the farmer must learn if he would free himself from embarrassment. One of the first is to attend to what are considered the small things of the farm. It is an old saying, yet none the less true, "that the constant dropping of water will wear a stone;" "that a small leak will sink a ship." It is equally as true that the constant neglect of small things will bring failure and want. There is nothing that is of greater importance to the farmer than the proper use of time, and yet there is nothing in which he is more extravagant; like water, being so free, that many seem to act as though they thought that there can be no waste. The proper use of time has been the key to success of some of the greatest achievements. Some say a man is lucky, when his luck has been in none other than the rigid and proper use of time. "Unto him that hath shall be given" is as true in temporal as in spiritual matters. His luck lies in diligence in business. He succeeds because God has promised to help the man that will help himself. Failure lies at the door of many a farmer because he does not keep constantly moving. He is vacillating, his efforts are in fits and spurts. Many farmers are not engaged more than half their time, and yet complain of hard times. They expect prosperity under circumstances contrary to every law that governs nature. The clock that runs twenty-four hours performs each of the eighty-six thousand and four hundred seconds separately. The man who would succeed values every hour and minute of the day; each has its attention. The farmer who learns to value time becomes a careful man.

Carefulness is little less in its results than diligence. They should run together. Care of tools, care of stock, care of everything around and about the farm, gives no time to be idle, and is equal in its results to the old proverb, "A stitch in time saves nine." Some leave their tools where they had them last from one year to another. Some have no cover or protection for their stock against the rain and cold. Such a course will as certainly bring failure and want as paying fifty per cent. on borrowed money.

Again, the farmer should avoid the most accursed thing that ever controlled the action of any man; that of trying to keep up appearances. He should never wear fine clothes simply because his neighbor does. He should never build a fine house before he is able. The instances of both are numerous in failures. The test of a man's honesty by the mercantile world is in his punctuality in paying his debts. The farmer's policy should be, Keep out of debt. 'Owe no man anything." Try to make a living rather than try to grow rich. In the former there is moderation and success, in the latter there is risk, uselessness and failure. Follow the foregoing; raise his bread, meat, molasses, hay—stay at home. As certainly as effect follows cause, the farmer will be independent.

Harrowing Oats.

We have practiced harrowing oats for about ten years. The result has been so satisfactory that we will never raise another crop without doing it, provided we can get the soil dry enough at the time they should be harrowed to do so. In preparing the land for planting, it should be thoroughly done by deep plowing. Sow the oats on top the soil, and harrow the land until it is well smoothed; this harrowing covers the oats sufficiently. It matters not whether the planting is done in the Fall or Spring. Whenever the oats begin to throw out laterals, they should then be harrowed. Now use a forty-eight tooth Thomas harrow. This is the best for the purpose we have ever seen used. Before beginning the work, sow about two hundred and fifty or three hundred pounds of cotton seed meal broad-cast on the acre, and then harrow. Many have been of the opinion, when they have seen this work first done, that the crop was destroyed. Let anyone try the experiment with alternate plots, and they will cheerfully lay aside all objections after the crop is matured.

This is given at the present time, as the early part of March has proven to be a good time most years to have work done. We repeat, harrow the land smooth when the sowing is done, and never harrow the oats when the ground is wet.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

A baked lemon is said to be an excellent remedy for hoarseness and one that is often resorted to by singers and public speakers. The lemon is baked like an apple and a little of the heated and thickened juice squeezed over a lump of sugar.

The following is a good receipt for molasses gingerbread. One cup of cold water, one cup of molasses, one-half cup of shortening (beef fat preferred). Add one heaping teaspoonful of soda, ginger to taste, thicken with flour to the right consistency, and bake in a rather quick oven. —Mrs. L.

CREAM SLAW.—Cut cabbage very fine, season with salt, and pour over it a dressing made of two tablespoonfuls of sweet cream, whipped, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, and four tablespoonfuls of vinegar, well beaten; or, the vinegar may first be stirred in the cabbage.

CHOCOLATE PUDDING.—One pint of milk, one pint of bread crumbs, one-half cupful of sugar, the yolks of three eggs, five tablespoonfuls of grated chocolate. Scald the milk, add the bread crumbs and chocolate. Take from the fire, add the sugar and beaten eggs. Put in a pudding dish and bake fifteen minutes. Beat the whites with a tablespoonful of sugar, spread over the pudding and brown. Serve cold.—G. M.

SALAD DRESSING.—One heaping tablespoonful of butter, one dessertspoonful of mustard, one dessertspoonful of salt, half a saltspoonful of cayenne pepper, four eggs, two-thirds cupful of vinegar. Cook until it creams and begins to thicken, stirring constantly to prevent burning or sticking. When thoroughly cold stir through the veal and celery, reserving enough to smooth over the top. Garnish with curled parsley, carrot leaves, or the tops of celery.

THE BEST CRULLERS.—A quart of flour, one-half cupful of lard, one-half cupful of butter, one cupful of soft white sugar, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of baking powder, three gills of milk, two eggs, grated nutmeg, and lemon peel. Rub the butter, lard and sugar together, add the eggs, beaten light, then the milk, the flour and baking powder, add the grated nutmeg and a little grated lemon peel. Have the dough just soft enough to handle, roll out on a well-floured board, and either cut in strips one-half inch wide, to twist, or cut in rings; fry in boiling lard until a light brown, and sprinkle with powdered sugar before serving.—Good Housekeeping.

Mrs. Paisley.

'Thank You'

I was badly affected with Eczema and Scrofula Sores, almost covering one side of my face, nearly to the top of my head. Running sores discharged from both ears. My eyes were very bad, the eyelids so sore it was painful opening or closing them. For nearly a year I was deaf. I went to the hospital and had an operation performed for the removal of a cataract from one eye. One day my sister brought me

ALL KINDS OF PRINTING.

Don't Miss This Chance.

If You Do, You Will Always Regret It.

A $1 Book for 35c.

Always on the lookout for something that will benefit our subscribers as well as ourselves, we have perfected arrangements by which we are able to make the following very remarkable offer:

To any new subscriber, or to any old subscriber, who will pay his subscription to June, 1895, we will send for thirty-five cents a copy of

THE WHITE RIBBON COOK BOOK.

The publisher's price of which is $1.

What is the White Ribbon Cook Book?

A Collection of One Thousand Original and Revised Recipes and Suggestions. Edited by Kathryn Armstrong. A handsome, compact volume of 320 pages, including 40 blank pages for additional recipes.

It is a first-class book of Cookery and Housekeeping, prepared by a practical housekeeper. It is entirely new; copyrighted 1894. While it is not claimed that it is in all respects superior to all other books, we do claim that any housekeeper, even if she have a dozen other cook books, will find this one worth to her more than the full retail price, and that the author has fully carried out her purpose, "To prove that wine, brandy and spirituous liquors of any kind may be dispensed with, and that no culinary requirement necessitates the introduction of these poisons into any household."

The White Ribbon Cook Book is durably bound in the best quality of cloth (not in paper covers). It is printed on an excellent quality of cream laid book paper. It is cheap only in price. It is one of the neatest and handsomest cook books ever issued, the cover design, in grained and embossed silver, being a specially unique feature.

HOW TO GET THE BOOK.

If you are not a subscriber, send us $2.35, and we will send you the ADVOCATE one year and a copy of the book. If you are already a subscriber, but have not paid up to the time designated (June, '95), send the requisite amount at the rate of $2 a year, or $1 for six months, and send thirty-five cents additional for the book.

The label on your paper will show the time to which you have paid.

Orders will be filled in turn as received and as quickly as possible. Subscribers should wait two weeks before making complaint of non-receipt of the book. As this offer may not last long, it would be wise to send at once.

An Ecclesiastical Home.

We hold it to be a rule to which there are few exceptions that every member of the church ought to hold his membership in the community in which he lives. Our Zion is suffering from a breach of this rule. Persons who change their locality often fail to take their church certificates with them, and also fail to make themselves known as church members in their new home. In the country or in a small town, where everybody knows everybody, the danger of loss to the church is reduced to a minimum, as the pastor is almost sure to ascertain the ecclesiastical whereabouts of every newcomer. In the city, however, it is far otherwise. A Methodist may move into a city as a stranger and remain for years without any preacher ascertaining that he is in the world, unless he makes himself known. Thrown thus among strangers without pastoral oversight and without an ecclesiastical home, it is inevitable that he will suffer spiritual loss; and in a vast majority of such cases a process of alienation begins which oftener than otherwise ends in apostasy. The man having no ecclesiastical ties begins to wander around to any place where novelty or sensationalism invites. Sometimes he winds up in another church very much to his spiritual detriment. Frequently the finale is far worse than this. He drifts and drifts until he loses interest in the church and finally becomes a downright apostate. Such cases are of far more frequent occurrence than is generally supposed. The pastors in this city could tell a story just here that would cause many to open their eyes in absolute amazement.

We have a suggestion to make to pastors on this subject. It is this: When one of your members removes from your charge ascertain, if possible, whither he goes and write to the pastor there, calling his attention to the member. Pastors can in this way stop in a large measure the leakage at this point. It takes but a little time and labor, and the results may be immeasurably beneficial. To furnish the member with an ecclesiastical home immediately on his entrance into a new community may be the means of saving him. Pastors are not always faultless at this point. We have known pastors who in such cases have refused to give certificates, telling the parties that they ought to retain their membership in the church of their fathers. Such counsel may be well meant, but is exceedingly unwise.

One Phase of the Temperance Question.

We deem this an opportune time for saying something anent a certain phase of the great and many-sided temperance question. As all the world knows, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has put itself on record through its General Conference as the irreconcilable antagonist of the liquor traffic.

In its utterances on this subject, however, the church has not committed itself to any particular method of warfare. There are three methods of suppressing the traffic—viz., local option, State prohibition, either by statutory enactment or by constitutional amendment, and national prohibition. Now, the General Conference in its deliverances on the subject has not prescribed any one of these methods as the only allowable method; it has not even expressed a preference as between them. And yet the deliverances of the General Conference are in certain circles quoted as if they were authoritative utterances in favor of a particular method—viz., that of national prohibition.

This is a most manifest misrepresentation. We claim to have had special facilities for ascertaining the temperance sentiment of the last two General Conferences—the very ones whose utterances we refer to; and we assert without fear of successful contradiction from any quarter that a deliverance in favor of national prohibition would hardly have had a handful of supporters in either.

A man may be a thoroughly good Methodist and favor any one of the three methods. To denounce every man who does not favor national prohibition as untrue to his church and in league with the whisky forces is, therefore, a gross injustice. And yet this is what is done continually by many of the writers and speakers of the National Prohibition Party. It is for the purpose of uttering a vigorous protest against this method of procedure that these lines are written.

From the days of Washington, Jefferson and Hamilton on until now there have been two political parties in the United States (sometimes called by one name and sometimes by another) which have stood in diametrical opposition to each other in regard to the powers of the general government, one favoring a strong centralized government at Washington, the other putting great emphasis upon States' rights. Neither of these parties has ever been able to claim a monopoly of talent, virtue or patriotism. Talent has been arrayed against talent. Citizenship of the loftiest type has been found in both these parties. And what is true of the past is true of the present. The question of the true relations between the general government and the State governments is one which still divides men of all classes. No man, therefore, has a right to discount the intelligence, virtue or patriotism of another simply on account of a difference of opinion on this question.

Now, the National Prohibition Party goes further in the direction of centralization than any other party that has ever existed in this country. This being the case, there are thousands and tens of thousands of as good people as ever lived who oppose this party on principle. They are in favor of the suppression of the liquor traffic; but they regard this as the proper work of the State, with which the general government should have nothing to do.

Whether such men are right in their view or not is a question which will not here be discussed. The point we make is that a man has a right to hold this view without having his intelligence, patriotism or integrity called in question. The policy of denouncing every man who refuses to unite in a campaign for national prohibition as a traitor to the church and to the temperance cause is not only unjust; it is also silly. Such twaddle has done more in the last few years to retard the temperance cause than almost any other one thing.

Let no one say that we are writing in the interest of a political party. We are not. We are writing in the interest of the temperance cause. Temperance, like every other Christian virtue, is promoted by an adherence to truth and to good hard common sense.

The Kosciusko Tragedy.

A most horrible tragedy occurred at Kosciusco, Miss., few days since. Hon. S. A. Jackson, a member of the Legislature from Attalla county, having published a card which gave offense to Hon. W. P. Ratliff, of the same county, a personal difficulty ensued. The result was that Jackson and another man, a bystander who had nothing to do with the difficulty, were killed, and another spectator was seriously, possibly fatally wounded. Ratliff had been for about fifteen years a local preacher in our church, and for most of the time a very useful one. He was a man of far more than ordinary ability. He had been a delegate to the Annual Conference, and a member of the Legislature and of the Constitutional Convention. A few days before the tragedy, anticipating the affair, he surrended his credentials, saying that he did not wish to bring reproach upon the church.

This horrid affair has its lessons. One of these is a warning to preachers to keep out of politics. Before he entered the political arena, no local preacher in all the region round about was more influential for good. When he became a politician, all this was changed. Samson was shorn of his locks. So it is in almost every case. In most cases of this sort the preacher suffers loss in his spiritual life. That this was the case with Ratliff is shown by the fact that not long since he became a gambler in cotton futures, for which he was suspended for six months. But even should the preacher maintain his Christian integrity, his ministerial influence is inevitably impaired. We have never known an instance to the contrary. The preacher, then, should abstain from any active participation in partisan politics.

Another lesson to be drawn from this sad tragedy pertains to journalism. We think it a bad policy for the papers to publish communications containing offensive personalities. Stife and bloodshed are the usual result.

Where Not to Retrench.

The stringency of the times necessitates a stricter economy than many have been obliged to practice. During the recent period of unexampled prosperity in this country, when all industries were active, money was flush, and labor liberally remunerated, men did not feel constrained to keep so careful a hand upon their pocketbooks and so close an eye to their expenditures as they do now, when business is languishing, money is tight, and thousands on thousands of laborers are out of employment. To the sober and industrious, whose earnings when times were good barely supported themselves and their households, despite the observance of extreme frugality, it is indeed hard to have their wages suddenly stopped. Nor is it scarcely less trying to the men of wealth, whose investments are yielding small, if any, returns. Luxuries, which, a year ago, they could indulge in with impunity, they must now deny themselves of; and even expenses for the necessaries of life must be reduced to a minimum, or debts be contracted.

Retrenchment is the crying necessity and imperious demand of the hour. But where to begin to retrench and where to leave off, is the perplexing problem. And it is one which each person must determine for himself; for it is to be supposed that each one knows his own business, his own habits, his own indulgences, his own manner of life better than anybody else. However, it might be laid down as a good rule to be guided by, and common prudence would suggest, that that be first dispensed with which is least important to one's well being, and so prune off as the scale of relative values is ascended, till the absolutely essential is reached, which leave sacredly untouched, save, in the sheer stress of circumstances, it becomes unavoidable.

We would place religious privileges at the top. These every Christian should regard as pre-eminent in importance. That surely is most sacred and essential which ministers to the soul's welfare. The individual believer can not afford to deprive himself of the stated means of grace by surrendering his pew to save the rental, and make that his excuse for absenting himself from the Lord's house. Nor can he afford to impoverish his soul and smother its benevolent instincts by withholding his contributions from Christ's cause. If he be a conscientious disciple of Jesus, he needs for his own peace and comfort to exercise the grace of liberality. If, therefore, he must "cut down" expenses, not until driven to the utmost extremity should his gifts to his Savior's cause and the means of his own spiritual welfare, feel the cut of the knife.

The church and her institutions, her Christ-commissioned work at home and abroad, her great, world-wide mission operations, must not be allowed to suffer the deprivation that will result from the process of retrenchment. There are enterprises that can be suspended for a season, and then resumed again without serious loss. It is not so with charitable work in asylums and hospitals and city evangelization and missions. This work must go on without let or hindrance. The work can not be stopped without irreparable damage. Years would be required to recover the lost ground, if it ever were recovered. Retrenchment in any of these fields of Christian activity would be suicidal.

Would that the church of Christ might feel more and more the inspiration of such examples as that of the poor widow of Zarephath, who gave to the Lord's cause the first place, that, too, in the hardest of times. She did not begin to economize at the church and in the Lord's work. Though she had "but a handful of meal in the barrel and a little oil in the cruse," she made "a little cake" for the prophet of the Lord first, and then for herself and her child. Is not her example a rebuke to those who, so soon as they begin to feel the inconvenience of financial depression, at once lessen or altogether stop their gifts to the Boards of the church and to charitable institutions? Is not the temptation strong to be too generous to ourselves and not generous enough in our responses to the claims of Christ and suffering humanity? This question should be seriously considered, lest we be betrayed into the habit of providing, with too lavish a hand, first for ourselves, for our own needs and pleasures, and afterward offer unto God the scanty leavings, if there be any.

We can find no warrant for such a course in the Scriptures. There we are taught that the first fruits are God's. The tithe was to be set aside first. The first of the dough was a heave offering unto the Lord. The Lord claimed, as was his sovereign right, the first of all products. He will not accept the refuse, the lame and the halt, for sacrifice. And when we turn to the New Testament we find such exhortations as these: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness." "Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you"—all rich and poor alike—"lay by him in store as God hath prospered him"—in proportion as we have received—"that there be no gatherings when I come."

No one need be afraid of becoming any poorer by giving to the Lord; poorer, forsooth, by not giving. The sources of our own life begin to run dry the moment we refuse to allow ourselves to be used as the sources or fountains of life and blessing to others.

"Long as they live should Christians give,
For only while they give they live."

It is essential that we consider these truths, lay them to heart, and be guided by them, if we would take any effective part in helping on God's kingdom in this world.—Intelligencer.

A Hint about Reading.

Many of our readers are familiar with the action of a threshing machine. In a short space of time one of these machines will receive into its mouth a great stack of wheat. It will grasp the long dry straw, grind it up in its teeth, crush the grains of wheat out of the chaff, winnow it, and pass the grain out at one side to be caught in the sack, and will pass the straw and chaff on out in a big heap to be carried away. The machine devours the stack, but keeps nothing, digests nothing, retains nothing. A horse standing near will not attempt to eat up the whole stack, but will take just a small quantity and slowly chew it, and will then digest the nutritious part, making it into blood. This blood will build up new tissues and impart new strength. Many readers are ambitious to devour a whole library. They have heard of men who could read five or six volumes a week, and they aspire to imitate them. They manage to get through a large volume in a few days, and, looking ahead, they calculate how long it will take them to read a thousand books. Meanwhile, like the thresher receiving the great bulk of grain, they retain but little of what they read, and in the end have labored for naught. Here and there, however, we occasionly find a reader who, like the horse, will take a small quantity and digest it. From three to ten pages a day they will read slowly, looking carefully into each sentence, and studying it thoughtfully until they undertand it.

They read these few pages over and over, think about them, write about them, talk about them, review them often, until by this slow process of mental digestion they become assimilated, and in the curious laboratory of the brain they are made into a serviceable vitalizing fluid that will enter into the composition of a new product; and an original thought is the result. In this way plagiarism is avoided, and time spent in reading is productive. It is said that Daniel Webster would not allow himself to read more than thirty minutes without closing the book and compelling himself to think through what he had read. Dr. Durbin had the habit of writing out an analysis of each book, and he adhered to the rule of mastering the book in hand before proceeding to another. Henry Clay, after reading about twenty pages of a book, scientific or historical, would stop and speak extemporaneously upon the contents of the pages read. He pursued this method for eight years, and attributed his success as a public speaker to this habit. Most of the time spent in reading is wasted for want of a good method. A few pages mastered will enter into the fibres of our mental constitution and impart strength.—R. W. Bland.

"Gilderoy's" Tonic.

"Gilderoy" having been somewhat worsted recently in a tussle with la grippe, has been taking a tonic with such fine effect that he is enthusiastically recommending it to all his friends. He says the iron in his specific does not hurt the teeth, as he takes it through the handle of a spade. We have been taking the same specific for years, but we take it through the soles of our shoes. Perhaps, if "Gilderoy" had commenced his spading earlier, and kept it up regularly, he would have escaped la grippe, as we have done.

By a letter received from Rev. J. B. Stone we learn that Sister Koon, widow of Bro. Koon, of the North Mississippi Conference, whose death was recorded very recently, is dead. She was taken sick the day her husband died, and after lingering for ten or twelve days quietly passed over the river to join her beloved on the other shore. Six children are thus left in orphanage and in want. Truly the ways of Providence are mysterious to our finite minds.

Best Low-Priced Chapel Organ.

Walnut case; Hard Wood Panels; Finished Back; Lamp Stands; Handsome Fret Work; Full Length Music Desk; Engraved Ornaments; Hand Rubbed; Oil Finish; Pedals covered with Brussels Carpet; Metal Guards on Pedals.

This is the Organ for Churches and Sunday-schools, where a First-Class Action is Desired.

In a good, plain case, the quality of action and tone being the same as in the higher priced styles.

Style 102, 12 Stops.

EPWORTH CHAPEL—Five Octaves, containing four sets of Reeds of two and one-half Octaves each. STOPS—Principal; Dulcet Diapason; Diapason Forte; Vox Angelica; Principal Forte; Cremona; Melodia; Echo Horn; Celeste. Metal Octave Coupler. Boxed, with stool, delivered on board cars at factory.

The catalogue price of this is $87. We will give it as a premium for one hundred subscribers. Send us the cash $200, for the subscribers, and you get the organ free. If you can't get one hundred persons to subscribe personally, perhaps you have well-to-do members of your church who will pay for several poorer members, thereby bestowing a blessing upon them by giving them a religious paper and at the same time helping to procure an organ for your church. If you don't exactly like Style 102, then read the description of Style 302.

IMPROVED STYLE 302 "SPECIAL." EPWORTH CHAPEL ORGAN.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

Rev. Geo. Jackson filled the pulpit at Parker Chapel last Sabbath. He preached a full-orbed gospel from the text, "Come, let us reason together," etc.

Dr. T. R. Markham, pastor of the Lafayette Presbyterian Church, in this city, died at his home on Monday night. Truly a great man in Israel has fallen.

Rev. George Bancroft is now serving the Why Not circuit, Meridian district Mississippi Conference, the supply appointed by Bishop Key having failed to take charge.

The will of the late Sir William Mackinnon assigns $50,000 to missions in India, and $100,000 for annuities for aged or invalid missionaries of the Free Church of Scotland.

Rev. E. G. Kilgore, formerly of the North Mississippi Conference, now of the evangelistic corps, has just returned to his home in Memphis from Missouri. He has held very successful meetings at St. Louis and at Commerce. There were two hundred and thirteen accessions to the church and over three hundred conversions during the two meetings. Good work that!

The Review of Reviews, for March, made its appearance in good time. As usual, it is full of original matter both interesting and important. This able periodical occupies a place in the world's literature which no other periodical attempts to fill. Every man who wishes to keep thoroughly posted as to the great events of the civilized world should take this, the Review of Reviews.

A Word to Correspondents.

We find it necessary to request correspondents to give their names, and also their postoffice and State. We are constantly receiving business letters in which the writer fails to give one or other of these items. We have received, perhaps, a dozen or more letters recently with no signature; and this, too, even when money was enclosed. In such cases we have had to write to the postmaster, asking who procured a money order at a certain date. In other cases no postoffice is given. In such cases we can sometimes ascertain the postoffice from the postmark on the envelope; but often this is illegible, and then it is impossible for us to attend to the business, whatever it may be, until we get a second letter inquiring why we have not done so and so. Oftentimes the publisher is censured when the fault is with the correspondent himself. In order to have business attended to promptly, it is necessary to give name, postoffice and State.

New Orleans District Sunday-School Union.

The New Orleans District Sunday-school Union, M. E. Church, South, held its annual meeting, Feb. 27, 1894, in the basement of Carondelet Street Church; but owing to the few members present, the meeting was adjourned to meet at the residence of Bro. W. B. Thomson, on March 6, 1894, when the following named members were elected as officers for the ensuing year: President, Bro. E. P. Mackie; first vice-president, Bro. W. B. Thomson; second vice-president, Bro. H. W. Spear; treasurer, Bro. J. H. Campman; secretary, Bro. David Zahle.

The president was authorized to appoint a supervisor. The anniversary meeting will be held Sunday, April 15, at 3:30 P. M. in Carondelet Street Church. On this occasion one scholar from each of the following named Sunday-schools will be selected to recite: Algiers, Carrollton, Claiborne Mission, Felicity, Louisiana Avenue, Moreau, Parker Chapel, and Tchoupitoulas Mission.

An Appeal to the Young People of Mississippi.

Dear Young Friends: Millsaps College needs a large hall for young men of limited means. We must build it. The hall is a necessity. Would it not be a handsome work for the young Mississippians to furnish the agent with money to build this hall? If we can get at the work right, we can do it. I want the young Methodists of Mississippi to send me five thousand dollars. Let us go to work in earnest. Let the young people from five to twenty-one years of age send me from fifty cents to one dollar each. Let every church and community be represented. The name and amount will appear in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. May our Father inspire your hearts, dear young friends, to help us build this hall! Let me hear at once from you. Your friend,

I. W. COOPER.

Jackson, Miss.

P. S.—Remember Major Millsaps duplicates every cent you send.

A Great Enterprise.

THOUSANDS AFFLICTED WITH CHRONIC CATARRH FIND CURE FREE.

In order to bring his great remedy for chronic catarrh in reach of everybody, Dr. Hartman invented the following method: Anyone wishing to become one of his regular patients should send name and address, when complete directions for treatment will be sent free of charge. Each patient is expected to report once a month. At no time is any charge made. The medicines can be obtained at any drug-store. The result has been a great beneficence to thousands of catarrh sufferers. The following is a sample case:

Patient, No. 1,627. Name, Lucius B. Cooper, of Biddie University, N. C. Commenced treatment December 16th, 1893. Writes February 21st, 1894: "I am thoroughly cured of my catarrh which had been troubling me for eight years. I waited two weeks after I stopped the medicine to be sure I was thoroughly cured. I think that I would be doing wrong to keep such a wonderful cure secret. I shall do whatever I can to make it known wherever I go. I do not know how to express my praise for Pe-ru-na or thanks to you."

Anyone wishing to become a patient should send in his name and address at once, giving a list of the principal symptoms and the length of time the disease has run.

A BOOK SENT FREE.

A medical book, treating of chronic catarrh, la grippe, cough, colds, and consumption will be sent, prepaid, for a short time to any address by The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Co. of Columbus, Ohio.

Sunday-School Convention.

Dear Sir and Brother:

Our State Sunday-school Convention will be held at Columbus, Miss., April 18-20. We will have Prof. Hamil and a prominent primary worker with us. We want to make this the best convention ever held in the State. Please do all you can at once to get your district aroused to the importance of attending this convention. Write the pastors and Sunday-school superintendents, and urge them to come and send delegates from all schools.

Yours in the work,

J. C. CAVETT,
Chairman Ex. Com.

Meridian, Miss.

Carrollton, Miss.

Last night we closed a two weeks' meeting. The meeting was conducted the first week by our pastor. The second week he was assisted by Rev. W. M. McIntosh and Dr. J. W. Price. Fifty were added to the Methodist Church; eleven to the Baptist, fifteen to the Presbyterian, two to the Christian, one to the Episcopal. At least ten more will join.

J. R. BINGHAM.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists; price 75c. per bottle.

Chambers' Encyclopædia,

Complete in 30 Handy Volumes. Over 12,000 Pages.

Being a beautiful, clear reprint of the Edinburgh and London edition of Chambers' Encyclopædia, a library of universal knowledge for the people, with very large additions upon topics of special interest to American readers, and giving American statistics of population down to and including the census of 1890.

Remember, this great Encyclopædia contains thousands upon thousands of articles, embracing all subjects within the limits of human knowledge; yet, in its more than 27,000 specially prepared articles, while giving pointed, practical, explicit and most interesting and instructive information both for the student and the general reader, it is free from ambiguous technicalities and comparatively void of the mass of scientific signs, symbols and foreign nomenclature which crowd the pages of most other cyclopedias prepared for scientific and professional use alone. The Philadelphia Press well says:

"The particular and unique value of this Encyclopædia is its happy solution of the problem of fullness and convenience. It is neither bulky nor superficial. It is the book of reference for the million."

Chambers' Encyclopædia has always occupied a front place among the cyclopedic works to be coveted.

Do you ever want to post yourself easily and speedily, on some facts or matters belonging to the domain of Biography, Chemistry, Religion, Geography, Medicines, Health and Disease, Physical or Mental Recreation in Popular Games, etc.; Literature, Natural Philosophy, Astronomy, Agriculture, Mathematics, or any of the Arts and Sciences? If you do, avail yourself of this opportunity to secure a set of this great Encyclopædia.

Do you enjoy an occasional leisure hour of delightfully interesting, entertaining and instructive reading, and do you desire to supply yourself with a vast library of such matter, full of variety in all its departments? If you do, avail yourself of this opportunity to provide yourself with this invaluable and popular Encyclopædia.

Do you seek a suitable gift, one having intrinsic value, to present to your relative, or friend, or to your own library, or for the edification of the folks of your own household? If you do, here is your exceptional opportunity.

Our Unprecedented Offer.

The regular retail price of the imported edition of this immense reference library is $30.00. The cost to you for a full set, complete, printed on good paper, in beautiful, clear type, and durably bound in flexible covers, delivered, free of cost to you, together with one year's subscription for this paper, will be only $4.50.

HOW TO AVAIL YOURSELF OF THIS OFFER.

If you are not a subscriber to the ADVOCATE, subscribe at once. Send us $2.00 for a year's subscription with $2.50 additional for the Encyclopædia. We will send it to you postpaid. If you are already a subscriber, pay your subscription to June, '95, at the rate of $2.00 a year or $1.00 for six months, and we will send the work, postpaid, at the same price.

TO AGENTS.

To any preacher or other agent, who will send us five new subscribers with $10 in cash we will send the work free, postpaid.

THE OPEN CASKET.

BY AMELIA H. BREWSTER.

"Stand you by an open casket,"
Gazing at the cherished dead?
For the black-robed mourners 'round it,
Let your earnest prayers be said.
They who've gained the "quiet harbor,"
Do not need a single tear—
Keep them for the stricken mourners,
Left in lonely sorrow here.

"Stand you by an open casket?"
When the last farewell is said—
Think of all God's wondrous glory,
Now enrolled before the dead.
Mourn the "vacant place" beside you,
Keep your tears for earthly woe,
The redeemed can need no pity;
Pity thou who can not go.

"Stand you by the open casket?"
Think you not of the waiting grave?
Look above to Christ the Savior,
Who this precious soul has saved,
Nothing of the living spirit
Rests beneath the grassy sod,
He with all that made him lovely,
Is forever with his God.

"Stand you by any open casket?"
May you hear the Savior speak;
To my "dear ones," oh beloved,
I have sent this "blessed sleep."
I would take them from the sorrow,
Of this life so stained by sin,
Wait the time by love appointed;
Ye shall "all be gathered in."

And the day is swiftly coming,
When some loving hearts and true,
Will again—beside a casket
Sadly grieve and mourn—for you.
But their anguish all unheeded—
You have gained the heavenly away,
And within the Golden City,
Walk with him you mourn to-day.
—Central Methodist.

Where Are They?

BY KATE UPSON CLARK.

A lady who has recently visited in one of the best families in a certain large city was surprised at the way in which the children were treated. They were bright and interesting children, a boy of thirteen and a girl of eleven, and, naturally, very dear to their father and mother. The former was a professional man with large interests; the latter was an intelligent woman, not wholly given to society, though fond of it, and a good judge of literature and art. A day or two after the lady's arrival she observed that though the children were usually present at meals, they were conspicuously absent between them.

"Where are the children?" she asked of the mother.

"I'm sure I don't know," answered that individual, brightly. "Aren't they around somewhere?"

"I haven't seen them since I have been here, excepting at meals," returned her friend. "They were at breakfast this morning, but it is now after eleven, and, if they are in the house, they are keeping very still."

"O, I've no idea they are in the house," returned the mother, laughing. "You would know it fast enough if they were, I assure you. They are probably off visiting among their mates. Mollie spends a great deal of time with Lettice Ault, on the next block. Perhaps she has gone to the park with her doll, it is so pleasant. She is safe and will be back to luncheon, never fear!"

"But aren't you afraid they will get into mischief, wandering off in this irresponsible way?"

"My dear!" with some spirit, "do you imagine children brought up among such associations as mine have could stray away from what is right? I trust my children."

"Excuse me, but they are so very young," murmured the friend, and the subject was dropped.

Another mother, this one with five children to look after, and living miles away from the one who has been described, remarked when she was asked a series of questions similar to those which have been quoted, "I'm so thankful to have them out of the way that I don't trouble myself to find out where they are so long as they are on hand three times a day and in time to go to bed at night." And this was not a "tenement house woman," either. She kept two servants and was a member, as was also her husband, of a prominent church, living on one of the best streets of a small city and in every way highly connected.

Considerable inquiry has developed the fact that a dangerously large proportion of well-to-do and respectable mothers share the feelings of the two who have been described. So long as a child of eight or ten or over will keep out of the way and not "make any bother" it is all right. This is certainly laying a confidence in chance circumstances which would hardly be entertained by an idiot regarding any other kind of property than children, if, for the purpose of comparison, they may be termed "property." So valuable, so easily soiled, so impossible to replace when ruined and so difficult to repair! One shudders to think of the risks which these women, thoughtless and lazy to the verge of insanity, are daily taking.

A certain gentleman attracted the notice of a visitor in his family by the care which he took when going out to tell his wife just where he was going and how long he was expecting to stay.

"I never saw any one so particular," she said, laughingly, to the wife. "Do you exact such accounts as these every day?"

"Not at all," answered the wife, "but I confess that I like it. It is the result of a habit which my husband formed in his boyhood of always telling his mother just where he was going, for what purpose, and when he should return."

Every boy and girl, without in the least hampering their self-respect, can be brought up so as to acquire this habit. If their resorts are innocent, they will not object to telling of them. If these resorts are not innocent, parents should know it. Make it a point to interest yourself in their friends and to study them. A boy who made an excellent appearance was in the habit of visiting in a certain family almost daily. They knew that his parents were wealthy and went to a fashionable church, and thought that a sufficient recommendation. Their son and he went freely back and forth between their respective homes. At nineteen he was discovered to be a most revolting criminal. Their boy so far is out of prison, but he is not a good young man. Whether he will grow better as he grows older remains to be seen.

Know just where your children are, what they are doing there, and what kind of companions are with them every hour of every day, so far as you possibly can. It is the only way in which you can possibly discharge aright the sacred obligations of motherhood.—Congregationalist.

Buy nothing until you can pay for it, and buy nothing you do not need.

A young man who has grit enough to follow these rules will have taken the first step upward to success in business. He may be compelled to wear a coat a year longer, even if it be unfashionable; he may have to live in a smaller house than some of his acquaintances; his wife may not sparkle with diamonds, nor be resplendent in silk or satin just yet; his children may not be dressed as dolls or popinjays; his table may be plain and wholesome, and the wiz of the beer or champagne cork may never be heard in his dwelling; he may have to get along without the earliest fruits and vegetables; he may have to abjure the club room, the theatre and the gambling-hell, and to reverence the Sabbath-day and read and follow the precepts of the Bible instead; but he will be better off in every way for this self-discipline. Yes, he may do all these without detriment to his manhood or health or character.—Churchman.

WHAT CHILDREN CAN DO.

ADAPTED BY C. H. CABRIEL.

First Girl.

O, what can little children do
To make this great world glad?
For pain and sin are everywhere,
And many a life is sad.

Second Girl.

Our hearts must bloom with charity
Whenever sorrow lowers,
For how could human days be sweet
Without the little flowers?

Third Girl.

O, what can little children do
To make this great world bright?
For many a soul in shadow sits,
And longs to see the light.

Fourth Girl.

O, we must lift our lamps of love,
And let them gleam afar,
For how could night be beautiful,
Without each little star?

Fifth Girl.

O, what can little children do
To bring some comfort sweet
For weary roads, where men must climb
With toiling, wayworn feet?

Sixth Girl.

Our lives must ripple clear and fresh,
That thirsty souls may sing;
Could robin pipe so merrily
Without the sunny spring?

All Voices.

All this may little children do
This heavenly world to bless,
For God sends forth all loving souls
To deeds of tenderness,
That this great earth may bloom and sing,
Like his dear home above;
But all the work would fail and cease
Without the children's love.

Literature.

BY REV. J. M. SCHLAGENHAUF.

Our century is flooded with good and bad literature. But not all minds think alike regarding good and bad literature. A man filled with the Holy Ghost has a better conception of good and bad literature than a man whose mind is under the influence of Satan and sin.

A good man uses the Bible to test good and bad literature, and considers all literature bad that is designed to establish bad morals and destroy faith in the teachings of Jesus Christ, and he is justified in doing so. The Bible is the infallible standard of divine truth and Christian morals. Reason without the Bible and the Holy Ghost is blind.

Bad literature fosters bad morals, degenerates the mind, poisons the soul, and leads to vice and shame. Who can measure the power of bad literature for evil? Who can put on record all the broken hearts, the shattered lives and remorseful tears that bad literature has caused? Many a promising and intelligent youth is hopelessly ruined by such reading. Parents might as well allow their children to eat deadly poison as to allow them to read bad literature. One would be as prudent as the other.

It has never added to the welfare of humanity and to the prosperity and elevation of the young. Nor has it ever created statesmen like Geo. Washington, Abram Lincoln, James G. Blaine, Bismarck and Gladstone, or preachers like St. Paul, Luther, Wesley, Whitefield, Spurgeon, Moody and Brooks, or missionaries like Dr. Livingstone, Moffat, Taylor, Fliedner, etc. But it has developed bloody anarchists, daring thieves, and other criminals. Forcibly and well says Mr. William A. Pinkerton, in the North American Review, for November: "One of the reasons for the recent epidemic of train robberies . . . is, however, largely due, in my opinion, to the reading of yellow-covered novels. Country lads (city lads, also) get their minds inflamed with this class of literature."

Every Christian should be on the alert and vigorously fight bad literature. This should be the attitude of parents, who love their children, and earnestly pray for their elevation in life and for their crowning in heaven. Bad literature is as dangerous as bad company. It is the worst kind of bad company. Both are obedient servants of the devil.

But do not forget that the young have a strong desire to read and obtain knowledge and truth. If the young can not obtain good literature, they will get the bad, which they can have at little cost. Why not give the young good and wholesome reading? It can be had.

How Jessie Made Her Teacher Thankful.

Jessie had been away from Sabbath-school for some weeks. She had had the measles, and had to wait till she was quite well before she came back.

But one bright morning she was in her place again, and the teacher said, "I am glad to see you, Jessie." This made the little girl's heart glad.

After the school was over, Jessie waited till the others were gone and then touching her teacher's dress shyly with her hand, and looking up into the kind face, she said, "I am so glad to get back to Sunday-school again. I missed it so when I had to stay away."

And this made the teacher's heart very glad.

Indeed, she went home that day with a happy little song of thanksgiving in her heart, because one scholar had told her so earnestly that she loved to come to the class.

Jessie might feel ever so thankful herself to be in her place again; but how was Miss Lee really to know that, without Jessie's telling?

It was because the little girl had felt it enough to take pains to say so, that the teacher's heart was thankful.—J. H. J.

A Pretty Incident.

The most beautiful thing I saw at the fair was an old woman in one of the wheel chairs, her son pushing it. Her white hair and care-furrowed face showed she had waited more than three-score and ten years for one of the happiest days of her life. The plain dress proved neither was rich in purse; but she was rich in joy, he richer than Gould in making his mother happy. I shall forget many wonderful things I saw at the fair, but never forget the little old woman in black resting so cozily in that rolling chair, her joy-lit face under the aureole of white hair, as her stalwart son bent over and told her some new wonder they were coming to. "Are we almost there, son?" "Yes, mother," he said, smiling at her child-like enjoyment, "and it will take your breath away this time, sure." And she laughed like a girl and he chuckled like a delighted boy, and they passed on, not knowing that anybody noticed them. Perhaps no one else saw their happiness, but he was the one man on the grounds I envied. Oh, the pround step, as he pushed the chariot of the queen of all the world to him! Ah! her proud look as she rode through the throng, attended by the kingliest of men—the man who honors his mother. How much better that money was spent than to wait till mother died in a round of monotony, then spend it chiseling the epitaph death wins from human selfishness.—Binghamton Republican.

Boy Character.

It is the greatest delusion in the world for a boy to get the idea that his life is of no consequence, and that the character of it will not be noticed. A manly, truthful boy will shine like a star in any community. A boy may possess as much of noble character as a man. He may so speak and so live the truth that there shall be no discount on his word. And there are such noble Christian boys; and wider and deeper than they are apt to think is their influence. They are the king boys among their fellows, having an immense influence for good, and loved and respected because of the simple fact of living the truth.

Dear boys, do be truthful. Keep your word as absolutely sacred. Keep your appointments at the house of God. Be known for your fidelity to the interests of the church and Sunday-school. Be true to every friendship. Help others to be and do good.—Child's Paper.

Who can picture or describe the everlasting joy? No one absent. Nor father, nor mother, nor son, nor daughter away.—In the world they were united in faith, and love, and peace, and joy. In the morning of the resurrection they ascended together. Before the throne they bow together in united adoration. On the banks of the river of life they walk hand in hand, and as a family they have commenced a career of glory which shall be everlasting. There hereafter is to be no separation in that family. No one is to lie down off a bed of pain; no one to sink into the arms of death. Never, in heaven, is that family to move along in the slow procession clad in the habiliments of woe, to consign one of its members to the tomb. God grant in his infinite mercy that every family may thus be united.—Albert Barnes.

A FAREWELL.

BY CHARLES KINGSLEY.

My fairest child, I have no song to give you;
No lark could pipe to skies so dull and gray;
Yet, ere we part, one lesson I can leave you
For every day.

Be good, sweet maid, and let who will be clever;
Do noble things, not dream them, all day long;
And so make life, death, and that vast forever
One grand, sweet song.

The Sermon Bible

Embracing the Whole of the Sacred Scriptures.

THE OLD TESTAMENT IN FOUR VOLUMES, NAMELY.

Vol. I. Genesis to II. Samuel.
Vol. II. I. Kings to Psalm lxxvi.
Vol. III. Psalm lxxvii to Song of Solomon.
Vol. IV. Isaiah to Malachi.

THE NEW TESTAMENT IN EIGHT VOLUMES, VIZ.:

Vol. V. Matthew i to xxi.
Vol. VI. Matthew xxii to Mark xi.
Vol. VII. Luke i to John iii.
Vol. VIII. John iv to Acts vi.
Vol. IX. Acts vii to I. Corinthians.
Vol. X. II. Corinthians to Philippians.
Vol. XI. Colossians to James.
Vol. XII. I. Peter to Revelation.

This series of volumes gives in convenient form the essence of the best homiletic literature of this generation. It takes account of the best and greatest preachers, and has been compiled from manuscript reports and fugitive periodical sources as well as from books. Many of the best sermons preached by eminent men are never printed in book form. It thus contains much that will be new to its readers.

UNDER EVERY TEXT IS GIVEN:

1. Outlines of important sermons by eminent preachers existing only in manuscript or periodical, and thus inaccessible.

2. Less full outlines of sermons which have appeared in volumes which are not well known or easily obtained.

3. References to or very brief outlines of sermons which appear in popular volumes such as are likely to be in a preacher's library.

4. Full references to theological treatises, commentaries, etc., where any help is given to the elucidation of the text.

Thus the preacher, having chosen his text, has only to refer to the SERMON BIBLE, to find some of the best outlines and suggestions on it and full references to all the helps available.

It extends to 12 volumes, of about 400 pages each, with 96 blank pages for memorandum notes at the end of each volume.

OUR OFFER.

The publisher's catalogue price of the above work is $1.50 per volume.

We will send any volume, postpaid, as a premium for two new subscribers, accompanied by the cash—$4. If you want the whole set of twelve volumes, send us twenty-three new subscribers with the cash—$46—and we will send the set, postpaid. Remember that this is not an antiquated work thrown on the market at a low rate because there is no demand for it. It is a recent publication which is having quite a run throughout the North.

GRIFFIN—On Jan. 4, 1894, at 2:40 P. M., Mr. WILLIAM GRIFFIN peacefully passed from the walks of men into the presence of God. This was the end of a very long and intensely active, though usefnl and a markedly successful life. He was born in Burke county, Ga., on Oct. 8, 1810; hence at the time of his death he was eighty-three years three months and one day old. Unto him was fulfilled the divine promise—"With long life will I satisfy him and will show him my salvation."

His parents moved to Mississippi when he was quite young. He was reared in Perry county, where he married Miss Mary Carter, with whom he lived in great happiness until five years ago, when God took her to Himself. Of this union nine children were born; three of them are still living, four preceded their parents into the joyous realms of eternal life.

In 1854, Mr. Griffin moved to Moss Point, and entirely engaged in the saw mill business. Here he continuously lived during the remaining forty years of his busy life, contributing constantly and largely, by untiring labors, and by liberal outlay of means, to the development of the business, educational, social and religious interests of the community. His influence was potential in shaping the history and enlarging the life of the town. The magic touch of his life is still felt, and will long remain as an active force in all the circles in which he occupied, for so many years, a conspicuous and honored position. There were many points in Mr. Griffin's character worthy of special mention.

He was well informed. His intellectual endowment was exceptionally good. If he had been favored with careful training in the schools in his boyhood years, he would, without doubt, have attained great prominence among men. His parents were poor, and schools were exceedingly scarce; consequently he was deprived of the early school advantages so necessary to uniform and high development of the intellectual faculties. But he had a strong desire for knowledge, and read much. He read was character'zed not so much by extensive as by thoroughness and thoughtful. He digested well what he read. He read so much for the pleasure of reading as to acquire helpful information. He was particularly well informed concerning the men and political measures that have been prominently before the public during the past sixty years. Whig by profound conviction, he was actively identified with that party until the late war. The people of Perry county recognized his superior ability and elected him as their representative in the State Legislature. Later, he was a member of the famous Sharkey Convention. These positions he filled with credit to himself and his constituency.

Mr. Griffin possessed rare social qualities. He was pre-eminently social by natural inclination, and had cultivated and developed this in close constant contact with men. He loved men, and men loved him. His circle of friends was extensive. His home was always open to them. Here they were the recipients of unstinted and generous hospitality. He was particularly fond of the society and dearly cherished the friendship of ministers of the gospel. Many of them, of all denominations, have been honored guests in his hospitable home.

He was a very successful business man. His father died when he was quite a boy, when he was thrown upon his own resources. This early and hard contact with the world made him observant, and developed superior practical business sense. He had a quick eye to discover opportunities for making money, and rapidly formulated and executed business plans that was phenomenally successful in his enterprises. He succeeded in almost everything in which he engaged. He rapidly acquired property, and at the opening of the war was quite a wealthy man.

Mr. Griffin joined the Methodist Church under the ministry of Rev. Benjamin Jones about seventeen years ago. He was then at the advanced age of seventy-six. At the beginning realized the fact that almost insurmountable obstacles confronted him. The delay of so many years, the frequent grievings of the Holy Spirit and sinful habits so strongly fastened upon him stood between him and heaven. But he threw himself upon the grace of God, and made an heroic struggle. His moral and religious strength grew with his growth of years. He came to hate with a perfect hatred those vices which dominated and shattered his life before conversion. He greatly sorrowed over his not having sooner given his heart and life to God. He loved the church and gave cheerfully and liberally to support all its institutions. He loved the Bible, and was eager to the last day of his life to have its precious truths and promises of life read to him. A week before his death he said to his pastor: "It is all right with me. I am not afraid to die." The day before the end came, in answer to a question concerning his religious experience, he said: "I have a blessed hope of a better life when this shall close."

The funeral services were conducted by the pastor, in the Methodist Church, in the presence of a very large congregation. The large church was filled to overflowing with people who had loved and honored the deceased in life, and gathered to show their sorrow at his death.

LINDSAY—Mrs. S. J. LINDSAY (nee Hays) was born May 1, 1847, and died Oct. 21, 1893, at her home in Wilkinson county, Miss. She was united in marriage with Bro. W. M. Lindsay, Feb. 8, 1860. She united with the Baptist Church in early life, and was a consistent member as long as it survived in her community. Last August she united with the Methodists at Hays Chapel. A truer Christian I never met. To be in her presence made one feel near heaven. She was one of the kindest and best of mothers, a tender and loving wife, kind and gentle to all. She leaves a husband and daughter to mourn her loss, besides a numerous host of friends.

Her gentle footfall and sweet voice are heard no more in the home. Her pew in Hays Chapel is vacant, but—blessed thought!—she has gone to join the church triumphant. May God comfort that torn-up, saddened home and take care of that orphan daughter and bereaved husband! Farewell, but not forever. We will meet and greet her in the skies. Many will rise up and call her blessed.

J. S. HONORS.

Anguilla, Miss.

MASSEY—AMANDA M. MASSEY (nee Dowling) was born in Dale county, Ala., June 8, 1844, and moved to Attala county, Miss., with his parents, Levi and Ann Dowling, in the Winter of 1860. She professed religion and joined the Methodist Church in 1850, and was happily married to B. F. Massey, March 18, 1863, and died in Kosciusko, Miss., Jan. 16, 1894.

She was the mother of seven children. Of these, all that are old enough have assumed the church vows and are trying to follow the example of their mother. Sister Massey was a strong believer in prayer. Ten years ago, when her only living brother was on his death-bed, it was noticed that she spent the most of her time in prayer. Her last illness was long and severe, but she was willing "both to do and suffer if need be the whole will of God, so that she might at last enter the everlasting rest."

The church has lost one of its purest members; the husband and children, a precious wife and mother; but death to her was eternal life. Thus God's dear ones are gathering home.

W. W. WILLIAMS.

FAIL—JACOB E. FAIL, infant son of W. H. and M. C. Fail, was born April 22, and died Sept. 17, 1893.

The stay of this little child on earth was very short; only about four months and twenty-six days in this world among mortals. He was too pure for this sinful world, and He who said, "Suffer the little ones to come unto me," took him to himself.

The writer, in the presence of a host of friends, attended the funeral services and laid the little one away in the new cemetery at Fisher's Church, to await the resurrection, when he shall rise in glory with a body to live with the Father.

Weep not, dear parents; your precious child is not dead. God has only taken him to himself to care for him. God bless the bereaved ones, and finally bring them altogether an unbroken family in heaven!

W. M. SULLIVAN.

EADY—CAROLINE MATILDA EADY (nee Bnikin) was born near Conehatta, Newton county, Miss., Oct. 8, 1862. She joined the Methodist Church about Aug. 27, 1879. She was happily married to Bro. A. A. Eady, June 29, 1882; died near Conehatta, Jan. 30, 1894.

Sister Eady lived a consecrated Christian life, and died in the triumph of the Christian faith. She was a true, loving wife, a fond and patient mother, and kind and self-sacrificing neighbor. She was admired and loved by all who knew her. She leaves a husband, two precious little girls, a bright little baby boy of four and a half months old, and several brothers and sisters to mourn her loss. She seemed to be anxious only about her loved ones, and when her husband told her that he would take care of the children, calling each one by name, a sweet smile passed over her face as she said, "Farewell," and passed into rest.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors."

W. M. WILLIAMS, P. C.

Decatur, Miss.

MANLEY—Mrs. MARTY ISABELLIA MANLEY (nee Pardne) was born on March 18, 1875, and joined the M. E. Church in her childhood days. She was a constant attendant on her church. She matured into sweet and lovely womanhood, went to the bridal altar in her nineteenth year and married Mr. Chas. H. Manley at her father's residence (Mr. N. B. Pardue) on Dec. 8, 1892; then faded like a sweet and fragrant flower into the silent keeping of the tomb. She passed away Dec. 11, 1893. She was most tenderly cared for by her parents, for she was their youngest child.

She leaves a husband and a father and mother, six sisters and three brothers and friends unnumbered to mourn her departure.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Oraddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

"Think gently of the erring;
Oh, do not thou forget,
However deeply stained by sin,
He is thy brother yet.
Heir of the self-same heritage,
Child of the self-same God,
He has but stumbled in that path
Thou hast but feebly trod."

We will mail free, on receipt of two cents in stamps, a sample box of Dr. Davis' Liver Pills. They will cure costiveness, biliousness, dyspepsia, indigestion, piles, and all disorders that arise from a diseased liver and impure blood.

Cotton At 16 cts. Per Lb.

SEED FOR TRIAL PURPOSES ONLY.
WE HAVE EVERY SEED IN EXISTENCE.

There is no Money in Cotton at 8c.

There is an active, strong demand for long staples at 16c. Then why not plant it? Your answer is: Because none of the long staples will make enough to the acre to justify planting them even at 16 cts. per lb.; it is difficult to gin it properly; it is hard to pick out, and lands will not produce staples, and so on.

Inland Sea Island is a long staple cotton in which all objections are removed. It is ENORMOUSLY PRODUCTIVE, easily ginned and no trouble to pick out. You can make it with no extra expense or trouble. See what Mr. Jeff Welborn has to say.

NEW BOSTON, TEX., Dec. 5, 1893.
RICHMOND SEED CO.,
Richmond, Va.:

This is to certify that I had "Inland Sea Island" cotton planted in alternate plots with Sea Island, Allison's Silk, Allen's latest improved long staple, Ozier Silk, Southern Hopo, and some other varieties of long lint. The Inland Sea Island was a great deal earlier than any of them, and made one-third more lint per plot (of same size) than any, and double as much as any save one variety (Ozier Silk). While the lint was no longer than the Allen, it was much finer, softer and richer-colored than it or any except Sea Island and Allison's Silk, but it made four times as much per plot as either of these two. * * * I think your Inland Sea Island a big jump forward in the long lint business, because of its Earliness and Prolificness. * * *

Very truly, JEFF WELBORN.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Virginia has adopted the Australian ballot law. This was done by the General Assembly of that State on March 6.

The contemplated line of French steamers from this city to the Brazilian coffee ports is still attracting much attention.

The number of immigrants who arrived at the ports of New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Baltimore from foreign ports during 1893 is 431,712.

Governor Foster has appointed Congressman Blanchard to take the seat of Mr. White in the United States Senate, made vacant by Mr. White's appointment to the Supreme Court.

Under the leadership of Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, a delegation of New England working girls will appear before the United States Senate to protest against the passage of the Wilson bill.

At a meeting of the State Board of Liquidation, held at Baton Rouge, on March 10, it was decided to advertise for bids from bondholders for the sale to the State of more bonds.

It is said that Philip D. Armour, the Chicago philanthropist, will give $500,000 to the San Francisco public schools for the establishment of a manual training-school in which to teach boys trades.

The Mormon Church is sending 1,000 missionaries to Europe in search of converts. Five parties of missionaries, of about sixty persons in all, has passed through New York on their way to Europe.

After a wrangle of about ten days over the location of the International and Cotton States' Exposition, to be held in Atlanta in the Fall of 1895, the matter was definitely settled by a compromise committee appointed by the different elements, and under the terms of the compromise the city appropriates outright $75,000 in cash to the exposition.

The Democratic members of the Senate Finance Committee laid before the full committee, on March 8, the Wilson Tariff bill as they have amended it. The portion of bill repealing the sugar bounty is left intact. A duty of 1 cent is to be placed on sugar testing 80 degrees; between 80 and 90, 1-100 of a cent additional per degree; above 96, a tax of 1 4-10 is provided.

It is evident, from the estimates that are being made of the revenue, likely to be derived from customs duties and internal revenue tax under the Tariff bill as it now stands, that strong pressure will be brought to bear to cut off some of the revenue-producing provisions. This argument will be used against the income tax by its opponents and will also be urged by those who do not want a duty put on sugar, and who will contend that the government can do without the forty-five millions to be realized from the sugar schedule.

FOREIGN.

A bomb explosion occurred near the Chamber of Deputies in Rome on March 9. Two persons were killed.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the marriage of the Japanese Emperor was celebrated throughout Japan on March 10.

The Spanish Cabinet has resigned and the Queen Regent has charged Premier Sagasta with the work of constructing a new ministry.

The Reichstag committee, which has been considering the Russo-German commercial treaty, passed that measure, on March 8, by a vote of 16 to 12.

President Diaz, of Mexico, is busy preparing his message, which will be presented to the National Congress upon the convening of the Spring session, on April 1.

Undesirable immigrants are flocking to the Hawaiian Islands by the hundreds. The provisional government, fearing a plot of the royalists, has passed a bill regulating the entry of aliens.

All of President Peixoto's fleet, the Nictheroy, the America, the Tiradentes, the Piratiny, the Bahia and five torpedo boats, have arrived outside the harbor of Rio de Janeiro. There is great excitement in the city. It is believed the long-expected naval battle will soon be fought. Rumors are in circulation, however, that the insurgents have made propositions for compromise, and that President Peixoto has considered them favorably.

Great Britain is fortifying the entrance into the waters of Puget Sound, in Canada. The central point of these military works is at Esquimault, a town in the east end of Vancouver's Island, near the city of Victoria.

An impassioned address has been made to the people in Ireland by Redmond, Harrington and Kelley, of the Parnellite party in the Parliament. In it Gladstone's retirement is said to be a scheme to defeat their hopes, and no confidence is to be placed in Rosebery or his Cabinet.

Lord Rosebery, the new premier, will, on March 17, make an address at Edinburgh to delegates from the Liberal association of all parts of Scotland. Upon this occasion Lord Rosebery is expected to make an important pronouncement of the policy which the new ministry intends to adopt.

Caprivi has asked the ministers of justice to draft a bill providing for the punishment of Germans abroad who engage in the slave trade. It appears that the recent investigation into the doings of the German colonial authorities in West Africa has revealed some startling abuses upon the part of German colonists.

A Reward of $500

Will be paid for any case of Rheumatism which can not be cured by Dr. Drummond's Lightning Remedy. This offer is made in good faith by the proprietors, and there is no reasonable excuse for anyone to suffer longer. Any ordinary case will be cured by one treatment, and it is poor economy to suffer when relief can be secured so certainly. The price of a month's treatment—two bottles—is $5, and that is the cost of a cure. Full particulars and testimonials of wonderful cures sent to any address. Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York. Agents wanted.

A Matter-of-Fact Seed Book.

There is such a great similarity in seed catalogues as a usual thing that it is refreshing as well as beneficial to read one in which plain, unvarnished facts rule. The catalogue issued by J. J. H. Gregory & Son of Marblehead, Mass., is a matter-of-fact book in every sense of the word and is certain to meet with the highest appreciation from farmers and gardeners who are working for actual results and can not afford to experiment. There are no highly colored illustrations to mislead, neither is there exaggerated language to deceive. It simply helps the farmer to get the seeds best adapted for his needs and from them derive the best possible results. In a nutshell, there is nothing good left out and nothing poor let in. To this method of doing business is no doubt due the increasing popularity of Gregory's Seeds and the continual prosperity of that famous old house. Since 1856 they have been studying the wants of farmers and supplying them with just what they want. To-day it would be difficult to point to a section of the country where Gregory's seeds are not known and grown. They send their Catalogue to anyone who plants seeds, free of charge.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

PETER'S CONFESSION.
(Matt. xvi, 13-19.)

Some people thought that Jesus was John the Baptist, because of his bold denunciation of sin; others, that he was Elias, because of his mighty miracles; still others, that he was Jeremiah, because he, like that prophet, wept much.

1. Christ's interrogatory leaves us to infer that it is very important fully and correctly to know him

(1) The Jews say: Christ was an imposter. But do imposters teach so pure a morality as he taught, or lead such holy lives as he lived?

(2) Rationalists say: Christ was a good and great man, though not divine. But if not divine, then he was not good, even bare of the truth: he declared himself to be God.

(3) Peter, speaking in behalf of all the disciples, assures: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Christ—the divinely anointed. The Son of God, who gave himself a ransom for sinful man.

2. The reply of Jesus is significant.

(1) Declares that Peter was blessed because of his confession. His knowledge had came from above. Divine illumination.

(2) Intimates that the apostle's name, Peter, meaning a rock, and his confession now given, were analogous. On this rock—the confession of Peter—he would build his church. A solid, sure foundation.

(3) Assures that the church, thus founded, would overcome all opposition. Though the heathen rage, the enemies clamor fiercely, "he that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh: the Lord shall have them in derision." The gates of hell shall not prevail against the church.

(4) States that the church, through its ministry, has charge of the keys of the kingdom of heaven. Responsible trust! May open, may keep shut. Oh! for conversions—for diligent use of these keys!

(5) Gives disciplinary authority to the church. Binding and loosing to be done with greatest care. But if done in the fear of God, after much prayer, deliberation and consultation, it is likely identical with that in the courts of heaven.

a. What think ye of Christ?

b. Do you love the church? Is it the language of your soul when we sing:

"For her my tears shall fall,
For her my prayers ascend;
To her my cares and tolls be given,
Till tolls and cares shall end?"

Sparks from Bishop Key.

(Reported by Rev. Robt. H. Wynn at the Conference at Homer.)

The Epworth League is the phenomenon of the church at present.

The Epworth League is the thermometer of the church.

The livest church in Southern Methodism is a church run by an Epworth League.

I know of scores of Christian Endeavor Societies that have been turned into Epworth Leagues, and have done better ever since.

I see no advantage in belonging to any organization that is undenominational.

Nothing succeeds in removing coughs and colds like Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

Rev. Chas. R. Monigomery.

MR. EDITOR: With your permission, I will say through the ADVOCATE to the many pastors in this State and in Mississippi that the above-named young minister, whose announcement appeared in your last issue, is good help in a meeting. I had him twice last year, and expect to have him again. Why? He manages a meeting well. He draws, and he is full of the Holy Ghost. H. ARMSTRONG.

Franklin, La.

Rev. T. W. Lewis writes: "Corinth district: First round completed. Traveled 1,100 miles on the railroad and 200 miles on horseback. One new church started, a parsonage bought, and two others improved. Our need is more intelligence and more religion."

BEAUTY AND PURITY

Beauty and Purity
Go hand in hand.
They are the foundation of health and happiness.
Health, because of pure blood;
Happiness, because of clear skin.
Thousands of useful lives have been embittered by distressing humors.
CUTICURA RESOLVENT
Is the greatest of skin purifiers
As well as blood purifiers.
Because of its peculiar action on the pores
It is successful in preventing
And curing all forms of Skin, Scalp, and Blood humors,
When the usual remedies and even
The best physicians fail.
Entirely vegetable, safe, innocent, and palatable,
It especially appeals to mothers and children,
Because it acts so gently yet effectively,
Upon the skin and blood, as well as upon the Liver, kidneys, and bowels.
Its use during the winter and spring
Insures a clear skin and pure blood,
As well as sound bodily health.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA RESOLVENT, $1; OINTMENT, 50c.; SOAP, 35c. POTTER DRUG AND CHEM. CORP., Boston. "All about the Blood, Skin, Scalp, and Hair," mailed free.

Women and Women Only

Are most competent to fully appreciate the purity, sweetness, and delicacy of CUTICURA SOAP, and to discover new uses for it daily.

In the preparation of curative washes, solutions, etc., for annoying irritations, chafings, and excoriations of the skin and mucous membrane or too free or offensive perspiration, it has proved most grateful.

Like all others of the CUTICURA REMEDIES, the CUTICURA SOAP appeals to the refined and cultivated everywhere as the most effective skin purifying and beautifying soap, as well as the purest and sweetest for toilet and nursery.

Constitutional History of American Episcopal Methodism. OCTAVO, 414 PAGES, Price, $1.50.

BY JNO. J. TIGERT, D. D.

Most Constitutional histories are dry reading, but this has interested me very much. I have been especially impressed by its vivid portrayals of signal events, its felicitous illustrations of the way in which the most important matters of ecclesiastical polity have been determined by the opinions and acts of individuals, and its omnipresent proofs of the Providential origin and development of Methodism on both sides of the Atlantic.—Bishop C. D. Foss, of the M. E. Church.

Few books have ever been issued from the presses of our Publishing House at Nashville equal in importance and value to this one. It fills a place occupied by none other. The scope of the work is full and comprehensive, and the subject is treated from beginning to end with rare ability. The publication of this work is timely. It ought to be read and studied by every intelligent preacher and layman of our Church. Particularly ought it to be mastered by every delegate to our General Conference.—Southern Christian Advocate.

From the care with which you have sifted statements, examined documents, and analyzed facts, I think you have produced a work which will reflect credit on your industry and ability, and entitle it to a place of a classic in Methodist literature, not to say ecclesiastical literature.—Bishop E. R. Hendrix.

Dr. J. M. Buckley, editor of the New York Christian Advocate, gives this advice to public speakers: "The whole art of making a public speech is to have something pertinent and moving to say; to say something all the time, to say it vivaciously; and if it is a religious speech, to say it with religious feeling, and to stop when everyone wishes you to go on."

OUR COMFORT.

BY EMILY C. RICE.

Somewhere, we know not where,
In the vast realms of space,
Is found our Father's house,
The soul's abiding-place.
And, in its mansions fair,
Those who have gone before
Wait for our coming feet,
Still loving, as of yore.

Somehow, we know not how,
On joyful errands bent,
God sends his messengers,
Fulfilling his intent.
And, 'mongst those blessed ones,
Come those who know us best
To help us on our way,
To guide us to our rest.

Sometime, we know not when,
Our toilsome journey o'er,
We, too, shall reach our home
And rest forevermore.
And 'mongst its joys divine,
These not the least shall be,
To clasp again loved hands,
And longed-for faces see.

About Unordained Pastors.

Bro. Mounger tells me that the Mississippi Conference did not adopt a memorial to the General Conference asking for the ordination of all men put in charge of works. This is made the text of articles favoring this change in many of our church papers. Why not say, The Mississippi Conference did not do this thing?

[If such a statement has been made in any of our church papers, we have not seen it. Our usually clear-headed Bro. "Gilderoy" has, doubtless, allowed himself to become a little confused. In an editorial on the subject, some time since, we referred to a memorial of this sort adopted by one of the Eastern Conferences—the Western North Carolina Conference, perhaps. It is probably this that our brother has in mind.—EDITOR.]

All this discussion is a waste of wind, for this thing will not be done. There is less need for it now than ever before in the history of the church. Our charges are so small that ordained and unordained preachers are in a stone's throw of each other. [This is true of some sections. It is not true of the whole Southern Methodist Church. —EDITOR.] Nothing is lost, and much is gained, by giving preachers a good trial before ordaining them.

The next General Conference will not create an order of evangelists in our church. This thing is too unmethodical to become a part and parcel of the method of our Methodism. It will be left to take its own course. It is an irregular verb, and does not come under any of the General Rules. Let it stand just as it is.

The General Conference will not depose any one of the present college of Bishops, nor will it pass any regulations limiting or hedging in the general superintendents of our church. The great body of our preachers and our people approve the administration and management of our Bishops. They have wrought wisely and well.

If the General Conference elects any new Bishops, it will not want more than one; two at most. The church does not need more than it has now. The matter of electing another, or others, will turn on the probable continued effectiveness of those we have now.

The great ground-swell looked for by some, perhaps—longed for by others—at the next General Conference will not materialize. Our people and our preachers are loyal to connectional Methodism as it is. After more than a century of unparalleled prosperity, such as no religious organization ever knew before, we are not ready to go back to Congregationalism, nor to sell out to Presbyterianism. We shall go on just as we are evangelizing the world to Christ.

The approaching General Conference will not be a long one, nor will it be a hot one, as anticipated by many. Those who come to the meeting hot will soon cool off and tone down. Courage and bluster at long range and by word of pen generally flickers in a hand-to-hand fight and by word of mouth. The fighters—the giants—have uttered no word yet, but they will be mighty in deed when the time comes to act.

The fact is, there is precious little that really needs to be done by the next General Conference; and this fact, in large measure, accounts for the radical, if not revolutionary, changes suggested and urged in some quarters. Anyway, the discussions will all have been had in the papers before the body meets, and nothing will be left to be done but to act. Long, big speeches will not be necessary only to keep some overcharged member from exploding.

If there are any candidates for office, they will not be popular with the majority of the Conference. Such things as candidates for place and electioneering for men are not popular among ministers and men of God. Such things are too little and too contemptible to command the attention and respect of ministers and laymen convened to advance the cause of Christ. They smell and taste of the things that be of men more than of the things that be of God. They are worldly, largely sensual, often devilish.

More prayer for, and less advice to, the General Conference would be far better for all concerned. That body will have more need for the guidance of the Holy Ghost than for the advice of any man or set of men.

GILDEROY.

The Need of These Times.

BY BISHOP THOMAS BOWMAN.

"The times" seem everywhere to be out of joint. At all times the world is full of unrest. Man on the tossing billows of this world has ever been without rest for his soul. If this is true of other lands, it is most vividly true of our own. The common routine of life is not satisfactory to young America, and, for that matter, to the older, either. They are not satisfied with the slower means of gain and the less brilliant fields of enterprise with which their fathers were content. Hence has arisen an unprecedented spirit of unrest and adventure. The heart of the community beats with quick and feverish pulsations.

But in these times we find a peculiar unrest added to the general unrest found among men. The daily press teems with charges of corruption against legislators and officials. These are charged with perverting justice and proving false to the most sacred trusts, and social virtue seems to be undermined by the approaches of vice. Labor is at war with capital, and each of these elements have been closely and fully organized for self-defense as well as aggressive warfare—the first in so-called "labor organizations" of various kinds, the second in huge trusts to protect its interests. Socialism and anarchy stand in the background watching an opportunity to deluge society in blood in order to divide the wealth of the few among the many.

Unbelief is stalking abroad in the land and thrusts its venomous fangs into the foundations of our faith. Invective and sarcasm and derision are hurled against those who cling to the faith as it was once delivered to the saints. The demand is vehemently reiterated that our doctrines and our faith must be recast in order to meet the so-called advancement of science. Moreover, the individual who cuts loose from the accepted doctrines of the orthodox churches, and professes to doubt the truth as revealed in our old Bibles, is at once proclaimed in the daily press as a hero. Nothing is so unpopular, apparently, as authority in matters of faith and practice. Lately a statement was publicly made by a minister of the M. E. Church that that church tried no man for heresy. Is this actually true? In a religious paper an editorial correspondence recently appeared from a man well known throughout this entire country, in which the following fearful indictment is brought against the ministers of the church above named: "Ministers more and more preach almost everything but the gospel of salvation."

How are these threatening evils to be averted? There is but one answer to this question, and that is, by enthroning Christ in the hearts of the people. Only if men are cemented together by the power of his love, their consciences purified by a living faith in a personal Christ, thus causing truth to triumph over falsehood, and right to prevail over wrong, can the world be made better. Right to prevail, not over might; there is no danger in that direction in our day: the danger is all in the other direction; but right to prevail over fraud and cunning.

That government will be the most just and liberal and beneficent which is most pervaded by the Spirit of Christ. That society the purest in which dwells the power of Christ's love. That church the most effectual which is constrained by the love of Christ. That worship the most acceptable which is the outcome of the working of the Spirit of Christ. That life the best in which Christ is all in all.

If these results are to be accomplished, then Christ must be set forth. In the language of our excellent Discipline, Christ must be pointed out as the fountain of grace, and sinners must be invited to accept of him through faith. And then build up the edifice of holiness on this well-laid foundation, and to do this in every sermon. God forbid that the ministry of our beloved church should preach about almost everything but the gospel "of our salvation."

It is the duty and the privilege of the ministry to hold forth Christ as the world's only hope and Savior. When Peter stood before Annas, the high priest, and the elders of Israel, there was no thought in his heart of comparing the claims of Christ as equal, or better than any other religion, but in language which condemned every other system of religion, he cried out: "Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." The Christian religion is liberal in this sense, that it offers salvation to all men upon the same terms, excluding no class, and no man, but exclusive in this respect, that it compromises with none, but condemns them all, as utterly worthless in the sight of God. This is the grand distinguishing character of Christianity, in which it stands alone and without a parallel in the world.

Christianity presents to the world a beautiful system—a system which angels delight to study, and in which the greatest intellectual giants may find the amplest occasion for thought and study. However, its reliance is not upon its system, not upon its grand and harmonious arrangements, but it offers to men a Person—a Person to be adored, to be loved, and to be trusted, in whom all perfections are united, and who died for us while we were yet sinners, but who liveth again at the right hand of the Father, waiting that men shall come unto him. And when they come unto him, he gives himself to them, he dwells in them, and having Christ, they have everlasting life, for he is the life. When men have won Christ, they have won all. This is the power of Christianity. And Christianity will be a power in the world just in proportion as the church will thus set forth a living personal Christ whom men may have and who will be with them to the end.

Only the apprehension of this glorious Person, our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, in whom dwelt the fullness of the Godhead bodily, and who will impart to believers his own blessed fullness, will satisfy the unrest of men, and will overcome the world, the flesh and the devil, and raise a bulwark against the encroachments of unbelief, and the madness of anarchy, and the flood of corruption.

May it truthfully be said of us, "They preach Christ and him crucified;" "who ever liveth and saveth to the uttermost those who come unto him!"—Exchange.

The Crisis in the Temperance Reform.

BY THEODORE L. CUYLER, D. D.

Fifty-one years ago I delivered my first temperance address, in the City Hall of Glasgow, alongside of that noble apostle of cold water, Father Theobald Mathew, of Ireland. During the past half-century I have done some honest and gratuitous work for our reform, and kept my eye pretty steadily on the field of action. It requires only half an eye to discover that we have reached a crisis, and one that demands all the "good counsels and just works" that are within reach. Wilful blindness to facts means treason to the good cause.

In the early stages of our reform we relied chiefly upon arguments and persuasive appeals to make total abstainers. We fought against all use of intoxicating beverages. Pulpit, platform and press all thundered against the drinking usages of society. One of our veteran leaders said to me this week, "My pastor made a teetotaler of me when I was a boy by his tremendous sermons against strong drink." Societies were formed in every locality, and temperance meetings were held constantly; and the bond of this associated effort was the total abstinence pledge. The public mind was as thoroughly leavened with the elementary gospel of temperance as it was by the gospel of "Liberty and Union" at the opening of the Civil War. Neal Dow—with whom I went into the campaign for prohibition in 1852—told me that he found it easy to get his original "Maine law" passed, and to have it enforced from the start, because the whole State of Maine had been educated by public meetings up to the right point. Prohibition of the liquor traffic was solidly based on enlightened public sentiment; and whenever the attempt is made to rear it on any other basis, it has proved to be a glittering phantom. All the sound legislation that has ever been enacted for the suppression of dramshops was the result of aroused and enlightened public sentiment against the use of intoxicating liquors. No community that believes in buying and drinking intoxicants will ever suppress their sale. That is an axiom. Effective prohibition of the drink curse was based on effective moral suasion. This fact is beyond dispute.

What was true in America is true elsewhere, for human nature is the same in all lands. The Australian Christian World—an able paper, strongly devoted to the cause of suppressing saloons—recently made the following earnest and unanswerable statement:

"Have we as much faith as our temperance fathers had in the virtue of moral suasion? In the first days political suasion was not possible, neither did men really much desire to have it. They kept pegging away altogether after another fashion, and they had stronger faith in argument, in persuasion, in example, and in the influence of family life. The leading temperance reformers knew all about alcohol, its place and power. They believed in abstinence, and they also believed in seeking to make converts. Their public meetings, lectures, addresses, and the like, were a great feature in their advocacy. They believed in impassioned speech by fully convinced men and women, in its power to create interest and awaken faith in others. They believed in forming societies, in the law of association, and in the power of consistent example. They also believed in the press, in journals and books, and they largely used these methods. If we go back upon the things they wrote and read, we shall feel convinced that for intellectual and ethical force very often 'the old is better.' And some of the best work of temperance was done under these old conditions. The men who are to-day the strongest and most consistent supporters of temperance work of every kind were brought up under these influences. Let no one think that we oppose the newer methods. We believe in political action, in voting against the traffic, just as we feel against it and pray against it. By all means let us stir up politicians and get temperance legislation passed; but let us never forget that the real victory must be won earlier. We must educate, convince, persuade and win the people."

My only apology for this extended quotation is that every line of it contains so much solid "horse sense," and so accurately describes the actual state of things in our own country. We have reached precisely the same crisis that our brethren have reached in Australia. The peril to our cause is increased here from the fact that those who were educated long ago to total abstinence are passing away, and the rising generation are not thus educated to the same degree. Another fact is, that we are flooded by an immense immigration of people who know no more about total abstinence than a dog knows about astronomy. Foreign immigrants are almost a unit against suppression of the saloons.

The perilous crisis in our reform arises from the lamentable diminution of distinctive moral effort against the drinking usages. Total abstinence organizations diminish instead of increasing. Total abstinence is not preached as often and strenuously as it once was; nor is it so much practiced. Last year that useful body, the Sons of Temperance, celebrated their semi-centennial; but their roster of membership showed a falling off during the last decade. Forty years ago I often attended great and enthusiastic temperance meetings in New York City. Are such meetings often held now? Are they frequent in other cities, and in the rural districts? No; and even when they are held they are mainly occupied with endless discussions about "high license," "low license," "prohibition," and other legal methods of dealing with the traffic. Recently a temperance meeting was held on Sunday evening, in one of our Brooklyn churches, and the main drift of the eloquent speaker was to denounce the deadly evils of the saloons, and to prove that they ought to be shut up. The whole speech was a bootless reiteration of a truism; yet the real danger of her auditors was not from the saloons, but from the social glass. That meeting ought to have been devoted to a persuasive argument against the drinking usages, and then clinched with the circulation of a pledge of total abstinence. The only way to stop dram selling is to stop dram drinking. While the demand is unchecked the supply will continue, and all prohibitory laws will be a dam of rushes before Niagara.

As moral effort has largely been supplanted by discussion about suppressing the saloons, what headway are we making? Lamentably little in the way of enacting new laws of prohibition anywhere. We are on the defensive to retain what we have—in Iowa, Kansas, Maine, and a few other localities.

Let us face facts without flinching. At present the liquor traffic laughs us to scorn as long as our efforts are not directed to keep people from buying and drinking intoxicants. The old drink customs are stealing back again. A generation is growing up without much instruction in the a b c of total abstinence. Temperance organizations decrease in numbers and too many pulpits are silent—or only speak out in cheap and easy denunciations of the accursed dram dens. A reform that will not learn by sore experience, and which throws aside the weapons with which it once gained victories, is doomed to failure. We never shall conquer at the ballot-box until we have conquered the voters by argument and persuasion. We never can stop the sale of intoxicants until more check is put to drinking them. God never means that a great moral warfare against a colossal sin shall be shirked by his people, and turned over to the tender mercies of political strategists. Our great reform has reached a crisis, and, without mutual recrimination, let us grasp afresh the weapons that once did splendid execution, and in God's name and God's strength close up our ranks in united onset against the foe.—Independent.

Not Infidelity, but Indifference, the Foe.

BY REV. GERARD B. F. HALLOCK.

The religion of Christ has to-day, as ever, its bold and avowed enemies. Yet it is doubtless true that in most of our communities there are comparatively few who are actually hostile to Christianity. This assumption receives renewed confirmation from an article in a late number of The Evangelist, in which the Rev. Dr. J. Balcom Shaw gives the results of a religious census recently taken in New York, in the region of the city where his church is located. Quite a number of families claimed no church relationship at all. Doubtless many who did claim such relationship were only occasional attendants, or almost total neglecters. But we think the remark with which Dr. Shaw closes his report is very significant of the fact that the church's real foe to be feared is not infidelity, but indifference. He says: "In these days, when so much is being said of the prevalence and growth of infidelity, it is especially encouraging to find but one family, out of a total of 4,516, professing to be infidels. The infidels are few, the neglecters are many."

Christianity certainly has little to fear in these days from any open hostility. It is generally conceded that the religion of Christ does the world no harm. Except a very few among the most depraved, no one would crush out Christianity even if he could. Even infidels are not unwilling to have their children be Christians. The dying Ethan Allen told his daughter to accept her mother's religious beliefs, not his. Most unbelievers are glad to have their children out of the room when they talk their blasphemies.

Neither is hostility to the church the attitude of any great proportion of those who neglect personal religion and refuse to identify themselves with God's people. As we have already shown, it would be an equally great mistake to imagine any large proportion to be either skeptics or unbelievers. Most of them really accept the essential doctrines of Christianity. We sometimes hear them say: "We are waiting to be convinced." But it is usually only an excuse. They are convinced already. Not an enmity with the church, not infidels, not skeptics, not actually opposing religion, how shall we express the exact attitude of this very large class of people outside our churches to-day? What better word can we use than this, and say that they are indifferent? Like Gallio, in the time of Paul, they simply "care for none of these things." They take almost no interest at all in religion, either one way or the other. They are simply and entirely indifferent to the whole matter. Let us know that the most prevalent "ism" in Christendom to-day which threatens the church of Christ, is not skepticism, not spiritualism, not universalism, not agnosticism, but indifferentism.

Not only so, but of all the conditions of irreligion, indifference is the most difficult to contend against. That is true whether it be for getting people to the church or for influencing them after they are there.

We read in history that Napoleon, in war, with his heavy artillery, found little difficulty in demolishing forts of brick, or stones, or logs. His heavy cannon-balls would crash through and beat down the strongest walls. But somewhere in Egypt he encountered a mud fort. It had been just lately constructed, and the mud was not dry. Against the soft, yielding clay his cannon-balls were quite ineffective. The resistance offered was comparatively so slight, that missiles would simply strike the soft mud with a dull thud, and remain in the embankment, only making it the stronger, instead of weaker.

So, when any one is an avowed enemy of Christ, is in open hostility to the church, or is an honest infidel standing up honestly for his beliefs, there is some chance for gospel appeals to be effective; but, alas, for these people who are vastly too indifferent to offer any real resistance to the truth! Simply noncommittal; just pliably, yieldingly indifferent! Soft mud forts they are, and every appeal of the gospel seems only to leave them the more strongly fortified against it. Really it would seem that to be opposed to these things, to misunderstand these things, that even to doubt these things, does not render a soul's salvation so hopeless as to "care for none of these things." The former condition may be bad enough, but the latter is almost fatal.—Evangelist.

He who would have each hour open out a page of deepening interest in the Book of Life, who would have the days fraught with utmost meaning, the months replete with majesty, the years sublime, must set himself a life-task commensurate with his destiny. What shall it be? Union with God. This alone fills out in the largest way the high purpose of human existence. This is the noblest aim conceivable to man. No man should be, no real man can be, fully satisfied with anything short of this. It is the key of his being, the supreme end of his creation. He who walks with God in all the smallest, as well as largest, transactions of daily life, seeking guidance and finding communion from moment to moment, is a man in the fullest sense of the term, because he has most of the divine in him. His high attainment is not to be reached at a bound, or by some sudden spurt of emotional experience, but is the ripe fruit of much tarrying in the secret place of the Most High and the slow development of holy habits.—Zion's Herald.

Charles Reed Bishop is probably the wealthiest man in Honolulu. He is a banker, and his charities of late years aggregate over $1,000,000. His recent gift to the Kamehameha Training-school of Honolulu comprises a well-stocked ranch of 80,000 acres on the Island of Maui, valued at about $200,000. Mr. Bishop is a native American, and was born in New York State. He went to Hawaii in the early days, and became a banker after a residence there of some years. He married a famous princess, who proved to be fully as charitable as her husband. They had no children, and when she died she devoted her large estates to the founding of two training-schools in Honolulu—one for boys and one for girls.

Nearly one hundred missionaries were sent to China last year by the Lutheran Church in Sweden.

INEXPRESSIBLE

"I can not tell you in this foolish Japanese ongue," said one of the first converts in Japan o the missionary, "and I don't believe I could ell it if I had your tongue, nor if I had an angel's tongue; but one poor heart"—putting his hand over his own heart—"can feel it all."

I can not tell the woudrous love
That brought my Savior down
From kingly throne and realm above
To wear a thorny crown;
I only know he doth impart
New being to my sinful heart.

I can not tell, nor e'en can you,
Just how he enters in;
But, oh, I know full well 'tis true
He takes away my sin;
The load is lifted, burden gone,
Rejoicing now, I journey on!

An angel's tongue would fail to tell
Such depths of love divine,
But in this heart he comes to dwell,
I feel this Savior mine;
Oh, that I could to all reveal
What one poor heart can know and feel!

A Plea for Woman's Missionary Societies.

BY MRS. ROBERT R. REED.

The following paper was read before the Woman's Missionary Society of Jefferson Street, Natchez, and published by request of the society:

When, just before his ascension into heaven, the Savior said, "Go, ye, into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," think you he meant such idolatrous nations as China, Japan, and India? If so, did he also mean Mexico and Brazil, where they have the Bible? Yes, verily, for the Word must be preached and taught in its purity and its simplicity to every creature, as can be proven by the teachings of Christ and the apostles, and not in accordance with the construction placed upon it by Pope and priest of superstitious Rome.

Say you, "The heathen will be saved because of their ignorance?" Dare we say so when the Scriptures say, "All nations that forget God shall be turned into hell?" Suppose, for the sake of argument, we say they may be saved because of their ignorance, shall we not obey the command and thus lift them to a higher plane of existence in this life?

Mothers, if your religion taught you to sacrifice your babe to the crocodile of the Ganges to appease the wrath of your god of wood and stone; or, if it be a girl, to drown it, or choke it to death on its entrance into this world; or, if through your motherly affection for it, you contrived to spare its life, and it should die while yet a little one, you were required, in token of your having swept it from your memory and your affections, to thoroughly sweep the threshold across which its remains had been carried when taken out to be cast upon the commons to be devoured by the dogs, would you not hail with delight the religion which teaches you to love your children?

Wives, if your religion taught that woman has no soul, is not capable of mental improvement is not her husband's equal, even though he be all that is vile and vicious, that she is to be his servant, and, in case of being left a widow, she must become a drudge for his family, an outcast from society, and allowed only one scanty meal a day, would you not long for a religion which teaches that woman is man's equal?

Because the women of most of the heathen nations live in seclusion, and, therefore, can not receive the gospel from the lips of male missionaries, it becomes necessary for woman to carry the story of the cross to woman. Therefore, when the wives of missionaries called for help, the different church denominations organized Woman's Boards of Missions to send unmarried women who could devote their entire time to the work.

Missionary societies, adult, young people's, and juvenile, have multiplied all over Christian lands. In these societies are found some of the brightest intellects and most gifted women of the church. So great has been their zeal, and so anxious have they been to raise money to carry on the work, that many have denied themselves of luxuries and put the cost of them into the missionary treasury. College girls have been known to wear their hats a second season in order to save money for this purpose. Others have consecrated fruit trees, flowering plants, and portions of their gardens to the work of missions, while children have raised money by having missionary hens, lambs, etc. So earnestly and prayerfully has the work been carried forward that some one has said, "Not in all the poetic legends of classic heroes, not in all the gallant exploits of armored knights, nor yet in all the gorgeous scenes of Egyptian tales, has aught been told so strange, so wonderful, as the simple, ungarnished statement of the efforts that Christian women are making to carry the light of the gospel into the homes of heathendom."

During the session of the Annual Conference at Atlanta, Ga., in May, 1878, the Woman's Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, was organized with Mrs. Juliana Hayes, of Baltimore, as president. Although nearly eighty-one years of age, she still holds the office. Previous to this organization, Miss Lochie Rankin, of Tennessee, had been assigned work in Shanghai, China, by the Bishops in charge of that mission. She was at once adopted by the Woman's Board as their first representative, and is still a faithful worker for the Board in China.

At their first anniversary, in May, 1879, 15 Conference societies were reported, including 219 auxiliaries, with a membership of 5,890. Total receipts being $4,014 27; 1 missionary in the field.

At the fifteenth anniversary, held in St. Louis, June, 1893, it was shown that there were 37 Conference societies, including 3,595 auxiliaries with a membership of 76,396; 1,893 life members, 100 honorary members, and 11 honorary life patrons. Total receipts for the year, $99,289.65; of which $28,090.55 were for Scarritt Bible and Training-school, leaving $71,199.12 for foreign work. The Board this year asks for $100,000, for foreign work alone. There are now 37 missionaries in the field, five of whom are from Mississippi. (Sixty-two have been sent; 5 of these are from Mississippi.)

The auxiliary of Jefferson Street, Natchez, was organized May, 1884, by Mrs. Juliana Hayes, with 24 members and 8 honorary members. Mrs. W. H. Watkins was elected president.

Some members have dropped out through indifference; others have been lost by removal from the city, while others have been called from labor to reward. We have secured ten new members during the last six months till we now number forty-five—five of whom are life members.

To our homes comes every month the Woman's Missionary Advocate, the official organ of the Woman's Board. Through it we receive such intelligence of the work and the workers as can be received through no other medium. As we read reports from sister societies, we feel ambitious to keep abreast with them in bringing heathen women and children to Christ. As we read letters and reports from our missionaries, and thereby become acquainted with them and their pupils, our sympathies are aroused for those who left home and loved ones in obedience to the command, "Go," and, as we pray for them not only, as some one has said, "in the prayer meeting prayers, but by the bedside, and in the wakeful hours of the night," we feel to rejoice that while we can not "go," we can "send," and thus be co-workers with them.

While each member pays only ten cents a month as dues, in the aggregate it amounts to dollars, and if we of Jefferson Street can double our membership this year, we will be doing something toward raising the $100,000 called for by the Woman's Board. An increased circulation of our magazine, which is only fifty cents, and of the Little Worker, only twenty-five cents a year, would help us in this direction. The money dropped into the box tonight at this missionary birthday reception, held in honor of our pastor's wife, who is also one of our vice-presidents, will help swell our contributions for this purpose. Then, when our delegate reports at our annual meeting, next June, we shall feel that we have great cause for gratitude at the success and growth of our society.

Sister, you who have been standing aloof from this work, and saying, "I do not believe in foreign missions," is not your foretaste of heaven so glorious as to arouse in you a desire to join us in this great work?

We believe "the Master is come, and calleth for thee," saying, "Go, work in my vineyard, and whatsoever is right, I will give thee."

New Orleans Church Extension Society.

The need of an organization designed to answer the ends proposed by this society has been apparent for a long time to city Methodism. Some method by which unity and continuity in plan, and concentration in action, could be had for the application of wealth and willing forces, which do unquestionably exist in the various Methodist communities, must have been found outside the church machinery. Bishops and presiding elders are movable quantities, and the well-formed plans for enlargement that have been laid by one administration are often neglected or even set aside by another. Individual pastors of churches can command only the resources of their own congregations; and that these are not equal, in their separate activities, to the demand for extension needs no other demonstration than the records of city Methodism.

Methodism has grown in cities, it is true, but its growth has been the result of the division of overcrowded congregations, or of the single-handed efforts of a few consecrated men. Such has been the history of New Orleans Methodism for at least three decades. The central purpose of the New Orleans Church Extension Society is to concentrate in some organized form the aggressive forces of the city churches for the purpose of providing houses of worship, where needed, within the bounds of the city, and to secure, in advance of the growth of the city, sites for future building.

The lack of suitable houses seriously retards the growth of city mission work; and even when houses can be had, rents are a drain upon the means of the few by whom this work is sustained. Experience has proved that one year's work in our own house is productive of greater results than ten years' work carried on in rented houses. Oftentimes the work of years is entirely lost because we have not permanently planted ourselves on the ground. Wherever a house is built there will be a church and a preacher. Methodism has great power of holding on when once it gets a hold. Our economy—the appointing power, Domestic Mission Board, local and probation ministry—gives Methodism greater adaptation to evangelistic extension than is possessed by any other Protestant system. Our General Board of Church Extension can put its strong arm under a struggling society and make it strong to establish itself; and it thus completes the aggressive system for the work at large. But the General Board and the Conference Boards alike rightly expect to draw from the cities rather than to help them. The Board needs the city strength to apply to the more needy work, and should be allowed to fulfill its purpose. The organization of local church extension societies will relieve, without weakening, the General Board, and will obtain the enthusiastic support of Methodism for city enlargement.

Cities grow. One of the problems of the economist is the tremendous growth of cities at the expense of the village and rural populations. The burden laid upon the church by this movement is not so much one of evangelization as of church extension. Sites should be located and purchased against the inevitable movements of population, while, as yet, land may be had cheap and in abundance. It is true the last place for economy is in the location of a church. We can afford to pay high prices for building sites already demonstrated to be excellent; but sagacious foresight and planning will anticipate the direction of growth and save large amounts by buying lots in advance of their enhancing value.

A plan that has resulted in the organization of a city church extension society was presented to a meeting composed of the pastor and two laymen from each of the New Orleans churches, on Jan. 30. The organization was perfected Feb. 13 by the election of the following officers and Board of Directors: C. W. Carter, president; W. H. LaPrade, vice-president; John B. Parker, corresponding secretary; J. M. Henry, recording secretary; E. P. Mackie, treasurer. Directors: J. B. A. Ahrens, J. T. Sawyer, F. N. Parker, T. K. Faunt LeRoy, J. R. Westerfield, — Heroy, Ralph Hoffman, P. A. C. Voss, W. B. Thomson, J. W. Blackman, J. W. Adams, H. R. Hafkesburg. The annual dues are: For men, $2; for women, $1. Meetings of the society for the election of officers and directors will be held annually, the first Tuesday of May. The Board of Directors is divided into Committees on Membership, Finance, Building Sites, Legal Advice, and others needed for the complete systemizing of their work. Sites for building and projects for purchasing homes for the use of already established missions are already being considered. The City Mission work is itself receiving an impetus from the prospect of help at the hands of this society, which will, we trust, soon be able to put a strong arm under these struggling plants.

Our ministers and members throughout the Conference should aid in the support of this society, as the strategic point of attack is here in New Orleans, from which, as a radiating centre, influence and help goes to every part of the State.

F. S. P.

Whether Weather or What.

The ides of March are almost here, The Winter has been hard, especially on brethren serving on the "picket line." Some of our preachers on missions have suffered privation. Shall this continue through our neglect? The first quarter of our Conference is about past. Most of the presiding elders are closing up their first round. Yet we learn, through the treasurer of our Board of Missions, that only two preachers have sent in anything on the collection for domestic missions. Some of the most faithful brethren are sending in their "quarterly reports" according to resolution. But, brethren, thirty dollars will not do much in meeting the necessities of thirty-five men, most of whom have families to support. The meager average of $100 each, represented by the appropriations for the whole year, and this to be divided by four, and again promised only 60 per cent. of this quarterly, till the year is gone! This showing ought to appeal to the most careless, and spur to immediate action.

Resolution 1 of Mission Board, adopted in open Conference, and embodied in anniversary report, pledges us to move diligently in this matter of collection during the first quarter. Number two is somewhat new in requiring all sums to be forwarded immediately to our treasurer. (His address is Rev. D. T. S. West, Jackson, Miss.) He is now anxious to receive and distribute all that is due to brethren, looking to our faithful stewardship for the supply of a felt need.

Men of Israel, help! We know the weather has been unfavorable (especially on many Sundays), and times are hard. But the days are going by, and money is getting more scarce each day. Let us gather all the first fruits in their season, and provide liberally for a full harvest in the Fall. If a dollar less than the entire assessment for this claim be reported, some comrade will suffer thereby. Prompt and diligent work will avert this. Let next Sunday witness a great ingathering. Exchange sent Monday to Jackson will gladden some preacher's home before Saturday night.

A Member of the Church Should Not Sign Liquor Petitions.

It is a source of regret and grief that the names of members of the church are sometimes found on liquor petitions. It may be the result of thoughtlessness on the part of those members. It is fair to presume that if they would stop and consider the moral aspects of the question, they would either desist or withdraw from the church. Let me briefly state some of the reasons why it is inconsistent for the same name to appear on the two rolls: the church register and the liquor petition.

In the first place, the saloon has been outlawed by our civil government. Unlike legitimate business, it is placed under legal restrictions, and is allowed to exist only where the people express their desire to have it. The Supreme Court of the United States has decided that there is no inherent right in a citizen of a State, or of the United States, to conduct one; that it is a matter of legislative will only; and that there is no greater source of crime and suffering to society than the dram shop.

In the second place, the masonic fraternity of the State of Mississippi has outlawed the liquor traffic. No man can engage in the business of selling liquor as a beverage, either by wholesale or retail, either as principal or clerk, and become a Mason, or retain his membership as a Mason within the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of the State of Mississippi.

In the third place, the church has outlawed the business. On pages 128 and 129 of the Methodist Discipline we read: "Let all our preachers and members abstain from the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors to be used as a beverage; and if any shall engage in such manufacture or sale, let the Discipline be administered as in cases of immorality." In keeping with this law our last General Conference expressed the moral sentiment of the church on the subject in the following language: "We are opposed to all forms of license of this iniquity, whether the same be high or low." And: "We offer no compromise to, and seek no terms from, a sin of this heinous quality."

In the fourth place, the church of God has no greater enemy to contend with in any community than the open saloon. Indeed, the open saloon is the most formidable difficulty that confronts the progress of society on any line we may name—financial, educational, moral, or religious. But especially does it antagonize all the interests of the church. How, then, can a member of the church be a friend to this hot-bed of iniquity?

In the fifth place, all the worst men in any community unhesitatingly sign liquor petitions, while all the best men unhesitatingly refuse to sign them. Look at the list and see for yourselves. You will find on it the names of some good citizens, but, on the other hand, you will notice the absence of the names of many good citizens who do not belong to the church. Making no pretentions to religion, they hold themselves above signing a liquor petition. A church member ought to go with the better crowd.

The conclusion of the whole matter is that no man can be a member of the church and sign a liquor petition without the most glaring inconsistency. This is not a political question, as some have suggested, but a moral question; and it is a very grave moral question. In proof of this I submit the following terrible indictment on the dram shop by a New York pastor—a graphic statement of awful facts which those who have considered the subject from an unprejudiced and a disinterested standpoint will not call in question.

The saloon cuts down youth in its vigor, manhood in its strength, and age in its weakness.

It breaks the father's heart, bereaves the mother, extinguishes natural affection, erases conjugal love, blots out filial attachments, and blasts parental hopes, and brings down mourning age in sorrow to the grave.

It produces weakness, not strength; sickness, not health; death, not life.

It makes wives, widows; children, orphans; fathers, fiends—and all of them paupers and beggars.

It feeds rheumatism, nurses gout, welcomes epidemics, invites cholera, imparts pestilence, and embraces consumption.

It covers the land with idleness, misery and crime.

It fills your jails, supplies your almshouses, and demands your asylums.

It engenders controversies, fosters quarrels, and cherishes riots.

It crowds your penitentiaries and furnishes victims to your scaffolds.

It is the life-blood of the gambler, the element of the burglar, the prop of the highwayman, and the support of the midnight incendiary.

It countenances the liar, respects the thief, esteems the blasphemer.

It violates obligations, reverences fraud, and honors infamy.

It defames benevolence, hates love, scorns virtue, and slanders innocence.

It incites the father to butcher his helpless offspring, helps the husband to massacre his wife, and the child to grind the parricidal ax.

It burns up men, consumes women, detests life, curses God, and despises heaven.

It suborns witnesses, nurses perjury, defiles the jury box, and stains the judicial ermine.

It degrades the citizen, debases the the Legislature, dishonors the statesman, and disarms the patriot.

It brings shame, not honor; terror, not safety; despair, not hope; misery, not happiness, and with the malevolence of a fiend it calmly surveys its frightful desolation, and unsatisfied with its havoc, it kills peace, ruins morals, blights confidence, slays reputation, and wipes out national honor; then curses the world, and laughs at its ruin.

It does all that and more—it murders the soul.

It is the sum of all villainies, the father of all crimes, the mother of all abominations, the devil's best friend, and God's worst enemy.—Exchange.

Church Extension in Mississippi.

By request of Rev. D. Morton, secretary of the General Board of Church Extension, I have compiled the statistics of the church extension work in the Mississippi Conference. Thinking the figures might stimulate us to better work, I have requested their publication in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. The Board of Church Extension of the Mississippi Conference was appointed at the session of the Conference held at Crystal Springs, Dec. 13-18, 1882. The personnel of the Board was as follows: President, Hon. W. L. Nugent; vice-president, Rev. W. C. Black, D. D.; secretary, Rev. E. H. Monnger; treasurer, Rev. J. W. Adkisson. Members: George Wood, S. T. Taylor, T. A. Heilman, J. A. Ellis, and L. Carley. Before the annual meeting in December, 1883, George Wood had passed to his eternal reward, and J. W. Adkisson had transferred to one of the Texas Conferences. The vacancies were filled by the appointment of Robt. Babington and Rev. W. B. Lewis. Of the original nine, only three are now members of the Board—Rev. E. H. Mounger, T. A. Heilman, and W. L. Nugent.

The first application for aid was made by Rev. J. P. Drake for a church on the Fayette circuit. He asked for the small sum of $200—a staggering demand, as the Board had but $446 to distribute.

With the first distribution of funds in 1883, and since, the Board has helped to build 116 churches. The churches thus aided are situated in 31 counties in Mississippi and 5 parishes in Louisiana—6 unknown. The counties receiving the largest number of appropriations are as follows: Jefferson, 6; Newton, 6; Marion, 5; Rankin, 5. The moneys have been distributed to churches in the seven districts as follows: Brookhaven, 7; Jackson, 10; Woodville, 13; Seashore, 15; Vicksburg, 19; Meridian, 23; Brandon, 23; unknown, 6. Total, 116. Below are the total amounts distributed among the churches by the Conference Board during the years 1883 to 1893:

Years.	Amounts.
1884	450 10
1885	390 00
1886	650 00
1887	648 00
1888	900 00
1889	1,300 00
1890	1,045 00
1891	1,035 00
1892	840 00
1893	930 00
Total	$8,634 10

Bear in mind that while $8,634.10 was disbursed by the Conference Board to aid weak churches, an equal amount was forwarded to the General Board for general distribution. So the Mississippi Conference, during the years 1883-1893, has raised and expended in aiding to build churches in Southern Methodism $17,268.20.

Now, in the face of these facts, let me reiterate a few paragraphs from the last annual report: "The work already done by this arm of our church service is a sufficient justification of its existence and claims upon the liberality of the church. No preacher nor Board of Stewards need be ashamed to present the cause of church extension to the people. It has stimulated church building, as well as aided in building. Many communities would never have undertaken to build had they not hoped for aid from church extension funds. We have no apology in presenting this cause to the people save this: the love we have for Methodism and our desire to extend the church."

NOLAN B. HARMON.

P. S.—Dr. Morton's figures are $17,194, instead of $17,268.20.

Gradual Backsliding.

Great temptations are not the most dangerous to Christian people. We are not likely at once to deny the Lord, or to commit flagrant violations of the law. There is more danger of yielding here a little and there a little from the right. One does not become a Sabbath-breaker or profane because any one great temptation is too strong for him, but by a gradual process. He does not become cold in his service through any sudden chill, but by first neglecting one duty and then another. The disciples slept during Christ's agony, before they forsook him and fled. Peter followed him afar off before he denied him. These who would serve faithfully must avoid the beginnings of evil.

The same thing is true of churches. They do not become cold and negligent, or formal, or loose in doctrine or practice, by any sudden transition. On the contrary, the change is usually unnoticed save by those who recollect the past and put it side by side with the present. They remember how the prayer meeting was first neglected, and then the night service; how family worship became less and less common, and the Sunday-school less interesting; how the young people drifted away; how infidel ideas crept in. Christian people, and especially those who as officers in the church have accepted a special responsibility, need to watch the beginnings of evil. —Journal and Messenger.

The Habit of Mistrust.

A habit of mistrust is the torment of some people. It taints their love and their friendship. They take up small causes of offense. They expect their friends to show the same aspect to them at all times, which is more than human nature can do. They make experiments to ascertain whether they are sufficiently loved. Some persons acquire these suspicious ways from natural diffidence in themselves. With others, the habits arise from a selfishness which can not be satisfied. And their endeavors should be to uproot such a disposition, and not to soothe it.—Arthur Helps.

There is no sunshine for those who persist in keeping their shutters barred. Joy is not gained by the asking for it, but only by the acting for it; we have got to walk with Christ if we want to walk in the sunshine. There is a lamentable lot of moping and grumbling and sour-spirited Christians who disgrace the name they bear. If one of this sorry regiment should ask a shrewd man of the world to embrace Christianity, he might well reply: "No, I thank you; I have troubles enough now without being troubled with such a peevish and doleful religion as yours seems to be." What a letter of recommendation some Christians carry in their cheerful countenances! . . . . Here are three things which you, the ailing souls, most need: more faith, more vigor, more joy in the Holy Spirit. Your Divine Physician offers them to you, if you will accept them; but you must let him bestow them in his own way and on his own terms. A happy day would it be in all our churches if the fever patients and the emaciated dyspeptics and the restored paralytics would come trooping out of the hospitals and report themselves for duty!—Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D.

Clear your minds of the notion that any act of your lives is unimportant. Single acts are the beginnings of habits. Every repetition of an act tends to make it habitual, and the forming habit is the registry of emotions and thoughts and deeds in the very substance of your physical organism. You are unconsciously writing a history in your nerves, and this history you can not wipe out at will, as you may wipe out a scrawl on a blackboard. It endures and it reproduces itself. The thoughts of your mind, the purposes and impulses of your heart, your passions, your affections, your aspirations, and your beliefs stamp themselves indelibly on your nervous system; they cut channels of habit; they react upon your soul continually for good or ill; they shape your characters; and your character is what you are, what you will be always.—Philip S. Moxom, D. D., in "The Aim of Life."

Christian faith is a grand cathedral with divinely pictured windows. Standing without, you see no glory, nor can possibly imagine any; standing within, every ray of light reveals a harmony of unspeakable splendors.—Hawthorne.

AGRICULTURE.

Truck Farming.

There is no farming which requires greater effort and closer attention than truck farming. To be successfully managed it must be on the intensive plan. The same sloven manner that many practice in raising corn and cotton will certainly result in failure. It requires both forethought and labor. Preparation must be made one year for another. Some have conceived the idea that when the crop is finished and sold, which is about the first of July in our locality (we write from Crystal Springs, Miss.), that the trucker has nothing to do the balance of the year than fish and hunt. This has proven a fatal mistake to many. This is the reason why some have no supplies with which to begin the next year. The proper plan is as soon as the crop is sold one year to begin immediately for the next. Prepare by planting peas on the land on which it is intended to raise a crop the next year. There is nothing in the way of a crop for fertilizing that will go farther and accomplish more in building up our Southern clay lands than peas. It furnishes what most of our lands are deficient—nitrogen. Another important result is accomplished by them; the physical condition of the soil is changed.

What clover is to the West and North, peas are to the South. Nitrogen is the most costly element in a perfect fertilizer. If the soil can be supplied with this other than commercially, by the use of plants, the other elements, potash and phosphoric acid, will make fertilizing much cheaper to the grower. The best crop of tomatoes we ever saw raised was where a heavy pea crop had been grown the year before and fertilized with a compost of equal parts of acid phosphate, cotton-seed hull ashes, and one-half as much in cotton-seed meal as either of the others. The peas supplied nearly all the nitrogen needed in that particular instance. The trucker should again look well during the Fall and Winter to his compost heaps. What is saved is made. We can not enter into detail of all he should do in one short communication; not much more than make suggestions. We do propose from time to time to give all who will avail themselves of the benefits of the ADVOCATE, what we, over twenty years, have been studying and practicing.

Cotton-Seed Meal for Cows.

(American Farmer and Farm News.)

At your request I write regarding the use of cotton-seed meal for feed stuff. I can find no better expression of my own views and experience upon this subject than to quote largely from a late bulletin sent out by our experiment station.

It can be safely fed for long periods, as much as five pounds per day per 1,000 pounds live weight, in the ration for cows giving milk. As the cow approaches the time for calving the proportion of cotton-seed meal should not exceed three pounds daily.

We do not think it advisable to feed more than five pounds of cotton-seed meal daily to milch cows. For butter making it is not advisable to exceed three pounds daily. It is not safe to feed cotton-seed meal as the sole addition to the daily allowance of coarse fodder, particularly during the three months preceding and the month after calving.

Cotton-seed meal and cotton-seed hulls should be far more extensively used as cattle food. These products of the cotton fields of the South will enable the farmers of Tennessee to maintain or to restore the fertility of their lands at the least cost for manure.

The following are safe rations for a dairy cow of 1,000 pounds live weight, and are made up in great part of cotton-seed products:

1. Fifteen pounds cotton-seed hulls, five pounds cotton-seed meal, six pounds corn meal.

2. Fifteen pounds cotton-seed hulls, four pounds cotton-seed meal, five pounds wheat bran, two pounds corn meal.

3. Fifteen pounds cotton-seed hulls, eight pounds clover hay, five pounds cotton-seed meal, two pounds corn meal.

4. Fifteen pounds cotton-seed hulls, eight pounds corn fodder, three pounds cotton-seed meal, three pounds wheat bran.

5. Fifteen pounds cotton-seed hulls, eight pounds corn tops, five pounds cotton-seed meal.

6. Thirteen pounds cotton-seed hulls, six pounds clover hay, ten pounds of corn and oats, equal weights of each, mixed and ground together.

HYGIENE.

The Beneficial Effects of More Fruit as Food.

"If people only realized the advantages of confining themselves largely to a fruit diet in warm weather they would save themselves endless suffering," said a venerable physician, in the course of a chat on hygiene. "I can not understand how meat got such a hold on the human family as an article of food. It is against all the laws of physiology and the construction of the human being; nevertheless a goodly portion of the race imagine that they can not live without it, and almost all of them indulge in it to a great extent. I can remember very well of spending some time in a country district during a summer when there was an unusual amount of sickness throughout that locality. In some way or other the idea took root there that vegetables and fruit were injurious and caused the summer complaints that almost swept whole families out of existence. In pursuance of this idea those people actually gorged themselves on meat. The consequence was that as the season advanced the disease grew more and more virulent, until it reduced the community to a state of panic. Almost all fruits and vegetables were allowed actually to go to the ground again, the people seemingly being afraid to touch them. Finally a consultation of physicians was held, and it was agreed that the only way to check the trouble was to get the people to give up their meat diet. Many of them gradually did this and soon recovered, others obstinately held out, and scores of them died.

"While it is quite possible that, after all these years of habit the human family may do very well on a mixed diet of meat and fruit, it has been definitely settled by some of the most excellent authorities that altogether too much meat is used. If people would use meat once a day instead of morning, noon and night, as is in many cases the custom, a decided improvement in the health of families and communities would be perceptible, and not only in the health, but in the temper, and particularly the nervous condition of the individual. It is a perfectly understood fact that animals fed with meat become more fierce and unmanageable than when they are kept on vegetable diet. It would seem that people might learn something from such experiments, and would adopt some of the improved methods of diet, especially in the training of children. Little ones fed upon meat get feverish, irritable and sometimes almost unmanageable. A change to a fruit and vegetable diet often entirely settles their nerves and puts them in excellent condition. With this, as with everything else in life, a reasonable amount of judgment must be exercised. Parents whose nights are made wretched and their days a weariness by the worrisomeness and fretting of children would do well to try the experiment and see if much of the trouble of which they complain is not caused by errors in diet."—Journal of Hygiene.

Preaching at Ninety-Two.

Rev. Dr. W. H. Furness, of Philadelphia, now 92 years, delivered in Dr. Collier's church, in New York, recently, a sermon from the text, "God Is Love." It was not an old sermon written when Dr. Furness was in the prime of life, but one recently composed, and it was so vigorous and beautiful that it riveted the attention of the audience during its entire delivery. His voice was clear and deep, with a melodious ring which gave distinction to every word. It is pleasant to know that now and then a man has a physical inheritance and obeys the laws of life so as to reach the normal age of 100 years. We hope Dr. Furness may fully attain that age. In the coming centuries no doubt there will be more examples of a rich, full and long life. —Journal of Hygiene.

Keep your body always to the top of its condition. Health is the condition of all success, and nothing can atone for its loss. The Greeks had a proverb that it takes a philosopher to keep the body well and strong into a good old age, always at its maximum of health and energy. Plain food, plenty of fresh air and a regular sleep; eye, hand, chest, back and head daily brought to just that degree of fatigue most favorable for increase of strength, these are the a b c of health.

All exercise that strengthens and enlarges muscles strengthens and enlarges nerve fibres and brain centers as well.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes is a man whose opinion on almost any subject is worth heeding. As a physician and a man of keen observation, his opinion on the physiological effects of tobacco becomes of value. A young man ambitious of success asked him several questions bearing upon this end. Dr. Holmes, in laying down conditions to be observed by the young man who desires success, said: "Shall he smoke? Certainly not. It is liable to injure the sight, to render the nerves unsteady, to enfeeble the will and enslave the nature to an imperious habit likely to stand in the way of duty to be performed."

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

POTATO CROQUETTES.—To four cups of mashed potato add one cup of milk, four well-beaten eggs, and salt to taste. Put a spoonful in to egg, then into bread crumbs, then into boiling lard until golden brown. Serve immediately.—New York Advocate.

MEAT BALLS.—Mix together a cupful of finely chopped cold roast or boiled meat, a cupful of mashed potato, and a cupful of bread or cracker crumbs; moisten with milk, stock, or gravy; add a well-beaten egg, form into round flat cakes, and fry in drippings. Good for breakfast or lunch.—Exchange.

FRIED PARSNIPS.—Scrape well and boil gently until done. When cold, cut in long slices one-third of an inch thick. Season with salt and pepper. Dip in melted butter and in flour; heat one tablespoonful of butter hot in a frying pan, and cover the bottom with parsnips. Brown on both sides and serve hot.—Housekeeper.

APPLE CAKE.—One-half cup each of sugar, butter and milk, two cups of flour, with a heaping teaspoonful of baking powder sifted with it. Bake in four jelly cake tins. Four large apples grated, one egg, one cup of sugar, the juice and grated rind of one lemon; let it come to a boil, and when cold spread between the cake like jelly—Exchange.

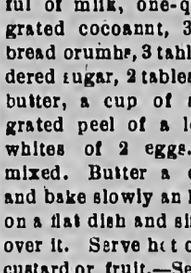
COFFEE.—Never allow grounds to remain in your pots, but wash and rinse, and turn down to drain. To each tablespoonful of ground coffee allow one coffee-cupful of boiling water. Use a small galvanized wire basket to pour coffee through. It will be clear, strong, and fragrant. Never allow to boil after making; it will then be bitter.—M. H. Faison.

COCOANUT PUDDING.—Take a cupful of milk, one-quarter of a pint of grated cocoanut, 3 tablespoonfuls of bread crumbs, 3 tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar, 2 tablespoonfuls of melted butter, a cup of stoned raisins, the grated peel of a lemon, well-beaten whites of 2 eggs. Beat until well mixed. Butter a cold pudding dish and bake slowly an hour; then turn out on a flat dish and sift pulverized sugar over it. Serve hot or cold with cream, custard or fruit.—Selected.

CREAM CAKE.—Mix two cupfuls of flour and two level teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar and one of soda; make a well in the center, into which put one cupful of sugar, one of sweet cream, one egg, and a small teaspoonful of salt; mix all together, flavor with a teaspoonful of lemon, and put into a pan to bake. Adding a cupful of raisins or currants makes a nice cake pudding to eat hot with sauce. Sour cream may be used instead of sweet, by omitting the cream of tartar and using two eggs instead of one.—Exchange.

Scrofula in the Neck

The following is from Mrs. J. W. Tillbrook, wife of the Mayor of McKeesport, Penn.:



Willie Tillbrook.

"My little boy Willie, now 6 years old, two years ago had a bunch under one ear which the doctor said was Scrofula. He finally lanced it and it discharged for some time. We then began giving Willie Hood's Sarsaparilla and he improved very rapidly until the sore healed up. Last winter it broke out again, followed by Erysipelas. We again gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla with excellent results and he has had no more trouble. His cure is due to

ARE CURED BY

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA

"Some years ago, I was in a terrible condition with a tumor, or eruption, which broke out all over my face and body. Seeing the testimony of others as to the efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla in like cases, I concluded to give this medicine a trial, and the result was a thorough cure, no sign of the complaint making its appearance since. I have no hesitation in recommending Ayer's Sarsaparilla for any kind of skin disease."—J. W. DEAN, Moss Point, Miss.

ALL KINDS OF PRINTING.

Don't Miss This Chance.

If You Do, You Will Always Regret It.

A $1 Book for 35c.

Always on the lookout for something that will benefit our subscribers as well as ourselves, we have perfected arrangements by which we are able to make the following very remarkable offer:

To any new subscriber, or to any old subscriber, who will pay his subscription to June, 1895, we will send for thirty-five cents a copy of

THE WHITE RIBBON COOK BOOK.

The publisher's price of which is $1.

What is the White Ribbon Cook Book?

It is a first-class book of Cookery and Housekeeping, prepared by a practical housekeeper. It is entirely new; copyrighted 1894. While it is not claimed that it is in all respects superior to all other books, we do claim that any housekeeper, even if she have a dozen other cook books, will find this one worth to her more than the full retail price, and that the author has fully carried out her purpose, "To prove that wine, brandy and spirituous liquors of any kind may be dispensed with, and that no culinary requirement necessitates the introduction of these poisons into any household."

The White Ribbon Cook Book is durably bound in the best quality of cloth (not in paper covers). It is printed on an excellent quality of cream laid book paper. It is cheap only in price. It is one of the neatest and handsomest cook books ever issued, the cover design, in grained and embossed silver, being a specially unique feature.

HOW TO GET THE BOOK.

If you are not a subscriber, send us $2.35, and we will send you the ADVOCATE one year and a copy of the book. If you are already a subscriber, but have not paid up to the time designated (June, '95), send the requisite amount at the rate of $2 a year, or $1 for six months, and send thirty-five cents additional for the book.

The label on your paper will show the time to which you have paid.

Orders will be filled in turn as received and as quickly as possible. Subscribers should wait two weeks before making complaint of non-receipt of the book. As this offer may not last long, it would be wise to send at once.

A Trip to Pearlington.

On Thursday night, March 15, we lectured at Pearlington, Miss., for the benefit of the new church, which is unfinished. We were greeted with an audience almost equal to the capacity of the building.

We were delightfully entertained during our stay in the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Favre, whose hospitalities we had enjoyed on a previous visit. Rev. Jules Victor Penn is displaying his usual push in the matter of securing subscriptions for the completion of the new church. He expects to have the building ready for dedication before the close of he year.

At Biloxi.

On Tuesday, the thirteenth, we made a flying trip to the beautiful little city of Biloxi, Miss. The purpose of our visit was to give a lecture for the benefit of our church there. We had a good audience, and entertained them to the best of our ability with "Genesis and Geology." We had very little opportunity to see the city, as we arrived at seven at night and left at five next morning.

The pleasure of our stay was greatly enhanced by the fact that we were domiciled in the hospitable home of our old friends, Mr. and Mrs. Walter White, whose nuptials we celebrated a few years since. We also had the pleasure of meeting in their home our old friend, Mrs. I. V. Enochs. We were pleased also to exchange greetings with Bro. D. L. Mitchel, former publisher of the ADVOCATE.

Bishop Selby, of the diocese of Biloxi, is in favor with his people. He seems to have his work well in hand. Methodism is very decidedly on the up grade in Biloxi.

Can a Christian Sign a Liquor Petition?

What a question to be asked in the latter part of the nineteenth century. With the Bible open bofore us; with such helps to the understanding of its teachings as were never afforded in any previous age; with ten thousand pulpits in our midst giving forth no uncertain sound on the subject; with the flood of light which modern science has thrown upon the question of the effects of alcohol upon the human frame; with the diffusion of this light into almost every nook and corner of the civilized world through the agency of the press, as well as the pulpit and the rostrum; with the work of the saloon staring us in the face day by day, it does seem to us that the asking of such a question at this day is an anachronism as grotesque as a living plesiosaurus would be in a modern zoological garden.

A Christian, a follower of Christ, sign a liquor petition? What is the fundamental principle of Christian ethics? Is it not love—love to God and man? Well, is there any love displayed towards either God or man in such an act? Is there a man in the world, saint or sinner, who does not know that the opening of a saloon in any community is sure to produce a harvest of woe? Was there ever a saloon on earth that did not make a drunkard of somebody's boy? Is there any agency known to modern civilization that can vie with the saloon as a fountain of manifold and indescribable wretchedness. No one needs to ask, What harm does the saloon do? We need rather to ask, What evil is there among us towards which it does not contribute its quota? A large percentage of the pauperism of America has its origin in the use of alcoholic liquors. From the same prolific source of woe comes a very large percentage of the insanity that afflicts our race.

Alcohol is also the great life-destroyer and health-wrecker of the age. In the United States alone the use of alcohol sends tens of thousands of human beings into the grave every year; and its effects in producing disease and physical suffering no pen can describe. Then, too, alcohol is a crime producer of matchless magnitude. A very large porcentage of all the crime that engages the attention of our courts comes from the use of intoxicants. Moreover, no other agency is comparable to this as a fountain of domestic infelicity. The indescribable wretchedness that blights the lives and breaks the hearts of so many noble women comes largely from the use of alcohol. Nor does the curse end here. The Bible says that no drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of God. To sum up the evils of the liquor traffic, then, we must be able to measure the tortures of the damned in hell. Now, alcohol does its work chiefly through the saloon. Has a Christian a right to engage in work of this sort? Has he a right to keep a saloon? Surely, no one will make such an assertion. Well, if a Christian has no right to keep saloon himself, has he a right to aid another in doing so. The man who signs a liquor petition furnishes the condition which enables the vender of intoxicants to carry on his nefarious business. Is not such a man a participant in all the ruin wrought by the saloon? Is he not equally culpable in the sight of God with the man who is personally engaged in the traffic?

A Christian keep a saloon, or assist another in doing it? How can a man pray that God's kingdom may come and God's will be done on earth as angels do it in heaven, when he is engaged personally or by proxy in work which is Satan's most effective agency for frustrating the will of God and obstructing his kingdom? The man who opens or aids in opening a saloon which he knows is going to entail indescribable wretchedness upon numbers of his fellow-creatures, does he love his neighbor as himself? We know of nothing more absurd than the question, Can a Christian sign a whisky petition? The church member who makes up his mind to sign a liquor petition ought first to take his name from the church roll, thus placing himself openly where he belongs—in Satan's army.

A Constitutional History of American Episcopal Methodism.

A CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY OF AMERICAN EPISCOPAL METHODISM. By Rev. J. J. Tigert, D. D. Barbee & Smith. Price, $1 50.

Dr. Tigert has entered a field of authorship that is entirely untilled. Histories of Methodism are numerous, but no one has hitherto written a constitutional history. Beginning with the days of John Wesley and Francis Asbury, the author traces step by step the development of the polity of Methodism. A multitude of questions that are sometimes asked concerning the how and the why of the peculiarities of Methodism are here answered with the utmost clearness. American Episcopal Methodism, North and South, owes a debt of gratitude to Dr. Tigert for this work. It is evident that the production of this work was not an easy task. A vast amount of research was requisite in order to gather the materials, and a clear, sound, discriminating judgment was needed in order to sift, assert and arrange the materials in accordance with the well-chosen plan of the work. Dr. Tigert has executed his task in a workman-like manner. He has produced a book that will not only have an extensive sale among his contemporaries, but will live and throw light upon the problems of ecclesiastical history for generations to come. We most heartily commend the book as worthy of a place in every Methodist library.

Outlines of Economics.

OUTLINES OF ECONOMICS. By Richard T. Ely, Ph.D., LL.D. 12 mo; pp. 426. Price, $1 25. New York: Hunt & Eaton.

The fact that this book is by Prof. Ely, so well known as a teacher and writer on economic science, is at once evidence of its merit. The science of economies, formerly regarded as of slight importance, has developed so rapidly within recent years that now its study is looked upon as one of the essentials of an education. Hence the appearance of such an excellent text-book on the subject is to be gladly welcomed. Prof. Ely has succeeded in giving us a work admirably adapted either for use in college or for general reading. Few who begin the book will want to lay it aside until they have read it through. While a complete bibliography is not attempted, the book contains numerous valuable references. Following each chapter is a summary of contents and a list of pertinent questions—excellent features in any text-book. In mechanical execution the book is perfect.

Prof. Ely advocates government ownership and control of all natural monopolies, such as city water and gas works, electric lights, and street-car lines, and even favors such control in the case of railroad and telegraph lines. He shows plainly that there has been a reaction against the free competition and non-interference policy advocated by Adam Smith, in favor of government activity, England being the nation that took the initiative step in this direction. The author emphasizes the importance of man over things, a fact not always duly considered by political economists. "Some men," he says, "forget that there are two kinds of poverty, one a lack of goods for the higher wants, the other a lack of wants for the higher goods. To become rich in goods, while losing at the same time the power to profit by them, is unfortunately one of the commonest retrogressions in human experience."

He inclines to the opinion that the tariff has been intentionally exaggerated in political discussions, and that there has been an abuse of protectionism. He thinks our tariff system should be simplified by the taxing of as few articles as possible and by the imposing of specific duties. Bimetallism by a single nation Prof. Ely regards impracticable. International bimetallism, he thinks, is feasible, and that it will be established the moment England co-operates with the other leading nations. The prejudice against a graduated income tax Prof. Ely characterizes as unreasonable. He asserts that it is the only way in which a large and influential and even rich class can be made to bear its fair share of taxes.

M. M. BLACK.

Life.

Life is to every man what he makes it. This is a principle that comes into play in most things. The poet-soul looking out upon the ocean, gazing on the starry heavens, or the everlasting hills, sees far more in these objects than the unthinking and ignorant see in them. The objects are the same to both, but their impressions are wholly different. So in the work of life the conflicts and trials of life are not the same to all men. Sorrow and bereavement come like a bewildering stroke to those who have no faith in God. But to him who knows whom he has believed, the rude storms of adversity, though they may sadden him for a while, cause him to cling more closely to Christ, and look from the things that are seen and temporal to those that are unseen and eternal. Our happiness depends upon what we are, rather than what we have. Whether a man is rich or poor, honored or despised, in propitious or unpropitious circumstances, is a secondary matter compared with whether he has faith in God, an assurance of his favor, and a good hope of eternal life. The peace of faith within makes all outward things different.—Ex.

The Genuine Religion.

Man is born with religious aptitudes, instincts and tastes; and a creature so endowed will have a religion. A world, or even a nation, of atheists is impossible; the religiousness of man's nature will assert itself. The danger is not that man will be irreligious, but that he will be misreligious; not that he will be without a religion, but that he will accept a false instead of the genuine religion.

Genuine religion is both internal and external; it is an inward life manifesting itself in external conduct. No religion is genuine in which either of these factors is wanting. To insure the true religion there must be the life of God in the soul of man, and the only guarantee of its existence within is the effects it produces in the outer world. "By their fruits shall ye know them." In religion the controlling factor is inward and hidden from the natural eye.

While religion must be outward, it must not be merely outward. The culture of the husk will never produce the full corn in the ear. The growth from within is the hope for the harvest. Church organism and forms of worship are well, but they are a small part of religion, and may be maintained without any real religion at all. While Romanism is the religion of the ritual, Protestantism has been too largely that of the creed. The gospel is broader than the intellect. It includes the heart, the reason, the conscience, the will—in a word, the whole man. The ecclesiastical organism, the ritual, the creed even, are of small consequence compared with the spiritual life showing itself in holy living.

"The more years pass on," says Canon Farrar in his new work on the Lord's Prayer, "the deeper becomes my conviction that religion does not mean and has little to do with many things it is taken to mean. It does not mean elaborate theologies; it does not mean membership in this or that organization; it does not depend chiefly on orthodoxy in matters of opinion respecting which Christians differ. It means a good heart and a good life. Right conduct and holy character—these are the tests of the only sort of religion which is of the smallest value. All else will vanish; this will remain. Love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance—these are the fruits of the tree of life which are genuine; the glossy leaves of arrogant Pharisaism are leaves for the poisoning—not for the healing—of the nations."—Zion's Herald.

Consecrated Mediocrity.

The great lesson of Andrew's life is the possible usefulness and happiness of a contented and consecrated mediocrity. The usefulness of this order needs to be emphasized. We hear a great deal in praise of genius, and no wise man will attempt to gainsay or permit himself to grumble. We all stand debtors to supremely gifted men. A great man in the full sense—that is, a genius who lives nobly—is a God-gift to the race. Such men are as the soul of collective humanity, creators of the force which makes for the ceaseless on-moving and up-striving of the race. But souls must have bodies in order to expression; and force is only wasted energy till organism receives and translates it into service. Let it be granted to Thomas Carlyle that the history of the world is at heart the history of its great mon, of how much use had been these same gifted ones had there been no men of lower rank, but equal faithfulness, to translate and transmit their revelations and commands? "He also serves who only stands and waits." Battles may be planned by a Moltke or a Bismarck, but they are fought out by men in the ranks. Shall we not claim, then, for these obscurer and less gifted men a share of the merit and the victory? The leader must have followers, or his leadership is a fruitless, not to say ludicrous, pretense. Are the followers and supporters to be left out of account in the estimate of service rendered? It would be as foolish to claim that the follower makes the leader, as it would be to affirm the leader's independence of the follower. They are necessary to each other, mutual debtors, reciprocal helpers. Nor would it be a wise discussion which sought to apportion what the world owes relatively to its famous and its obscure men, its gifted geniuses and its faithful mediocrities. The account can not be separated; the partnership is absolute, and its achievements a common inheritance. The sneer which is so often directed against mediocrity is as silly as it is cruel. Mediocrity which apes genius is as contemptible as genius which apes self-sufficiency, and which forgets its origin and obligations. But genius and mediocrity alike, when humbly and honestly consecrated to the service of humanity—which is the service of God—may share the rewards of fidelity and the satisfactions of usefulness.—Rev. C. A. Berry.

"A hundred and ten candidates" are reported as having been heard by the First Presbyterian Church at Albany, New York, on one occasion, before the congregation united in the call of a pastor.

Dr. J. B. Walker entertained his audience at Moreau Street, on Sunday morning, with an excellent discourse founded upon the first part of the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians. The Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church alone has at least four thousand missionary workers in the foreign work, and five thousand in home missions. The Methodist Episcopal Church raised last year for foreign missions $1,041,393, which is the largest sum contributed for that work in 1892 by any denomination in America. The annual contribution of all Methodism for missions is over $3,000,000. The members and probationers of heathen converts in all Methodism are over three hundred thousand.

Spring Time

THE BEST SEASON OF THE YEAR TO TREAT CHRONIC CATARRH.

Notwithstanding that a great number of people have been cured of chronic catarrh by taking Pe-ru-na during the past cold season, yet it can not be denied that the cold, wet, stormy Winter has retarded many cures. But spring time has come at last, and now is the time for all catarrh sufferers to begin a systematic course of treatment for this disease. The greatest difficulty in the way of treating chronic catarrh is that the patient is so liable to catch cold during the treatment, and thus delay a cure. This liability at this season of the year is, in a great measure, removed, and no one should neglect the opportunity to begin treatment. Send for free catarrh book.

As a Spring medicine Pe-ru-na is a never-failing remedy. It cleanses the blood through digestion, and gives tone to the whole system by increasing the nutritive value of the food. "Spring fever," as it is sometimes called, which produces a tired-out, sleepy feeling, and inability to do much mental or physical work, is the result of a sluggish digestion, and no blood medicine will be of any use whatever unless it is able to rectify the impaired digestion. The great popularity that Pe-ru-na has is due to the fact that in all such cases it at once corrects digestive derangements and enriches the blood by purifying this very important source of that vital fluid. Send for free book on Spring medicines and Spring diseases. Address The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio.

A Call.

So far less than $200 have been paid into the treasury of the Joint Board. We must have $1,250 to meet the demands upon us, due on April 1.

Dear brother, have you taken your collection? If not, will you not do so at once? Remember that so far as your Conference is concerned, the month of March has been dedicated to our veterans. Remember that you yourself may soon be a dependent upon this fund. Remember that no collection is better thought of among our people, and that a failure to collect it is your failure.

Our ADVOCATE, of April 5, will contain the names of all works contributing who have been heard from up to March 30. Brother, let your work and your name appear upon that roll of honor. Let us not fail to provide for our own household.

The apportionments were made by the full committee. In some instances we were not able to allow as much as the necessities of the case demanded. There will have to be large displays of local charity in order to comfort, even though the expected amount be paid when due and be paid in full.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my disciples, ye have done it unto me." No better opportunity will you ever enjoy of ministering unto your Lord. Many of these, like their Lord, have not where to lay their head. "No foot of land do they possess." With failing sight, failing health, and faltering step, they move amongst us. Their conversation is in heaven. With patience and holy resignation they wait the summons of their Lord. While they linger on this side of eternity, shall I not delight to minister unto their want?

Men of Israel, help. May the God of our fathers move you to an early and bountiful giving!

An Appeal to the Young People of Mississippi.

Dear Young Friends: Millsaps College needs a large hall for young men of limited means. We must build it. The hall is a necessity. Would it not be a handsome work for the young Mississippians to furnish the agent with money to build this hall? If we can get at the work right, we can do it. I want the young Methodists of Mississippi to send me five thousand dollars. Let us go to work in earnest. Let the young people from five to twenty-one years of age send me from fifty cents to one dollar each. Let every church and community be represented. The name and amount will appear in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. May our Father inspire your hearts, dear young friends, to help us build this hall! Let me hear at once from you. Your friend,

I. W. COOPER.

Domestic Missions.

Will the brethren please forward some part of their domestic missionary money? Reports for first quarter are coming in, and the brethren asking payments, according to the resolutions adopted at the last session of the Conference. (See published Minutes, page 35.) Resolution 4 requires the report to be made through the presiding elder, and the presiding elder is to promise a concise statement of the report for publication in the ADVOCATE.

Sunday-School Convention.

Dear Sir and Brother:

Our State Sunday-school Convention will be held at Columbus, Miss., April 24-26. We will have Prof. Hamil and a prominent primary worker with us. We want to make this the best convention ever held in the State. Please do all you can at once to get your district aroused to the importance of attending this convention. Write the pastors and Sunday-school superintendents, and urge them to come and send delegates from all schools.

Yours in the work,

J. C. CAVETT,
Chairman Ex. Com.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE FIRST EASTER SUNDAY.

(Luke xxiv, 13-35.)

No doubt that the two pedestrians, on their way to Emmaus, on the Lord's day, were engaged in labor of love: visiting the sick and poor.

1. The thoughts of the two disciples were occupied with the report of the resurrection of Jesus. Important subject! "If Christ be not raised, your faith is vain."

(1) The resurrection of Jesus confirms his divinity.

(2) It proves that the sacrifice of himself had been satisfactory to God.

2. Jesus, joining the two pedestrians, incognito, reprimands their unbelief. Slow of comprehending the doctrines concerning the Messiah.

(1) No human eye witnessed the Lord's resurrection. Only angels attended.

(2) To accept as a verity the statement of the Master's resurrection was not less difficult to the disciples than it is to us.

3. The supposed stranger had endeared himself to the two disciples. Invite—yea, entreat—him to abide with them.

(1) We ought to hold the ministers of the gospel in high esteem. Their society should be appreciated.

(2) When with us "the day is far spent," when affliction, sickness and death appear, how precious then will be the visits of men of prayer!

4. Jesus yielded to entreaty. He tarried with them.

(1) Never in vain asks the penitent for forgiveness of sin.

(2) Never did God refuse guidance to the perplexed pilgrim, when solicited.

(3) Gladly the Comforter consoles the distressed, but praying, child of God.

5. Discovering that the supposed stranger was Jesus, he vanishing at the same time out of their sight, the disciples return immediately to Jerusalem, confirming the news of the Master's resurrection.

(1) We, too, must tell it to others, that Jesus is the resurrection and the life.

(2) That Jesus has appeared to us in the forgiveness of our sins.

(3) That he has repeatedly come to our relief, when entreated.

Chambers' Encyclopædia,

Complete in 30 Handy Volumes.

Over 12,000 Pages.

Being a beautiful, clear reprint of the Edinburgh and London edition of Chambers' Encyclopædia, a library of universal knowledge for the people, with very large additions upon topics of special interest to American readers, and giving American statistics of population down to and including the census of 1890.

Remember, this great Encyclopædia contains thousands upon thousands of articles, embracing all subjects within the limits of human knowledge; yet, in its more than 27,000 specially prepared articles, while giving pointed, practical, explicit and most interesting and instructive information both for the student and the general reader, it is free from ambiguous technicalities and comparatively void of the mass of scientific signs, symbols and foreign nomenclature which crowd the pages of most other cyclopedias prepared for scientific and professional use alone. The Philadelphia Press well says:

"The particular and unique value of this Encyclopædia is its happy solution of the problem of fullness and convenience. It is neither bulky nor superficial. It is the book of reference for the million."

Chambers' Encyclopædia has always occupied a front place among the cyclopedic works to be coveted.

Do you ever want to post yourself easily and speedily, on some facts or matters belonging to the domain of Biography, Chemistry, Religion, Geography, Medicines, Health and Disease, Physical or Mental Recreation in Popular Games, etc.; Literature, Natural Philosophy, Astronomy, Agriculture, Mathematics, or any of the Arts and Sciences? If you do, avail yourself of this opportunity to secure a set of this great Encyclopædia.

Do you enjoy an occasional leisure hour of delightfully interesting, entertaining and instructive reading, and do you desire to supply yourself with a vast library of such matter, full of variety in all its departments? If you do, avail yourself of this opportunity to provide yourself with this invaluable and popular Encyclopædia.

Do you seek a suitable gift, one having intrinsic value, to present to your relative, or friend, or to your own library, or for the edification of the folks of your own household? If you do, here is your exceptional opportunity.

Our Unprecedented Offer.

The regular retail price of the imported edition of this immense reference library is $30.00. The cost to you for a full set, complete, printed on good paper, in beautiful, clear type, and durably bound in flexible covers, delivered, free of cost to you, together with one year's subscription for this paper, will be only $4 50.

HOW TO AVAIL YOURSELF OF THIS OFFER.

If you are not a subscriber to the ADVOCATE, subscribe at once. Send us $2 00 for a year's subscription with $2.50 additional for the Encyclopædia. We will send it to you postpaid. If you are already a subscriber, pay your subscription to June, '95, at the rate of $2.00 a year or $1 00 for six months, and we will send the work, postpaid, at the same price.

TO AGENTS.

To any preacher or other agent, who will send us five new subscribers with $10 in cash we will send the work free, postpaid.

ORGANS AS PREMIUMS.

We have made arrangements to offer a rare bargain in the way of organs as premiums to our subscribers. The organs which we handle are the Epworth Organs. These have not heretofore had much sale in Mississippi and Louisiana, though they have had an immense sale throughout the North and West and also in some of the Southern States. Do you want a small organ for your church? If so, read the description given below of Style No 102, and see how it would suit you.

STYLE 102. THE EPWORTH CHAPEL ORGAN.

HEIGHT, 51 IN.; WIDTH, 23 IN.; LENGTH, 48 IN.

Best Low-Priced Chapel Organ.

Walnut case; Hard Wood Panels; Finished Back; Lamp Stands; Handsome Fret Work; Full Length Music Desk; Engraved Ornaments; Hand Rubbed; Oil Finish; Pedals covered with Brussels Carpet; Metal Guards on Pedals.

This is the Organ for Churches and Sunday-schools, where a First-Class Action is Desired.

In a good, plain case, the quality of action and tone being the same as in the higher priced styles.

Style 102, 12 Stops.

EPWORTH CHAPEL—Five Octaves, containing four sets of Reeds of two and one-half Octaves each. STOPS—Principal; Dulcet Diapason; Diapason Forte; Vox Angelica; Principal Forte; Cremona; Melodia; Echo Horn; Celeste. Metal Octave Coupler. Boxed, with stool, delivered on board cars at factory.

The catalogue price of this is $87. We will give it as a premium for one hundred subscribers. Send us the cash $200, for the subscribers, and you get the organ free. If you can't get one hundred persons to subscribe personally, perhaps you have well-to-do members of your church who will pay for several poorer members, thereby bestowing a blessing upon them by giving them a religious paper and at the same time helping to procure an organ for your church. If you don't exactly like Style 102, then read the description of Style 302.

IMPROVED STYLE 302 "SPECIAL." EPWORTH CHAPEL ORGAN.

PIANOS AS PREMIUMS.

READ THE DESCRIPTION BELOW OF STYLE 10.

The list price of this instrument is $330. We will furnish this elegant instrument as a premium for new subscribers. If this offer interests you, write us for terms. You may be surprised at the terms we can give you.

STYLE 10.

Seven and one-third Octaves: Chaste Design; Overstrung Scale; Heavy Iron Frame; 3 Strings; Carved Trusses; Improved Sounding Board; Perfect Repeating Action and Sliding Music Desk. Height, 4 feet 4½ inches; length, 5 feet 2 inches; depth, 2 feet 4½ inches.

In offering this piano to the public our object is to provide for the existing demand for an instrument which, although taking up but a small amount of room, possesses the same quality of tone, the same high grade of action, work and material found in our larger pianos, at the same time a plainly but thoroughly well-finished exterior, enabling us to offer it at a price within the reach of everyone who wishes to secure a perfect piano for a small amount of money. This style is a favorite with ministers, as it takes less room and is more easily moved than the larger instruments.

Made in Rosewood, Ebony, Walnut or Mahogany finish.

Boxed with good Plush Stool, Embroidered Cover and Instruction Book. Every instrument warranted for five years.

Address REV. W. C. BLACK, 112 Camp St., New Orleans, La.

If you look at a dozen common lamp-chimneys, and then at Macbeth's "pearl top" or "pearl glass," you will see the differences—all but one—they break from heat; these don't; you can't see that.

Common glass is misty, milky, dusty; you can't see through it; Macbeth's is clear.

Tough, clear glass is worth fine work; and a perfect chimney of fine tough glass is worth a hundred such as you hear, pop, clash on the least provocation.

"NOW I LAY ME DOWN TO SLEEP."

BY LUCY RANDOLPH FLEMING.

Ended is the busy day,
All its tasks are laid away;
Cometh night with restful balm
Closing eyes, and folding palm.
In thy peace, Lord, full and deep,
May I lay me down to sleep.

In the hours of darkness drear,
Unseen dangers hover near—
Lord, defend when powers of ill
Balefully would work their will.
Helpless, yet in calm I'll sleep,
For the Lord my soul will keep.

If, upon these closing eyes,
Nevermore earth's morning rise,
Yet serene my rest shall be,
If I live or die in thee.
May I in thy service wake,
When the Lord my soul doth take.

So, I lay me down to sleep,
Body, spirit, thou wilt keep.
For the darkness or the light
May not hide me from thy sight.
Then in child-like trust I make
All my prayer for Jesus' sake.

How His Child Led Him.

BY JULIA BILLINGS.

Several years ago my brother was in Springfield one cheerless day, with about half an hour on his hands before train time. Strolling along near the depot, he noticed a tidy restaurant, and went in for lunch. A bright boy came to take his order, and as soon as he brought it sat down to his lessons. A respectable man, evidently the proprietor, was seated near the fire, with a disabled foot propped up in a chair. When my brother had finished his meal, he approached him, saying:

"You have a bright boy to wait on your customers."

"Yes, indeed," said the man, with parental pride, "I couldn't hire so good a boy as that; he is my son, and was the means of my opening this place instead of keeping a saloon, which was the way I got my living for some years; and I'll tell you how it was. He came from school one day heavy-hearted, and when I asked him what was the matter he began to cry, but couldn't speak. After I had urged him, he said that in recess some of the boys asked each other what their fathers did. One said his father was a plumber; another, that his was a carpenter; and when they came to my boy, who said his father kept a saloon, one of them said, 'That's the meanest kind of business.' 'And I could see they all felt the same way. That made me feel awfully ashamed; so, father, if you will only give up the saloon, I'll do anything I can to help you.' With that he threw his arms around my neck, and, sobbing, begged me to give it up. Well, the end of it was I sold out. I don't make so much money as I did selling liquors, but it goes farther, and we have a happy home; my wife can help along, because decent people come here for their meals, but before I did not like to have her around, there was so much low talk. My boy has been as good as his word. I couldn't ask for a better son."

My brother thanked the man for his confidence, and after giving his hearty approval went his way.—The Little Christian.

Courtesy in the Home.

I do not know a half-dozen families in which the members exercise toward each other positive courtesy. I do not mean that I find most people boorish or unkind; but this, that while there is no lack of negative good manners in the family, positive manners are lacking—such manners as are habitual with visitors. This is plainly a great American fault. It is a fault not chargeable to the Oriental races, nor in as great degree to some of the European nations. The glory of Japanese home life is tender respect for parents and the utmost regard for the feelings of brothers and sisters. That home life can not be truly admirable and satisfactory on any other basis needs no argument. I believe we should insist more on home courtesy. From the earliest years the children should be taught to look with abhorrence on harsh words, or a lack of gentle ones in all common intercourse. Of course, I do not argue for the flimflam of "my dear," and similar conventionalities. They mean nothing, and cover considerable. What I look after is that beauty of childhood and youth which should be, and can be, cultivated into perfect growth and blossoming. We have so little of it! The fine faces one sees of 10 or 12 are almost all of them bearing marks of ill-nature and ill-manners, and by 20 or 25 they are mainly deficient in every element of beauty. Why shall we have so little glorious manhood and so little glorious womanhood. Is it not because in our homes our ideal is so cheap and our manners so empty? I understand well that manners may be fraudulent, but they may also carry the spirit of gentleness, kindness and love.—Detroit Free Press.

What One Girl Did.

Some girls exert an uplifting influence upon all who know them. Peace and purity, charity and cheerfulness, seem to abide with them, like angels protecting them from harm, causing their companions to love their virtues for their sake. Where they go quarrels cease. Where they are no one would dare to be rude. Their parents find comfort in them. Brothers are fond of them. Sisters cling to them. Friends admire them. Gracious influence radiates from them and blesses all whom it touches.

Once it happened that a young man, who was "sowing his wild oats," became acquainted with one of these young girls to whom innocence is as vital as pure air. The magnetism of her goodness made him a changed man. He forsook his evil companions, and when chafed about the influence of Miss M——, he said:

"When I am with her, I want to be good, and I hate myself for being bad; I dare not call on her after visiting my old haunts. I had to choose between them, and she drew me up more strongly than they were pulling me down."

Another one was at a party. Wine was served with refreshments. She refused repeated invitations to take a glass of it. A young man told another, as the two were talking of the entertainment the next day: "I came very near breaking my pledge. The smell of the wine was so tempting it sent a cold shiver down me. But just as I was going to yield, I heard Miss B—— refuse wine. That gave me courage to hold out. I watched her all the evening, and I made a bargain with myself. I said: 'If she drinks, I will.' I was hoping and fearing she would; but as often as she was asked, she answed with more vim, I thought, and she saved the day. If it hadn't been for her, I wouldn't have pulled through, and to-day I'd have a swelled head and a big load of remorse, for I'd have gone on a drunk."—Onward.

Neatness in Girls.

Neatness is a good thing for a girl, and if she does not learn it when she is young, she never will. It takes a great deal more neatness to make a girl look well than it does to make a boy look passable. Not because a boy, to start with, is better looking than a girl, but his clothes are of a different sort, not so many colors in them; and people don't expect a boy to look so pretty as a girl. A girl that is not neatly dressed is called a sloven, and no one likes to look at her. Her face may be pretty, and her eyes bright; but if there is a spot of dirt on her cheek, and her fingers' ends are black with ink, and her shoes are not laced or buttoned up, and her apron is dirty, and her collar is not buttoned, and her skirt is torn, she can not be liked. Learn to be neat; and when you have learned it, it will almost take care of itself.—Exchange.

OUR BABY.

To-day we cut the frozen sod
With trembling hands asunder,
And lay this well-beloved of God,
Our dear, dead baby, under.
Oh, hearts that ache, and ache afresh!
Oh, tears, too blindly raining!
Our hearts are weak, yet, being flesh,
Too strong for our restraining!

Sleep, darling, sleep! cold rain shall steep
Thy little turf-made dwelling;
Thou wilt not know, so far below,
What winds or storms are swelling.
And birds shall sing in the warm Spring,
And flowers bloom about thee;
Thou will not heed them, love; but oh,
The loneliness without thee!

Father, we will be comforted!
Thou wast the gracious Giver;
We yield her up not dead, not dead,
To dwell with thee forever.
Take thou our child, ours for a day,
Thine with the ages blossom;
This little shining head we lay
In the Redeemer's bosom!

Bishop Galloway in Birmingham.

Bishop Charles B. Galloway spent last Sunday in Birmingham, to the great delight of the church. He has just returned from the East, where he has been rendering some service, preaching to the young women at Wellesley and lecturing to the students of the Theological Seminary under Dr. Warren. His lecture at Boston to the theologues was upon "Ministerial Ethics." Wouldn't it be well for the Bishop to deliver this lecture all over the church? We are strongly of opinion that such work is much needed. The preachers of the gospel ought to be taught how to bear themselves to one another.

Bishop Galloway spoke to the Boston Preachers' Meeting. He had a right royal welcome from that body, and especially from that "noblest Roman of them all," Bishop Foster.

The sermon on Sunday morning was preached at St. John's to a large audience. That of the evening was from the text, I. Cor. i, 9, on Fellowship with the Lord Jesus Christ. It was a masterful presentation of the full gospel. The congregation at First Church was large, and they certainly appreciated the grand man who is every inch a Bishop.—Alabama Advocate.

The Mother Power.

For four and forty years I have been preaching the good tidings of the Word, and would not change places with a king, but I doubt if I ever would have been drawn to the service of Christ Jesus but for the faithfulness of that home preacher who rocked my cradle. At the starting point of nearly every minister's life stands a Christian mother. Dr. Potts requested all of us students in Princeton Theological Seminary who had praying mothers to rise up, and in an instant nearly the whole one hundred and fifty were on their feet. There we stood, a living witness of the power of a mother's prayers and a mother's shaping influence and example.

We pastors must not take on airs. There is a ministry that is older and deeper and more potent than ours; it is that ministry which presides over the crib and puts the first touches of gospel influences upon the infant soul. Before even the Sunday-school begins, the mother has already begun, and has been molding the plastic wax of character for weal or woe, for heaven or hell. A tremendous power this—it is the same power which sent Samuel out of the home of godly Hannah, and wicked Ahaziah out of the home of godless Jezebel. Both of them "walked in the way of his mother."—The Rev. T. L. Cuyler.

Give the Boys a Chance.

One way to keep children on the farm is to make it comfortable for them. The child who visits his city friend and finds his room warm and pretty, and then goes back to his own bare and cold, is apt to lay the difference in them to the difference between city and country living, and to resolve that he will go where the comforts of life are to be had as soon as he is old enough. The farm has about it elements of comfort which are and must be lacking to a home in the city, and there is no reason why it should not have the luxuries which are within the reach of every one. A boy will love his home better if his room is neat and tasteful, than he will if it is simply a place to sleep in. The boy should have one spot wherein he may feel himself master of all he surveys, and that is all that makes a place home, that sense of being able to follow one's inclinations in working and resting. He will readily learn to be neat about his person if he has some toilet conveniences in his room, and he will be no less of a boy if he carries the water up stairs himself, or picks up things which form his treasures. Most boys will be willing to do the work for the sake of the extra comforts. Treat home folks as well as company, and they will enjoy home better than any other spot in the world. Don't treat a boy as though his sex and youth were reasons for denying him niceties and comforts.—Fairfield Journal.

Advice to Young Christians.

1. Never neglect your prayers, morning or evening.

2. Examine yourself carefully as to your thoughts, and manner of life, at least once a week.

3. Read, every day, and think over, at least a few verses of the Bible, and of some book of devotion, and before you begin, ask God to bless you in what you are going to read.

4. Come to church every Sunday, and attend the other services as regularly as possible. Take care not to be late.

5. Avoid religious disputes and idle gossip; try to think and speak kindly of everyone.

6. Watch and pray against all impurity in thought and word and deed. Keep from all places and company in which you are likely to be tempted to evil.

7. Always be strictly honest and truthful, and do your duty wherever you are, as "a servant of Christ."

8. Do your best to help others by your example, your influence, your prayers.

9. Try to do some special work for God, in his church; especially, always give something systematically, for the support of the gospel and for sending it to the heathen.

What Polly Did.

"I feel as cross as a bear!" said Polly as she came in from school.

"Then you have a good chance to make the family happy;" and grandma smiled. "Your mother has a headache, the baby wants to be amused, and little brother is fretful. A cross bear will make him cry, and then the baby will cry, too, and that will make your mother's headache worse, and—"

"Why, grandma, what do you mean?" interrupted Polly.

"Oh, I haven't finished what I want to say. That is what a cross bear will do; but a good-natured bear can make Jamie laugh, and then perhaps Jamie will make the baby laugh, and if your mother hears them perhaps her head will not ache so badly, and if she grows better, it will surely make papa smile when he comes home; and if papa smiles, I shall be happy, too."

"All right," said Polly. "You shall see what a good-natured bear can do."

She went into the nursery and capered so comically that Jamie laughed with delight. Then she took his hand and they danced back and forth before the baby, sitting in her high chair, and Jamie's laugh was soon echoed by little May.

Mother heard the happy little voices through the closed door, and said to grandma, "It is better than medicine to hear those dear children."

"That is what I told Polly," replied grandma.

At the tea-table, papa said, "It is such a comfort to find mama's headache is really better;" and he smiled at Polly, while grandma beamed at both of them as she poured the tea.

"It's like a Mother Goose story," said Polly. "The bear began to please the little brother, the little brother began to amuse the baby, the baby began to cure the mother, the mother began to comfort the father, the father began to cheer the grandma, the grandma began—she began it all!" and Polly stopped for want of breath.—Youth's Companion.

The crying demand of this time, as of all times, is for home religion. We should daily ask ourselves the question, "Who has seen Jesus in me to-day?" If Christ abides with us according to his precious promise, we will give light, more or less, "to all that are in the house." How do we impress those that know us best? What do our children, our employees, those for whom we labor, think of our religion? Let us answer these questions to our own souls and to God, to whom we shall give account. If we are truly religious, it will be manifest in our daily life and work. We will demonstrate our right to be called children of God.—California Christian Advocate.

TRY IT!—Hold the edge of a common visiting card to line so that no shadow will fall on either side; then hold your nose to the card and you will see how easy it is for the man to swallow one of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

IT'S EASILY SWALLOWED—one of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. These little Pellets are as effective as the best liver pills, and are easier to get down and more agreeable in their action besides.

The fact is, Dr. Pierce's sugar-coated Pellets are better in almost every respect. They act in a mild, easy and natural way. The Sermon Bible

Embracing the Whole of the Sacred Scriptures.

THE OLD TESTAMENT IN FOUR VOLUMES, NAMELY,

Vol. I. Genesis to II. Samuel.
Vol. II. I. Kings to Psalm lxxvi.
Vol. III. Psalm lxxvii to Song of Solomon.
Vol. IV. Isaiah to Malachi.

THE NEW TESTAMENT IN EIGHT VOLUMES, VIZ.:

Vol. V. Matthew i to xxi.
Vol. VI. Matthew xxii to Mark xvi.
Vol. VII. Luke i to John iii.
Vol. VIII. John iv to Acts vi.
Vol. IX. Acts vii to I. Corinthians.
Vol. X. II. Corinthians to Philippians.
Vol. XI. Colossians to James.
Vol. XII. I. Peter to Revelation.

This series of volumes gives in convenient form the essence of the best homiletic literature of this generation. It takes account of the best and greatest preachers, and has been compiled from manuscript reports and fugitive periodical sources as well as from books. Many of the best sermons preached by eminent men are never printed in book form. It thus contains much that will be new to its readers.

UNDER EVERY TEXT IS GIVEN:

1. Outlines of important sermons by eminent preachers existing only in manuscript or periodical, and thus inaccessible.

2. Less full outlines of sermons which have appeared in volumes which are not well known or easily obtained.

3. References to or very brief outlines of sermons which appear in popular volumes such as are likely to be in a preacher's library.

4. Full references to theological treatises, commentaries, etc., where any help is given to the elucidation of the text.

Thus the preacher, having chosen his text, has only to refer to the SERMON BIBLE, to find some of the best outlines and suggestions on it and full references to all the helps available.

It extends to 12 volumes, of about 400 pages each, with 24 blank pages for memorandum notes at the end of each volume.

OUR OFFER.

The publisher's catalogue price of the above work is $1.50 per volume.

We will send any volume, postpaid, as a premium for two new subscribers, accompanied by the cash—$4. If you want the whole set of twelve volumes, send us twenty-three new subscribers with the cash—$46—and we will send the set, postpaid. Remember that this is not an antiquated work thrown on the market at a low rate because there is no demand for it. It is a recent publication which is having quite a run throughout the North.

DUNCKLEMAN.

"One less at home,
The charmed circle broken; a dear face
Missed day by day from its accustomed place,
But cleansed and saved and perfected by grace,
One more in heaven."

JOHN DUNCKLEMAN was born in Alabama, Oct. 19, 1841. On Oct. 8, 1876, he married Miss F. H. Curtis, of Natchitoches, La., then his home. To this union was born a boy, now ten years of age, bright and promising, and a comfort to the lonely mother.

Though an invalid for six years previous to his death, he was now and then able to attend to business. The writer during this time was a constant visitor at his home, and watched with interest the gradual change from an apparent indifference to religion to one submissive and obedient to God's will. In December, 1891, with much bodily suffering, he attended church. It was the last appointment of Rev. A. D. McVoy, Jr. At the close of the services he deliberately approached the chancel and gave his hand for membership in the M. E. Church, South, and his heart to God; but during the years when he was out of the church he never lost faith in the eternal verities of God's Word. He had faith in prayer, and enjoyed having Christians pray and sing for him. He said that he was not afraid to die, and that God, for Christ's sake, had forgiven his sins.

Brave and calm through life, braver and calmer in his victorious death, who could doubt his Christianity in that supreme hour, while his frail spirit hung between the twilight of a fading world and the glorious sunrise of the bright beyond? Yes, he met death calmly, triumphantly, to sleep, to rest and wait until his Lord shall bid him arise and meet him in the skies.

May God bless the disconsolate mother, who, by day and through the weary vigils of the night, strove so long and so faithfully to supply his every want and to alleviate his every pain. No doubt it was by her Christian ministration and importune prayers that he now lingers at the gate of the Celestial City to await her coming. May we meet again! R. W. FREEMAN.

MONROE—Rev. JOHN A. MONROE was born in Robinson Co., N. C., May 24, 1819; moved to Talladega Co., Ala., about 1840, and was married to Miss Sarah A. Levis, Nov. 15, 1842; was licensed to preach in 1853. He moved to Jackson parish, La., in 1865, to St. Landry parish in 1866, to Calcasieu parish in 1867, and to Rapides parish in 1875; was ordained deacon by Bishop H. N. McTyeire in 1870, and elder in 1875 by Bishop Robert Paine, and died Nov. 15, 1893, in Rapides parish, La.

Like his Master, he went about doing good. When able he utilized every day to the very best advantage for the good of his family and neighbors or for the salvation of souls. During his ministry he supplied several charges, and did it on very little pay. He was a close student of the Bible and a good preacher—often eloquent. As a pastor but few excelled him. He was loved by all. He was a tailor by trade, also a farmer, and devoted some time to school teaching. He labored with his own hands and maintained a large family. His was, indeed, a life of usefulness. The last few years of his life his personal affliction was very great. This writer loved him most tenderly for the reason that he was converted under his ministry.

He leaves a devoted companion and dear sons and daughters to mourn for him. One of his sons, W. W. Monroe, is a local preacher in Rapides parish, and another son, Mason G. Monroe, is a physician of fine promise. All Bro. Monroe's family turned out well. The dead brother has gone home to God. May God comfort the loved ones! R. M. BLOCKER.

OVERTON—Miss KATIE OVERTON, daughter of J. M. Overton, was born June 12, 1873, and died a triumphant death, Feb. 9, 1894.

She was left without a mother when a child. At the age of thirteen she began keeping house for her father and became a mother to her little brother. She was converted when about fourteen years of age, and experienced a deeper work of grace during Dr. Carradine's meeting at Crawford Street, last November. A sweeter Christian we have never known. She told those around her-bed not to weep; death was nothing; and to me she said, "I am ready to go."

How she will be missed not only by father and brother, but also by the church and her pastor! Our loss is her gain. She was organist and Sunday-school secretary at South Vicksburg, and was always at her post of duty. When called upon to pray in class meeting and prayer meeting, she always offered an earnest petition for her former as well as her present pastor. She is now in heaven, awaiting the coming of father, brother and friends, and, with loved ones gone before, she will welcome us home, where parting will be no more.

WOMBLE—In Franklin parish, La., little RACHEL WOMBLE, daughter of Nina M. and Henry Womble. She was born Dec. 8, 1889, and died June 25, 1893.

After six long, weary months of suffering this sweet little one was called home to heaven to be with God the Father, and rest forever with the blessed Jesus, who has said in his holy Book, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of Heaven." Yes, the little darling is gone from us. No more do we see the dear little form, nor hear the sweet, innocent prattle or the little footsteps that made music to our ears and brought joy and gladness to our hearts. The hearts now of those friends and mother and father are bleeding and broken with grief and anguish at the loss of the little one.

We can only say to the sorrowing ones: Look above, dear friends, to Jesus for consolation in this hour of sorrow. All seems dark enough now to those left behind, but think of the bright little angel above the skies. How happy she is. Never doubt, dear ones, that little Rachel will be "waiting and watching at the beautiful gates" to welcome you to your heavenly home. F. M.

BUSH—WILLIAM H. BUSH, son of J. Frank and Mary H. Bush, was born Jan. 21, 1877, and died of typhoid-pneumonia at the residence of his mother, near Learned, Hinds county, Miss., Jan. 21, 1894.

How strange and sad the providence that closes such a cheerful and happy life so soon! He leaves a father and mother, two brothers and four sisters to mourn his death. He was a general favorite with all who knew him. The young people enjoyed his associations because he was so cheerful and happy. The old people were pleased with him because he was always so kind and considerate. The writer has attended many funerals, but has never witnessed greater evidences of love and esteem than at his. Hundreds of friends came, each ready to place a flower on his grave. He had faith in the Savior. A few days before his death the writer asked him about his faith, and he said he could trust Christ for salvation. Two days before his death he said, "Just two more days, and I will be happy in heaven." He sleeps in Jesus. VIROIL.

HOOKER—THOMAS JEFFERSON HOOKER was born May 28, 1849; connected himself with the M. E. Church, South, at Mt. Carmel, Corinth circuit, in 1881, under the pastorate of Rev. H. R. Tucker, and died Dec. 12, 1893.

He received his death at the hand of an enraged negro. He left no parting message; was never able to speak after he was carried home. All he said after he received the stroke was to explain how it occurred. We know from his life what he was—kind, fatherly, brotherly, always abounding in good works. He loved the church, and did all he could for her success. His spiritual experience was a constant one, deep and clear, rarely demonstrative. He leaves a wife and three children and a great number of friends to mourn their loss, while he has gained a blissful eternity.

May God comfort the bereaved ones, and turn this curse to a blessing! C. H. PITTMAN.

Corinth, Miss.

FUSTON—Miss LOUISA EMMA FUSTON was born Nov. 16, 1893, and died near Walnut Grove, Jan. 8, 1894. She was sick a long time and suffered much, but bore her afflictions with Christian resignation. She was converted early in life. Her death was peaceful, like the burning out of a taper.

Father and mother and sorrowing relatives, we may not see her face again in this life, but if we live faithful to God here, we shall see her glorified spirit in the bright forevermore.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Be Careful,

Be careful of your manners; they indicate your breeding.

Be careful of your actions, for they reveal your character.

Be careful of your associations; you are judged by the company you keep.

Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has made a name and record in the past fifty years that is enviable. Thousands of people having tried it for coughs, colds, catarrh, asthma, bronchitis and consumption know its value, and would not be without it. Why? Because it cures where other remedies fail. We recommend it for children subject to croup and whooping-cough. It will give relief and cause speedy cure. The medical profession recognise it, and physicians frequently prescribe it for lung troubles. These facts have pushed Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar to the front rank. It is the best remedy for coughs, colds, all throat and lung affections, and no family should be without it. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

Life's pathway is up hill. He who is making true progress is having a hard time of it. Every step costs effort. If a man finds his way an easy one, he may be pretty sure that he is going down hill; and that is no direction for any man. Let no man complain, therefore, but rather take heart in the fact that his progress, is toilsome; for it could not be progress if it were not toilsome.—Sunday-School Times.

Constitutional History of American Episcopal Methodism. } OCTAVO. 414 PAGES. Price, $1.50.

BY JNO. J. TIGERT, D. D.

Most Constitutional histories are dry reading, but this has interested me very much. I have been especially impressed by its vivid portrayals of signal events, its felicitous illustrations of the way in which the most important matters of ecclesiastical polity have been determined by the opinions and acts of individuals, and its omnipresent proofs of the Providential origin and development of Methodism on both sides of the Atlantic.—Bishop C. D. Foss, of the M. E. Church.

Few books have ever been issued from the presses of our Publishing House at Nashville equal in importance and value to this one. It fills a place occupied by none other. The scope of the work is full and comprehensive, and the subject is treated from beginning to end with rare ability. The publication of this work is timely. It ought to be read and studied by every intelligent preacher and layman of our Church. Particularly ought it to be mastered by every delegate to our General Conference.—Southern Christian Advocate.

From the care with which you have sifted statements, examined documents, and analyzed facts, I think you have produced a work which will reflect credit on your industry and ability, and entitle it to a place of a classic in Methodist literature, not to say ecclesiastical literature.—Bishop E. R. Hendrix.

Prince Bismarck has presented all the school children of Friedrichsruhe with china cups bearing a portrait of the Emperor, as a memento of the Emperor's recent visit to him.

As a mark of satisfaction at the passage of the Russo-German commercial treaty, Emperor William has conferred upon Chancellor Von Caprivi the chain of the Hohenzollern family order, and has bestowed the order of the Red Eagle upon Von Bieberstein, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

An impressive demonstration to protest against the action of the House of Lords in rejecting the employer's liability bill was held in Hyde Park, Sunday. It is estimated that 80 000 persons were in attendance. There were twelve platforms in the park, from which the speakers addressed the assembled throng.

Lord Rosebery, the premier of England, made an address in Edinburgh on March 17. He attached the greatest importance to the close and intimate union of the Irish and Liberal parties, and believed that it was a real union. The remainder of his speech was devoted to the support of liberal measures, including the Welsh and Scotch disestablishment propositions.

President Peixoto got ninety of the fugitive rebel officers in one day. They were on board the Portuguese merchant steamer Cidade do Porto, which undertook to put to sea with them. As the steamer neared the harbor entrance a shot from Fort Santa Cruz brought her to a stop and Captain Da Costa was forced to give up the ex-insurgents. Count de Paraty, the Portuguese minister, has refused to comply with the Brazilian government's demand that he surrender Admiral Saldahna da Gama and his staff officers. They are now on board the Portuguese corvette Mindello. The government has cabled to Portugal making a formal demand for them on the grounds that they are common deserters from the navy, and that Admiral da Gama is a defaulter to the Brazilian government.

Will be paid for any case of Rheumatism which can not be cured by Dr. Drummond's Lightning Remedy. This offer is made in good faith by the proprietors, and there is no reasonable excuse for anyone to suffer longer. Any ordinary case will be cured by one treatment, and it is poor economy to suffer when relief can be secured so certainly. The price of a month's treatment—two bottles—is $5, and that is the cost of a cure. Full particulars and testimonials of wonderful cures sent to any address. FROM THE WORK.

Rev. A. W. Turnor, P. C., Melville and Big Cane charge, Louisiana Conference: "The outlook is encouraging on this charge. The people have given us a kind reception, and the kindness lasts. On Saturday, March 3, about 5 P. M., the good people began to gather in at the parsonage, each one bringing with them something for the preacher and family. We will not mention all of the articles. Suffice to say that, with the rest, we received a half barrel of flour, fifty pounds of sugar, coffee, syrup, butter, eggs, lard, etc. Allow me to call attention to the fact that the Baptists and Christians were among the most liberal on the occasion. We have just closed a six days' meeting at Melville, which resulted in great good. Received six candidates for membership on profession of faith, and the church was greatly revived. We were assisted by Bros. J. R. Roy and J. E. Denson, who did faithful and effectual work. Brethren, pray for us."

A PLEASANT TRIP.

My wife and I recently took a trip to Melville, La., the object of our going being to assist the pastor, Rev. A. W. Turner, in a protracted meeting. The meeting was already progressing finely when we arrived, the pastor being assisted by Bro. J. R. Roy, of the Simmsport charge. We were most delightfully entertained in the hospitable house of Bro. W. P Payton. We remained from Tuesday until Friday evening, preaching twice daily to appreciative congregations, and had the pleasure of baptizing an infant and one adult, also of receiving a class of six into the church. These were the visible results of the meeting, but we are sure seed was sown which will yet bring forth "much fruit."

Bro. Turner is taking well with his people, and, though this is his first charge, is displaying considerable ability both as a preacher and a pastor. This was to me a most pleasant trip. We intend to repeat it the first time we get a chance. J ENGLE DENSON.

Boyce, La., March 3, 1894.

Rev. L. S. Jones, Canton, Miss.: "For five months I have been most of the time confined to the bed-room of an invalid wife. These five months have been full of sorrow, anxiety and care. Often have I wondered, Why am I thus shut in when so many things demand my attention? Often have I asked, Why am I thus afflicted? It has been said that in order to truly sympathize with others in their trouble, we must pass through like troubles Nothing is truer. These earthly afflictions not only draw us nearer to our fellow-sufferers, they also draw us nearer to God. They soften our nature and make us sweeter-tempered. They cause us to lose sight of the things that are seen, and to look by faith to the things that are not seen. I am beginning to understand Paul, when he says, 'Not only so, but we rejoice in tribulations also.' During these months of afflictions and anxious waiting for returning health, I have been waging an unrelenting warfare against the whisky demon. Perhaps no place in our beloved Zion is more whisky-cursed than this. I know of no place where the open saloon is so deeply rooted in the good graces of the people. If a copy of the Canton liquor petition could be transported to Heaven, the angels would stand back aghast with horror at some names that appear thereon. 'What,' we ask, 'are we, as a church, to do with men who sign liquor petitions?' Let them remain in our communion? If so, we may just as well let down the bars and let the bar keepers and all in. We had better cease our opposition to the liquor traffic. For the man who sells the 'deadly poison' is as good as the man who signs the petition to license his business. The saloonist is a murderer, and the man who signs his petition is particeps criminis, morally. The one is entitled to as much respect as the other. We are preparing to have Bro. McIntosh with us in April, and Bro. Sam P. Jones in August. With the help of these brethren, we hope to clear away the clouds and quiet the agitated waters, and then have some pleasant sailing. In the midst of my afflictions and fightings, I have received great kindness from most of my people. We have some good men in our church and a host of good women. I need not tell you that these good women are in hearty symp. thy with me in my efforts to destroy the places of legalized vice that stand in waiting day and night to catch and destroy their loved ones. Mr. Editor, we are to have the State Convention of the W. C. T. U. in this place some time in May. Can't you cheer us with your presence at that time? Come up and we will let you talk for your paper and for prohibition."

Preachers' Meeting of the Vicksburg District.

At the request of several of the preachers of the Vicksburg district, and at the special request of Bro. B. F. Jones, that the first meeting be held in Port Gibson, I have appointed April 17 and 18 as the time, and Port Gibson as the place, for holding a district preachers' meeting. The meeting will be opened in the Methodist Church, April 17, at 10 o'clock A. M., and the following subjects will be discussed:

1. The Pastor and Pastoral Work.
2. The Place the Sunday-school Occupies in the Church, and How to Make It Efficient.
3. The Relation of the Pulpit to the Spirituality of the Church.
4. The Prayer Meeting: How to Make It a Success.
5. Worldliness in the Church: The Cause and the Remedy.
6. The Relation of Our Church Schools to the Religious Life of the Pulpit.
7. The Church Paper in the Family.
8. The Importance of Circulating the Literature of Our Publishing House, and Our Preachers as Agents.
9. The Obligation of the Pulpit to Warn Our People against the Sin of Covetousness, and to Urge a Liberal Support of the Institutions of the Church.

It is certainly hoped that the brethren will study these subjects closely and prayerfully, and that they will all attend the meeting. A short essay will be prepared on each subject, and after it is read, will be submitted for discussion. We would be glad to have you with us, Mr. Editor, and as many others as may feel sufficiently interested to honor us with their presence and their assistance.

J. M. WEEMS, P. E.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists; price 75c. per bottle.

of the original colors, but no change in them, is all that happens with Pearline. The dirt is taken out, and that brings the colors back—but they are never taken away. If they are not hurt by water, they won't be hurt by Pearline.

For washing that has been proved to be absolutely safe, without any risk, nothing costs less than Pearline.

Any other kind of washing is likely to be dear, no matter what the price.

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 361 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

Our Grand Combination Offer

KING'S IMPROVED COTTON.

Extra Early, Prolific, Long Limbs. 36 to 40 per cent. Lint.

This cotton gave the heaviest yield (1,150 pounds seed cotton) per acre in competition with 86 other varieties at the Mississippi Agricultural Experiment Station in 1890, and its good record has been fully maintained in all subsequent experiments.

This trial was absolutely impartial. Each cotton had exactly the same chances in every way. The result shows that, under similar conditions, with exactly the same treatment in every way, King's Improved Cotton will produce from 20 to 100 per cent. more cotton than the most noted varieties in the South.

Price: 25 cents per package.

SEEDS—WORLD'S FAIR MEDAL AND DIPLOMA.

King's exhibit of Seeds and Garden Vegetables was awarded several premiums and a special diploma by Piedmont Exposition judges in 1891. It was also awarded a medal at the World's Fair, as being the best on exhibition there. The collection is a choice selection of garden vegetable seeds.

The collection contains twenty papers of seed.

25 cents per package.

KING'S IMPROVED CORN.

At the Georgia State Experiment Station this corn was tested with 15 kinds. The purpose of the trial was to find out which variety would make the largest quantity per acre, under same conditions.

Result: King's beat 15 other kinds, producing, with same chances identically, 50 per cent more than some of the improved varieties.

This corn is a large white kind—makes excellent bread. Produces well on poor land.

Price: 25 cents per package.

GRAND COMBINATION OFFER.

1 package of King's Improved Cotton, 1 package of King's Improved Corn, and 5 papers of best Garden Seed, described above—all for 35 cents.

HOW TO OBTAIN THIS OFFER.

Send me $1, and get five collections.

For only 25 cents will send package each of Cotton and Corn and 1 package said to contain 200 Annuals, flowers.

Full descriptive circulars of seeds sent free.

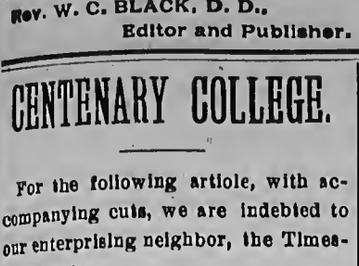
CENTENARY COLLEGE.

For the following article, with accompanying cuts, we are indebted to our enterprising neighbor, the Times-Democrat:

Centenary College is situated in Jackson, La., twelve miles east of Bayou Sara. It is near Ethel, a station on the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad, and is, therefore, easy of access. Jackson is located on the first highlands north of the Gulf. The climate is healthful and pleasant, never reaching the extremes of heat or cold.

Centenary College stands on a beautiful sloping hill covered with giant magnolias, tall, stately pines, and widespreading beech trees. No college in America is situated more beautifully than Centenary.

Mr. John Horton laid out the village and called it Buncombe, in honor of his native town, Buncombe, N. C. Mr. Horton gave the State of Louisiana hundreds of acres for the site and grounds of Louisiana College, now



Prof. W. H. N. Magruder

Centenary. For his great liberality and munificent donation his memory is held dear. His tomb is on a hill in the southern part of the town.

After the battle of New Orleans, Gen. Jackson, with his Tennessee army, camped on the banks of the Rio Felicia on their march home. The citizens, in enthusiastic ardor, changed the name of their village to Jackson, thereby showing honor to the hero of New Orleans. In 1825 Louisiana founded its State college on the extensive grounds which Mr. Horton had given the State for a college. This institution proved unsuccessful, and in 1845 Louisiana sold its State college to the Methodist Conferences, embracing Southern Mississippi and the State of Louisiana. The State sold its two handsome brick buildings and many acres to these Conferences for $10,000.

In the year 1839 the Methodist Church was one hundred years old. Thank-offerings by its friends and members were given to the church. In this way enough money was given to build a religious or church institution. Hence it received the name Centenary, which was first located at Clinton, Miss., but was removed to Brandon Springs, near Brandon, Miss. This location being unfortunate, the church college was moved to Jackson, La. This was done in 1845, the same year that the Methodist Church purchased the Louisiana College and changed the name to Centenary.

Centenary College owes its existence to the Rev. B. M. Drake. The conception and the measures inaugurated to give it birth and growth were his. In this movement Mr. Drake was assisted by Rev. John Lane, of Vicksburg.

Certain Centenary offerings were set apart for this purpose. These were soon increased by the active agencies of the Rev. C. K. Marshall and the Rev. Elias R. Porter. Added to these were the ministers of the Methodist Church in Louisiana and Mississippi, who labored hard for the permanent growth of the institution.

The buildings are grand in their structure, giant Doric columns guarding the entrance like sentinels. Seen through the thick grove of forest trees, the buildings remind one of massive antique structures of the Doric period in Greek architecture. There are two brick wings, the original purchase of which cost $10,000. These wings are dormitories. The magnificent centre structure was erected at the expense of $100,000.

Centenary College stands not only as a monument to Christian education and the liberality of noble people who contributed to the centennial of Methodism, but it towers a huge pile that points backward to the grandest and saddest period of American history. The pages of her history are brightened by the noble work of moral and religious instruction; still they are darkened by the shadows of a sacred past.

Centenary commemorates the heroism of the Confederate soldier. Here on the beautiful campus a bloody battle was fought, and many brave Southern soldiers were left still and cold in the arms of death. Here also at this time did the Southern women, with their gentleness and tender sympathies, minister to the wounded and dying "boys in grey."

During the siege of Port Hudson sick and wounded soldiers were sent from there to Centenary, and, like a gentle mother of mercy, she sheltered and guarded her suffering sons of the Southern Confederacy. Eighty-eight of these soldiers died, and they now rest in eternal sleep under the trees on the eastern slope of the campus. Unnamed and unknown lie these Confederate heroes. Scattered wide and far from their parental roof, but they are loved and honored. They rest under the sunny skies and fragrant June roses of their native Southland. On Memorial Day, in the Spring-time, the community and students take an interest in decorating with loving hands the graves of these unknown Confederate dead.

The centre building contains a magnificent auditorium unsurpassed in architectural structure by any building in the State. It has an arched dome of immense height, supported by double rows of Corinthian columns. The hall proper has a seating capacity of 2,000, and the galleries 1,000, and besides a large music stand and rostrum.

Two large society halls, in which many of the foremost men of the South debated, are also in the main building. Both of these halls belong respectively to the Union Literary Society and Franklin Institute, are handsomely furnished, and on the walls hang the portraits of distinguished alumni.

Besides the libraries belonging to the societies, the college library contains over 3,000 well-selected volumes of both ancient and modern literature. There are books of science, history and philosophy that date far back into the past centuries. Huge folios representing Shakespearian literature present a perfect picture gallery, whose value can not be estimated, as they are no longer engraved, having been imported from England at an early date at the expense of wealthy Louisianians, who paid fabulous prices for them. To duplicate each folio would cost thousands of dollars. There is a polyglot Bible written in a by-gone century. This ancient book contains the whole Bible in Hebrew, Greek, Latin, French, Spanish, Italian, Gaelic, and English.

A prayer chapel, where all students are required to assemble morning and evening for devotional purposes, eight commodious and well-appointed recitation-rooms, cabinet and museum, complete the centre building.

The museum is filled with curio almost as ancient as time itself, and comprises objects from almost nearly every known country of the globe; a laboratory containing valuable philosophical, astronomical and chemical apparatus; also a well-selected mineralogical and geological cabinet. In the chemical and philosophical departments special facilities are furnished the student for conducting practical experiments. A splendidly equipped gymnasium affords excellent physical culture and development.

The curriculum of this college is very high. Everything taught in the first colleges of the United States in a literary sense is taught here, and the best proof of its complete thoroughness is in the fact that many of the sons of its alumni are now seeking knowledge in the same halls which their fathers trod. A distinguished patron and prominent Louisianian said through the press: "If I had one thousand boys to educate, I would send nine hundred and ninety-nine to Centenary, and perhaps the other one to Vanderbilt."

A very flourishing Young Men's Christian Association exists among the students, and its influence for good is very perceptible.

Centenary College enjoys the distinction of educating many young men who desire in the future to devote their life to the ministry, and can proudly number some of the most prominent divines in the country among her alumni. Young men studying for the ministry and the sons of ministers receive their tuition free of charge.

It is conceded by all that the commencement exercises of this grand old institution are magnificent, furnishing a treat to all who attend. An effort to get the best speakers and most noted men for this occasion is always made by the president and faculty, and that their efforts are appreciated is shown in the fact that on the annual recurrence of this glad occasion people from all parts of the State make it their business to be present.

Centenary has an alumni of 300, among which number are found the best people of the South. Many of the lawyers, judges, physicians, ministers and statesmen claim Centenary as their alma mater, and justly pride themselves that they have studied within her walls, while she congratulates herself on the position her sons have taken from far-off California to Florida.

D. L. Phares, M. D., stands at the head of the list of Centenary alumni, he having graduated in 1837, and it is believed that he was the first to receive a diploma in Louisiana. Among the students that have gone from Centenary, and are scattered over the American continent, are found the illustrious names of ex-President Davis and Judah P. Benjamin. Mr. Davis took a special course in Spanish at the Louisiana College. The Hon. Judah P. Benjamin, Secretary of State in the Southern Confederacy, received his education here while the college belonged to the State. He was a regular matriculant, but never graduated. After the surrender the Queen of England employed him as her attorney—an honor which was a just recognition of this great man's power.

Hon. C. J. Boatner was a student at Centenary. In these educational halls the distinguished gentleman gave evidence of unmistakable talent. He is now in the United States Congress.

Hon. Charles Parlange was also a student within its classic walls. From an elegant, polished speaker and able lawyer, he has successively risen to lieutenant-governor, supreme judge of the State, and United States judge of the Eastern District of Louisiana.

Hon. E. J. Ellis, sent by Mississippi as one of her ablest representatives to the United States Congress, was one of the most popular students ever at the college.

Hon. O. M. Roberts, ex-governor of Texas, was, in his youth, a searcher after wisdom at Centenary.

Thus this college has its distinguished men scattered in every State of the South.

The late Hon. Ben Spencer wrote his famous speech, beginning, "The clouds of war are gathering thick about us," while here, and prided himself on the fact that he could call Centenary his alma mater.

Rev. C. G. Andrews, D. D., president of Centenary for a number of years, and now pastor of the Methodist Church, South, at Vicksburg, received his diploma at this college, and was a member of the class of 1850. He has always held a high position in his Conference and in the high esteem of his fellow-men. He is a man whose Christian integrity, individuality and decision of character elicits the admiration of all with whom he comes in contact.

Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D., of New Orleans, formerly editor of the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, graduated at this institution, and for a number of years he has been a faithful member of the Board of Trustees. His ability as an editor and a pulpit orator are widely known.

Among the benefactors of Centenary College the character of the late Judge Edward McGehee, of Woodville, Miss., towers upward as an Alpine peak—grand, lofty, magnificent. The generosity of this noble man reached to every accessible place. His benevolence to colleges and churches was great. This college was the child of his love. He originally purchased the buildings from the State, and his gifts to it were not less than $70,000. He was also chief patron of the Woodville Female Seminary.

The Carondelet Street Methodist Church in New Orleans is a durable monument of his beneficence. He gave largely to the building, and, when finished, it owed him $40,000. This debt he offered to cancel if the church would pay him $16,000 in cash. When payment was tendered he refused to accept anything, but finally took $2,000. This sum he spent in building a church in Wilkinson county, Miss.

"There was," says Bishop Keener, who was present, "a tremulous emotion and modesty in the manner of his making this gift that surpasses the beneficence of the gift itself, for he seemed to be the obliged party in the transaction. He appointed himself the specially ordained benefactor of orphans, widows, the weak or suffering in every grade of life. He seemed to feel that his vast wealth had been placed in his hands, not for his own individual comfort, but to shower upon every suffering creature. He was gifted with the splendid judgment that man calls good luck. His possessions multiplied until his plantations stretched out as wide as a feudal estate, and his slaves numbered more than a thousand. He built the first railroad and cotton factory in Mississippi. In modern times Judge McGehee fills the unique position held by Abraham, the patriarch of old, whose vast possessions and household were consecrated to God. He was gifted with a multiform genius, a genius for government, for money making, for winning love and for loving, and a genius for religion. This self-poised, self-acting, masterful man of affairs was humble, docile, teachable. Moving a born leader among men, he walked humbly with God. He seemed as incapable of falling below the measure of what he owed to God as if rendering a fellow-man less than his due. He was honest with God as well as man."

Gen. Taylor, while President of the United States, offered Judge McGehee the secretaryship of the United States Treasury. He declined this honor.

Fidelity was a strong trait in this noble character. He loved Centenary, and never swerved in his loyalty to this grand institution among Christian and educational institutions. He was a life-long friend, patron, trustee, and benefactor.

Judge McGehee was born in Oglethorpe county, Ga., Nov. 8, 1786, and died at his home in Woodville, Miss., Oct. 1, 1880.

Hon. Geo. T. McGehee, of Woodville, is a son of the late judge, and his father's mantle has fallen upon him. He is at present a most efficient member of the Board of Trustees. Dr. Edward McGehee is a member of the Board, whose time and talent are ever at the command of this institution. Thus the sons and grandsons of the eminent benefactor are closely following the noble example and good deeds of their great-souled ancestor.

Capt. J. N. Pharr, of St. Mary parish, is one of the largest benefactors since the war. He was born in North Carolina in 1830, and came to Louisiana about 1850. Here he embarked in the milling business extensively, and was very successful on account of his untiring energy and splendid business qualifications. Later he invested his means in steamboats, which plied the beautiful Teche and Atchafalaya under his own supervision. Of late years he has been largely engaged in the sugar industry. He is a patron, trustee, and liberal supporter of the college and all worthy institutions. His estimable wife is also an enthusiastic advocate of Centenary.

Col. Peter James, of Yazoo City, Miss., heading the mercantile business of that city, is an alumnus, and also a trustee and benefactor. He has been exceptionally liberal in the support of the college from which he emanated. He pays annual interest on a $10,000 note. Mr. Philip Werlein, the prominent music dealer of New Orleans, pays interest on the same amount.

Mr. J. H. Keller, one of the most enterprising and successful business men of New Orleans, has shown his liberality by his large gifts to Centenary. Mr. J. P. Fullilove, a large planter near Shreveport, La., has given a $5,000 note, an evidence of his benevolence.

Hon. A. H. Gay, of Plaquemine, a faithful trustee, donated $5,000 in cash. His mother, Mrs. E. J. Gay, has given $1,000. Mrs. Christian Keener, wife of Rev. Christian Keener, of New Orleans, has also proven her high esteem of Centenary by presenting the institution with $1,000. These two noble women have most substantially manifested their love for Christian education. One thousand dollars was given by Mr. C. W. Mills, of Atlanta, Ga. Thus Centenary has warm friends among the noble and good in other States.

Mr. W. R. McKorven, of Jackson, La., with a host of other friends, has been a generous contributor to Centenary.

Bishop John C. Keener, president of the Board of Trustees, was born in Baltimore, Md., in 1819. He was educated at Middleton, Conn., and received his diploma at the age of fifteen years. He entered the ministry about 1841. In 1848 Bishop Keener was sent to New Orleans to take charge of the old Poydras Street Church. He has been a minister for fifty-three years. In 1865 he was elected editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. At the General Conference held in 1870 he was elected Bishop. In July, 1850, we find him first identified with Centenary College. Since that time he has been one of its staunchest friends. For forty-four years, with great regularity, he has visited the college. His tremendous force of character, invincible courage and unselfish devotion to the cause of education as Christianity, have been an unfailing source of strength to Centenary.

In 1869, while the South was under the ban of Republicanism, and was financially bankrupt, the college maintained its existence through the indomitable will and energy of Bishop Keener. He furnished a conveyance at his own expense, and made a personal canvass of a large part of Mississippi and Louisiana, visiting Fayette, Natchez and Port Gibson, securing about $20,000 in subscriptions and notes to tide the college over the crisis. When the prospects were darkest, and brave men quailed and even despaired, Bishop Keener was unfaltering. The same confident smile beamed from his face, and others gathered courage and zeal from his undaunted faith.

Capt. J. N. Pharr

Bishop C. B. Galloway, D. D., of Jackson, Miss., to whose splendid energies, in a great measure, the success of Millsaps College is due, has been and is still an admirer and friend of Centenary, and especially did he show his friendship while editor of the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. The Bishop is also a member of the Board of Trustees.

Prof. W. H. N. Magruder, of Baton Rouge, superintendent of the Institute for the Blind, is the only surviving member of the original Board of Trust. All the rest have gone to their eternal home. This venerable and distinguished educator was born in Jefferson county, Miss., in 1815, and graduated at Middleton, Conn. His life has been long, useful, and eventful. Though an octogenarian, his body is vigorous, mind active, and his intellect brilliant. Prof. Magruder has been eminently successful in all his undertakings. He established a school at Baton Rouge, and conducted it admirably for many years.

Rev. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, D. D., president of Centenary, was born in Correta county, Ga. He was prepared for the sophomore class at Longstreet Academy. He then entered Emory College, where he graduated. He shared the first honor of his class with a fellow-student, and was valedictorian. Bishop George F. Pierce was then president of Emory. Soon after graduation he was engaged in teaching in Madison College, Mississippi. He next became president of Sharon Female College in Mississippi. This school was the second in the world to grant diplomas to women; Wesleyan Female College, of Macon, Ga., being the first—Georgia and Mississippi leading in the great work of female education. At one time Dr. Hunnicutt was corresponding editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. His writings have been confined chiefly to the religious press. His paternal ancestors were Virginia Quakers. His maternal great-grandfather, the Rev. Thomas Lundie, of Scotland, was the first Church of England minister sent to Virginia. Dr. Hunnicutt was chaplain in the Confederate Army. He has built a mission chapel in China out of his own means. From his salary at Centenary College he has laid aside $1,000, with its accruing interest, to be added to the permanent endowment of the college, whenever such a movement is begun. He has always been a friend to education, having assisted many young persons with his means in attaining an education. His punctuality at his class-room is worthy of imitation. He is one of the most learned presidents and able financiers the college has ever had.

Prof. G. H. Wiley, professor of ancient languages, was born in Portsmouth, N. H., in 1825, the same year that Centenary was founded. He graduated at Middleton, Conn., in 1844. Prof. Wiley has been connected with the college since 1850. For forty years no Roman soldier was ever more faithful to the Roman standard, no Greek ever more devoted to patriotism, than he has been to the ancient classics. True as the needle to the pole, Prof. Wiley has for forty years been faithful to his duty. He can be safely taken as a polar star, to which men, like the mariner who can correct his bearings, can correct their mistakes by looking at him. He is eminently proficient in Greek, Latin, French and Spanish, reading them as fluently as he does English.

Prof. W. H. Carter
Rev. B. M. Drake

Prof. W. H. Carter, of Boonville Miss., was born in 1868, and graduated at the University of Mississippi in 1892. He fills the chair of mathematics and natural science. He is a scion of one of the most talented families in North Mississippi. He took the first honors of his class, and, though proficient in all the branches of an English education, he is especially gifted in mathematics. He is the highest type of a Christian gentleman, and exerts a fine influence over the students with whom he is associated.

Rev. B. M. Drake, grandson of that eminent divine to whom Centenary owes its existence, though not a regularly elected member of the faculty, is assisting the chair of ancient languages since the resignation of Prof. W. J. Roberts. Prof. Drake is a graduate of Centenary, having received his diploma in 1886. He occupied the chair of English in his alma mater during the years 1890 and 1891. He is a young man who does honor to his noble lineage.

Prof. C. C. Miller

Prof. C. C. Miller is a graduate of Centenary, and as a student distinguished himself as a man of rare qualifications. No student enjoyed more popularity than he. Prof. Miller now holds the responsible position of principal of the preparatory department. As great care must be taken at this period of school life, no man is better qualified to fill the important position than he. The students look upon him as they do the entire faculty, not only as their teacher, but as their friend.

It is a remarkable fact that nearly all students brought within touch of this institution imbibe its literary, moral and religious influences. By a special act of the Legislature the sale of all alcoholic drinks is prohibited within five miles of the college. Thus the college has been in Jackson so long that it has created a literary and moral atmosphere peculiar to its location. This influence circles far beyond its classic halls.

Centenary has felt the storm-sweep of adversity, the rush of war, the boom of cannon; but to-day it stands erect, strong and proud in a sturdy manhood.

GIVE A KIND WORD WHEN YOU CAN.

Do you know a heart that hungers
For a word of love and cheer?
There are many such about us;
It may be that one is near.
Look around you. If you find it,
Speak the word that's needed so,
And your own heart may be strengthened
By the help that you bestow.

It may be that some one falters
On the brink of sin and wrong,
And a word from you might save him—
Help to make the tempted strong.
Look about you. O, my brother,
What a sin is yours and mine
If we see that help is needed
And we give no friendly sign!

Never think kind words are wasted,
Bread on waters cast are they,
And it may be we shall find them
Coming back to us some day.
Coming back when sorely needed,
In a time of sharp distress,
So, my friend, let's give them freely;
Gift and giver God will bless.

Tampori Parendum.

Some time ago I published in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, in the form of a catechetical lesson, a possibility in church literature in the near future. The line of policy indicated was prompted rather by the trend of public sentiment than by the views of the writer.

It is perfectly apparent that the present condition of affairs as between the two great branches of Methodism in this country can not long remain as it now exists.

In 1844 there was an open question, semi-political in its nature which was stirring the minds and hearts of all the thoughtful people of this land. On this question a great ecclesiastical organization was divided. Opinions differed as to both the civil and moral aspects of that question. Without a settlement of the points at issue, one party undertook to decide for all parties. By this ecclesiastical organization men were required to do more than their conscience demanded or the laws of their State allowed. Civil and ecclesiastical duties were made to clash. Division was inevitable and division came, because conditions existed which necessitated it.

In the lapse of time the times have changed—contingencies, laws, opinions, etc.—the casus belli no longer exists, and yet after the lapse of half a century we are still at war. The agreement entered into in the plan of separation has been violated by both parties to that agreement; and the Cape May Conference agreement has fared no better! We are now very much like the widely known Kilkenny cats, and but little better.

With fifty years to think and cool off, the fires of prejudice, distrust or jealousy keep up the ebullition of sentiment, and with no cause of war we are still keeping up a constant fire—mostly of small arms—on both sides of the line. Neither can make much advance, because he is confronted by the other. Even the flank movement to gain the rear has proven very expensive and not at all profitable. The strife is swiftly assuming a hand-to-hand contest. Everywhere the forces are rushing to the weak points to meet a weak, but persistent remonstrance. Heretofore the baneful influence of such hostility has been most seen and felt along our ecclesiastical borders. But we are beginning now to see it and feel it from one side of the country to the other.

Where churches differ as to doctrine and polity they are not necessarily hostile to each other, nor in each other's way. Not so with two organizations whose only difference is that of section. In such a case what the one gains the other loses, or rather fails to gain. The entire coast from the Carolinas to Mexico, and the border from Delaware to California, are scenes of conflict. And more. From Washington to Texas, from Montana to Florida, there is hardly a Conference of the one church which has not within its bounds ministers of the other, trying, at great expense, and with poor success, to herd a few wandering sheep which would be better cared for if those ministers would go whence they came. If one asks what business the M. E. Church has sending missionaries to Louisiana or Alabama, let another ask what business has the M. E. Church, South, sending missionaries to Washington or Montana. Beyond the ecclesiastical idea, there is no use in either. The churches already established in those places are fully able to care for all the Methodists who may go into those parts, without those large missionary appropriations from the invading church. It is a waste of time, a waste of money, and, worse still, it is a cultivation of those prejudices which ought long since have been rooted up.

This conflict is spreading into our foreign work. In the City of Mexico may be seen two Methodist "Publishing Houses"—such as they are; two Methodist superintendents of missions—in short, two complete Methodist machines running, and the Boards running in debt to keep up these two machines to do the work which one would do better. Is there any higher or holier reason for such condition of things than sectarian ambition or denominational pride?

What is the reason that the M. E. Church should not withdraw all of her ministers south of the 35th parallel of latitude, or cede them, with their charges, to the M. E Church, South? And if so, why should not the M. E. Church, South, do the same with all her ministers and congregations north of the 40th degree of latitude? This idea may not be original, but it is certainly practicable, and if the leaders do not do something to relieve this strife and stop this uncharitable war for the survival of the fittest, they should acknowledge their weakness and call for help.

The Rayner Bible Work.

MR. EDITOR: I am sure that Bro. Rayner will not object to the publication of the following private letter received from him, and I am at the same time sure that it will be interesting to your many readers who contributed Bibles. The "Home" referred to is the home of 270 orphans. They form a school, an industrial establishment, and a salvation army when they appear on the streets with their drums, bugles, prayers and songs.

Yours truly, H. G. HAWKINS.

"THE LORD IS MY LIGHT."

Saga, Japan, Jan. 7, 1894.

Dear Bro. Hawkins: After three weeks' comparatively pleasant and successful work at Tadotsu, in the good providence of God, I went, on the invitation of Bro. James H. Pettee, to Okayama; met a hearty Christian welcome; gave about eight hundred books, assisted by Bro. Pettee, some pupils in his school, by Bro. Muller, and a teacher in Mr. Ishi's Home.

There was a meeting two or three nights in the church; preaching by a noted evangelist; large attendance, and among the attendants were some disturbers, who tried, by jeers, howls and responses, to break up the meeting, but failed to do so. The pastor was much encouraged, and I trust a victory was won for our Lord Jesus Christ.

I was much impressed with the Orphans' Home and its noble head. Mr. Ishi must be a man of God. He is now suffering severe persecution.

In the large hospital I gave about one hundred copies, and eighty-one to the Medical College; one hundred and forty-five to the Home, and fifty-four to the prison. Bro. Muller managed the visit to the last-named, and kindly accompanied me. The officers were very polite, and showed us through the different departments. It seems to be well conducted. There is room for 1,400 Only once have I seen manifested an eagerness for books equal to that which you also witnessed in the soldiers' quarters at Matsuyama—that shown by the medical students. A few of the bound gospel had been given to some of them on the street and in their boarding-places in town. The president of the college ("head physician" I believe Mr. Onoda called him) received himself a copy of the New Testament, and arranged for the students between recitations, to go to a large room, while I should stand at the door and give as they passed out. In ten or fifteen minutes from my arrival at the door eighty copies were given, and not a name did we get; had to write in my register, "Given to a student in Medical College, Okayama."

A delightful time had I at Okayama. The Lord be praised, and may his best blessings rest upon Bro. and Sister Pettee and all those who helped me. Their hospitality was free, bountiful, and beautiful. They saw your kind letter about the "Bible Work," and, therefore, wrote to me. May it give you much joy to know this!

Please write me soon, and remember me kindly to Bro. and Sister Moseley when you see them, and to Bro. A. and Misses G. and J. If you get an account of our northern trip from Sugino San, please send me a copy.

I met here, on yesterday, a hearty welcome into a very extensive house.

BENJAMIN S. RAYNER.

No Crowd, No Sermon.

A story is told that Bishop Grafton, of Fon du Lac, Wis., went to church recently to deliver a sermon. The audience was disappointingly small, there being, indeed, but six or seven devoted members present. His lordship was angry. He told two or three who were gathered together that he had spent full four days on his sermon, and he did not propose to waste it on a handful of people. It is added that he upbraided the parish for its lack of interest, and ended by stepping down from the pulpit in high dudgeon without delivering the sermon. Differently did Rev. C. H. Spurgeon act when a young and unknown man. The morning was wet and the congregation small, but he selected his best discourse, prayed more fervently than ever before and preached with all his might. His success spread among the villagers, and the rain at night did not prevent the church from being crowded. He had not the dignity of a bishop to maintain, but he had the wisdom, though a youth, to adopt the right method of filling the church.—Presbyterian Review.

Rev. Thos. J. Newell.

The declination of re-election to the presidency of Gronada Collegiate Institute by the Rev. Thos. J. Newell, after twelve years of occupancy, is the occasion of real sorrow through this entire community. Expressions of regret are to be heard on all sides and from all classes. No man among us is more widely known, or more generally beloved or greatly honored.

He came to Grenada in 1881 as pastor of the Methodist Church, and in September, 1882, was prevailed upon by the people there to open a school. The institute property was then used as a tenement, and a dozen or more families occupied it. The citizens proposed, in a large measure, to give him the property, but he declined it, and by his own good management had it secured to the Methodist Church. Mr. Newell soon by his indomitable energy breathed life into a dead and buried corpse. For twelve years he has given it his undivided attention. As a teacher no man has ever succeeded in Grenada so well as he. In the twelve years not more than three young ladies have gone from Grenada to be graduated elsewhere. His pupils here have a filial fondness for him, and his patrons an unquestioning confidence.

Mr. Newell has always been true to the Methodist Church in his attendance, his financial support, and expressed views; yet to-day, and all the while, there are to be found pupils with him from all the churches in our city, and that, too, when we have a city graded school as good, we think, as the State affords.

As a preacher, Mr. Newell is one of the few men who has spent twelve sessions in the class-room, and has not lost his power in the pulpit. Our people rejoice in his preaching the Word as much as they ever did; and when it is generally known that he is to preach there is no lack of a congregation. Always clear, instructive, and helpful, and not unfrequently eloquent and inspiring.

As a citizen no man has done Grenada more service than he. His devotion to her every interest has made him a part of her daily life. It is not strange, therefore, that our people, without respect to class or creed, regret to see him give up an institution of which he is indeed the founder, and leave our community, of which he is a vital part. This community will do what it can to have Mr. Newell reconsider his action.

GEO. W. JONES.

Report of the Secretary of the Board of Missions of the North Mississippi Conference.

To the North Mississippi Conference:

Under a resolution passed by the Board of Missions, and published in the ADVOCATE, I desire to make my first quarterly report.

Greenville District—Rev. J. J. Brooks, secretary, reports nothing paid.

Winona District—Rev. Geo. H. Lipscomb, secretary, no report.

Kosciusko District—Rev. W. D. McCullough, secretary, reports Salem circuit, for foreign missions, paid $19.

Holly Springs District—Rev. J. S. Oakley, secretary, reports Holly Springs, for foreign missions, paid $60.

Aberdeen District—Rev. M. E. Tumlin, secretary, reports, "A small amount collected from Athens circuit."

Grenada District—Rev. J. E. Thomas, secretary, reports Water Valley, for foreign missions, paid $140—for domestic, $38; Oxford, for foreign missions, paid $115—for domestic, paid $11; Grenada, "Foreign missionary assessment provided for."

Sardis District—Rev. Thos. B. Clifford, secretary, reports Pleasant Grove circuit, paid $4; Courtland circuit, for foreign missions, $10.

Columbus District—Rev. J. W. Dorman, secretary, reports Macon, for foreign missions, paid $57.10.

Corinth District—Rev. H. R. Tucker, secretary, reports for foreign missions, paid $13—for domestic missions, paid $10; Boonville circuit paid for domestic missions, $4.40; Iuka station paid for foreign missions, $77; Ripley and New Albany paid for foreign missions, $75.

We are grateful for the kind co-operation of these brethren. We feel quite sure that, with their work in their respective districts, the missionary spirit and collection will be greatly improved. We hope to have a much more extensive report for June.

THOS. J. NEWELL,
Sec. Conference Board of Missions.

This is no age of bastard Christianity nor of an effete Churchianity exhausting itself upon fine houses, kid-gloved parsons, and pretentious shows and gew gaws. There is robust religion in the world, if a man will look for it; and need not have a troublesome search. The great body of Christian organizations are leavening society and purifying the world, and sowing down the face of the earth with the Word of God as never before. The people who are at the root of all live, moving, active, potential endeavors in every department—missionary, educational, reformatory, uplifting—are Christians of the genuine, unmixed type.—Richmond Advocate.

In Memory.

BY I. W. COOPER, D. D.

It is Winter now, but in the fields of memory flowers bloom at all seasons, and from this field we would gather a flower and lay it on the grave of our dearest and best of friends, Rev. John Alexander Ellis. He has been absent one year, and it has been a weary year, for we were lonely without his presence, his smile, his love, and the warmth of friendship. One year—and not forgotten. No! When he first left us it seemed as a dream. We seemed to wait and watch for his return as in other golden days; but it has been so long since we heard his voice, and received the clasp of his hand, we realize now he is not, for God took him. One year—and we miss him as painfully as when he bade us good-by. One year gone—how could we forget him? Is not love eternal? Does not friendship live beyond the grave? Love and friendship have no days, no years; they are as immortal as the soul.

John A. Ellis did not live for himself. He lived for others; he loved others. This is the reason others loved him. Pericles said when dying, "No Athenian ever went into mourning because of any act of mine." Our brother could have said the same. His lips dried the tears from the cheeks of others. He did not throw shadows across the pathway of life. Magnetism was his; magnetism of sympathy, of love and friendship. Children loved him. He was human, but his humanity had been purified by fellowship with Christ.

Sincerity was a bright star in his life. He despised affectation, cant. Examine him in the sunlight, and his character was attractive. He looked on the bright side of life. There was so much brightness in his own sunny life, how could he do otherwise? How consistent in Christian life! Christ was a living person, a friend to him, and he held sweet communion with his Savior.

The sacredness of his home life—shall we intrude and speak of it? So gentle, patient, courteous and affable. No one ever heard an unkind word from his lips. He seemed to think of himself less than he did of the happiness of others. He is gone from us, but he is not dead. The gates opened wide for his entrance into the life beyond. He was no stranger in the Eternal City, for he spoke the language of heaven in this world. His life to me is as some bright dream—beautiful, entrancing.

Honored brother, trusted friend, loving husband and father, when you left it was night to us, but with thee it was morning—the eternal morning.

"How such holy memories cluster,
Like the stars when storms are past,
Pointing up to that fair haven
We may hope to gain at last."

Rev. E. H. Moon.

Elwin Hayden Moon, son of Wm. and Nancy Moon, was born in Monroe county, Miss., July 7, 1849; educated at Andrew College, Tennessee; converted at Rome, Okolona circuit; licensed to preach Oct. 4, 1868; admitted on trial at Water Valley, 1870; received into full connection and ordained deacon at Corinth, 1872, by Bishop H. H. Kavanaugh; ordained elder at Aberdeen, 1874, by Bishop D. S. Doggett.

He filled the following appointments: 1871, Baldwyn circuit; 1872, Pontotoc circuit; 1873, West Point station; 1874, Pontotoc circuit; 1875, Starkville station; 1876, Baldwyn circuit; 1877, Winona and Carrollton; 1878, Starkville station; 1879, supernumerary; 1880, Byhalia station; 1881-2, Greenville station; 1883, Macon station; 1884-7, Holly Springs station; 1888, Como and Fredonia. Transferred to North Alabama, where he served Florence and Elyton stations. Returned in 1890; 1891, Hebron circuit; 1892-4, Tupelo station, where he died Jan. 29, 1894.

Bro. Moon was happily married to Miss Florence Peters, of Columbus, Miss., Nov. 21, 1875, who now, with her two precious children, mourns the loss of a devoted husband and loving father.

The writer was his first and last presiding elder. We were with him in the fresh vigor of his ministerial work, and were then attracted by the simplicity and perfect self-abnegation of the young preacher. He was as modest as it is possible for a man to be. Having been soundly converted to God, he started with conscientious convictions in building Christian character, and in this he made no mistake, as was demonstrated in after life. Truly he was "an epistle, known and read of all men."

There were hidden forces in Bro. Moon which drew the young and old to him as with hooks of steel. He did not take things by storm, but carefully and prayerfully besieged the fortress of the enemy, laying well his premises, and conscientiously drawing his conclusions at the forfeiture of every earthly good.

In his early preaching he laid all upon the altar. When God gave him his young wife, there was a reconsecration, in that they were both laid on the altar. Then, as the pledges of love came to that happy home—and there were two, a daughter and a son—there was a renewal of their gifts and graces to the Master.

As the years have come and gone he has answered to roll-call, and gone at the bidding of our chief shepherds, it mattered not where. He was loyal to his church as well as to his God.

For twenty-three long years he has gone in and out before us, and, oh, how we learned to love him! We loved him for his uniform kindness to all men, and then for the pure, tender, and spiritual tie that drew us to him as his brethren in the ministry. He was what might be called a timid man, always appearing so, often in the fact of caring for the feelings of others. Though timid and modest and as gentle as a mother, yet, when moved by divine impulse, he was bold and decided. He did not compromise with sin, but would "swear to his own hurt."

The prosperity of the church was his chief aim in life, and the bleeding of Zion touched a responsive chord in his devoted heart. We saw him tested on one occasion, when he feared trouble in his church from an unexpected source. He came to see us, he seemed so much troubled. "Oh," he said, "it makes me sick, sick at heart; but, thank God! it will all be for the best, if we trust him."

As a husband, how tender and thoughtful was he of the feelings of his now heart-broken Florence! Well might she say, "He was everything to me," for so it was. No father loved his children more than did Bro. Moon, saying to them during his illness to be "good children, and meet papa in heaven."

As a preacher, he was systematic, chaste and strong, always bringing to his aid the best authors, as his well-selected library indicates. The Bible was the book of all others with our brother. As his spiritual perceptions went down into its solid truths, his soul feasted on the hidden treasure. At last that self-same gospel that gave him such comfort, and that he had preached for over twenty years, supported his sinking heart in the throes of expiring nature.

His disease was muscular rheumatism, causing intense suffering, though not considered dangerous until a few hours before his death. He talked much about dying, wishing to live to raise his children, but saying he was not afraid to die, and so was ready when the summons came.

Yes, the Christian gentleman, the faithful soldier, is no more; the mellow tones of his musical voice are hushed on earth forever. J. B. STONE.

Indian Mission.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me a little space in the ADVOCATE to report amounts received recently for Indian Mission. I want first to apologize to Bro. J. E. Cammack, of Rodney, Miss., for failing to report a small amount sent by him in the Fall or early Winter. The failure was purely an oversight. Many thanks to Bro. Cammack and his Sunday-school.

I now report the following amounts, to wit: Rev. H. W. Van Hook, $2.50; J. B. Olen, $2.50; Providence Church, $5; A Friend, $5; Mrs. L. C. Brown, of Kosciusko, $5; and last, but not least, Sister Brown's little daughter, only six years old, and sorely afflicted with inflammatory rheumatism, sent me $5. I trust that all the friends of the Indian Mission and all Christian people will pray specially for the dear little girl, that she may be restored to perfect health, and may live for a long time, and have great prosperity, so that she may not only bless the Indian Mission, but the church generally, with her life. May God graciously bless her!

Now, brethren and sisters, let the money come at a lively rate, so that there may be no want of means to carry on the work. "The liberal soul shall be made fat."

Send money order on Vicksburg, or check or draft on Vicksburg or Jackson, or by registered letter. Address me at Oak Ridge, Warren county, Miss.

A. D. MILLER.

Oak Ridge, Miss., March 16, 1894.

The cigarette trade has become one of the most stupendous and shameless infamies of the age. It has been ascertained that manufacturers, almost without exception, poison their goods with opium, saltpeter, licorice, alcohol, and other things, with a deliberate purpose to enslave and hold their customers. A recent investigation in this city has shown that one-half the boys in the public schools are addicted to cigarette smoking, and are fast becoming confirmed in the deadly habit. A law is proposed, which, it is hoped, will stop these goods at the borders of the State; but we have little confidence in it. There is but one remedy—deal with the manufacturers. We know of several cases where cigarette manufacturers have made the church their beneficiary in the matter of bequests for colleges and else. Can the church longer accept such gifts without stultification?—Pacific Advocate.

Good-Night, Good-Morning.

A correspondent of the Christian Advocate, writing of the late Doctor Deems, says:

"I shall never forget what he wrote to his friends when seventy-one. It was to me a gorgeous sunset, so soon to be succeeded by the darkness in which he sat so mute, until on Sunday, Nov. 19, the morning broke, and our Doctor Deems was free. I am so glad he wrote before the stroke that made him mute: 'To my increasing passionate love for the personality of Jesus Christ, I attribute all that is sweet and good in the present condition of my life. Increasingly he seems to become the rarest, finest gentleman I have ever known; the noblest, truest, most satisfying friend I have ever had; and so grand a conqueror of all worlds that I am ready to stay with him in any world. I know whom I have believed, being assured of the immortality of my spirit because of my spiritual alliance with him. I have ceased to pray to be delivered from sudden death, which may be a blessing. Leaving it all to him, I am able to address this mortal soul life in the words of the good and gifted Mrs. Barbauld:

"'Life, we've been so long together,
Through pleasant and through cloudy weather,
'Tis hard to part when friends are dear.
Perhaps 'twill cost a sigh, or tear;
Then steal away, give little warning,
Choose thine own time! say not, Good-night,
But in some higher clime bid me, Good-morning.'"

The Hasty Word.

To think before you speak is so wise an axiom that one would hardly think it needful to emphasize it by repetition. And yet in how many cases the hasty temper flashes out in the hasty word, and the latter does its work with the precision and the pain of the swift stiletto! Singularly enough, the hasty word oftenest wounds those who love one another dearly, and the very closeness of their intimacy affords them opportunity for the sudden thrust. We know the weak points in the armor of our kinsman and our friend; we are aware of his caprices, and ordinarily are tender and compassionate even of his vanities and his small fancies and whims; but there dawns a day when it is written in the book of fate that we shall be as cruel as we are loving. We are cold, or tired, or hungry. We are anxious over unpaid bills, or our expected letters have not arrived, or one of the children is ailing, and we dread the outcome of the malady. So politeness fails us, fortitude is vanquished, philosophy is in abeyance, and we say that which we repent in sackcloth and ashes. But though the hasty word may be forgiven, it is not at once forgotten. It has flawed the crystal of our friendship; the place may be cemented, but there is a shadowy scar on the gleaming surface. Oh, if the word of haste had but been left unspoken; if the strong hand of patience had but held back the sword as it was about to strike!—Harper's Bazar.

A Good Confession.

We believe in Congregationalism. We believe in Baptistism. We believe in Presbyterianism. We believe in Methodism. We believe in all the churches that exalt Christ. Away with all this talk about organic union! It is mostly gush and nonsense. Let all the churches go ahead and do their best to save the people. Give us more brotherliness. More frankness. More manliness in competition. More real fraternity. Brand with everlasting disgrace the churchly proselyter. What we need is unity, not union. Unity of spirit. Unity of purpose. Unity of faith. Unity of general plan. Unity of effort. That is the blessed desideratum for which our Master prayed. It is what every Christian should insist upon. Our observation is that the brother who is everlastingly talking about the sin of denominationalism is the man who never lets a chance slip to put his own church at the front without much regard to the rights of others.—Epworth Herald.

Stewardship, the right use of money, economy in indulgence, are themes which Jesus made luminous by his example and teachings. Few things sustain to one's spiritual life relations more vital than the accumulation, use, and abuse of money. No man can regulate these parts of his active life by the principles of the gospel and not find his business a means of grace to him. No man can pursue a business life independently of Christ's teachings and find his money a blessing to him. If money-making and money-using were regulated by the Sermon on the Mount, the kingdoms of this world would soon become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ.—F. M. Ellis.

"Inconsistent men in the church?" No doubt there are; but what of it? You belong to society, which includes these same men of one faith and another practice. You find them in the same political party with your consistent self. They are citizens of the United States, as you are proud to be. They are residents with you of the town or city of whose advantages you are wont to boast. Their presence does not drive you from any of these relationships; why should it keep you from the church, where you ought to be, in duty to your God and to yourself?—United Presbyterian.

AGRICULTURE.

By Rev J. W. McNAILL

Truck Farming.

We said in our last that no farming requires closer attention than truck farming. This statement may not be applicable to some localities, the circumstances being different. It is when the enterprise is engaged in for the Western and Northern markets. The crop must be matured and sold inside a limit period. The Western grower begins to ship about the last of June and the first of July; therefore, the Southern grower who fails to get his crop before that time, has little chance of success. The importance of earliness is seen. All new methods of the rapid development of the different kinds for market must be used that earliness may be attained. The lands should be thoroughly prepared and fertilized; compost heaps be made ready to be distributed at the proper time. Hot-beds and cold-frame when used for the purpose of the propagation and forcing of plants, must have their proper care and attention.

The question that stands foremost, and perhaps gives more annoyance than all others to the trucker, is that of fertilizing; no two vegetables or fruits requiring the same kind or the same quantity. Again, how, when, where, are all questions asked often even by those whose experience ought to be sufficient to answer them upon the subject of fertilizing. Many of us having been engaged in it for the last twenty years are sometimes now put to our trumps. The seasons vary so much—dry, wet, and cold spells coming upon us, in such shape—that they often leave us blank as to what shall be done. If the experienced trucker is bewildered, what must be the condition of the novice?

A number of letters have we received telling us that they were glad we were going to fill the department of Agriculture in the ADVOCATE. We wish to say to all such that we don't assume to know it all; yet we have made trucking a study, we have made some money out of it; with all this, we do wish to emphasize one point—that the party who expects to engage in it, thinking it an easy business, a sort of child's play, will be wofully disappointed. It is very different from that of the cultivation of corn and cotton. There is much more risk attached to it. It requires, parts of it, attention night and day. It is of greater expense both as to labor and fertilizers. The grower can not afford to stint his crops in either. Some may be ready to say that we are giving this dark picture of the question from selfish motives, to prevent others from engaging in it. When, however, they may have passed through the same sad experience we have had on several occasions—that of having a large part of our crops destroyed in one night—the result of hard effort, for weeks—they then can and will verify our statements. Do not think because some of us have in former times made fabulous profits out of some crops, that this can be done again. These times have gone. All we can hope to do now is to make a living of it.

Crystal Springs Notes.

Strawberries are in fine condition; will begin to ship by the fifth of April, if no disaster befalls them.

The plum crop will be short; damaged by the freeze of the twenty-fourth of February.

The peach crop is not flattering; many of the budded kinds are scattering on the trees.

The tomato crop is not as far advanced as the same date last year. The prospect, although, with the losses by last freeze, is, a heavy crop will be made.

Many have finished planting beans.

The corn crop is two weeks behind what it was the same date last year.

Queries Answered.

T. J. D. asks, How many half-bushel crates are estimated to the thousand tomato plants?

One hundred are considered a good crop. This is understood as merchantable tomatoes.

The same: How many bushel boxes are estimated to the acre in beans?

Two hundred bushels are considered a good crop.

Horticultural Notes.

(Journal of Agriculture.)

All the rest of the world does not devote as many acres to strawberries as does the United States.

It is reported from Denison, Texas, that fruit is killed, and that the strawberry plants are all dead.

The prospect for apples in Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana and other States is good. The outlook for a peach crop is somewhat gloomy.

The reports from the great fruit-growing region of Illinois show that the peach crop has been ruined by the severe Winter weather of the past two weeks, and it is the opinion of experienced fruit growers that few, if any, peaches will be raised in Southern Illinois during the ensuing season.

HYGIENE.

Air Your Clothing.

Everyday garments, particularly those which are not laundered, should be disinfected. Brushing is not sufficient, as it does not remove the unpleasant odors which come from long usage. Some women sprinkle their waists and dresses with scent, and use sachet powders to perfume their bonnets and wraps. All this would be admirable if it were availing. Scent needs to be overpowering to conceal the unfragrant emanations from an old garment. Then the bouquet is fulsome and vulgar.

Better than scent-bag or potpourri is a clothes-pole and an open window. Turn the garments wrong side but, and let the air and sunshine disinfect and deodorize them. All-night airing is good, but a day of blowing winds and purifying sunlight is better.

When a bonnet lining or set of dress shields becomes odorous, it should be removed. Cloth garments can be sponged and pressed clean. A pint of benzine costs five cents, and will clean anything in the way of kid, silk, lace or worsted. Camphor is another common disinfectant, and not half appreciated. If after brushing the only coat or gown, it is sprinkled with spirits of camphor and aired a few hours, it will be tidy and grateful. Garments and belongings which smell of nothing are the cleanest and most agreeable. There is always a suspicion of bad health, bad sanitation or bad habits where there is much perfuming.—Selected.

What Is Alcohol Good For?

There is a common belief that alcohol gives new strength and energy after fatigue sets in. The sensation of fatigue is one of the safety valves of our machine; to stifle the feeling of fatigue, in order to do more work, is like closing the safety valve so that the boiler may be overheated and explosion result.

It is commonly thought that alcoholic drinks aid digestion, but in reality the contrary would appear to be the case, for it has been proven that a meal without alcohol is more quickly followed by hunger than a meal with alcohol.

In connection with the sanitation of armies thousands of experiments upon large bodies of men have been made, and have led to the result that, in peace or war, in every climate—in heat, cold or rain—soldiers are better able to endure the fatigue of the most exhausting marches when they are not allowed any alcohol at all.

That mental exertions of all kinds are better undergone without alcohol is generally admitted by most people who have made the trial.

It appears certain that from 70 to 80 per cent. of the crime, 80 to 90 per cent. of all poverty, and from 10 to 40 per cent. of the suicides in most civilized countries are to be ascribed to alcohol.—Westminster Review.

Consumption Preventable.

Several newly discovered remedies for the disease of consumption have been before the public during a few years past, but upon a thorough test all proved to be powerless to effect a cure. A recent declaration of the Board of Health of New York City substantiates the old saying that prevention is the best remedy even in the treatment of this disease. The fact, which many do not know, is also stated that the disease is contagious and may by necessary precaution be prevented. An exchange says:

The Board of Health of New York City, at its meeting Wednesday, made the declaration that tuberculosis is a contagious disease and is distinctly preventable. It is acquired by the direct transmission of the tubercle bacilli from the sick to the well, usually by means of the dried and pulverized sputum floating as dust in the air. It can largely be prevented by disinfection and segregation. In view of the above the Board applied to the charities commission, asking that such steps be taken as will enable them to have and control a hospital, to be known as the "Consumptive Hospital," to be used for the exclusive treatment of this disease, and that as far as practicable all inmates of the institutions under their care suffering from tuberculosis be transferred to this hospital.—Guardian.

Saving Eyesight.

The following rules for the care of the eyes conform to well-established laws of eye physiology: 1. Avoid reading and study by poor light. 2. Light should come from the side, and not from the back or from the front. 3. Do not read or study while suffering great bodily fatigue or during recovery from illness. 4. Do not read while lying down. 5. Do not use the eyes too long at a time for near work, but give them occasional periods of rest. 6. Reading and study should be done systematically. 7. During study avoid the stooping position, or whatever tends to produce congestion of the head and face. 8. Select well-printed books. 9. Correct errors of refraction with proper glasses. 10. Avoid bad hygienic conditions and the use of alcohol and tobacco. 12. Take sufficient exercise in the open air. 12. Let the physical keep pace with the mental culture.—Exchange.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

There are people to whom oil is so unpleasant that they consider themselves debarred from the enjoyment of salads altogether, and for such melted butter may be used as a substitute, with fairly good results.

To make a dressing which shall be similar to a mayonnaise, rub the yolks of three hard boiled eggs to a paste; mix with it three or four tablespoonfuls of melted butter, add pepper and salt and a pinch of mustard, and finally vinegar enough to make it the proper consistency. This should not be mixed with the salad until the moment of serving.—Exchange.

MAIDETTE'S CAKE—Four eggs well beaten; 2 cups sugar, 1 cup butter, 1 cup milk, 4 cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder. Flavor with drops of almond essence. Stir well. Bake in a solid loaf.—Mrs. W. W. Pittman, Brooklyn.

PLAIN OMELETTE.—Beat your eggs very light. Have ready a pan of hot butter, pour the beaten eggs into it, and fry until of a fine brown on the under side; then lay one-half over the other, and serve it hot. Just before you lap it, sprinkle a little salt and pepper over the top. Chopped parsley or onion may be mixed with the egg before it is fried.—Selected.

TEA PUFFS.—Two eggs, two cups of milk, half a cup of butter, a little salt, flour in which two teaspoonfuls of baking powder to a quart have been sifted. Make a stiff batter, heat well, pour into gem pans, and bake in a quick oven till done. Wrap in a napkin, put on a warm plate, and serve. If you use a cupful of cream instead of milk, the butter may be omitted.

CHICKEN ON TOAST.—If you have cold chicken, but not enough for a whole meal, chop it fine, heat a cup of sweet cream boiling hot, stir in a teaspoonful of cornstarch, then salt and stir in the chicken; arrange slices of hot, crisp, buttered toast on a hot platter, and put a heaping tablespoonful of the minced chicken on each slice and serve.—The Evangelist.

RUSK.—Two eggs, 2½ cups sugar, one tablespoonful of lard, 1 tablespoonful of butter, 1 quart of sweet milk, ½ of a nutmeg, 1 cupful of yeast, flour enough to make stiff batter. Set it to rise. When light, knead it moderately stiff, and let it rise again. After it is light, knead it moderately stiff and let it rise again. After it is light mould it into rolls; put them in a baking pan and let them stand again until light, then bake half an hour.—Peerless Cook Book.

I Had Goitre

Or swellings in the neck since I was 10 years old; am now 52. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and the swelling has entirely disappeared. It has been very troublesome. When I began I was feeling so discouraged with the goitre and rheumatism, I would as soon be dead as alive. Whenever I caught cold I could not walk two blocks without fainting. Now I am free from it all and I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. I received a letter from Mrs. Jennie Elgelow, now of Fremont, Mich., asking if my testimonial in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla was true; I replied it was, and sent particulars. I have a letter thanking me for recommending

Our Grand Combination Offer

KING'S IMPROVED COTTON.

Extra Early, Prolific, Long Limbs. 36 to 40 per cent. Lint.

This cotton gave the heaviest yield (1,870 pounds seed cotton) per acre in competition with 36 other varieties at the Mississippi Agricultural Experiment Station in 1890, and its good record has been fully maintained in all subsequent experiments.

This trial was absolutely impartial. Each cotton had exactly the same chances in every way. The result shows that, under similar conditions, with exactly the same treatment in every way, King's Improved Cotton will produce from 20 to 100 per cent. more cotton than the most noted varieties in the South.

Price: 25 cents per package.

SEEDS—WORLD'S FAIR MEDAL AND DIPLOMA.

King's exhibit of Seeds and Garden Vegetables was awarded several premiums and a special diploma by Piedmont Exposition judges in 1891. It was also awarded a medal at the World's Fair, as being the best on exhibition there. The collection is a choice selection of garden vegetable seeds.

The collection contains twenty papers of seed, 25 cents per package.

KING'S IMPROVED CORN.

At the Georgia State Experiment Station this corn was tested with 15 kinds. The purpose of the trial was to find out which variety would make the largest quantity per acre, under same conditions.

Result: King's beat 15 other kinds, producing, with same chances identically, 50 per cent. more than some of the improved varieties.

This corn is a large white kind—makes excellent bread. Produces well on poor land.

Here Is Your Chance.

During the next sixty days we make the following offer:

For $2.50 we will send the ADVOCATE one year and a copy of Christian Womanhood. The price of the ADVOCATE is $2; the price of the book, $1. This book has had an extensive sale, the sixth thousand being now on the market. This offer applies to renewals as well as new subscriptions, provided the renewal extends the subscription to January, '95.

The following notices, selected from a vast number that have appeared in the church papers, will give some idea of the character of the work:

The best thesaurus of facts concerning womanhood with which we are acquainted.—Dr. C. F. Deems.

We hope it will be read by every man and woman in the church.—Florida Advocate.

We hope it will be extensively circulated and carefully read.—NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Heartily recommended.—Dr. John E. Edwards.

This volume is the result of patient investigation and thoughtful study of the whole question treated. In the formulation of the case and in analyzing the test many a vigorous, well-poised, legal mind is brought to bear. Dr. Black, moreover, establishes the points of his discussion as a skillful general establishes his lines in the face of an alert enemy. As he begins, so he closes, leaving the impression that a master in Israel has written bravely and tellingly of Christian womanhood, maintaining his position at every turn. The book is needed, and will long be in popular demand.—Sunday-School Magazine.

A Great Need of the Temperance Cause.

We tender our thanks to Bishop Galloway for his wise words on the temperance question. We reproduced Dr. Cuyler's article because we believed it to be pre-eminently timely. There is danger ahead just at the point mentioned by Dr. Cuyler. There is entirely too much drinking among prohibitionists. There is too much reliance upon law to the neglect of other agencies. We do not disparage law as a temperance agency. Law is a potent agency when properly enforced. But what chance has a prohibitory law of being properly enforced by a nation of tipplers? It is just as necessary to keep up the work of agitation in States that have a prohibitory law as in other States. Otherwise the consumption of liquors still goes on, and the law fails of its object. A very prominent and influential citizen of the State of Maine, a friend of the temperance cause, said to us some time since that the temperance folks of that State find it just as necessary to agitate and educate along temperance lines now as they did a generation or more ago, when they were seeking to procure a prohibitory statute. While we hold ourselves in readiness to cooperate in any judicious effort to secure prohibitory legislation, we are none the less sure that the greatest work that is needed now in all the region where the ADVOCATE circulates is the agitation of the question of total abstinence. Our people are poorly educated at this point. Tens of thousands of them actually believe that alcoholic beverages are not at all harmful, unless used excessively. The wine cup is still on the table, and the whisky decanter is still on the side-board even in Israel. The pulpit, the platform and the press have a work of gigantic proportions before them in the education of the people before law can work out its legitimate results. Law will no more enforce itself than an ax will cut of itself. As the ax needs a strong arm to wield it, so with law. And the arm that swings the ax of prohibition should not be steeped in whisky.

Let us go back to first principles. Let us educate and organize in opposition to the drink habits of elite society no less than in opposition to the legalized liquor traffic.

As will be seen from a communication in another column, Dr. T. J. Newell has resigned the presidency of Grenada Female College.

"The Crisis in the Temperance Reform."

The article, with the above title, which appears in the ADVOCATE this week, reproduced from The Independent, and written by Rev. Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler, is a most timely and judicious deliverance. Coming from a veteran temperance worker and ardent prohibitionist, whose career as a reformer goes back to the days of Father Mathew, and yet active with voice and pen against the world's greatest evil, his counsels are worthy of most serious consideration. He does not state the case too strongly, nor sound the warning too alarmingly. Instead of retaining the old weapons of warfare while employing the new, they have been thrown away or allowed to rust, while the new have not infrequently been unskillfully and unwisely handled. As a result, what should be a well-organized, harmonious army is divided into bands which invite and promote inharmonies and rivalries. Motive is thereby restricted, and the great cause of human uplifting is subordinated to personal ambitions and contentions. The one great purpose should be to bury the demon and guard the sealed grave. What matters it as to who strikes the hardest or most effective blow, so the foe is slain and the people redeemed?

The following liberal extract from Dr. Cuyler's article should be carefully studied:

As moral effort has largely been supplanted by discussion about suppressing the saloons, what headway are we making? Lamentably little in the way of enacting new laws of prohibition anywhere. We are on the defensive to retain what we have—in Iowa, Kansas, Maine and a few other localities.

Let us face facts without flinching. At present the liquor traffic laughs us to scorn as long as our efforts are not directed to keep people from buying and drinking intoxicants. The old drink customs are stealing back again. A generation is growing up without much instruction in the a b c of total abstinence. Temperance organizations decrease in numbers and too many pulpits are silent—or only speak out in cheap and easy denunciations of the accursed dram dens. A reform that will not learn by sore experience, and which throws aside the weapons with which it once gained victories, is doomed to failure. We never shall conquer at the ballot-box until we have conquered the voters by argument and persuasion. We never can stop the sale of intoxicants until more check is put to drinking them. God never means that a great moral warfare against a colossal sin shall be shirked by his people, and turned over to the tender mercies of political strategists. Our great reform has reached a crisis, and, without mutual recrimination, let us grasp afresh the weapons that once did splendid execution, and in God's name and God's strength close up our ranks in united onset against the foe.

And yet the vain hope of some is to get a statute and "have a rest." The work is done when the law is enacted or the constitution adopted. "We are weary of this constant contest." Well, that contest can never cease, and for the reason so tersely stated by Dr. Cuyler. Legal enactments, as a substitute for moral suasion and ceaseless agitation, are a delusion and snare. The two should go together and then we will never be on the defensive. It is feared that the wine-glass has returned to some tables from which it was banished a few years ago, because of fore-slackened effort against the drinking evil. While wielding every new blade with a vigorous arm, we need to bring out the old weapons. Great temperance organizations have lost power on account of this neglect. This method of work is less conspicuous and exciting, but is none the less effective and permanent.

The fruit and vegetable crop of Central and North Mississippi has been very seriously damaged by the cold weather. There will be a large falling off in the revenues of the truck farmers.

Selling Liquor to Minors.

Judge Ferguson, in his excellent charge to the Grand Jury on Tuesday, called attention to the importance of investigating violations of the law which forbids the selling of liquors to minors.

There is no State statute, unless it be the Sunday law, that is more universally or more flagrantly outraged in this city than is the law which prohibits, under pain of fine and imprisonment, the selling of intoxicating liquors to minors.

The blame is not entirely on the side of the keepers of bar rooms and groggeries, although there is no sort of excuse for them. Parents, guardians, employers and others in like positions of authority are largely responsible for this crime. They have no more hesitation in sending youths and children to grog shops for liquors than have the keepers of the groggeries in selling the pernicious stuff to the little ones.

If any person doubts the prevalence of the evils described, he has only to post himself about noon in the day time, and from 6 to 7 o'clock in the evening, near any bar room in the business or residence portions of the city. In the business quarters he will see youths and boys hurrying from the saloon carrying liquors and lunch. In the quarters where there are residences he will see smaller children of both sexes, often little tots of tender years, many of them girls, carrying cans or pitchers of liquors. They have in all cases been sent by their elders, parents, friends, employers, and others, for these liquors. There are, as the writer believes, thousands of such cases every day in New Orleans, with no attempt at concealment. It is a flagrant violation of the law, but nobody is held to account for it, because the law is a dead letter.

The people of New Orleans have shown in the most unmistakable manner that they will not be controlled in any manner where their use of intoxicating liquors is concerned. Moreover, the bar rooms are particularly under the control and protection of the city authorities, and no law can be executed against them. A large part of their business is made up of supplying liquors through the medium of children, who daily carry them to their elders, by whom they were sent.

The Picayune has repeatedly called attention to this evil, and it does so now, not with any expectation that anything will be done by the authorities. On the contrary, the Picayune is confident that nothing will be done; but it has some hope of arousing a sense of shame, or of duty, in the elders who are responsible for so much of this crime against the little ones. What can parents expect who habitually send their boys and girls to grog shops to fetch liquors? It would be a miracle if they are not soon depraved and brought to disgrace and crime. And employers who send their young apprentices and cash boys to bring drinks and lunch from the saloons, what can they hope for from such an education for youths in their employ?

Every day the records of the police courts tell of young clerks in business houses who have embarked in courses of profligacy and have come to grief for robbing their employers. How many of the unfortunate youngsters got their education in fast living from the associations of bar rooms? There is nothing more shocking than the frequency with which young girls that have scarcely passed the boundaries of childhood are brought to ruin and disgrace through evil associations. How often were the foundations for their moral and social destruction laid in the grog shops to which they were sent by their parents? Do people realize that they are educating their children for vice and crime when they are sending them out for liquors, or do they care?—The Picayune.

The Saloon and Grocery.

According to statistics recently compiled there are in New Orleans alone about 750 groceries where liquor is retailed. It is to be remembered that these are the stores where servants and children are habitually sent to buy family supplies.

That the liquor traffic is objectionable in the extreme when tolerated at any time or in any place is obvious, and our policy is too well-defined and too frequently stated to need repetition, but we can realize that the evil of retailing intoxicating liquors is augmented when in connection with a family grocery.

It is a well-recognized fact that among the middle and poor classes most of the purchasing is done by children who are sent to the grocery from two to four times daily, and also that in most cases at the groceries patronized by these classes liquor is sold.

No fact is more generally recognized and admitted than that to familiarize one with evil is, to say the least, dangerous if not degrading.

In many of these establishments the bar is not even separated from the grocery by a screen; hence the children of the poor witness not only the drinking of liquors, but are compelled to hear the profanity and be subjected to the obscene language indulged in by drunken men. The following is a case in point:

A representative of the Prohibitionist visited a grocery of this sort in New Orleans, on Magazine street. During thirty minutes seven children came and went, during which time three negroes, who were intoxicated, drank some and used obscene language, the proprietor making no effort to protect the children of his customers.

Another evil attendant upon the sale of liquor in groceries is the difficulty of enforcing the law against selling liquor to minors.

A child goes to the corner grocery, procures a bucket of beer and returns without being noticed, whereas a child entering a regular saloon would almost certainly excite comment and arouse investigation.

This widespread evil deserves earnest consideration and demands a remedy. What can be done? Let the citizens of Louisiana demand of the Legislature a law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors in the same building where groceries are sold. Then, at least, the children will be protected from the degrading influences of a low groggery and delivered from the temptations of drink.—Louisiana Prohibitionist.

Gladstone's Advice to Young Men.

Be sure that every one of you has his place and vocation on this earth, and that it rests with himself to find it. Do not believe those who too lightly say nothing succeeds like success. Effort, honest, manful, humble effort, succeeds by its reflected action, especially in youth, better than success, which, indeed, too easily and too early gained, not seldom serves, like winning the first throw of the dice, to blind and stupefy. Get knowledge, all you can. Be thorough in all you do, and remember that, though ignorance often may be innocent, pretension is always despicable. But you, like men, be strong and exercise your strength. Work onwards, and work upwards, and may the blessing of the Most High soothe your cares, clear your vision, and crown your labors with reward!

The editor has an engagement to fill the pulpit of Dr. Palmer's Church on next Sabbath, April 1.

A Sabbath at Talisheek Camp Ground.

By invitation of the pastor, Rev. D. C. Rawls, we spent last Sabbath at Talisheek Camp Ground. Leaving the city at four o'clock, Saturday evening, via the East Louisiana railroad, we reached Covington, the terminus of the road, at about dark. The East Louisiana uses the track of the Northeastern across Lake Ponchartrain and on as far as Pearl River station, thirty-six miles from New Orleans. This part of the road we had, of course, frequently traveled over, but the remaining twenty-five miles was a new country to us. The trip was made during one of the hardest rains we have seen in many a day. On account of the rain we did not go on to Talisheek Saturday night, but found comfortable quarters, excellent fare and congenial company at the Commercial Hotel. The weather also prevented us from meeting our engagement at 11 o'clock on Sunday. We expounded the Word, however, at three P. M., and again at seven. We also administered the ordinance of infant baptism and the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, being assisted in the latter service by Bro. Rawls and Bro. Mattice, a German preacher. The pleasure of our stay was enhanced by the cordial hospitality extended to us by Bro. Rawls and his good Methodist wife. Bro. Rawls seems to have his work well in hand. He is looking forward to a large ingathering at the annual camp meeting, which will be held some time in the Fall.

The night service being ended, we drove back to Covington, six miles distant, and enjoyed another good night's rest at the Commercial. The next morning, at about six, we boarded the train for home. We had the pleasure of exchanging greetings with Bro. Downer, of Covington station. This region round about Covington differs from any region we have seen, in the fact that it abounds in hotels scattered through the country. Within six or seven miles of the railroads there are in St. Tammany parish probably not less than twenty-five or thirty hotels, entirely in the country. Some of these are quite small, but others are of very respectable dimensions. They are almost without exception located in the immediate vicinity of mineral springs. Some of these springs are believed by many to equal in health-restoring qualities to any in the world. The Crescent City, of course, supplies the guests for these hotels. Nearly all of them do a thriving business all through the Summer; and, strange to say, some of them are well supplied with guests even now. One near Covington has, it is said, more than forty Crescent Cityites at this time.

The Advocate for Twenty-Five Cents.

We will send the ADVOCATE from now until the first of July for twenty-five cents. This period embraces the session of the General Conference. The ADVOCATE will contain reports of the proceedings of the General Conference. All Methodist people ought to keep posted in regard to the action of the General Conference. Let all our subscribers make this offer known and constitute themselves agents for the paper. Let it be remembered that the cash must accompany each name. We will do no book-keeping for anybody on this proposition. This offer is made only to new subscribers.

By a private letter from Rev. R. D. Norsworthy, presiding elder of the Brookhaven district, Mississippi Conference, we learn that the church is prosperous in his district. Notwithstanding the financial stringency, no charge has reduced the salary of its preacher, and in several charges the salary has been increased. The Quarterly Conferences have been generally seasons of spiritual refreshing.

Rev. S. J. Davies, presiding elder of the Alexandria district, Louisiana Conference, is making a brief sojourn in the city. He reports a number of churches and parsonages in process of erection in his district.

A cultured and deeply pious sister says: "Permit me to express my appreciation of the excellent paper you are making. I had expected something very good, but this is better than I asked or thought."

Expressions of appreciation come to us by almost every mail. A brother writes: "Although I read about a dozen papers every week, not one of them is half so welcome as the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. You must allow me to congratulate you upon your success as an editor."

Dr. J. O. Andrew, financial agent of Southern University, has had the wisdom to call Bishop Galloway to his assistance in making a canvass of the State of Alabama. They made a joint canvass of ten days, visiting several of the principal cities. They raised in that time $17,000—a good beginning. It seems as if we are to have an educational revival in Southern Methodism. It is late in coming, but better late than never.

The leaders of the temperance forces in Hinds county, Miss., are circulating a petition for a local-option election. That is a move in the right direction. A judicious effort will result in placing grand old Hinds in the roll of dry counties. Although we are utterly destitute of the power of song, we are going to join Galloway, Watkins, Nugent, Sproles, Hunter and the rest of the clan in singing the long-meter doxology when the day of victory comes.

We withdrew our offer of seeds as a premium because we learned that some of our subscribers had not received the requisite quantity of seeds. Since then we learn by correspondence with Mr. King that the failure to send the proper quantity was due to a misunderstanding. Moreover, he has promised to make up the deficiency, and we suppose has already done so. We have not seen fit to renew our offer, but we make the above statement in justice to all parties concerned. Mr. King has an ad. in this issue.

The two articles on this page concerning the liquor traffic in this city tell a sad story. The Picayune's article shows how little attention is paid in this city to any law restricting the liquor traffic. The article from the Louisiana Prohibitionist calls attention to the sale elsewhere than in saloons. Besides the saloons seven hundred and fifty grocery stores, that would not be willing to be dubbed saloons, are carrying on the traffic in a little different way. A point would be gained for the temperance cause if the Legislature would pass a law prohibiting the traffic in grocery stores. If the traffic can not be suppressed, let it be restricted as much as possible. The careful reading of the above articles will go farther towards convincing any friend of the temperance cause of the necessity of such legislation than any hortations we can offer.

Our beloved brother, "Glideroy," writes us reaffirming that the papers have been circulating the statement that the Mississippi Conference at its recent session adopted a memorial to the General Conference asking for the ordination of all preachers in charge. He mentions the Texas Advocate as one of the papers that have published the statement, and suggests that it would be well for us to read the papers a little and keep posted. Well, we do read the papers a great deal, and we especially read the Texas Advocate, because it always has something in it, but somehow we overlooked the article to which he refers. We stand corrected so as to the circulation of the statement. The report got into circulation in this way: A memorial on the subject referred to was introduced into the Mississippi Conference, and referred to the Committee on Memorials.

Industrial School for Japanese Girls.

MR. EDITOR: Please thus inform "the brethren" that our loved sister, M. I. Lambuth, has been suddenly called to the sick-bed of her son Robert, at Collecoka, Tenn., where she must remain for some weeks at least. We hope she can return to our Conference for a Spring list of appointments among the churches along the railroads. At the few places she was able to visit her brief story was like a bright beam of love from the higher realms of light. Any community is greatly blessed by such a presence—even for a day. It kindles missionary zeal and helps our people to realize there is such a thing as reaching and rescuing the heathen. Though working for, and under, the Parent Board, her manners and methods most truly exemplify the noblest type of womanliness. If our pastors want such a blessing to their people, let them communicate with her soon at Collecoka, Tenn., or with me, at Edwards, Miss. She expects (D. V.) to return to Japan in the Summer. The work she is now specially trying to advance is the equipment of an industrial (Christian) school for Japanese girls. We regard this one of the most hopeful schemes yet projected. It only awaits our tardy liberality.

Many schools and societies might be immediately pledged to give something before the year shall close. Her own presence and word would greatly aid. But let us begin at once, reporting all that is promised to the ADVOCATE. A very good start is already made which she will report. Who but Mississippians ought to have this privilege of special work for the Master, through our sister. Yours in hope,

J. P. DRAKE.

Revival in Macon, Miss.

Macon is surrendering to Christ. All the churches are blessed. The hardest sinners in town are being converted at the altar. I never saw greater power in any meeting anywhere! Bro. McIntosh came to us one week ago, and will remain until the night of the twenty-seventh. On the twenty-eighth he will begin in West Point. We will continue the work here till the whole town is saved, if it takes weeks to accomplish it.

Bro. J. D. Patton, of Cherokee, Ala., conducts the singing, and the Lord is blessing him. God is with these consecrated men. They can capture any place for Christ when the people co-operate with them. All the interests of the church are up in full to date. The Board of Stewards collect the missionary money quarterly without the assistance of the pastor. For this and many other helps I am debtor to my worthy predecessor, Rev. J. H. Mitchell. Will give final results of the meeting soon. Come to see us.

Yours in love, J. A. BOWEN.

Our Pianos and Organs.

The musical instruments which we are offering as premiums are manufactured by the Williams Piano and Organ Co., Centerville, Iowa. This is a large establishment which has branch offices in other cities. The descriptions we give of the instruments are taken from their catalogue. Our subscribers may write to them for catalogues and prices, if they choose. We will give them as good terms as they can get from the manufacturers themselves. Notice that if the requisite number of subscribers can not be procured, the instruments can still be had. Get as many subscribers as you can, and then write us for terms.

To Those Whom It May Concern.

There will be held in our church in Wesson a meeting beginning Tuesday, April 24, and embracing the fifth Sunday in that month. At this meeting emphasis will be given to the old Wesleyan and scriptural doctrine of entire sanctification. The brethren interested will take due notice and govern themselves accordingly. The Board of Stewards join us in a cordial invitation to those desirous of seeing a return of the church to the old paths. Homes will be provided for all preachers, and as far as practicable for such laymen as may attend. Give me timely notice.

Rev. W. B. Lewis, of Natchez, and Bro. Jno. A. Lewis, of Meridian, unite in this announcement.

MR. EDITOR: Will you kindly correct the errors in the printed program as it appeared in the ADVOCATE, as follows: The last word of the sixth subject is "pupil" and not "pulpit." And in the first line after the ninth subject substitute "earnestly" for "cerianly." Sincerely,

J. M. WEEMS.

Sunday-School Convention.

To the Sunday-School Officers and Workers of Mississippi:

This is to remind you of our coming meeting at Columbus, Miss., April 24, 25 and 26, next. Reduced fares by the railroads—full fare going, and a certificate from each agent showing you have paid it, entitles you to one-third fare returning. Prof. Hamill, the great lecturer on normal work, and a lady primary teacher will be with us.

Come and share with us the benefits. Please give this the widest possible publicity by publication and announcement.

The Sunday-school workers of Columbus offer you a warm Christian greeting and their best hospitality.

Send names of delegates as early as possible to the undersigned.

Fraternally yours,

C. W. MILLS, Sec.

Columbus, Miss.

There is no doubting the efficacy of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. It cures every time.

Louisiana State Sunday-School Association.

Our committee has received an invitation so cordial and pressing from the good people of Hammond, accompanied with the liberal offer from Illinois Central railroad of one fare round trip ($1.60) from New Orleans to Hammond, that we have thought best to accept the invitation.

We, therefore, announce that the place of meeting of our next Convention will be at Hammond, La., on the Illinois Central railroad, on May 2, 3 and 4, next. Prof. Hamill and others are to be with us, and we hope to make this the best convention we have ever held. JNO. E. RODD, Sec'y.

Mrs. S. B. Winship, 112 Washington St., Providence, R. I., after using one bottle of Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism, wrote to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Malden Lane, New York, saying she would not take One Hundred Dollars for the benefit received. If you have any form of Rheumatism, and wish to get rid of it, send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., and they will send to your express address two bottles of their remedy—enough for a month's treatment. Agents Wanted.

Notice.

The Sunday-school Conference and Preachers' Meeting for the Grenada district will convene at Pittsboro, April 27 to 29. All the preachers and Sunday-school workers of the district are urged to attend. A sermon will be preached, Friday night, on the importance of Sunday-school work, by J. E. Thomas.

An Appeal to the Young People of Mississippi.

Dear Young Friends: Millsaps College needs a large hall for young men of limited means. We must build it. The hall is a necessity. Would it not be a handsome work for the young Mississippians to furnish the agent with money to build this hall? If we can get at the work right, we can do it. I want the young Methodists of Mississippi to send me five thousand dollars. Let us go to work in earnest. Let the young people from five to twenty-one years of age send me from fifty cents to one dollar each. Let every church and community be represented. The name and amount will appear in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. May our Father inspire your hearts, dear young friends, to help us build this hall! Let me hear at once from you. Your friend,

I. W. COOPER.

Jackson, Miss.

P. S.—Remember Major Millsaps duplicates every cent you send.

Local Option Election.

To the Friends of Prohibition in Hinds County:

Petitions are now being circulated among the electors for a local option election in this county to determine whether or not the liquor traffic shall be longer allowed. The law requires that this appeal shall be signed by one-third of the qualified voters. Already a large number of signatures has been secured.

We wish the matter to come before the Board of Supervisors at the next regular meeting. It is found after repeated effort and protest that this course is necessary in order to rid our county of this, "the greatest evil of the age."

We most earnestly appeal to every good citizen to aid in this final effort, so that we may soon take our place in the reform column with sixty-eight of the seventy-five counties of Mississippi.

Signed by Charles B. Galloway, John Hunter, C. H. Alexander, H. F. Sproles, J. W. Lester, W. L. Nugent, Thos. P. Barr, M. F. Harmon, F. H. Gulledge, R. B. Mayes, W. E. Todd, A. F. Watkins.—Clarion-Ledger.

March, April and May

IS THE SEASON FOR CATARRHAL DYSPEPSIA—THE BLOOD MUST BE CLEANSED.

The symptoms of catarrhal dyspepsia are: Coated tongue, pain or heavy feelings in the stomach, sour stomach, belching of gas, dizzy head, sometimes headache, despondent feelings, loss of appetite, palpitation of heart and irregularity of the bowels.

For this condition Pe-ru-na is found to be an admirable remedy. In all cases it brings prompt relief to the painful symptoms, and in a large per cent. of the cases it makes a permanent cure.

Pe-ru-na soothes the inflamed mucous surface, and thus strikes at the root of the disease. In cases where the inflammation has been so severe and continued as to produce extreme irritability of the stomach the remedy may be taken in small doses at first, diluted in water; but, as soon as the improvement is sufficient to permit a full dose to be taken undiluted, it is a better way, and the cure is much more rapid.

Pe-ru-na is also a spring medicine which at once removes the cause of all affections peculiar to the spring season by purifying the blood of all contaminations and invigorating the whole system.

Two valuable books—Family Physician No 2, setting forth in detail the treatment of catarrh, coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, and consumption, in every phase of the disease, and Family Physician No 3, on spring remedies and diseases—will be sent free to any address by The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company of Columbus, Ohio.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

PETER'S FALL AND RESTORATION.

(Mark xiv, 66-72; John xxi, 1-17.)

1. The Master had apprised Peter of threatening danger. The cock would not crow twice before he would have denied him thrice. Thus we have been warned.

(1) Would fall into temptation unless we watched and prayed.

(2) Would not be crowned, except we strive lawfully.

2. Peter recreantly denied the Lord.

(1) When the Master was arrested, "Peter followed afar off."

(2) Imprudently Peter sought the society of the Master's enemies.

(3) Enjoyed the comfort of their fire.

(4) Fearing for his own safety, thrice charged with being a disciple of the Lord, he repeatedly denied the statement.

(5) He added to the turpitude of his crime by wicked imprecations.

3. Two significant circumstances led Peter to repent.

(1) While the poison of falsehood was emanating from the apostle's lips, Jesus was led through the hall. Turning, he "looked upon Peter." A look of commiseration.

(2) The cock crew the second time, reminding him of the Master's solicitous warning.

4. The genuineness of Peter's repentance, and his restoration, are unquestionable.

(1) He went out weeping bitterly. The throes of hell were transfusing his soul. Prayer and forgiveness followed.

(2) After his resurrection, Jesus requested the women to tell his disciples and Peter that he would go before them in Galilee. And Peter!—The smoking flax God will not quench.

(3) At the sea of Tiberias, Christ mercifully recommissioned Peter to feed his flock.

Beware of falling.

If fallen, call upon the Lord, "He will abundantly pardon."

Chambers' Encyclopædia,

Complete in 30 Handy Volumes. Over 12,000 Pages.

Being a beautiful, clear reprint of the Edinburgh and London edition of Chambers' Encyclopædia, a library of universal knowledge for the people, with very large additions upon topics of special interest to American readers, and giving American statistics of population down to and including the census of 1890.

Remember, this great Encyclopædia contains thousands upon thousands of articles, embracing all subjects within the limits of human knowledge; yet, in its more than 27,000 specially prepared articles, while giving pointed, practical, explicit and most interesting and instructive information both for the student and the general reader, it is free from ambiguous technicalities and comparatively void of the mass of scientific signs, symbols and foreign nomenclature which crowd the pages of most other cyclopedias prepared for scientific and professional use alone. The Philadelphia Press well says:

"The particular and unique value of this Encyclopædia is its happy solution of the problem of fullness and convenience. It is neither bulky nor superficial. It is the book of reference for the million."

Chambers' Encyclopædia has always occupied a front place among the cyclopedic works to be coveted.

Do you ever want to post yourself easily and speedily, on some facts or matters belonging to the domain of Biography, Chemistry, Religion, Geography, Medicines, Health and Disease, Physical or Mental Recreation in Popular Games, etc.; Literature, Natural Philosophy, Astronomy, Agriculture, Mathematics, or any of the Arts and Sciences? If you do, avail yourself of this opportunity to secure a set of this great Encyclopædia.

Do you enjoy an occasional leisure hour of delightfully interesting, entertaining and instructive reading, and do you desire to supply yourself with a vast library of such matter, full of variety in all its departments? If you do, avail yourself of this opportunity to provide yourself with this invaluable and popular Encyclopædia.

Do you seek a suitable gift, one having intrinsic value, to present to your relative, or friend, or to your own library, or for the edification of the folks of your own household? If you do, here is your exceptional opportunity.

Our Unprecedented Offer.

The regular retail price of the imported edition of this immense reference library is $30.00. The cost to you for a full set, complete, printed on good paper, in beautiful, clear type, and durably bound in flexible covers, delivered, free of cost to you, together with one year's subscription for this paper, will be only $4 50.

HOW TO AVAIL YOURSELF OF THIS OFFER.

If you are not a subscriber to the ADVOCATE, subscribe at once. Send us $2.00 for a year's subscription with $2.50 additional for the Encyclopædia. We will send it to you postpaid. If you are already a subscriber, pay your subscription to June, '95, at the rate of $2.00 a year or $1.00 for six months, and we will send the work, postpaid, at the same price.

TO AGENTS.

To any preacher or other agent, who will send us five new subscribers with $10 in cash we will send the work free, postpaid.

ORGANS AS PREMIUMS.

We have made arrangements to offer a rare bargain in the way of organs as premiums to our subscribers. The organs which we handle are the Epworth Organs. These have not heretofore had much sale in Mississippi and Louisiana, though they have had an immense sale throughout the North and West and also in some of the Southern States. Do you want a small organ for your church? If so, read the description given below of Style No 102, and see how it would suit you.

STYLE 102. THE EPWORTH CHAPEL ORGAN.

HEIGHT, 51 IN.; WIDTH, 23 IN.; LENGTH, 48 IN.

Best Low-Priced Chapel Organ.

Walnut case; Hard Wood Panels; Finished Back; Lamp Stands; Handsome Fret Work; Full Length Music Desk; Engraved Ornaments; Hand Rubbed; Oil Finish; Pedals covered with Brussels Carpet; Metal Guards on Pedals.

This is the Organ for Churches and Sunday-schools, where a First-Class Action is Desired.

In a good, plain case, the quality of action and tone being the same as in the higher priced styles.

Style 102, 12 Stops.

EPWORTH CHAPEL—Five Octaves, containing four sets of Reeds of two and one-half Octaves each. STOPS—Principal; Dulcet Diapason; Diapason Forte; Vox Angelica; Principal Forte; Cremona; Melodia; Echo Horn; Celeste. Metal Octave Coupler. Boxed, with stool, delivered on board cars at factory.

The catalogue price of this is $87. We will give it as a premium for one hundred subscribers. Send us the cash $200, for the subscribers, and you get the organ free. If you can't get one hundred persons to subscribe personally, perhaps you have well-to-do members of your church who will pay for several poor or members, thereby bestowing a blessing upon them by giving them a religious paper and at the same time helping to procure an organ for your church. If you don't exactly like Style 102, then read the description of Style 302.

IMPROVED STYLE 302 "SPECIAL." EPWORTH CHAPEL ORGAN.

HEIGHT, 55 IN.; LENGTH, 49 IN.; WIDTH, 21 IN.

"Honesty is the best policy." Nobody contradicts it. Your dealer can get lamp chimneys that almost never break from heat, or those that break continually. Which does he get? Which do you get?

Macbeth's "pearl top" and "pearl glass" are tough against heat; not one in a hundred breaks in use. The glass is clear as well as tough. They are accurate, uniform.

Be willing to pay more for chimneys that last till they rot, unless some accident happens to them.

LOST.

BY MRS. C. SCOVILLE.

It seems that yesterday you came
And leaned against my knee,
And prattled on of dolls and games,
As blithe as blithe could be.
Your sunny hair, a crown of light,
Above your forehead lay;
But now I've lost my little girl—
It seems but yesterday.

'Tis true a maiden, winning, fair,
Is standing by my side;
I look upon your nut-brown braids,
And tear founts open wide.
Your love so tender, constant, true,
Lives in my heart alway;
But, oh! I've lost my little girl—
It seems but yesterday.

O Time, thy treasure-chest unlock;
Pause in thy rapid flight,
And let my yearning arms enfold
My little girl to-night.
My grown-up daughter is to me
A comfort and a stay,
But yet I've lost my little girl—
It seems but yesterday.
—The Herald and Presbyter.

Small Comforts.

Whether it is better to be happy or to be comfortable is a matter which is usually decided by our temperaments. There are people whose happiness does not consist in comfort or depend on it, and there are people whose comfort in no wise depends on their happiness. But while it is clearly right to scorn material advantages if they cost us our peace of mind, we must acknowledge it is only the part of common sense to take personal comfort when it is to be had without such cost.

Yet there are people who feel a positive pleasure in making themselves uncomfortable. They deny themselves aggressively. They sit, from choice, in the coldest corner of the room; they select the driest bit of cake or bread; they decline all the small pleasures of life with an air of virtuous resignation, as if they were entitled to praise for their small sacrifices. Yet those who know them best have scant respect for their self-denial. In speaking of one of these self-elected ascetics, her sister remarked, with a quizzical glance:

"You know, my dear, Kate always will be a martyr."

Does it appear wise to despise the small solaces and refreshments of life when they come naturally in our way? Is it not better judgment to accept whatever of cheer may be legitimately ours? While there is so much suffering in life which we have to bear, and which it is right we should endure uncomplainingly, it seems as if we might go further than this. We may say we ought to take special pains to cultivate a habit of finding delight and satisfaction in little pleasantnesses, and to contrive ways of giving ourselves ease in little things. The warmth of a room, the rest of a footstool, the help of some invention for doing a piece of work, are right to take and wise to plan for and take pains to secure.

So, looking to her Winter's comfort as well as her Winter's edification, the prudent housewife will see that hooks and shelves are in easy, handy positions, and in plentiful number. She will see that drawers pull out without sticking and that windows may be raised and lowered without straining her muscles. She will insist that her shutters shut tightly without too great effort, and stay open without slamming. Her utensils for all sorts of work will be of the best kind, abundant, and in convenient spots for instant use.

And this same prudent housewife will think of little methods of helping herself and giving occasional rest to her body, and thereby quietness to her soul. She will keep a memorandum sheet, with its lists of wants for kitchen, dining-room, sewing-room, and parlor. She regards her memory too highly to burden it with a thousand trifles, from a corkscrew to a spool of silk.

She has places for everything, because by so doing she knows just where to find them without spending time in the search. She takes time to enjoy every trifling gratification that comes in her path. Her creed teaches her that the pleasant things of life were put there for this purpose, and that she is unthankful who turns persistently away from the lovely every-day small pleasures God has scattered so profusely along the road.—Harper's Bazar.

Daughters.

If all that mothers are to them came home to the perceptions of daughters at an early period, they would be more anxious than they generally seem to be to spare those mothers, to prolong their days, and save them from much of the exertion and anxiety that are likely to shorten their lives, and that if only from merely selfish reasons. How many daughters are there who, if it lies between them to do it, do not let their mothers rise in the morning and make the fire and prepare the breakfast; who, in the interim between cooks, do not let the whole burden of care and the chief endeavor of work come upon the mother; who do not let the mother get up in the night and attend to the calls of sudden illness; who, if it is necessary to watch with the sick, do not hold themselves excused, and the duty to be a maternal one; who do not feel their privilege to be ready for callers and company while the mother is still in working deshabille; who are not in the habit of taking the most comfortable chair, and who, in the matter of provision of toilet, do not think almost anything will do for mother, but they themselves must be fresh and fine and in the fashion? How many daughters are there who, when pleasure-taking comes in question, do not feel, even if perhaps unconsciously, that the mother has had her day and ought to be contented, and they should be the ones to go and take the enjoyment? It would seem as if the mere sentiment of self-preservation would teach the daughters a better line of conduct. It is the mother making the central spot of the house usually that makes home possible. It is the mother from whom the greater part of the happiness of the home proceeds. If she dies the home disintegrates, or it is not unusual that another comes to take her place—a foreign and alien element before whom the old union and happiness may possibly fly.

To preserve this home, and this happiness, one would imagine, should be the first effort of the daughter; that she should, out of regard for her own comfort and gratification as well as for that of others, seek every means to make life easy to the mother, to insure her health and length of days. Never again will any daughter have such a friend as this mother, no fond adorer's eyes will ever follow her with the same disinterested love as this mother's eyes do, nor will any give her the sympathy she does. It is wild folly on the daughter's part that lets the mother waste her strength, instead of seeking by every means possible to save and increase it, for while a good mother is with her family they are entertaining an angel, whether unawares or not.—Harper's Bazar.

A Wise Mother.

A certain Western senator had two sons, little fellows nine and eleven years of age, when he came to the capital two years ago. Their mother had devoted herself to their education and pleasure almost exclusively; but here she found that the demands of society would not permit her to give quite so much time to them. So they were sent to school, and often had to go to bed without the pretty story.

One evening the mother noticed that the older boy seemed unusually grave. She was making preparations to go out to dinner. He said:

"Mama, you are going out again?"

"Yes, my dear; mama has to go. She dislikes to leave you so much, but papa wants her. Go to bed, my dears, and to sleep; you won't miss me then."

"Mama," said he, with all the gravity of a full grown man taxed to the limit of his patience, "Mama, how much longer is this thing going to last? What is to become of us if you neglect us so?"

The mother did not go out to dinner that night. She stayed at home, told and read stories to the boys and petted them. The result was, and still is, that the mother devotes all her Saturdays to the youngsters. They visit the art gallery, the museum, the Capitol, the old houses and the Zoo.

"I enjoy it," she says, "as much as they do."—Washington Capital.

A LIFE LESSON.

BY JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

There! little girl, don't cry!
They have broken your doll, I know,
And your tea set blue
And your playhouse too,
Are things of long ago,
But childish troubles will soon pass by;
There! little girl, don't cry!

There! little girl, don't cry!
They have broken your slate I know;
And the glad, wild ways
Of your schoolgirl days
Are things of long ago;
But life and love will soon come by;
There! little girl, don't cry!

There! little girl, don't cry!
They have broken your heart, I know;
And the rainbow gleams
Of your youthful dreams
Are things of long ago;
But heaven holds all for which you sigh;
There! little girl, don't cry.

Sunday Reading and Conscience.

In a Boston boarding house roomed sixteen clerks, honest and well-disposed, and belonging to good families. All of them were of the age when the boy, just merging into manhood, generally makes decisions as to his conduct that result in final good or evil.

Three of the young men who occupied one of the rooms together were recent acquaintances, and their first Sunday morning in the house brought a trial of moral courage which is interesting to relate.

The hours between breakfast and church time must be whiled away somehow, and two of the room-mates busied themselves with miscellaneous reading.

The third felt a desire to take out his Bible and read it, as he had been taught to do at home. Fearing ridicule, he hesitated a good while, but conscience presently impelled him to go to his trunk and lift the lid. Cowardice suggested that it would look "sanctimonious" to be seen reading the Bible. He shut the lid down and walked away.

After nearly half an hour of struggle, conscience triumphed again. He rose and went to the trunk a second time. His hand was on the Bible. Again his courage failed him. As he was turning away one of his companions called out:

"What's the matter, Ike? You're as uneasy as a weathercock."

Ike laughed, and told the truth like a man. To his surprise both the others confessed that they had the same struggle and defeat. Each thought that he ought to read his Bible, but was afraid to be seen by the rest.

The next minute all three had their Bibles in their hands, and read them together during the next half hour. They agreed to do this every Sunday. The ice was broken.

The next Sabbath morning, while they sat quietly reading, two of the clerks from another room came in.

"Hullo!" they exclaimed. "What is this, a conventicle?"

The three Bible readers frankly told of their agreement. The visitors confessed that only cowardice had kept them, too, from the same duty. They promised to begin at once, and they did so. The example spread, till each of the sixteen clerks in the house spent his Sunday mornings reading the Bible.

Every one of these youths is to-day a useful man. We can not, of course, say that the mere reading of the Bible on those Sabbath mornings made these men what they are. We can say, however, that the principles of the Bible must have influenced their lives for good, and the associations which, with such a habit, they would naturally seek must necessarily have been honorable and elevating, and have tended to their success in life. One of them who, afterward became a minister, related the facts we have given.

One boy's courage to do right may determine not only his own futnre well being, but that of many others besides.—Youth's Companion.

Tippling among Young Men.

The great majority of those who are enslaved by strong drink did not begin their career of self-destruction in the dram shops. While the lower classes of drunkards are victims of saloons, the more respectable sort began with the social glass. It was at the social party, or in the billiard-room, or the club, or at the wedding that the fatal habit was formed. Not many begin to drink alone, or from sheer appetite for stimulants. The glass was offered to them by somebody, and from want of moral courage or from a desire to appear "gentlemanly," they consented to drink.

I was once at a wedding in a "genteel" circle of society where the popping of champagne-corks was like the rattle of musketry. Within a few years I met the oldest son in that family a confirmed drunkard. His parents had tempted other people's sons and had ruined their own! The man who sets a decanter on his table sets a trap for his boys that may land them in perdition. The young lady who offers any intoxicant to her young gentleman friends deserves to become that wretched object, a drunkard's wife.

The drinking usages are sadly on the increase in this country—in social life, at restaurants, at clubs and even in the fashionable shopping resorts for ladies! While the chief discussion is about prohibiting saloons, Satan is stealing a march on us by tempting young men to be tipplers. The only safeguard for any young man—even though he be a professing Christian—is entire abstinence. He never knows what latent appetite he may have within until the spark touches the gunpowder. A young man of my acquaintance (a church member) found, before he was aware, that he was becoming a slave to the bottle. He said to me, "My young associates invite me to drink with them and are ruining me. After this when they ask me to drink I shall knock them down!" He was terribly in earnest; and no wonder: he had been laying with vipers at the mouth of hell!

For two reasons every conscientious young man ought to pledge himself to total abstinence. First, for his own sake, for he don't know how soon he may become a tippler. Secondly, for the sake of others whom he may tempt to ruin by his example. Let Dr. Keeley, or any other man who is making money by "cures for drunkenness," say what they will, the reform of inebriates is difficult and rare. The one time to stop drinking treacherous intoxicants is to stop before you begin.—T. L. Cuyler, D. D.

A Child's Idea of Prayer.

Little Nellie, who was only four years old, no sooner saw work laid aside than she ran to her mother's knee and claimed a seat there. Mrs. Lee lifted her to her lap, and went on busily thinking of her duties and cares, while she rocked herself and Nellie to and fro.

For a time Nellie amused herself very quietly by winding a string in and out through her fingers, but presently she began talking to herself in a low tone: "When I say my prayers, God says: 'Hark, angels, while I hear a little noise.'"

Her mother asked her what noise was that.

"A little girl's noise. Then the angels will do just so [shutting her mouth very tightly and keeping very still for a moment], till I say Amen."

Isn't this a sweet thought? I wonder if the children who read this have ever thought how wonderful it is that God always hears their prayers. He is surrounded by thousands of angels, and all praising him with their golden harps; and yet, through all the music and all the praises, he hears the softest prayer of a little child kneeling by the bedside. He must be very loving and very kind to children. We should think he would sometimes forget, and be listening to the beautiful sounds in heaven, instead of the prayer of a little child; but he never does. There is never too much singing nor too many praises there for him to hear a little girl's voice. Do you not wonder that children do not pray to him much more and oftener then they do?—Presbyterian.

He that repents every day for the sins of every day, when he comes to die will have the sins of but one day to repent of; short reckonings make long friends.—Philip Henry.

The only Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.—No Ammonia; No Alum.
Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

IT PREVENTS THE ENTRANCE of disease—pure blood and an active liver. How explained? The circulation of the blood is the great highway over which the germs of disease travel, the liver is the quarantine through whose gate any dread disease may or may not pass, as the liver chooses.

Are you watchful? Is your blood in order and your liver active, so as to repel disease? If not, you will find in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery just the help you need. It comes to your assistance when you have such warnings of impure blood and inactive liver, as pimples, boils or carbuncles; or a feeling of lassitude, weakness and despondency. When your flesh is, from any cause, "reduced below a healthy standard," you've only to take the "Discovery," which will set all the organs into vigorous action and build up both flesh and strength. Avoid nauseous preparations of Cod Liver Oil. They add fat, but not wholesome flesh or healthy tissue.

The Sermon Bible

Embracing the Whole of the Sacred Scriptures.

THE OLD TESTAMENT IN FOUR VOLUMES, NAMELY.

Vol. I. Genesis to II. Samuel.
Vol. II. I. Kings to Psalm lxxvi.
Vol. III. Psalm lxxvii to Song of Solomon.
Vol. IV. Isaiah to Malachi.

THE NEW TESTAMENT IN EIGHT VOLUMES, VIZ.:

Vol. V. Matthew I to xxi.
Vol. VI. Matthew xxii to Mark xvi
Vol. VII. Luke I to John iii.
Vol. VIII. John iv to Acts vi.
Vol. IX. Acts vii to I. Corinthians.
Vol. X. II. Corinthians to Philippians.
Vol. XI. Colossians to James.
Vol. XII. I. Peter to Revelation.

This series of volumes gives in convenient form the essence of the best homiletic literature of this generation. It takes account of the best and greatest preachers, and has been compiled from manuscript reports and fugitive periodical sources as well as from books. Many of the best sermons preached by eminent men are never printed in book form. It thus contains much that will be new to its readers.

UNDER EVERY TEXT IS GIVEN:

1. One or more important sermons by eminent preachers existing only in manuscript or periodical, and thus inaccessible.
2. Less full outlines of sermons which have appeared in volumes which are not well known or easily obtained.
3. References to or very brief outlines of sermons which appear in popular volumes such as are likely to be in a preacher's library.
4. Full references to theological treatises, commentaries, etc., where any help is given to the elucidation of the text.

Thus the preacher, having chosen his text, has only to refer to the SERMON BIBLE, to find some of the best outlines and suggestions on it and full references to all the helps available.

It extends to 12 volumes, of about 400 pages each, with 24 blank pages for memorandum notes at the end of each volume.

OUR OFFER.

The publisher's catalogue price of the above work is $1.50 per volume.

We will send any volume, postpaid, as a premium for two new subscribers, accompanied by the cash—$4. If you want the whole set of twelve volumes, send us twenty-three new subscribers with the cash—$46—and we will send the set, postpaid. Remember that this is not an antiquated work thrown on the market at a low rate because there is no demand for it. It is a recent publication which is having quite a run throughout the North.

BUGG—Among the sainted dead who have entered into heaven's harbor there was no one whose bark of life was more freighted with noble purposes and good deeds done "in His name" than the subject of this sketch, Miss FRANCES A. BUGG. For over fifty years she had been a resident of Vicksburg, and all that time a member of the Methodist Church in that city. A large family of brothers and sisters, herself among the number, emigrated from Virginia to Mississippi in 1839, and most of them settled in and near Vicksburg. She was the last surviving one of these.

Her earthly voyage was indeed a stormy one, for well nigh all the ills that are visited upon humanity were meted out to her. Disappointments, losses, bereavements and bodily infirmity, and, added to these, the care of orphaned relatives. Amid all these afflictions she maintained her Christian integrity, and would often say, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him." She was a consistent member of her church, a Bible reader, a lover of religious literature and of the songs of Zion. She was greatly blessed during the late meeting of Dr. Carradine in our city, and no doubt God was fitting her for a higher sphere. Her death was sudden; sick a few hours, and then passed away on Feb. 3.

After the storms of life her journey has ended in peace. May her example prove an inspiration to us, so that we, too, may be enabled to stem the tide and anchor on that heavenly shore, "where all the ship's company meet."

S. E. H.

DUBORD—The subject of this sketch, ROBERT WALTER DUBORD, was born in Attala county, Miss., March 27, 1865, and died at the old home, surrounded by friends and loved ones, Dec 18, 1893.

Having been reared in a Methodist Christian home, he loved all Christians, but had a most tender regard for those of his own church. Even before his conversion he loved the church, and was exceedingly fond of the society of his preacher. He had an affable social dignity that made him a welcome guest anywhere. In August, 1891, under the ministry of Rev. George S. Inge, he professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South. Then all his Christian training, native ability and genial nature conspired to make him a consecrated, useful follower of Christ. His life was so consistent that his associate in business who knew him best spoke of him as "a perfect Christian gentleman." But his work is done, and he has entered into his reward.

To his aged parents, loving and appreciative sisters and brothers I would say: "Look up. He is not lost, but gone before." May you all be ready when the Master calls to meet him on the other side of the river.

AUSTIN—This short sketch will chronicle the death of Mrs. JULIA A. AUSTIN, wife of the Rev. E. A. Austin, of South Carolina, whose death occurred many years ago.

Mrs. Julia A. Austin was born Dec. 3, 1817 and after her marriage both she and her husband joined the Lutheran Church in 1837. In 1851 they joined the M. E. Church, South. In 1891 Sister Austin, with her son and his family, moved to Smith county, Miss., and on the night of Jan. 29, 1894, she departed this life in the triumphs of the Christian faith.

My acquaintance with this good woman is only through others, as I had just got on this work, and had never visited her house; but her Christian character is well known by relatives and friends to be that of a mother in Israel. She has entered into that rest that remains for the people of God. God bless the two sons and the grandsons, and help them to live here on earth so as to be able to enter in through the gates into the city!

J. H. EVANS.

BOUNDS—Bro. WILLIAM BOUNDS was born in Pike county, Ala., Feb. 28, 1812, and moved to Copiah county, Miss., then to Scott county, Miss., and then to Rankin, and died there in Rankin county, near Lynwood, Miss., on Jan. 26, 1894. He was a member and deacon of the Baptist Church for forty or fifty years, and leaves five daughters and two sons to mourn his loss, by which he has taken his flight to meet his companion in a better world.

Weep not, dear children, but prepare to meet him in heaven, where trouble will be no more

A. T. MOALIN.

HILLIARD—Mrs. IDA C. HILLIARD (nee Campbell) was born April 6, 1856, and died at her home in New Iberia, La., Feb. 3 1894.

Of her it could be truly said, as of Timothy "From a child she had known the Holy Scriptures." She was converted at eight years of age. She joined the Methodist Church in New Iberia, and remained steadfast to the end. Her devoted husband, Mr. Audubon Hilliard, preceded her March 15, 1889, leaving to her care four young children. Notwithstanding her feeble health, with small means, she and her little family had done well. She trusted in God and did good, and was blessed of the Lord. For more than a year her health had been gradually giving way, and for three months previous to her release she had been confined to her bed. From the beginning of her last illness she seemed to anticipate the end, she retaining her mental faculties to the last moment. She sent messages to absent friends and loved ones, and exhorted all to live Christian lives and to meet her in heaven. Her last testimony was that she was ready and anxious to go. Nothing but the blood of Jesus gave her hope.

Bereaved ones, be faithful until death, and you will meet her in a more congenial clime, to part no more forever.

C. H. ELLIS.

ROBERTSON—Mrs. HAYES ROBERTSON departed this life, Jan. 4, 1891, at her home near Nesbit, DeSoto county, Miss. She was born May 13, 1853.

It was not my good pleasure to meet Sister Robertson until two years ago, when I became her pastor on the Nesbit circuit. I do not know what her last words were; but what are last words compared to a true Christian life? Her domestic relations were very pleasant. She exercised great patience with her children, and was a model hostess. It was a great help to me while preaching to see her eyes fill with tears and lips quiver with emotion, expressing how deeply she felt and realized the precious truths that I was proclaiming. When filled with the Spirit she did not hesitate to shout the praises of God. But it was around her own family altar and in the prayer meeting that she seemed to enjoy religion most. I witnessed the conversion of all her children except the baby. I have been with them around the family altar, when we would have such a season of rejoicing that we could scarcely sing or pray. She leaves five children and a husband to mourn her loss. Weep not, bereaved ones; she is not dead, but liveth.

C. W. PEAKINE.

GRESHAM—J. M. GRESHAM, of Earnest, Miss., departed this life Dec. 27, 1893. He was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Cleveland, Miss., August, 1889, and lived a consistent Christian until his death. He was only about twenty-three years old and a perfect picture of health. He was sick a few days. The last few years of his life he was working at public works. I heard him say that it was very hard to live a Christian among the people that he had to associate with. He did not say anything about dying, but he did not seem to dread death, and so he quietly fell asleep in Jesus. He leaves an aged father and brothers and sisters. May the Lord be with them in their afflictions! His mother died a short while before he died. He was originally from Alabama. We miss him very much, but we feel that our loss is his gain.

A FRIEND.

YOUNG—J. M. YOUNG was born in Calcasieu parish, La., Feb. 12, 1873, and died Oct. 31, 1893.

He was a child of affliction all his life. He died of dropsy—that much-to-be-dreaded disease—that had been his principal life-long trouble. He was twenty years eight months and eighteen days old. He bore his afflictions patiently. He was a member of the M. E. Church, South, for several years before his death, showing all the marks of a true Christian. Let the bereaved family take comfort. He is at rest, and they, too, may follow after.

H. M. BANKS, P. C.

MCSWAIN—Whereas, It has pleased our heavenly Father, in wisdom, to summon from our Sabbath-school JIMMIE M. MCSWAIN, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. McSwain, who departed this life on Jan. 31, 1894, in his twentieth year, we bow in humble submission to his will, and feel that heaven is made brighter by his happy soul returned home to God, and that earth is made poorer in the loss of one so gentle, pure and good; therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we, as members of Isabella Sabbath-school, deeply deplore our loss, and feel that his vacant seat can not be filled, we bow in submission to the will of him who doeth all things well.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication, and a copy sent to the family.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

We are not at all sure that we shall have any possessions, anything of our own, in the future life, anything, consequently, to give away. Perhaps it will all belong to all. So let us have enough of giving while we can, and enjoy the best part of possession.—Jean Ingelow.

Mr. P. D. D. Delacroix, Cypremort P. O., La., Nov. 30, 1888, says: "Three years ago an agent representing Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar came into my store. Being busy, was unable to give him any time. Before leaving he gave me a sample bottle of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, asking me to give it to anyone suffering with a cough or cold. Several days afterward I caught a heavy cold. Remembering the sample, thought I would try it. Six teaspoonfuls cured me. Ordered a supply at once, and have sold it with satisfaction to all. It acts like magic on all my family, and I would not be without it. I take pleasure in recommending it at all times." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

Constitutional History of American Episcopal Methodism.

OCTAVO. 414 PAGES. Price, $1.50.

BY JNO. J. TIGERT, D. D.

Most Constitutional histories are dry reading, but this has interested me very much. I have been especially impressed by its vivid portrayals of signal events, its felicitous illustrations of the way in which the most important matters of ecclesiastical polity have been determined by the opinions and acts of individuals, and its omnipresent proofs of the Providential origin and development of Methodism on both sides of the Atlantic.—Bishop C. D. Foss, of the M. E. Church.

Few books have ever been issued from the presses of our Publishing House at Nashville equal in importance and value to this one. It fills a place occupied by none other. The scope of the work is full and comprehensive, and the subject is treated from beginning to end with rare ability. The publication of this work is timely. It ought to be read and studied by every intelligent preacher and layman of our Church. Particularly ought it to be mastered by every delegate to our General Conference.—Southern Christian Advocate.

From the care with which you have sifted statements, examined documents, and analyzed facts, I think you have produced a work which will reflect credit on your industry and ability, and entitle it to a place of a classic in Methodist literature, not to say ecclesiastical literature.—Bishop E. R. Hendrix.

It is said there is a shortage of $1,500,000 in the books of New York's comptroller. It is alleged that taxes have been collected from corporations and not entered in the books.

The Legislature of New York has passed a law that after the first of April all cats to live in New York State must have a license, and must wear a collar, with a numbered tag.

It is said President Cleveland will veto the bill providing for the coinage of the silver seigniorage. Congressmen are urging him to approve it, while many petitions against it have been received.

Republicans are undecided as to what action they will take on the Tariff bill when it shall reach the Senate. The plan to recommit the bill may be reconsidered, or they may try to talk it to death like the Anti-Options bill.

Governor Hogg, of Texas, has declined the sugar bounty of $75,000 on sugar raised on the State farms. He said: "I will not accept this Republican sugar bounty bait aimed at the destruction of the independent autonomy of the States."

The House Committee on Agriculture has completed its consideration of the Anti-Options bill and authorized it to be reported to the House in amended form agreed upon. As agreed on, the bill provides that every "option" contract and every future "contract" shall have affixed thereto internal revenue stamps representing taxes.

The dynamite works of the Acme Powder Company, at Black's Run, a mile and a half above Hulton, on the Allegheny Valley railroad, were destroyed by an explosion on March 23. Five persons were killed and one badly injured. The works were blown to pieces and buildings in the vicinity of the works were wrecked, windows broken and the people within a mile of the works terrorized.

The blizzard which swept over the Northwest on Sunday made itself felt far down to the southward by Monday morning with freezing temperatures, which were not relaxed during Monday night. There is reason to believe that there has been extensive damage to all the Southern crops that are subject to be hurt by frost, the injuries being aggravated by the very warm weather which had obtained for two weeks and up to Sunday.

The United States is now busily engaged in preparing a fleet for service in Behring Sea during the approaching sealing season. Under the terms of the award by the Arbitration Commission, Great Britain and the United States are made jointly responsible for the protection of the seals in the Behring Sea fisheries, and both countries are negotiating for the purpose of arriving at some definite agreement as to the best method of policing the fishing grounds.

President Peixoto, of Brazil, has revived the imperial decrees, by the terms of which the government is authorized to execute without the benefit of a formal trial all persons, whether natives or foreigners, who either directly or indirectly have aided or abetted a revolt.

The Pope's encyclical letter, addressed to the Bishops of Poland, Russia, Austria and Prussia, was published on March 23. He says in brief that the mission of the papacy is not to teach anything against the power of princes or the utility of nations, but to provide for the prosperity of all.

It is reported that numerous earthquakes of extraordinary violence have of late been visiting the isthmus of Tehuantepec. Some of the shocks lasted as long as twelve seconds, and have done immense damage to buildings on the Pacific coast. The people are in a state of great excitement and do not know what to expect.

Budapest, Hungary, was the scene of much rioting on March 22 and 23. Students were on the rampage, their anger being aimed at citizens who failed to manifest the proper degree of sorrow at the death of Kossuth. A sharp engagement took place at the doors of the Parliament House. The police were practically powerless to preserve order. Many persons were injured.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists; price 75c. per bottle.

Rev. Thos. J. Newell.

At a called meeting of the Board of Trustees of Grenada Collegiate Institute, March 15, 1894, to elect a president for the ensuing term of four years, the Rev. Thos. J. Newell, A. M., who has served three consecutive terms of four years each as president, declined re-election. The following is set forth as a meager expression of the grateful esteem in which our retiring president is held by the Board of Trustees.

Resolved, That to Rev. T. J. Newell the credit is largely due of securing to the M. E. Church, South, the property located at Grenada, Miss., known as the Grenada Collegiate Institute, which at a low estimate is worth not less than $25,000, and is regarded as the best single piece of female school property in the Southwest, which property is now entirely free from debt.

Resolved, That we recognize Rev. Mr. Newell as an educator of no ordinary grade. As an instructor, disciplinarian and financier, he has shown himself eminently gifted.

Resolved, We most heartily appreciate his long and faithful term of service as president of this institution; under many difficulties he has been patient and persevering, until the Grenada Collegiate Institute, under his fostering care and assiduous labors, has built up and maintained a grade second to none of its class in the country.

Bro. Newell is a man of solid worth and merit, a scholar and a Christian gentleman. He is in every way worthy of the highest esteem of his brethren, which he has uniformly received, and with which he now retires from the presidency of this institution. We can but wish that his life may be long, and continue in usefulness to God and to the church, whether it be in the development of pure Christian womanhood, "polished after the similitude of a palace," or in the pastorate, preaching the unanswerable riches of Christ.

The Board adjourned to meet at Grenada, April 17, next, when a president will be elected. Candidates for the place should send their applications to one or all of the undersigned, with testimonials and references, at as early a day as possible. By action of the Board of Trustees, whoever is elected to take Bro. Newell's place, which expires by limitation at the end of the present scholastic term, will be expected to purchase the fixtures and furniture now in the institution, the personal property of President Newell, at a reasonable and fair price.

THE WORLD FOR CHRIST,

A MISSIONARY EXERCISE

For Children's Day,

Sunday, May 20, 1894.

A LEAFLET OF SIXTEEN PAGES.

THIS PROGRAMME emphasizes the missionary idea strongly and interestingly, while its general make up is very bright and attractive. In the selections for reading and declamation there is a pleasing variety, and the music (given in full) is mostly new and of an inspiring character. It is hoped that every Sunday-school that possibly can will order and use this Exercise, so appropriate to this Methodist quadrennial year.

Price: 10 cents per dozen; 60 cents per 100.

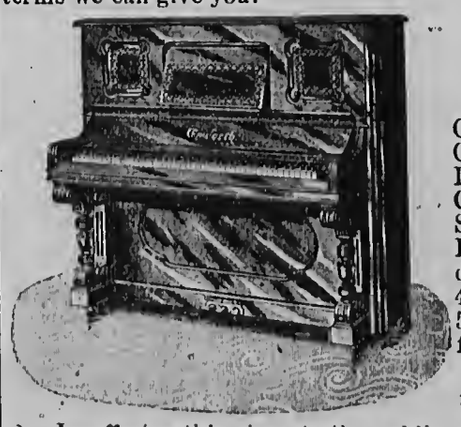
PIANOS AS PREMIUMS.

READ THE DESCRIPTION BELOW OF STYLE 10.

The list price of this instrument is $330. We will furnish this elegant instrument as a premium for new subscribers. If this offer interests you, write us for terms. You may be surprised at the terms we can give you.



STYLE 10.

Seven and one-third Octaves: Chaste Design; Overstrung Scale; Heavy Iron Frame; 3 Strings; Carved Trusses; Improved Sounding Board; Perfect Repeating Action and Sliding Music Desk. Height, 4 feet 4½ inches; length, 5 feet 2 inches; depth, 2 feet 4½ inches.

In offering this piano to the public our object is to provide for the existing demand for an instrument which, although taking up but a small amount of room, possesses the same quality of tone, the same high grade of action, work and material found in our larger pianos, at the same time a plainly but thoroughly well-finished exterior, enabling us to offer it at a price within the reach of every one who wishes to secure a perfect piano for a small amount of money. This style is a favorite with ministers, as it takes less room and is more easily moved than the larger instruments.

Made in Rosewood, Ebony, Walnut or Mahogany finish.

Boxed with good Plush Stool, Embroidered Cover and Instruction Book. Every instrument warranted for five years.

MY FATHER'S CARE.

BY THEOPHILUS.

There is in store for me, to-day,
Just what my Father wills.
If rough or smooth shall be my way,
It but his plan fulfils.
Each moment I shall find my need
By his own hand supplied.
My soul with manna shall he feed;
I shall he satisfied.

With joyful heart I forth shall go,
My daily task to meet.
No fear or doubting shall I know,
My rest of soul complete.
Though storms may rage and tempests roar,
My heart, still trusting him,
Shall, eagle-like, above them soar,
While peace abides within.

I'll look for glad surprises, too,
Of gifts beyond my need.
His love is not content to do
What need alone can plead.
He loves to give me happiness,
My cup with joy he fills,
And giveth glory with his grace
Till all my being thrills.

On Children Not Going to Church.

BY REV. J. B. WALKER, D. D.

The following essay, read before the New Orleans Preachers' Meeting, was ordered published by unanimous vote:

We are this morning to consider the evil of the non-attendance of our children on divine service—the cause, or causes, of this deplorable state of things, and what we can attempt to do towards the correction of the evil.

Children, it has been said, are the wealth of a nation, and it is certain they are the hope of the church, and, therefore, are eminently worthy of our most serious and intelligent consideration, and we do well to consider how we can most successfully promote their salvation and develop their usefulness.

Many of our Sunday-school children do not attend church, nor hear the gospel from the sacred desk. This is confessedly a great evil in various ways. They do not hear the preaching of the Word at the most impressible period of their lives. It is an evil because they fail to form a church-going habit; so when they leave off attendance at Sunday-school, they do not attend church service, do not remember to keep the Sabbath holy; and it is an evil because it is so difficult to call them back to church, and to bring them under the saving influences of the gospel.

It is pertinent to the subject under consideration to inquire why it is that this non-attendance of children is so common an evil. There are several causes. One is, that there are in all our Sunday-schools quite a number of children whose parents are not church members, are not regenerate persons, and seldom or never attend church. They do not, and scarcely could ask their children to do what they seldom or never do themselves. Another is, that the example of the children of non-church-goers influences and induces the children of Methodists to wish to go home also. Then, alas! there are church members who seem insensible to the evil of their children growing up to mature age without the church-going habit. They do not, as they should, insist on the attendance of children at church, and occupying the same pew with themselves. Sometimes these parents speak of the children being "tired" and wearied with the length of the service, though they do not so speak of the longer time and severer studies of the secular schools. Another cause, we think, is that we preachers have overlooked or forgotten the children in our conduct of church services and in our sermons, so that the children feel that they have no lot nor part in the services. They are not addressed as children, nor spoken to in such terms as are level to their apprehension. It's all Greek—an "unknown tongue"—to them. They are not interested—they are merely staying at church, are confined there for a certain length of time, and, as they do not understand, their attention is not elicited, the time seems long, it's irksome, and a weariness to them, and the "Amen" of the benediction is the most desired word they hear.

Children need to be taught, and God commands that they shall be; but they are most imperfectly taught by us, unless we teach them in the use of such words as they understand. In all our secular and Sunday-school books there is an attempt to put the rudiments of knowledge on a level with juvenile capacity, in easy reach of the children.

Children must recognize the fact that they are spoken to and addressed in such terms as they can understand. The Psalmist addresses them directly and plainly: "Come, ye children, and hearken unto me, and I will teach you the fear of the Lord. What man is he that desireth life, and loveth many days, that he may see good? Keep thy tongue from evil and thy lips from speaking guile. Depart from evil, and do good; seek peace, and pursue it." This is spoken colloquially in easy phrase. St. Paul, of whom John Fletcher has said, "Of all the great men the great God has made, St. Paul was among the greatest," came to the level of the children, saying in one of his sublimest epistles: "Children, obey your parents in the Lord, for this is right. Honor thy father and mother, which is the first commandment with promise, that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest live long on the earth." The blessed Master said to Peter, and through him to all ministers, "Feed my lambs." This must suppose the food to be put in the rack in easy reach of the little ones. I think that toy makers, makers of children's books, and teachers in secular and Sunday-schools, are in advance of most of us preachers on this line. Most of our teaching and preaching seems intended for the senior class, and not at all for the preparatory department. We devolve most of the preparatory teaching upon others; and yet, though we seldom preach to the children, we seem surprised and grieved that they don't seem to care to hear us.

Preaching, in its modern popular signification, has been, and is, and in the nature of things must continue to be, a pre-eminent agency for the heralding of God's truth, for the declaring of the good tidings of salvation, and for the intelligent and discriminating exhibit of the themes of eternal moment. Hence it is unmistakably needful that the advantages of pulpit sermonizing be secured to the most important, to the most impressible, and to the most hopeful class of hearers; and who will say that that class does not include, if, indeed, it be not wholly composed of, children? Of course, the children are, and ought to be, taught by their parents and Sunday-school teachers; but, in addition to this home and Sunday-school teaching, there is a preaching work to be done by the pastor in and from the pulpit in announcing and impressing and enforcing the truths of God's Word by means of that form of continuous discourse which came after a season to take the place of the earlier form of homily, or conference, or conversation which was the chief method of preaching in the first two centuries of our Christian era.

It seems to me that we have no legitimate excuse for addressing our words of counsel and invitation chiefly to the comparatively hopeless minority of comparatively unimpressible adults, to the neglect of an obviously more hopeful majority of unquestionably impressible children, when both of these classes are within our reach. Let us follow the example of the householder who went out early in the morning to hire laborers into his vineyard, that we may gather in such as will devote the whole "day" of life to useful labor for God and his church.

There were wonderful revivals of religion in Germany under Count Zinzendorf and his fellow-Moravian preachers in preaching to the children. Wesley witnessed it, and was so much impressed that he resolved to preach to children. Jonathan Edwards bore testimony in New England to the remarkable results of preaching to children. The eminent and evangelical Dr. Tyng, of New York City, used to preach every Sunday afternoon to the children. He considered it the most important part of his work, and no portion of it was more profitable or acceptable to adults. I have experienced this so in my own humble experience. Dr. Tyng said if more preachers would preach to the children of their congregations, more of their grown people would understand their pastors better. He said on another occasion: "It is very often the case there is something you want to say to the grown people that is somehow at outs with the dignity, or propriety, or spirit of a sermon to them; but you can give them 'hall Columbia' over the heads of the children, and they can say nothing against it." A Massachusetts pastor was asked one Sunday morning by his little daughter, "Papa, are you going to say to-day anything I can understand?" This touched his heart. He resolved to speak to the children. So he said, as he was moving along through his sermon, "And now, children, I will say something to you about this." At once every little one looked up at the preacher, ready and glad to hear. When the pastor reached home his little daughter said, "Papa, I understood all you said to us to-day."

If time permitted, I could give you a long list of illustrious names and successful preachers who have advocated and who have preached to children; but I fear I should weary you, and consume the time that should be devoted to discussion.

What can we do? What shall we do to secure the attendance of the children of our congregations and of our Sunday-schools on divine service? We must more earnestly and frequently urge the importance of this subject upon parents and Sunday-school teachers and officers; urge the parents to have their children with them in their pews. Let us use some of the hymns and songs in our hymn book with which the children are familiar, and urge them to sing. Let us, as far as we can, so read and present the lessons from the Holy Scriptures as to make them more interesting to children, and, of course, we will especially ask help and invoke God's blessing on these endeavors. All this will be laborious preparation; but the greatness of the end sought, and the blessed spiritual harvest as the outgrowth of this sowing to the spirit which the church shall reap, will fully repay the toil and care thus given to save the children.

The sum of what seems to me to be possible to us is to urge parents and Sunday-school teachers and officers to give us their most and active co-operation, and then do all we can to make the public services of the Sabbath as interesting and profitable to the children as may be possible. The time after sermon, and sermon 10:30 A. M. and 3 o'clock P. M.; to have children attend church service.

The Christian Home.

BY REV. R. B. M'ALPINE.

Paul, in his letter to the Ephesians (vi, 1-4), gives us a beautiful description of the ideal Christian home, what it ought to be, the principles by which it should be regulated, the mutual obligations of children and parents.

Two main things—of immense value to the home—are inculcated, namely: the implicit obedience of the children, and their careful religious training in love. Where these things exist in their rightful and harmonious relations, the home becomes a very earthly paradise, in the bosom of which are nurtured the sweetest and purest lives that ever bless the church and the world.

The writer distinctly remembers a visit, some years ago, during his vacation, to a home whose cheerful piety can never be forgotten. The family altar was the centre of that home, a hallowed spot. Jesus was invited to be a guest, and treated with great respect and reverence. The study of the Scriptures was a delightful occupation. The children were tenderly trained in the great and precious truths of religion. And, as the years went on, God abundantly blessed these pious instructions, as he promised to do, crowning that home with his loving kindness and tender mercies. Still more, its honored head, an elder in the church, devoutly prayed that God would honor him by calling one of his children, at least, to preach the gospel in heathen lands. Two of them are now in the far East; one is a missionary, the other the wife of a missionary; still another is a devoted minister of the gospel in his native land; while others occupy useful and honorable positions in the church of God. Surely the choicest blessings of heaven always rest upon the God-fearing home, where the children, with holy love, are brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. The memory of such a home is precious, and brings inspiration and help in many a temptation and trial long after it has been broken and its members scattered.

Do Christian parents realize their immense responsibilities? It must be confessed, with sadness, that parental authority is, at this time, at a low ebb in the church at large. Every thoughtful observer of current domestic life can see this. Many parents, it is to be feared, do not realize their grave responsibilities, and hold in check their children. Young America, in some families, rules with a rod of iron; the will of the child is the will of the home—a disgraceful perversion of the intent and purpose of the family. Many Christian homes seem to be destitute of vital religion. The voice of prayer is seldom heard. Systematic instruction is neglected.

This is a sad spectacle to the devout Christian and the earnest patriot; for truly, the virtuous, religious home is the basal unit of the State. Upon it depends the preservation and perpetuity of free institutions. Strike down the home and you strike down the State. The godly home is the basal unit of the church. Destroy religion in the home, and at once the church must perish. The enemies of social order know this, hence their malignant assaults upon this venerable institution of God. Good men ought to pray everywhere for a revival of pure religion in the home, for such revival would immensely quicken the activities of the church and hasten on the world's redemption.—Observer.

Temperance in Schools.

The school, public and private, may and should be made an important agency for the inculcation of temperance truth. In all but two of the Northern States—New Jersey and Indiana—laws have been passed providing for scientific temperance instruction in the public schools. But, as a matter of fact, in many instances these laws, as yet, are but indifferently enforced. As a general rule, neither the officials controlling the school management nor the teachers employed have entered heartily into the work. In England, in its Board schools, temperance teaching is more general and more effectual than in the public schools of our own country. More systematic effort is made to enlist the sympathy and service of the teachers in the schools, and, especially under the auspices of the Band of Hope Union, competent lecturers are regularly employed to give, by permission of the school officials, lectures of a scientific character, concerning alcohol and its physiological effects, to the pupils and teachers. As in the case of legislation for the prohibition of the liquor traffic, it is not enough to have the law on the statute book; it must be vitalized and its enforcement aided and encouraged in every possible way. One of the most important helps which the friends of temperance in every locality may render is to enlist the interest and sympathy of teachers in the cause of temperance. They should be supplied, besides the text-books they are to use in teaching, with good, wholesome temperance literature. Such books as "Temperance in all Nations" would be of great practical value to every teacher called upon to give temperance instruction in schools, either public or private.—National Temperance Advocate.

American Protective Association.

We do not know what the American Protective Association is. Many things have been published about it, to the effect that it is an oath-bound secret political organization, and that its object is to keep Roman Catholics out of all political offices. Whether these things be true we can not say. But let others do as they may; we advise our people to be wary about uniting with or aiding in any way secret political organizations.

We do not hold to the doctrine that "the only way to fight the devil is with fire." If Jesuitism is bad for Romanists, it is also bad for Protestants. We believe that the principle of secret organization for political purposes is dangerous, whether Roman Catholic or Protestant. Let Protestant Christians beware of the temptation to enter these organizations. With the example of one such society organized against the right of Roman Catholics to enjoy full citizenship in this country, how long will it be before the devil will suggest that no church man whomsoever shall hold political office? There are elements of society, not small by any means, who would be glad to see all religious people ostracised in the same way. As a free people, as Americans and as Christians opposing intolerant sectarianism and ecclesiastical assumptions of political control, we can not afford to patronize any secret, oath-bound society of intolerance. If we be children of the light, let us walk in the light as the Master walked. If Roman Catholics are making dangerous encroachments upon our civil institutions, let them be opposed openly and above board. "The truth is mighty and will prevail." The remedy is, it seems to us, to make all officers directly responsible to the people, and an enlightened public sentiment will guide the ship of State aright. Without such a sentiment she will be wrecked anyhow, either on Scylla or Charybdis.

Although we believe in the unchanging purpose of Romanism, we are not among those alarmists who believe that our government is in imminent danger of being overturned and made a province of an ecclesiastical sovereign sitting on the banks of the Tiber. We believe the throne which began to crumble under the reformation of which Martin Luther was the leader is still crumbling, and will never be again set up on this earth. We have got too much faith in the power of the truth and the wisdom and care of the Head of the church to believe that Roman ecclesiasticism will ever be crowned with temporal power again.

This, of course, will be no fault of Rome. The power and opportunity is all she wants to put her principles into effect, and given the power, she will make the opportunity. We need, therefore, to be diligent to co-operate with the Head of the church to give the light of his wisdom as revealed to us in his Word to the pulling down of strongholds and the overthrow of the powers of darkness.

With a burning love for the truth as it is in Christ Jesus, with an open Bible and diligent watchfulness, we feel quite sure we can stand against all emissaries without the aid of secret political societies.—Texas Advocate.

Co-operation for Conquest.

"Who is sufficient for these things?"—Paul.

The student of military affairs knows that many anterior and seemingly inferior circumstances determine the issue of a battle. Many factors, beyond and outside of the courage of the soldiers and the skill of the captains, enter into the sum of things that decide a Waterloo.

Napoleon is painted as careering on a war steed, directing the fire and movements of his men; but he had previously given greatest care to the shoes, rations, jackets of the troops. He knew victory depended on full commissary wagons as much as keen bayonets. He punished with death remissness in the quartermaster's department.

In the Franco-Prussian war the gallant Gauls lost battles by inefficiency in the supply of clothing, arms and transportation. Little availed their valor against the plodding, methodical, careful German, with gun, boot, biscuit, railroad, slowly, but surely, made ready years ahead. Von Moltke could afford to lie on the grassy hillside of a great fort in front of Paris and read Dickens. He had everything in order before the outburst of war.

And so in the conduct of church campaigns. The wise pastor gives attention to affairs small to the eye, but influential in fashioning and fixing issues. Who has not seen an untrained, unreading, unpracticed membership mustered for a protracted meeting with their dullness, indifference, slackness, a source of weakness? What effort it is for the pulpit day after day to bring this militia into line confronting the enemy, and to inspire them with the zeal that pulls down the strongholds of Satan.

Mr. Wesley showed his tact in surcharging his Societies with his own spirit, and in priming every member by his periodicals, books, tracts. The primitive Methodist was equipped with doctrine, argument, stirring incident, by the press at the "Foundry."

The unconcern as to religious reading among our people is evidence of poor tactics. Neglect of any element of success is a misfortune to the church. The chief captains of the world welcome the weakest battalion to their ranks. The swollen vanity that is "sufficient for these things" is a Goliath of Gas.

Just now a cultured and successful preacher writes that he notices "the difference in the household where the Advocate goes;" and confesses he can not compass best results without putting this yeast into the family life. If we should name him, it would be acknowledged that he has the finest equipments for bringing in sheaves; yet this man of books and affairs is wise enough to enlist the printed pulpit in his campaign.

Brethren, add the Advocate to your forces in forwarding the good cause.—Exchange.

Duplicity.

However much falsehood may be tolerated by society, it is none the less loathsome to every pure-minded man; and it is not one whit the less abominable in the sight of God because men combine to keep it in countenance. Its most horrible form is seen when professing Christians become double-tongued, and have one voice in religion and another voice in common conversation. Who is not disgusted with lips candied with affected love, and yet bitter with malicious hate? It is dreadful to speak like a saint at one time and like a devil at another. We have known persons who have talked so unctuously of divine things in religious meetings that they have won a high repute for godliness out of doors, while at home, under the little provocations of common life, they have habitually stormed and raved, and led their children and servants a sorry life. This thing deserves no quarter. Occasionally we hear of fictitious experience, and listen to wonderful narratives of events which never occurred. This also is execrable.

Actions have as plain a voice as words, and there is a duplicity of life which is quite as evil as verbal falsehood. Many characters are double-tongued. Spencer said of Lady Wortley Montague that she was a shining character, 'but like a camel she is all irregularity, and always wandering." He calls her "the most wise, most imprudent, lovellest, most disagreeable, best-natured, cruelest woman in the world." Other forms of practical contradiction are common; some are intolerantly liberal, others are ferocious advocates of peace or intemperate upon intemperance. We have known persons who were rashly slow and imprudently wise. Hot and cold in five minutes. You would think the man to be two persons till you revised your opinion and reckoned him to be nobody at all because one side of his character neutralized the other. Nothing is more sad than to see that things do not tally in a man's character. We have known great pleaders for generosity who were, themselves, miserably stingy. We have heard of persons who have been wonderful sticklers for "the truth," meaning, thereby, a certain form of doctrine, and yet they have not regarded the truth in matters of buying and selling, or with regard to the reputations of their neighbors or the incidents of domestic life. 'These things ought not so to be." If by speaking the truth we shame the devil, we must be consistent in it as long as we live, or surely the devil will shame us.—Spurgeon.

In the present period of unrest in the industrial world, it is asserted that the sympathy of the church is not as fully on the side of the wage-earner as it should be. This would be a strange fact, if fact it could be shown to be, since wage-earners constitute the bone and sinew of the church itself, and easily govern this most democratic of all organizations by reason of their vast numerical preponderance. The church, in standing for law and order, and for rational and peaceful methods of adjusting the differences between employer and employed, is the true friend of the workingman, and on this account has incurred the resentment only of the thoughtless and reckless class, whose counsels of bloody riot, poison and dynamite are, at this day, the most serious menace to the workingman's cause.—Rev. R. F. Bishop, in Methodist Review.

No aspect of the irrepressible antagonism between the classes is more ominous of destructive results than the organization of the unemployed in moving, predatory armies. California seems to have been the birthplace of this alarming movement. Thousands of unemployed, ragged and disorderly men are now "marching toward Washington," as their watchword goes. What is now the petty pilferings of these hungry thousands may grow to the sacking of villages and the burning of barns. We admit a faith in the justice and humanity of the American people, and in their ability to grapple with and settle great problems; but the situation is grave. The gospel of Jesus Christ is the one panacea for our troubles.—Pacific Advocate.

THE PRESENT.

The present moment is divinely sent;
The present duty is thy Master's will.
Oh, thou who longest for some noble work,
Do thou this hour thy given task fulfil!
And thou shalt find, though small at first it seemed,
It is the work of which thou oft hast dreamed.

Oh, think not, if thou art not called to work
In mission fields of some far distant clime,
That thine is no grand mission! Every deed
That comes to thee in God's allotted time
Is just the greatest deed that thine could be,
Since God's high will appointeth it to thee.

Appropriations of the Board of Missions.

MR. EDITOR: I am glad Bro. Drake has given us the appropriations of the Board of Missions for 1893. By comparing this report with the Minutes we find the largest appropriation made to South Vicksburg, which was granted $300. As the brother who served that charge reported only $220 paid by the people he served, and being an experienced preacher and a man of family, I think the appropriation was judicious.

The next largest appropriations, ranging from $150 to $250, were granted to charges that paid their preachers from $500 to $660, besides affording them parsonages to occupy without cost to the preacher. Three of these favored preachers were without expensive families; two with wives, but no children, and two with only one or two children; another with several, but less than the orthodox number—fourteen.

A further comparison will show that the smallest appropriations were made to preachers that were paid less than $200 by the people they served. Of those paid less than $200 by their charges, there were several with children to feed, clothe and educate, if they can. To some of these the Board magnanimously appropriated $50, to others $75, to a few $100—the highest appropriation made to any of that class. Besides these were several preachers paid by their people less than $200, to whom no appropriation was made. Two-thirds of the preachers of the Mississippi Conference receive less than $500, and yet one-third of the home mission fund is appropriated to preachers that are paid $500, or more, by their charges. The Minutes show that every pastoral charge in the Conference, except one in the Jackson district, contributed something to this fund. The poor, overworked, underfed preachers, living on a salary of $150, or two hundred dollars, took a collection for home missions, a part of which went to supplement the salaries of preachers that got a comfortable support out of their people.

If the foregoing facts had been made known when this collection was taken, not one man in a hundred would have given a nickel. If the brethren who are responsible for these appropriations think they are right (and I suppose they do), they ought not to object to making known the facts in the case; and yet there seems to be some degree of repugnance to their publication. No one outside of the members of the Board, and its advisers and beneficiaries, so far as I am advised, approves its action. This charmed circle is entitled to the honorable distinction that attaches to a small, but respectable, minority.

I am not personally interested in this collection, and never expect to be, and I write from strong convictions of duty. If mistaken, I am not only willing, but anxious to be corrected. Let anyone in a Christian spirit expose my errors, and I stand pledged to publicly recant. I am expected by some of my brethren to lead in the effort to correct what we regard as a growing evil. This distinction is not of my seeking; it has been thrust upon me.

Children of Mississippi.

The Sunday-school at Magnolia, Miss., has organized itself into a band of workers to help in the building of the boarding-hall for Millsaps College. That is right—exactly the thing that ought to be done. What a mighty power for good there is in the Sunday-schools of the land! Here are two good letters. They have the right ring.

Rocky Springs, Miss., March 21, 1894.

Dear Bro. Cooper: I have at work two boys here in different neighborhoods for the Millsaps College hall. We have arranged to make you quarterly reports. Thinking, perhaps, they would take more interest if authorized by you, I will ask you to drop them a card authorizing them to collect funds for said purpose. They are Jas. O. Gilbert, Carpenter, Miss., and Joseph S. Newsom, Rocky Springs, Miss.

Yours, W. M. STEVENS.

You see that. This pastor is helping these boys in this work. They will do well. Mark that.

Dickerson, Coahoma Co., Miss., March 23, 1894.

Dr. I. W. Cooper: Seeing "Gilderoy's" call on the children for help to build a hall at Millsaps College, I gladly send one dollar, which I made myself, and I hope every child will send something. I want the children to pay more than the grown folks, and then "Gilderoy" and the rest of us children will be so proud.

Your little friend, ROY KING.

This boy is a "king," and he deserves to be. He sends "one dollar," sends it "gladly," and he "made it himself." He wants the "children to pay more than the grown folks." That is right. "Provoke one another to good works." Some people—some grown folks—are hard to "provoke." A spirit of emulation in good works is a Christian spirit.

Yes, sir, when Roy King and "Gilderoy" and the rest of us children get that hall built, we will be so proud," and so happy, too, we will hardly know what to do. "Gilderoy" will want to climb on top of it and make a speech to the children of Mississippi.

Well, Roy, just as soon as Dr. Cooper laid your dollar down, Maj. Millsaps put a dollar on top of it, and so, by giving one dollar, you have really given two towards building that hall.

Hurry up, boys, and send on your money to Rev. I. W. Cooper, D. D., Jackson, Miss. He wants to go to work on that hall so as to have it ready for the young men in September next. It can be done, and it will be done, and we must have a hand in the work. "Hey ho, there! All together and at once. A long pull and a strong pull, and the work will be done."

Your uncle, —GILDEROY.

I Don't Love Him Now.

"I don't love my pastor now, and I don't go to hear him preach. I don't, sure enough."

My dear friend, your words remind me of a pouting child, but you are too old and too large to come under that head. God will hold you responsible for your conduct. You are doing yourself an injury, and no one else any good. There is a long train of evils encamping about you, and no mistake of it. As your friend, I am going to deal honestly with you, and, if possible, render you a kindness. Whatever else there may be of worth in these lines, one thing is certain—they are founded on the rock of truth. Study them.

You are nursing malice in your heart.

You are driving Christ out of your life.

You are inviting the enemy into your home.

You are setting a ruinous example.

You are counteracting good with evil.

You are pulling down your own church.

You are heaping up wrath against the last day.

You are starving your own soul.

You are not happy now.

You are not useful as God wants you.

You do not approve your own course.

Your neighbors do not approve it.

God does not approve it.

You will regret it.

Come home, come home, or you will drift far away. God loves you.

YOUR FRIEND.

"Gilderoy" Turned Prophet!

MR. EDITOR: I never let anything "Gilderoy" writes escape my reading, and generally agree with him in his theories. This time, however, he escapes my "concurrence." To interpret prophecy is sometimes difficult, but to accept an uninspired one without rational interpretation is just out of the question. True, "Gilderoy" closes his prophecies with the perfect number, 7, as to the action or non-action of the approaching General Conference.

First of all, he prophesies that the General Conference will not provide for the "ordination of all men put in charge of works," and—I suppose, judging from his district up in Mississippi—concludes that "our charges are so small that ordained and unordained preachers are in a stone's throw of each other."

The truth is, in many places there is a suspension of all the ordinances of the church because no "ordained" preacher is in reach of the "unordained" one.

South of Lake Charles, in the Opelousas district, Louisiana Conference, the whole coast country from Vermilion Bay to the Texas line, and northward to a distance of from thirty-five to sixty miles, there is no ordained minister in charge of a work. This, I think, is something more than "a stone's throw," and is not peculiar to the Louisiana Conference.

"Gilderoy's" second prophecy is, that "the next General Conference will not create an order of evangelists in our church," and that this evangelistic question, with all its vagaries and contradictions of polity, "will be left to take its own course."

Perhaps the reason for this sort of prophetic conclusion arises from the fact that the evangelists have got the under-hold on the church, and "do not want a change."

The third prophecy is to the effect that the General Conference will make neither more nor fewer Bishops than we have, and the fourth prophecy declares against the "limiting or hedging in the general superintendents."

He who reads our denominational papers, and does not see a wide difference of opinion on this subject, is simply blind to the facts of the case.

Bro. "Gilderoy" may call it by whatever name he chooses, but there is certainly need for a clearer technical statement of the episcopal prerogative than we now have. The Conferences and the episcopacy are clashing at almost every point of the compass. Either we have not law enough to curb the episcopacy, or we have not law enough to hold down the Conferences, else neither has intelligence enough to understand the law as it is (?)!

It may be hoped that the opening of "Gilderoy's" "fifth seal" will disclose a fact, and the next General Conference will be an unusually quiet one. We do not look for "great groundswells," but there will be, if the Conference does its duty—as it has heretofore done it—some very deep currents, and possibly some pretty high tides, at Memphis in May.

The sixth prophecy, that "we shall go on just as we are evangelizing the world to Christ," means, if it means anything, that we will carry over to the next quadrennium all our blunders and strifes at home and abroad. "Just as we are!"

If Bro. "Gilderoy" would turn his thoughts to the competition of Methodism with Methodism in some of our foreign fields, and all around the border of our home work; if he would look at the expenditure of time, of money, of nerve, muscle and brain force which results in purely sectarian ends and the "survival of the fittest," I believe he would change this prophecy before it "comes to pass."

The "seventh seal" is by much the most pregnant one, containing a series of prophetic deliverances, mostly of a negative sort. "The approaching General Conference will not be a long one, nor . . . a hot one," etc.

But I forbear. Bro. "Gilderoy" and I will meet on other themes if we part company on his prophecies.

Very respectfully,

J. A. PARKER.

Without Guile.

It is narrated of Petrarch, the famous Italian poet, that when once summoned as a witness, in a court of justice, he prepared, according to the prevalent custom, to take the oath. But the judge, putting down the book, said: "As to you, Petrarch, your word is sufficient." We want such men in these days—men whose word is sufficient; men who employ words to unfold, not conceal, their meaning; to enlighten, not to deceive.

And insincerity is encountered in the form of hypocrisy. The age is one of shams. It is fashionable to deal in make-ups. Reality is rare. Veneer, lacquer, tinsel abound. Things are not always what they seem. Men profess to be what they are not, and to possess and feel what they do not. Frith, in his "Reminiscences," tells how the artist Creswick always carried his sketch-book about with him, and how he was once sketching on board a Rhine steamer when a gentleman came and overlooked him, and then sauntered away to the other end of the vessel. Creswick also just then removed his position, and was near the gentleman when he joined some ladies. Creswick overheard him begin by saying: "There's a fellow over there on the other side of the vessel drawing, but he knows no more about drawing than a baby." Creswick returned to his former position, and continued his sketching. Presently the same gentleman came to overlook for some time, and then broke the silence by saying: "Yours is a delightful art; it must be very pleasant to have your gift of making charming pictures."

"How can you say so?" replied Creswick; "why, just now I heard you tell some ladies that I had no more idea of drawing than a baby." Such is but one instance out of thousands in which men pose as friends when they are enemies, and impress onlookers with the idea that they are very pastmasters of an art of which in reality they are veriest tyros. Yes, it is possible to act a lie as well as speak or write one. Reader, be thorough! Never attempt to deceive either by speech or conduct. Let your yea be yea, and your nay, nay. Thereby you will grow to be esteemed, respected, beloved, and relied upon. —Quiver.

The Secret of Power.

Mr. Moody, the first time he was in Scotland, woke up the now celebrated Professor Henry Drummond to a new sense of the importance of reading the Bible. And how do you think he did it? In this way: In the course of one of his soul-stirring discourses on the importance of reading and studying the Bible, he remarked: "If I had spent as much time in reading my Bible as I have spent in prayer, I would be a better Christian than I am." That thought startled Professor Drummond; it stuck to him. He went home thinking about it. Hitherto he had been greatly given to prayer, and but little to the studying of his Bible. He now reversed the order. He became a close, persistent student of God's word, and it transformed his life. He now attaches supreme importance to a daily, careful, prayerful study of the Bible. This radical change in his religious life has given to the world his incomparable work, "The Greatest Thing in the World."—The Religious Telescope.

Half a Loaf.

A wise and patient temperance worker, one who suffereth long and is kind, will accept any kind or degree of prohibition rather than none, regarding it as a step to something better. But is it not true that the government grants license for the sale of liquor even in prohibition States? If so, that fact, perhaps, explains, if it does not excuse, the impatience of the extreme prohibitionist. How are we profited, he argues, by State prohibition if the government continues to issue licenses in spite of State laws? And, further, if one objects to centralization of power, it may be questioned whether that would be greater, or whether there would be more disregard of States rights in national prohibition than in national license, whereby the sale is forced upon States in defiance of their own laws, as at present.

One may favor national prohibition without adhering to the national prohibition party. Many feel that it would be the part of wisdom to refrain from nominating candidates on this one issue only, but to try to hold the balance of power, as does the liquor party, favoring those who favor prohibition. In any event, abuse of one's co-workers can do no good. If all are not agreed as to methods, time and experience will prove what is best.

There is one kind of prohibition upon which all may agree—prohibition from our homes.

Many Methodists would like to know whether the church expects or requires total abstinence of her members.

How to Be Miserable.

If you should wish to be miserable, you must think about yourself—about what you want, what you like, what respect people ought to pay to you, and then to you nothing will be pure. You will spoil everything you touch; you will make sin and misery for yourself out of everything which God sends you; you will be as wretched as you choose.—Kingsley.

When we turn to our Biographical Encyclopedias we find such men as Geo. Peabody, Peter Cooper, and Stephen Girard, are put down as "philanthropists." Have we not come too much to consider "philanthropist" as a sort of profession to which it is not to be expected that the great majority of men should belong? Now, as a matter of fact, Peabody, and Cooper, and Girard, were business men, exceptionally prosperous in their affairs, who used their money in a large way for the benefit of their fellow-men. Geo. W. Childs, who will also go into the encyclopedias as a philanthropist, was merely a man who conducted his business and administered its proceeds on the Christian principle of the brotherhood of man. In that sense every man and woman in the world ought to be a philanthropist. And thousands whose names will never get into the encyclopedias are in the spirit and practice of their lives "lovers of man" as truly as any of these who have given millions of dollars for great philanthropic enterprises. He who gives what he can of money, of knowledge, of sympathy, of labor, of smiles, of kindly deeds, to increase the happiness and improve the condition of the world, is a philanthropist, and in the vaster biographical encyclopedia in heaven will be so recorded.—Exchange.

It is fair to judge of a sermon, not only by the pleasure which it gives a hearer while listening to it, but by the abiding impression it leaves upon his mind. Two friends, on a recent Sabbath, went to hear two distinguished metropolitan preachers, and at the close of the evening were comparing notes as to the day's experience. "I can not exactly define the flaw in the morning's discourse," remarked one friend. "It was able, brilliant, and in a certain sense spiritual; but it sent me home to speculate and philosophize over matters which heretofore I had accepted in simple faith. It unsettled old beliefs, and gave me nothing satisfying in return. But from the other sermon," he continued, "I came away with a great longing to get on my knees before the Lord, and implore him to make me the man he designed me to be, and then send me forth to wider service for the blessing of mankind." One preacher stimulated the mental faculties; the other quickened the soul's noblest aspirations. Which sermon was the better of the two? Which effect is most to be desired?—The Congregationalist.

Few are needed to do the out-of-the way tasks which startle the world, and one may be most useful just doing commonplace duties, and leaving the issue with God. And when it is all over, and our feet will run no more, and our hands are helpless, and we have scarcely strength to murmur a last prayer, then we shall see that, instead of needing a larger field, we have left untilled many corners of our single acre, and that none of it is fit for our Master's eye were it not for the softening shadow of the cross.—George Macdonald.

Misjudging Motives.

How often we misjudge people's motives, and that, sometimes, because we see at the moment but a part of what they are about. If we knew the whole of a matter, our opinions would often be greatly changed. Amongst the lots put up at an auction was one, "A pretty pair of crutches." In the crowd was a poor cripple boy, and the crutches were just the thing for him. He was the first to bid for them. An elderly, well-dressed man bid against him. There were cries of "Shame, shame!" in the crowd. The boy bid again, and so did the old gentleman. The boy bid all he had, but the old gentleman outbid him once more, and the poor little lad turned away with tears in his eyes. The crutches were knocked down to the elderly man, who, to the great surprise of all, took them to the poor little cripple, and made him a present of them. The crowd were now as enthusiastic in their praise as they had just been with their abuse, but the old gentleman heard nothing of it; he had disappeared even before the little boy could thank him. To judge by a part is often to misjudge the whole.—The Quiver.

Dr. Duff's Appeal.

When Dr. Duff, the great Scotch missionary, came home after his life-work in India, a crowded meeting was held in Edinburgh to hear him on the claims of India upon the Christian church. For two hours and a half the old man went on, holding the audience by his eloquence. Then he fainted, and was carried out of the hall. Presently he came to, and asked: "Where am I? What was I doing?" In a moment memory returned, and he said: "Take me back; I must finish my speech." "You will kill yourself if you do," said his friends. "I shall die if I don't," exclaimed the old man. They took him back. The whole meeting rose, many in tears. His strength failed and he could not rise, but gathering himself up for one final effort, said: "Fathers of Scotland! have you any more sons for India? I have spent my life there, and my life is gone; but if there are no more young men to go, I will go back myself and lay my bones there, that the people may know that there is one man in Christian Britain ready to die for India."—Northwestern Advocate.

What Science Owes to Missions.

Archdeacon Farrar sets forth forcibly the large debt of science to missions in these words:

"Is it nothing that through their labor in the translation of the Bible, the German philologist in his study may have before him the grammar and vocabulary of two hundred and fifty languages? Who created the science of anthropology? The missionaries. Who rendered possible the deeply important science of comparative religion? The missionaries. Who discovered the great chain of lakes in Central Africa, on which will turn its future destiny? The missionaries. Who have been the chief explorers of Oceanica, America and Asia? The missionaries. Who discovered the famous Nestorian monument in Singar Fu? A missionary. Who discovered the still more famous Moabite stone? A missionary. Who discovered the Hittite inscriptions? A missionary."—Selected.

Wesley's Culture.

The tributes to John Wesley's greatness and learning are more freely given now than when he lived. The Herald and Presbyter thus speaks of his broad culture: "It has lately been brought out anew that John Wesley was a man of broad and refined culture. It was no less a person than Samuel Johnson who once spoke with praise of his literary cultivation. The Churchman truly says: 'It must, indeed, have been something more than the voice of the ranter that made the clever and cold-hearted Chesterfield hang spell-bound on the words of this Christian preacher.' In journeying on his circuit he would read Tasso, Petrarch and Dante, and he was well acquainted with the masters of literature, generally. Let our young divines take a lesson from the great preacher whose fire was not extinguished by his fondness for literature."—Recorder.

Religion Hid in a Trunk.

A little girl had been rummaging in her mother's trunk. There she found a "church letter" which her mother had neglected to present to the church into whose neighborhood she had moved. The little explorer rushed into her mother's presence, shouting, "Oh, mama, I've found your religion in your trunk!"

There is a needle-like point in that story for a great many people. With far too many, the neglected church letter comes to be about the only part of the old church-life remaining. But surely a trunk is a poor, dark, mothy, place for one's religion. Why should anyone keep it there?—New York Observer.

Your Mission.

Are you asking, "What is my mission in life?" We know of no better reply than Solomon gives, "Do what thy hand findeth to do." Take up the work that is in your way, just as it arises, and where it presses. You are not to run after some great or special thing, but to employ each moment in the sphere and relation where God has placed you. Providence gives you enough to do, if you will only see it, and do it as he wants it done. In the home, in society and in the church each day brings its duties. Things are not marked out by rule and square, but the intelligent perception, ready mind and willing heart quickly adjust duty to responsibility and responsibility to duty, so that in loving fidelity to God and others one falls into right relations and activity, and, as the result of daily doing, be it in great or in small things, a sweet, blessed and useful life service is fully laid at the Master's feet, and the plaudit, "Well done, good and faithful servant," is finally received. — Presbyterian Observer.

A Cheap Tonic.

A woman who had gone through much sorrow said to a friend once: "Whenever I feel especially sad, or lonely, I just go and do something I particularly dislike to do—some duty I shrink from. The effort to do it I find is the best tonic the nerves can have." The speaker's heart, we knew, was broken to all earthly pleasure, but she still keeps up a cheerful front to the world, and goes on trying to do her earthly task right and left, always longing, as she says, for the gates to open, that she may join her beloved. But her recipe for nerves is one that many might use with advantage. Instead of indulging in vain regrets or selfish sorrow, go and help others. Do something you find difficult and unattractive. It will brace you up. Work is God's tonic. We need consult no doctor; only bend in prayer to our ever-present and loving Father to guide us right. His grace will help us; his arm steady us along the thorny road. His voice says, "Be strong, be faithful, and I shall lead you home."—The Quiver.

Destroying Faith.

No one has any right to be hopeless, not while there is a God of all hope. There is a way of speaking of God that influences us, and we need to remember that our words influence us. We ought to cultivate faith in God, instead of cultivating doubt. I never forgot what a professor of philosophy said when his last sickness came. He said there was nothing he would not give if he could only have back his childhood faith. But he had studied to demolish his faith in a loving God that Christ taught us to call "Our Father," and he could not get back his faith. There is nothing that calls for such diligence as cultivation of faith in God. If we do cultivate it, we shall not become hopeless; we shall cling to "this one fixed stake;" as Whittier said, "We know that God is good."—Home Journal.

It Cost a Soul.

"How much is that estate worth?" said one friend to another as they passed a beautiful mansion and extensive and highly cultivated grounds.

"I do not know how much it is worth," was the reply, "but I know what it cost its owner."

"How much?"

"His soul," was the startling reply; and then he proceeded to narrate how exclusively the owner had lived for one object—to build himself a home on earth, utterly careless of the home on high; and had died impenitent and suddenly.

Plowing Close to the Corn.

I find, too, that the Methodists are strong in another direction: They count just like the Baptists, and all is grist that comes to their mill. What we all need is a man to go in among us and count the Methodists and Baptists who are good for nothing. He may not be a popular man, but he'll have a large work to perform. I think it is time for both denominations to close their counting-houses.—Baptist Courier.

A young lady, asked by her friend to explain what is meant by devotional reading of the Bible, made answer as follows: "Yesterday morning I received a letter from one to whom I have given my heart and devoted my life. I freely confess to you that I have read that letter five times, not because I did not understand it at the first reading, nor because I expected to commend myself to the author by frequent reading of his epistle. It was not with me a question of duty, but simply one of pleasure. I read it because I am devoted to the one who wrote it. To read the Bible with the same motive is to read it devotionally, and to one who reads it in that spirit it is, indeed, a love letter."—The United Presbyterian.

The Cuisine.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

To make apple marmalade, peel quarter and core pleasant tart apples, cook in water until tender, then squeeze through a colander. Measure and allow half as much sugar as pulp, and cook together until thick; then pour into bowls and tumblers.—Farm Journal.

FRENCH SAUCE.—One and one-half cups of powdered sugar, whites of two eggs, the juice of two lemons, and the grated rind of one. Beat the whites to a stiff froth and add the sugar gradually, then lemon-juice and grated rind.—Farm Journal.

CITRON CAKE.—Four eggs, the whites and yelks beaten separately; 3 cups sugar, 1 cup butter, ½ cup of sweet milk, 3 cups of flour, 2½ teaspoonfuls of baking powder, ½ pound of citron, chopped and rolled in flour. Bake in long narrow pans.—Peerless Cook Book.

POTATO SALAD.—Mix together two cups mashed potatoes strained through a colander or vegetable strainer, three-fourths of a cup of white cabbage chopped fine, two tablespoonfuls minced cucumber pickle, yelks of two hard-boiled eggs pounded fine. Serve with any good salad dressing.—Exchange.

PICKLED CABBAGE.—This is usually prepared early in the fall and can be kept until late in the spring. Have a granite kettle partially filled with spiced and sweetened vinegar. When boiling, pour in some finely-chopped cabbage. Let it just scald; remove the cabbage to a jar, using a colander dipper so as to leave the vinegar in the kettle. Add more cabbage, repeating the operation until all is scalded, cover with hot vinegar, and place a plate over it and set in a cool place.—Exchange.

SNOW FLOAT.—One-third of a two-ounce package of gelatine, two lemons, half a pint of granulated sugar, and the whites of five eggs. Put the gelatine and the rind and juice of the lemons in a bowl, pour over them a gill of cold water, and in an hour add three gills of boiling water; stir until dissolved. Strain, add the sugar and the whites of the eggs, beaten to a stiff froth, and beat the mixture with a fork or the egg-beater until it begins to thicken; then set it on ice or in a cool place. With the yelks mix five tablespoonfuls of sugar and three pints of milk, put in a double boiler, and boil till thick; flavor to taste. Place on the float just before using. It is nicer when made the day before it is used.—Exchange.

Truck Farming.

CRYSTAL SPRINGS DOTS.

We once read this little story: Two Presbyterian ministers, father and son, were riding in the same vehicle, going to the same appointment. The horse was old and could not stand only about a certain jog. The father, having driven him often, knew what he could stand. The appointment was some distance off. The movement was so slow that the son became impatient, and said to his father, with a good deal of earnestness, "Will we get there in time?" The father replied, "Son, we will get there, if we do not get in a hurry." If the world would act more on this principle, there is a many a man who would get there. There is, perhaps, no lesson of more importance to the trucker than this, especially in our locality. It is a fact that the fifth of April is about the limit to our frost line. It is, at least, a fact that there is no record of any serious damage ever having befallen us after the sixth of April, while there have been many before that period; hence, if our people would so arrange their crops, such as they can—tomatoes, beans, melons, etc.—so as to go over that time, many would be the losses evaded.

What is the contrary, especially the present year! On the twenty-sixth the thermometer registered at twenty-seven degrees, on the twenty-seventh, twenty-four degrees. Some of our truckers are safe so far as the crops before mentioned. Such as peaches and strawberries they could make no provision against the weather. If they—the losers—had practiced not to have gotten in a hurry, they also would have gone through safe.

The beautiful weather in March was so flattering that many planted their beans too early; they were up, hence have been killed—at least twenty-five per cent. of all the bean crop have been killed, which, perhaps, was as heavy as we have ever planted, and we have shipped as many as five carloads a day. Again, many had a great portion of their tomato crop in the field; many of the plants have been killed. Many have covered them with the soil, and, perhaps, will save a good portion. This, however, is a very risky make-shift, for had the soil been very wet, it could not have safely been done. The risk is too great. The hurry involves too great a liability to loss.

It is our opinion now we will have no peaches, no plums, and at least half of what was a very flattering prospect for strawberries are now killed. All the losses to our community will not fall short of seventy-five thousand dollars.

The lesson further observed—that a few persons, in order to get ahead, will risk, this has a demoralizing effect. True conservatism is the policy that should govern every man in every line of life, for while a few may win by risk, the multitude will be made to suffer. The old adage, "Haste makes waste," stands unchanged.

Give the Fowls Free Range.

From now on the poultry should be permitted to go and come as they please. A hen thus at liberty keeps herself in good condition by being continually at work. If she is allowed too much grain she will become lazy, refrain from foraging, fattens, and soon ceases to lay. This is a matter that deserves attention. Keep the hens at work. When they seek insects, and travel over a wide area of ground in order to secure a variety, they are not only lessening expenses, but also keeping themselves in the best order for laying. It is due more to the exercise than to the food which the hens receive, to which may be ascribed the greatest value of a range. When hens are in confinement they are liable to be overfed, and it requires extra care on the part of those who manage, to avoid overfeeding. We have found that when there is ample forage for hens they need no food at all in the Summer, as they will easily find all the worms, seeds and grass required. A good range in Summer will provide eggs with little or no cost to the farmer.—Nebraska Farmer.

More Potash Needed.

1. Fodder crops, pasture grasses, corn stover and hay all remove large amounts of potash from the soil, and these crops occupy a large proportion of our improved lands.

2. The urine of our domestic animals contains about four-fifths of the total potash of their excrements.

3. When the urine is allowed to waste the manure is poor in potash.

4. When manures are exposed to rains, much of the potash, being soluble, is washed away.

5. Nearly all the special fertilizers are especially rich in phosphoric acid, and do not contain enough potash.

6. Superphosphates were the first fertilizers to come into general use among our farmers.

7. When the farmer buys a fertilizer, he still, nine times out of ten, calls for a phosphate.

8. As a result of the above conditions, our soils seem to be quite generally in want.

Hygiene.

The Foot-Bath.

Aside from the daily bath, the feet should be washed at least once a day. This is a matter of a few minutes, and insures neatness, rest, and comfort. If the tired shop girl or saleswoman, who has been standing for ten hours, would dip her feet into a basin of cold water, instead of curling her bangs, or doing up her back hair, she would have a lighter step and feel more like walking home than usual.

Walking heats the feet, standing causes them to swell, and both are tiresome when prolonged. There are various kinds of foot-baths, and authorities differ as to their value. Hot water enlarges the feet by drawing the blood to them; when used, they should be rubbed and exercised before attempting to put on a tight boot. Mustard and hot water in a foot-bath will sidetrack a fever if taken in time, cure a nervous headache, and induce sleep.

A warm bath with an ounce of sea salt in it is about as restful as a nap. Paddle in it until it cools, dry with a rough towel, put on fresh stockings, have a change of shoes, and the woman who was "ready to drop" will have a very good understanding in ten minutes. The quickest relief from fatigue is to plunge the foot in ice-cold water and keep it immersed until there is a sensation of warmth.

Hygiene of the Bed.

If a hair mattress yields all the comfort that it is capable of, it is quite necessary that the hair should come out of it and be picked over and aired every two or three years at least, especially if it has been in constant use. The expense is quite an item in a household where there are many beds in use. Instead of sending the work to high-priced furniture houses, one may often find an honest first-class workman who will do the work as well at far less price at home. As a matter of cleanliness, too, the mattresses need to be made over frequently though not, perhaps, as often as they are by the European peasant women, who always make the work a part of their yearly house cleaning.

The hygiene of the bed is too little attended to, and is very important. Frequent exposure to air and sun are also useful, as by this means the foul excretions from the body are driven off. When one remembers that several pounds of water loaded with the waste matter of the system are poured out by the skin daily, and that part of this is taken up by the bed, the importance of removing it becomes apparent.

It is for this reason we air the bed. The foul smell in bed-rooms in the morning comes from the exhalations of the body.

The Evils of Alcohol.

The intemperate use of alcohol gives one a terrible realization of what is meant by visiting the sins of the fathers upon the children. Medical scientists tell us that inebriate parents may beget children who may fall a prey to the same morbid impulse, but their progeny are often feeble, idiotic, epileptic, or insane. It is the custom of physicians in all cases of insanity, epilepsy, idiocy, and many other disorders, to inquire into the record of intemperance in the family history. Alcohol affects the system in such a variety of ways, perverts the functions of so many organs, invades and corrodes so many tissues, that the physician is often puzzled as to what part of the organism needs treatment first. The poison produces chronic inflammation of the stomach; it gradually inflames the liver, and, in fact, strangles it like an iron hand; it injures the heart; it affects the kidneys; it does harm to the lungs; it produces neurasthenia, delirium tremens, insanity, and epilepsy, by its influence upon the nervous system; it attacks the spinal cord and causes pseudo ataxia—Churchman.

The old-fashioned temperance pledge—spread it on every platform, on every pulpit stairs and on every communion table. There are thousands of persons who, having made a promise, will keep it till the day of judgment.—T. De Witt Talmage, D. D.

Thousands of Dollars

Mr. S. G. Derry.

I spent trying to find cure for Salt Rheum which I had 13 years. Physicians said they never saw so severe a case. My legs, back and arms were covered by the humor. I was unable to lie down, could not walk without crutches, and had to have my arms, back and legs bandaged twice a day. I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon could see a change. The flesh became healthy, the sores soon healed, the scales fell off, I was able to give up bandages and crutches, and a happy man I was. I took in the history of book-making, and we know that everyone who receives this offer will at once realize that this is the Opportunity of a Lifetime to get a good Atlas of the World Free. The People's Atlas contains OVER 200 LARGE MAPS AND ILLUSTRATIONS.

IT SHOULD BE IN EVERY HOME, STORE, OFFICE AND SCHOOL-ROOM

It Gives the Population Of Each State and Territory; Of All Counties of the United States; Of American Cities with over 5,000 Inhabitants By the Last U. S. Census.

HANDSOME MAPS.

The handsome Maps of all the States and Territories in the Union are large, full page, with a number of double-page maps to represent the most important states of our country. All countries on the Face of the Earth are shown. Rivers and Lakes are Accurately Located. All the Large Cities of the World, the Important Towns and Most of the Villages of the United States are given on the Maps. It gives a Classified List of All Nations, with forms of Government, Geographical Location, Size and Population.

Its Special Features Relating to Each State Are:

Population for the Past 6 years. A Condensed History. Number of Miles of Railroad. Peculiarities of Soil and Climate, together with the Chief Productions, Principal Industries and Wealth, Educational and Religious Interests, Interest Laws and Statutes of Limitations.

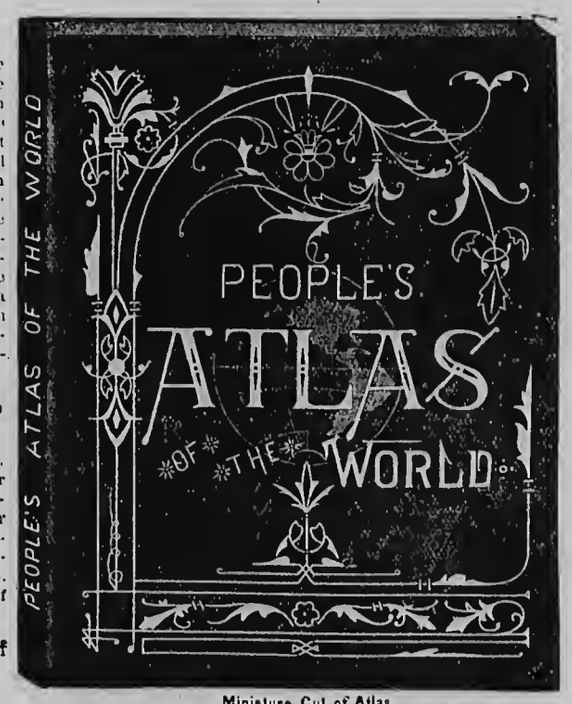
The People's Atlas of the World

Contains a vast amount of historical, physical, educational, political and statistical matters so comprehensively arranged that any part of it may be found with a moment's search. This department comprises a

General Description of the World,

Giving its physical features—form, density, temperature, motion, the seasons, climatic conditions, winds and currents; distribution of land and water; races of people and their religions; a historical chapter on polar explorations; also the most complete list of nations ever published, giving their geographical location, area, population and forms of government.

THE PEOPLE'S ATLAS is superior to any school geography published. Every school boy and girl and every college student should have one. Its larger, better and more numerous maps, together with its trifling cost, render it an invaluable aid in the study of geography. Parents should not fail to provide their children with it, and thus place in their hands a potent and comprehensive educational aid, supplementing and assisting the work of the school.



Miniature Cut of Atlas. Size, Open, 14 by 22 Inches; Closed, 14 by 11 Inches.

Magnificent Illustrations

Embellish nearly every page of the reading matter, and faithfully depict scenes in almost every part of the world. They are intensely interesting, and constitute an art collection which will be viewed with pleasure and admiration for years to come. Among the illustrations are the following:

The Masonic Temple at Chicago. Tallest building in the world.
The Auditorium Building at Chicago. One of the largest buildings in the world.
The Woman's Temple. The handsomest building in Chicago.
Bartholdi's Statue of Liberty.

AN UP-TO-DATE ATLAS FOR UP-TO-DATE PEOPLE.

Every person who reads the current periodical literature of the day needs a concise, accurate and comprehensive Atlas of the World, for the purpose of geographically locating the stirring events with which the world teems, and of which we learn, almost coexistent with their occurrence, through the electric currents that now girdle the globe. We live in an age of intelligence—an age of multiplied means for acquiring knowledge—an age that condemns ignorance because of these numerous sources of information so freely and widely diffused. If you wish to keep abreast of the times, by accurately locating in your mind every violent upheaval of the earth, the march of contending armies where war exists, the progress of scientific explorers in unknown lands, or the happenings and accidents constantly agitating every part of the world, you should have at hand a copy of the "People's Atlas of the World." Never before has so valuable an Atlas been offered at so low a price.

Thousands in Value for Almost Nothing.

Impossible, do you say? Consider for a moment the great amount of labor and money expended in the preparation of this Great Atlas. It required years to gather the material. Thousands of dollars were expended for the engraving of maps, illustrations, for editorial labor, for type-setting and electrotype plates, etc., before a single Atlas was printed. The most improved rotary presses are used in printing it; one press alone cost $2,000. We bought the paper by the car-load, and for awhile took the entire output of a great paper-mill. If we had only printed a few thousand of these Atlases, they would cost $5.00 to $10.00 apiece, but once the maps are engraved, the illustrations made, the type set and the plates made and put on the presses the only other costs is for labor, paper, inks, power, binding, wrapping and postage, and so by printing this Atlas by the hundreds of thousands at one time, we are enabled to offer the most wonderful and most valuable premium ever given with a year's subscription. This is largely due to the very recent improvements in printing and paper-making machinery.

HOW TO GET THE PEOPLE'S ATLAS.

If you are not a subscriber, send us $2 for the ADVOCATE and 35 cents additional for the book. If you are a subscriber, and are in arrears, send us the money for your subscription up to April, '95, at the rate of $2 a year, or $1 for six months, and send 35 cents additional. If your subscription is already paid to April, '95, you have only to send 35 cents. When you get the book, if you are not satisfied with your investment, all you have to do is to send it to us by mail, and we will refund the money paid for it. If you want the benefit of this offer, don't lose any time.

Twenty-six insertions, $13 per inch.
On less space than a half-inch twenty per cent. additional will be charged.

The Advocate for Twenty-Five Cents.

We will send the ADVOCATE from now until the first of July for twenty-five cents. This period embraces the session of the General Conference. The ADVOCATE will contain reports of the proceedings of the General Conference. All Methodist people ought to keep posted in regard to the action of the General Conference. Let all our subscribers make this offer known and constitute themselves agents for the paper. Let it be remembered that the cash must accompany each name. We will do no book-keeping for anybody on this proposition. This offer is made only to new subscribers.

Service of Song

It is said that there are many Methodist Sunday-schools in which the Methodist Hymn Book is never used. In some of these the Sunday-school song books issued by our own Publishing House are used, but in others no Methodist hymn collection can be found. This is all wrong. It will not do to say that it makes no difference what our children sing. Some one has said, "Let me make the songs of the nation, and I care not who makes its laws." There is wisdom in the remark. The songs our children sing will have much to do with the formation of their religious character. Teach them from infancy up to sing the grand old hymns of Methodism, and they are likely to become stalwart Christians. Let them sing nothing but the namby-pamby stuff that is found in many modern song books, and a very different result will follow. In saying this we do not mean that we should reject any song simply because it is new. The spirit of poesy has not taken its final departure from the earth. There are many modern hymns of very great merit. It is not of these that we speak. We are simply condemning the policy of training our children in the Sunday-school to sing anything and everything except our own glorious gospel hymns. One reason why there is such poor singing in many of our churches is that our congregations have been taught in the Sunday-school to sing only a class of hymns that are never used in the regular church services. Let us call a halt just here and return to the old paths.

A Standard Dictionary of the English Language.

A STANDARD DICTIONARY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE. Vol. I. Funk & Wagnalls Company, New York. 1893.

The Standard Dictionary, the first volume of which has just been issued from the press, is a marvel of accuracy, comprehensiveness and simplicity. When the Century Dictionary first appeared, we supposed that the acme of perfection had been reached in this line of enterprise; but it is our opinion that the dictionary before us is not excelled by any other work of the kind in existence. The publishers have succeeded, we think, in their attempt to make a "people's dictionary." As language progresses the lexicographer's task becomes more and more difficult. Some idea of the magnitude of the undertaking may be obtained from the following facts: Before a single complete volume shall have been printed the work will have cost upwards of $1,000,000. For four years past 247 office editors and specialists and 500 readers for quotations have been engaged in compiling this dictionary.

The Standard, because of its many excellencies, is bound to win its way into public favor. In the first place, it has the largest vocabulary of any dictionary ever published. It will contain nearly 300,000 words. The Century has 225,000; Webster's International, 125,000. So well has space been economized, however, that the single-volume edition is of convenient size. The two-volume edition is especially handy. A new departure is the placing of the most common meaning first, the etymology being placed after the definition. While this is not the "historical order," business men and ordinary readers will appreciate the change. Instead of the old "stock" quotations, new ones have been substituted and located, the edition, volume, and page of the author quoted from being given. For the first time in the history of dictionary making an attempt has been made at spelling reform. Throughout the work the simpler forms of difficult words are given the preference. The older or more usual forms are also given. In Anglicised words "e" has been uniformly substituted for "æ" and "œ," as in "esthetics." This simplification of orthography has been applied more especially to chemical terms, as quinin, bromid, sulfur. In taking this advance step the publishers have the approval of the leading philologists of England and America. Another innovation of undoubted value is the systematic treatment of the compounding of words. Heretofore there has been confusion enough in this particular. In giving the pronunciation of words use has been made of the Scientific Alphabet invented by the American Philological Association. Greater exactness in pronunciation is secured by means of this simple device. Disputed pronunciations have been referred to a committee of fifty leading philologists and writers of America, England and Australia.

Another distinctive feature is the system of grouping applied to the names of fruits, flowers, coins, gems, etc., by which a vast amount of information is put in compact, but easily accessible form. For instance, under "coin," we find a table of the principal current and obsolete coins of the world, with their values. Under "apple" are given the names, qualities and habitat of 368 varieties. The pictorial illustrations, numbering nearly 5,000, add greatly to the value of the book. Several full-page plates in colors are given. These are all exquisite works of art. One of these plates gives an exact representation of twenty-two specimens of the most beautiful varieties of birds. To insure accuracy of definition the publishers employed for each set of words a specialist or an authority in the line of work to which the terms belong. Antonyms, as well as synonyms, have place in this dictionary. Such is its comprehensiveness that it is encyclopedic in character. The lack of time and space forbid the mention of other distinctive features of this splendid product of scholarship and the printer's art. The publishers announce that the second volume will be ready June 1. The two-volume edition in half Russia will cost $15.00; in full Russia, $17.00. The price of the single-volume edition in half Russia is $12.00; in full Russia, $14 00.

The Religious Newspaper.

The increase and dissemination of knowledge are the idea and wonder of the age. Information from the ends of the earth is gathered, collated, illustrated, explained and spread broadcast in the newspaper. There is no family so poor or so obscure that it may not have the benefit of the wealth of intelligence of which the newspaper is the alert purveyor. For a trifling sum any one may enjoy a full course of lectures, a series of sermons, an hour with the poets, an evening with several capital story-tellers; may hear what the best authors of the age have to say in books; what doctors learned in theology, the law, political economy, science, art, music and other departments of human knowledge, have to impart; what the sage and philosopher has evolved and added to the store of human wisdom; what the skilful literary artist can create to delight the imagination and cultivate the taste; what tidings the missionary in remote lands has to relate; what experts in finance, insurance and all lines of business can tell of interest and importance; what men of experience can suggest to help the farmer, the dairyman, the housewife and all who have rural occupations; what events and changes are taking place among the governments and peoples of the world as seen, described and explained by trained observers.

In short, those who have few books may, in the religious newspaper, receive regularly a whole library of choice literature of the freshest character, ranging over the world and embracing the most important topics. There will be something appropriate, improving and entertaining for every member of the family, with nothing contrary to morals, injurious to the Christian faith, or opposed to what is pure and helpful and wholesome.

The faculty of a university sit as teachers around every fireside where such a newspaper is read. Parents who want to cultivate in their families a thirst for knowledge, a taste for pure literature, a preference for that which elevates, ennobles, improves, a deeper reverence for the Christian faith, a broader and more serious view of the duty of man to man and man to God, may introduce such an influence into their homes by an outlay of less than six cents a week.

These are hard times. It must be so, for everybody says so. Naturally prudent people practice economy. That is praiseworthy, provided it is done wisely. The mere luxuries should be the first to be cut off; but be careful that you do not class necessaries among luxuries. The education of your children you can not afford to abridge; the support of your church and its various lines of work you must not lessen; and your religious newspaper, the cheapest and one of the most useful and valuable things you get, it would be sheer folly to sacrifice. It is worth to you many times the sum you pay for it It will reimburse you in manifold forms, again and again; in recreation, instruction, suggestion, encouragement, improvement. It is a silent, but constant and powerful influence for good. You need the food it provides for mind and soul as much as you need meat and bread and drink for your physical welfare. —The Independent.

Great Power.

Silence is an evidence of power. All great forces work silently. It is only the energy of little things which expends itself in noise and violence. The power which carries millions of worlds through millions of miles of space is as noiseless as the drifting of a bit of thistledown; whereas the engine which crushes a fragment of rock in a corner of the universe sends its vibrations in sound-waves through inestimable expanse of ether.

So it is with human lives. It is weakness and smallness that make most of the clamor in the world. True power runs deeply and silently. The great soul always has a tendency to silence and repression. Its strength does not lie on the surface, but deep down, so that its action is not readily seen or heard. But it accomplishes the great things of life.

True character—the character that influences the world—is for the most part silent. It does not work by exhortation, persuasion or any form of words whatsoever, but by faithful living, noble action, sweet and quiet influence. These are the silent, but potent forces which rule the moral universe. Men may preach and exhort, entreat and command, but after all it is silent character which influences and moves the world. One true, consistent, noble, God-like man in a community is like a central sun around which a little universe of humanity revolves. What that man does is more than what all others say; how he lives is better and more potential gospel than can be preached by any lips. The power of genuine character is both magnetic and dynamic. It attaches and compels. But all its action goes on in silence. Its gospel is not proclaimed, but lived. The deed comes before the word, and needs no word to utter it. Such lives, expressing themselves in character, are God's best evangels. They are the silent, but prevailing forces which hasten on the coming of Christ's kingdom. —Zion's Herald.

What We Owe Others.

We owe other people service. Service goes with loving. We can not love truly and not serve. Love without serving is but an empty sentiment, a poor mockery. God so loved the world that he gave. Love always gives.

This matter of serving has multitudinous forms. Sometimes it is poverty that stands at our gate and money help is wanted. A thousand times more frequently, however, it is not money, but something else more precious that we must give. It may be loving sympathy. Sorrow is before us. Another's heart is breaking. Money would be of no use; it would be only a bitter mockery to offer it. But we can hold to the neighbor's lips a cup of the wine of love, filled out of our own heart, which will give new strength to the sufferer. Or it is the anguish of a life struggle, a human Gethsemane, beside which we are called to watch. We can give no actual aid—the soul must fight its battles alone; but we can be as the angel that ministered to our Lord's Gethsemane, imparting strength, and helping the weary struggler to win the victory.

The world is very full of sorrow, and we can not live among our fellow-men and be true without sharing in their loads. If we are happy, we must hold the lamp of our happiness so that its beams will fall upon the shadowed heart. If we have no burden, it is our duty to put our shoulders under the load of others. Selfishness must die, or else our own heart's life must be frozen within us. We soon learn that we can not live for ourselves and be Christians; that the blessings that are given to us are really for other people, and that we are only God's ministers to carry them in Christ's name to those for whom they were intended.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

The Growing Demand for Sunday Rest.

A hopeful sign of the times is the growing desire and movement in our large cities in behalf of a rest-day for workers everywhere. In Chicago the leaders of trades unions are outspoken and emphatic in their action in this regard. Men who were once wont to ignore and despise the Sabbath, and all laws for its observance, have come to the rational conclusion at last that the working world, after all, does need Sunday. Bearing upon this aspect of the case the Churchman quotes the testimony of Buckland, the great naturalist of England, as follows:

I am now working from 8 A. M. to 6 P. M., and then a bit in the evening—fourteen hours a day; but, thank God, it does not hurt me. I should, however, collapse if it were not for Sunday. The machinery has time to get cool, the mill-wheel ceases to patter the water, the mill-head is ponded up, and the surperfluous water let off by an easy, quiet current, which leads to things above.

Rev. Dr. Cuyler, in a late article on the Sunday newspaper, says on this question:

The last time I visited Gladstone at his house he told me the secret of his long life. He said to me that he got sound sleep every night and he added, "Amid all the pressure of public cares I thank God for the Sabbath, with its rest for the body and the soul."—Central Advocate.

Ye Would Not.

A letter from Bro. Thornton lies open before me, dated March 29, 1894. From it I learn that only $584 have been received since Conference. This is a little less than half enough to pay the first quarter's allowance.

A letter from Bro. X. says Bro. —— is in very distressed circumstances, and the Conference allowance is not enough. He ought to have more. I turn to Bro. Thornton's letter and I find not a cent reported yet by Bro. X. Here is a bundle of reports from the strongest church in our Conference. The necessity of the claimants is stressed, but not one cent is forwarded.

Bro. Y. writes that Bro. —— is more feeble than ever, and the quiet undertone of the report is a mild rebuke to the Board for not doing a better part by this old soldier of the cross. Bro. Y., however, has not yet forwarded his collection.

Brethren, we must have $600 at once, or default in our payment of these claims. Please turn to Matthew, and read our Savior's own words.

These men and women who look to us for food and clothing and shelter; these widows whose husbands fell at the post of duty; these orphans whose sole support is from their father's church; these old veterans whose hearts still yearn to mingle in the fray, but whom age and weakness and affliction have compelled to cease awhile their loved employ, how shall we meet them in the judgment?

Be up and doing. Send all or part of your Conference Fund, at once, to W. M. Thornton, Lake, Miss. Brother, what answer could we give in that day if we neglect these men and women and children? "Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, my children, ye did it not to me."

JOHN W. CHAMBERS,
Chair'n Joint Board.

A friend writes, asking us to correct a statement made by one of our correspondents in a recent issue of the ADVOCATE, to the effect that a liquor dealer can not be a Mason in the State of Mississippi. Our friend states that there are instances of a dealer's occupying high position in a masonic lodge in Mississippi. Not being a Mason, we are not thoroughly posted on this subject; but we remember that according to statements made in the papers at the time the Grand Lodge of Mississippi, a few years ago, took some action which put a stigma upon the liquor traffic. Precisely what the action was, doubtless, some one will soon inform us.

When Andrew Jackson saw the second number of the New York Advocate he said: "The Methodists are preparing to live forever; they have started a paper."—St. Louis Advocate.

NOTES

A colored preacher, Rev. Benjamin Gaston, with forty negroes from South Carolina, has sailed for Africa.

Rev. J. T. Nicholson preached the annual sermon at the Meridian District Woman's Missionary Convention recently held at Enterprise.

The Carondelet congregation on Sunday night had the privilege of hearing a strong, eloquent discourse by Dr. Schauffe, of Mobile.

Dr. W. C. Bass, for fifteen years president of Wesleyan Female College, Ga., has been forced to resign on account of ill health.—Exchange.

Rev. W. W. Edge, a local preacher, has been employed by Rev. J. B. Stone, P. E., to take charge of Myrtle circuit, made vacant by the death of Rev. O. N. Koon.

Dr. J. W. Lee, pastor of St. John's Church, St. Louis, has been given a furlough for three months. He will spend as much of the time as possible in the Holy Land.

Dr. John T. Sawyer delivered the address before the literary societies of Centenary College at the intermediate exhibition, March 30. Subject: "The Opportunities of Life."

The General Conference will be asked to divide the Indian Mission Conference, making an Oklahoma Conference, to embrace the Oklahoma Territory and the Comanche country.

Macon, Ga., is having a very remarkable revival. Services are going on in almost all the churches of all the denominations in the city; and this united effort gives promise of magnificent results.

Mrs. Bishop Warren applied for honorary membership in six Methodist Churches in Denver, Col., in order that she might share with each the financial burden resulting from the terrible industrial depression in that city.

The funeral services of Senator Colquitt took place in Mulberry Church, Macon, Ga. Dr. Monk, the pastor, conducted the service. Addresses were delivered by Dr. Candler, president of Emory College, and Dr. H. C. Morrison, our Missionary Secretary.

Dr. J. J. Lafferty, editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate, will lecture in New Orleans on the ninth, tenth and eleventh, for the benefit of the Confederate Veterans' Association. We regret exceedingly that we shall be unable to hear him; but engagements elsewhere require our attention just at that time.

Last Sabbath we occupied the pulpit of Dr. Palmer's Church. It hardly needs to be said that we had a large audience. The audience in size and make-up reminded us of a Mulberry congregation. The music was excellent. This is the thirty-seventh year of Dr. Palmer's pastorate, and yet he holds his flock with as firm a grasp as in the days of his young manhood. What a testimony to his mental and moral worth!

Last year the general observance of Veterans' Day in the Mississippi Conference enabled the Joint Board to meet promptly their quarterly payments. We judge from the chairman's letter in this issue that the brethren have not been altogether forgetful of this claim. We have no more worthy cause, and we trust that every preacher who has not yet reported will do so at once, no matter how small the amount he forwards.

Col. W. R. Stuart, of Ocean Springs, Miss., was buried last Friday, the funeral services being conducted by his life-long friend, Bishop J. C. Keener. From a private letter from the Bishop we make the following extract: "There was a large concourse of people to pay their tribute to one of the best citizens of the State—a man of hope and sunshine; whose courtly manners and open hospitality were known by all who visited the seashore. He was a joyful and pronounced Methodist, and for many years a class leader and steward in Carondelet Street Church." A memoir from the Bishop's pen will appear in due time.

A special service was held at Carrollton, last Sabbath afternoon. The house was tastefully decorated. There was some specially fine music. Dr. Schauffe, of Mobile, preached from the text, "Though he was rich, yet for our sakes he became poor," etc. The discourse was just such a one as was to be expected from the distinguished Mobile divine. After the sermon a collection was taken by Dr. J. T. Sawyer to pay off an indebtedness of $1,000 on the house. The sum of $713 was raised. The following pastors of the city took part in the programme: Bros. LaPrade, Faunt Le-Roy, Wynn and F. N. Parker, besides the pastor, Rev. J. M. Henry.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. L. M. Broyles, P. C., Rosedale, Miss., March 12, 1894: "Yesterday was a great occasion for this community. It was a reunion day for the religious people of the town. The largest congregation of several years assembled in the church. The Rev. J. A. Randolph entertained the audience for nearly an hour. Our first quarterly meeting was held at three o'clock in the afternoon. All the interests of our church are well advanced for this season of the year. The outlook for the future is very bright. We anticipate a great revival in June, and already the work has commenced—a great many at the altar for prayer last night. Indifference as to religious matters is giving way before the strong pressure of gospel truth throughout the entire Delta. Towns and country districts are literally being converted to God. The greatest religious movement of Mississippi is yet to be conducted in the Delta. Prohibition is fast gaining ground. Nearly every county on the great river is now dry. The last saloon of Bolivar county dies on March 9, under the hand of local option. Continue to pray for us, and send us your good paper, and in a few years the Delta, under the refining influence of the gospel, will be the choicest place in the South."

Rev. J. C. Ellis, P. C., Westville, Miss., March 13, 1894: "To say we were glad to be domiciled at last in the very nice parsonage at this place only faintly expresses our gratitude. Besides being so thankful to God for permitting us to occupy the parsonage yesterday, on last night our hearts ran over with joy and thankfulness, after a short notice by one of Westville's ladies, and a member of our church, Miss Mary Giles, containing about the following, 'You will have some company to-night.' Sure enough raps began, the scribe opening the door, and inviting the ladies and gentlemen in; then bundle after bundle, until it required assistance to hold the different bundles, containing different articles. By the time they were deposited in the dining-room, others came likewise, and continued to come from all parts of town, until the table would barely hold the various nice things too numerous to mention. After remaining with us a short time, some of the elderly ladies began to disperse, they being invited to remain for prayer, and giving thanks. Assisted by the young ladies and men, we sang 'Sweet By-and-By.' The occasion was greatly benefited by the Rev. Mr. Wilkinson, the pastor of the Presbyterian Church here, and professor of Westville High School. To say the least, we have been cordially received, and from present indications we will not be anxious to change; but, on the contrary, rather desire to remain. On our arrival we were pleasantly met by Sister Webster and the editor of the Westville News. Our first Quarterly Conference was also a very pleasant occasion; the Rev. J. McDonald, as usual, in the chair."

Rev. Geo. H. Lipscomb, P. C., Carrollton, Miss., March 19, 1894: "You have received a short notice of the precious season of refreshing that has come from the presence of the Lord upon us here in Carrollton. I had read in the Bible and in the history of our glorious Methodism of how men, under the preached gospel, were cut to the heart and most powerfully convicted of sin, and how in agony and despair they had cried 'Men and brethren, what shall we do?' Thank God, my eyes have seen and my ears have heard sights and sounds that have made old Carrollton a new town. Young men have stood up and cried for help as they realized their lost and ruined condition. Women have cried as the arrows of conviction have come home to their hearts and convinces. God has been walking the streets of Carrollton, and men and women have trembled at his presence. Sorry he to God for deep and powerful conviction for sin. Dr. Cuyler has faithfully said, 'Deep convictions of sin generally produce deep converts; shallow convictions produce shallow Christians.' While we have rejoiced in the powerful convictions the cup has been made to run over with joy at the scores of bright and glorious conversions. The Holy Spirit has brought peace and comfort to burdened, fearful hearts. Could you have been with us to-night at our Young People's Prayer Meeting, and seen the forty-six earnest men and boys as they rendered their sacrifice of praise and thanksgiving, you would have agreed with me that truly the Holy Spirit has taken up his abode in their hearts. After two weeks the work goes grandly, and God is being honored and glorified in all our churches. There is a family altar in every Methodist home in Carrollton. As to Bro. McIntosh, I can never cease to praise God that he sent such an humble, loving child of his to help me in the great work of winning souls to Christ. He is a man of deep, earnest prayer, and, necessarily, a man of power with God and with men. He adores the Holy Spirit, and the Holy Spirit honors him by giving him many precious souls for his hire. Pray for the forty-five young Christians who have united heavenward and Godward, and for me, that I may feed his lambs."

Rev. W. S. Shipman, Greenwood, Miss.: "On Jan. 27, Rev. W. M. McIntosh opened our protracted meeting and closed Feb. 6. The oldest citizens say they never witnessed anything comparable to it in their lives. About two hundred conversions. Truly, a very great meeting. Many of these were in the church, many from the deep places of sin. Many enemies made friends. Stubborn hearts are all broken up, and peace, like a river, flows through the soul. Bro. McIntosh is truly a great revivalist. Seems to have great power with God, and knows how to use every available form. Preachers that do not want to move out in the congregation after sinners had better not attend his meeting. Yes, we have had a great meeting, and Bro. McIntosh was the instrument used to bring it about. Why is it that one man's preaching is blessed so much above that of others? Many who are called of God to preach the gospel have no such revivals as this. They preach with zeal and knowledge too; they have faith in the gospel being the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, and yet but few cry, 'Almost thou persuaded me to be a Christian.' Some things along here that are hard to be understood by me. Has the time come or has it always been. Some are to gather in the lost and starving, give them one good feed, and then turn them over to others whose chief business it is to keep them fat and mind off the wolf?"

Rev. W. T. Woodward, P. C., Port Vincent circuit: "At the last session of the Mississippi Conference I was reappointed to this circuit by Bishop Key. This is my second year here. We are moving along smoothly; regular church services are very well attended. We have two very good Sunday-schools, plus a little friction in one of them. Two others that take the world as it comes. Attend pretty well, only on Sundays set apart for collecting funds to buy literature with. These days are always filled with such requirements as to necessitate a few of them staying at home. Our first Quarterly Conference was held last Saturday and Sunday, March 10 and 11. Circumstances prevented our beloved presiding elder, P. A. Johnston, from being with us, Bro. V. D. Skipper, of Clinton, La., came in his place. We are truly indebted to him for three soul-stirring sermons preached while here, viz.: The Mission of Christ, Christian Steadfastness, and the Choice of Moses. The Board of Stewards have made ample provisions for their pastor this year. Collections ordered by the Conference are all in good subscription. I see that Livingston parish is not the only place visited by disagreeable weather. However, Spring is upon us arrayed in all her beauty. Amid all our reasons for rejoicing, Mr. Editor, the weekly visit of the ADVOCATE deserves mention just at this point. I want to say that my appreciation of the paper grows with each issue. You may expect renewals from my work soon. May the great Head of all wisdom so guide the ADVOCATE as to make it a hallowed benediction to every home it visits. Pray for us."

The Motion Seconded.

Our gifted and highly esteemed correspondent, "S," hits the nail on the head in what she says about the issuance of license by the United States government to citizens of prohibition States. That is an iniquity that ought to be ended at once. Moreover, we believe the temperance sentiment of the country is strong enough to end it very soon, if a proper effort were made. If the temperance organizations of every description will bury their differences out of sight for a while and bring all their influence to bear on Congress, the thing will be done. And why should there not be concert of action at this point? We know no prohibitionist of any description who favors the present regime.

Our Pianos and Organs.

The musical instruments which we are offering as premiums are manufactured by the Williams Piano and Organ Co., Centerville, Iowa. This is a large establishment which has branch offices in other cities. The descriptions we give of the instruments are taken from their catalogue. Our subscribers may write to them for catalogues and prices, if they choose. We will give them as good terms as they can get from the manufacturers themselves. Notice that if the requisite number of subscribers can not be procured, the instruments can still be had. Get as many subscribers as you can, and then write us for terms.

Notice.

To the Brethren of Jackson District, Mississippi Conference:

Our Woman's Missionary Society is to hold its District Conference at Edwards, from Friday evening, April 13, through Sunday, the fifteenth instant. We want all the preachers of the district to come, and to have some competent lady delegate also to come from each church; and this, whether you have a society organized or not. This will be a good way to enlist interest in organizing this important branch of the Master's service. We are expecting a delightful time and the omnipotent arm to aid us.

Trains coming west leave Jackson at 9:50 A. M. and 12 M. each day—distance 27 miles. Returning, leaves Edwards at 11 A. M. and 4:37 P. M. Please come Friday and stay till Monday, at the least. A hearty welcome and entertainment await all who come.

J. P. DRAKE, P. E.

Kobe Industrial School.

In 1891, a Japanese Christian teacher lay dying and sent for his friends, Rev. J. W. and Mrs. Lambuth, to come to him. They soon sat by his bedside receiving the last message to them, which was, "When I am gone please help my Christian wife continue her work among Japanese women; do not let her hands fall to her sides; help her." We promised to do what we could. The husband passed into the better life, leaving a good testimony behind him. His lonely wife, Mrs. Oka, continued her school. Sunday-school children from Richmond, Va., sent help in paying her salary. She rented a small house, and her tuition fees helped to meet the rent, and thus she went on.

Various missionary ladies have shared in teaching music and English, and in giving Christian lectures. Native Christian teachers have also done much to further the best interests of this work. The school outgrew the small house. We found it necessary to take a larger one; but renting is very expensive, and we have the consent of Bishop Key and Dr. John to ask for contributions to the erection of a school-house. Several amounts have been handed me when in Mississippi and Florida, other amounts have gone to Nashville, and now we ask Dr. Black to print this list of contributions in order that other friends, adult and not yet grown may see that we have begun to collect for the school-house, and that we need several hundred dollars before there will be enough to build and furnish with. We want, at least, eight hundred dollars more if we can have it.

It is a pleasure to say that several of our pupils have become Christians, and that others are probationers; but without suitable equipments the work will never be as successful as should and could be. Civilization alone never makes Christians, nor proper mothers and daughters; nothing short of experimental Christianity can do that.

Can not each heart, grateful for its own blessed privileges in a Christian land, respond to this call and aid the dear Japanese mothers and daughters learn the way to Jesus? T. B. Holt, treasurer Board of Missions, Nashville, Tenn., will be glad to acknowledge the receipt of such gifts as may be sent him, and I am sure that Dr. Black will also be glad to continue the list until we can say you have done enough.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

OUR LORD'S ASCENSION.

(Acts 1, 1-9; Psalms xxiv, 7-10.)

1. Even after the resurrection, the apostles labored under the mistaken idea that it was the Lord's chief mission to restore the temporal kingdom of Israel. "Wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom of Israel?"

(1) National vanity darkened their vision. They longed for the ancient theocracy.

(2) The carnal mind is far too general even now. "To be carnally minded is death."

2. Jesus took no pains to set the apostles right on this subject just then.

(1) Knew that the subsequent baptism with the Holy Ghost would do this effectually.

(2) As the Ethiopean can not change his skin, so the unconverted can not understand spiritual things. "The natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit."

3. The Master enjoins that his disciples should be witnesses unto him after they had received the spiritual baptism.

(1) Commencing at Jerusalem. What, save heathen, and neglect our own flesh and blood?

(2) After Jerusalem, in Samaria and Judea. Win your neighbors for Christ. Yes, the Greeks are at our door. Save them!

(3) After that, reach out to the uttermost parts of the world. The foreign mission work requires our liberal support. Go or send.

4. After these instructions the Lord ascended to heaven.

(1) Was taken up. Wonderful spectacle! No chariot of fire. Ascended without apparent apparatus. The law of gravitation rendered inoperative.

(2) A cloud received him out of the disciples' sight. An ordinary cloud? May it not have been a vast congregation of angels, a celestial vanguard, to bid him welcome to his heavenly home?

The everlasting gates were indeed opened wide when the King of Glory entered.

An Appeal to the Young People of Mississippi.

Dear Young Friends: Millsaps College needs a large hall for young men of limited means. We must build it. The hall is a necessity. Would it not be a handsome work for the young Mississippians to furnish the agent with money to build this hall? If we can get at the work right we can do it. I want the young Methodists of Mississippi to send me five thousand dollars. Let us go to work in earnest. Let the young people from five to twenty-one years of age send me from fifty cents to one dollar each. Let every church and community be represented. The name and amount will appear in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. May our Father inspire your hearts, dear young friends, to help us build this hall! Let me hear at once from you. Your friend,

I. W. COOPER.

ORGANS AS PREMIUMS.

We have made arrangements to offer a rare bargain in the way of organs as premiums to our subscribers. The organs which we handle are the Epworth Organs. These have not heretofore had much sale in Mississippi and Louisiana, though they have had an immense sale throughout the North and West and also in some of the Southern States. Do you want a small organ for your church? If so, read the description given below of Style No 102, and see how it would suit you.

STYLE 102. THE EPWORTH CHAPEL ORGAN.

HEIGHT, 51 IN.; WIDTH, 23 IN.; LENGTH, 48 IN.

Best Low-Priced Chapel Organ.

Walnut case; Hard Wood Panels; Finished Back; Lamp Stands; Handsome Fret Work; Full Length Music Desk; Engraved Ornaments; Hand Rubbed; Oil Finish; Pedals covered with Brussels Carpet; Metal Guards on Pedals.

This is the Organ for Churches and Sunday-schools, where a First-Class Action is Desired.

In a good, plain case, the quality of action and tone being the same as in the higher priced styles.

Style 102, 12 Stops.

EPWORTH CHAPEL—Five Octaves, containing four sets of Reeds of two and one-half Octaves each. STOPS—Principal; Dulcet Diapason; Diapason Forte; Vox Angelica; Principal Forte; Cremona; Melodia; Echo Horn; Celeste. Metal Octave Coupler. Boxed, with stool, delivered on board cars at factory.

The catalogue price of this is $87. We will give it as a premium for one hundred subscribers. Send us the cash $200, for the subscribers, and you get the organ free. If you can't get one hundred persons to subscribe personally, perhaps you have well-to-do members of your church who will pay for several poorer members, thereby bestowing a blessing upon them by giving them a religious paper and at the same time helping to procure an organ for your church. If you don't exactly like Style 102, then read the description of Style 302.

IMPROVED STYLE 302 "SPECIAL." EPWORTH CHAPEL ORGAN.

HEIGHT, 55 IN.; LENGTH, 49 IN.; WIDTH, 21 IN.

The Choir's Choice! The Organist's Favorite!

Case: Heavy Sunken Panels in front, ends, and back; Extra Strong Lamp Stands and Handles; Roomy Music Closet; Panelled and Engraved full length Music Desk; Ornate Scroll Work in upper panel of back.

Action: Five Octave Quick Acting Keyboard; Ten Octaves Carefully Voiced, Double Riveted Reeds; Brilliant Treble; Heavy Bass; Large Bellows; New Style Sloping Pedals easily operated by a child; New Modulating Stop Action; Improved Bevelled Stop Pulls; Double Steel Octave Couplers, doubling power; Principal (heavy bass); Dulcet Diapason (bass); Diapason Forte; Vox Angelica; Principal Forte; Cremona; Melodia; Echo Horn; Celeste (brilliant); Grand Organ (a knee stop); Modulation (knee swell).

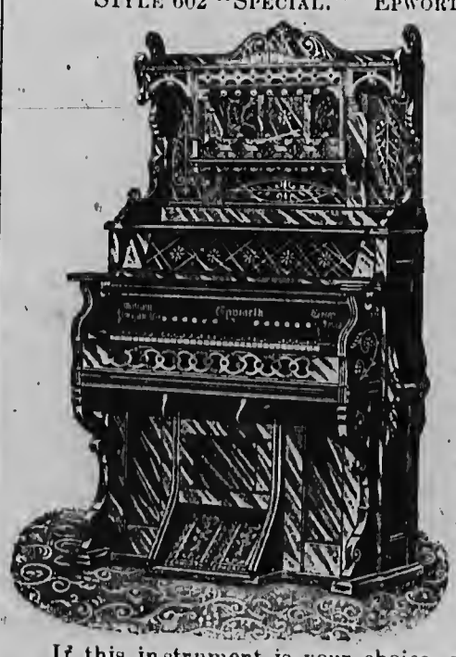
14 Stops, including swell and Grand Organ.

Boxed, with good stool, on board cars at factory. Fully warranted. One of the very best.

The list price of this instrument is $102. We will furnish it as a premium for one hundred and twelve new subscribers. Send us the one hundred and twelve new names, accompanied by the cash $224, and you will get the organ free.

If you want a handsomer instrument, how would Style 602 suit you? Although this is listed as a parlor organ, it will make just as sweet music in a church as in a parlor.

STYLE 602 "SPECIAL." EPWORTH PARLOR ORGAN.



Case: Hand Rubbed and Oil finished; Music Rack supported by turned columns; Heavy sunken Panels on front and ends; Extra strong Lamp Stands and Handles; Roomy Music Closet; Panelled and Engraved full length Music Desk; Ornate Scroll Work.

Fourteen Stops, including Swell and Grand Organ.

Action: Five Octave Quick Acting Keyboard; Ten Octaves Carefully Voiced, Double Riveted Reeds; Brilliant Treble; Heavy Bass; Large Bellows; New Style Sloping Pedals easily operated by a child; New Modulating Stop Action; Improved Bevelled Stop Pulls; Double Steel Octave Couplers, doubling power; Principal (heavy bass); Dulcet Diapason (bass); Diapason Forte; Vox Angelica; Principal Forte; Cremona; Melodia; Echo Horn; Celeste (brilliant); Grand Organ (a knee stop); Modulation (knee swell.)

Boxed, with good Stool and Book, on board cars at factory.

If this instrument is your choice, send us one hundred and fifteen new names, with the cash $230, and you will get it free. If you can't get the requisite number of names, get as many as you can, and then write us for terms. No doubt you can make satisfactory arrangements. Of course, this offer applies to individuals as well as to churches. What we want is the subscriptions, let who will get the organ.

These instruments have had a great run among Methodist people in the North. More than a thousand preachers have purchased Epworth Organs. We offer special bargains to the clergy.

If you have any inclination to accept any one of these offers, don't delay. Now is the time. Address

HARD TIMES.

BY ELIZABETH CHISHOLM.

The times are hard, and hunger and cold
Threaten and growl at many a door;
The wolf's long cry is fierce and bold,
Borne on the sullen night wind's roar.
But this is the hour for courage, love,
For daring the foe with nerve and skill,
Meeting our care in the strength of prayer,
And waiting and working with steady will.

We greet each other with cheery signs
As we set our battle in brave array;
Closer we draw the household lines,
And gallantly meet each dawning day.
Now and then, as the dark clouds rift,
We catch a glimpse of the sun on high,
And, heartened, together a song we lift—
There's always blue in the upper sky.

The times are hard, but the children play,
And we tuck them under the coverlet
When we reach the end of each struggling day,
And the stars to heaven for lamps are set.
Then, love, we look to each other's eyes
And the kindling light of triumph see.
O! what does it matter that times are hard,
When I have you, love, and you have me?

—Harper's Bazar.

Family Manners.

The virtues are of various sizes. There are big, heroic virtues to which youth is forever leaping; and there are little virtues which do not make much showing in our private book of martyrs. To the latter class belongs the virtue of politeness.

Some will even deny that it is a virtue. We all know the man who cares for nothing under heaven but Truth—spelt always with a capital T; who looks upon fine manners as he would look upon the seductions of the sirens; who tramps his way through society, positive, self-assertive, leaving a track of discomfort up to his own house door, from behind which we hear his characteristic remark: "My dear, I'm not scolding. I'm just telling you."

Good man!— it is only that he lacks the sixth, saving sense of the artistry of life. It is a sense which should awake with the rest of the senses—in childhood. The manners one attempts to put on in after life are apt to fit ill. Worst of all, they leave one at the mercy of traitorous memory.

We remember a young woman who had grown up in a wealthy, but uncultivated home. She was talented and noble-hearted. But many kindly people were forced to say of her, "She is not a lady." She herself confessed it one day in a passionate outburst:

"I know I am rude, but I can't help it. I never was taught to be polite at home, and now to remember what I ought and ought not to do is as difficult as walking on ice. When I'm excited I'm sure to say or do something which shocks the very people I care most for, and they give me the cold shoulder and take up with girls who I know are inferior."

And the worst of it is, it was all true.

The thousand and one points of common good breeding which children acquire in a well-ordered, gracious home, under the eye of a winning mother—to be gentle of manner; to walk, stand and sit gracefully; not to fidget, grimace, yawn; in conversation to use low and pleasant tones; not to interrupt, or contradict, or brag; not to assert too strongly or laugh too loudly—all this comes to the children, if at times slowly, still assuredly. Their minds open to the beauty of gentle, graceful living as naturally as to the beauty of the works of art upon their walls.

If it were not so, if fine manners could be taught to children only by constant nagging, we might well prefer that the poor innocents should be left to their ignorance and their bliss. What is demanded is the lift of the whole family life to a high level; and then the adoption of Froebel's noble motto, "Come and let us live with our children."

Hence it is that parents who have a code of company manners, who are more shocked at some excrescence of animal spirits in the parlor than at the breaking of all the Decalogue in the nursery, do not find the family growth in politeness satisfactory. And we shall be likely to hear them, a little later on, lamenting the ways of their careless girls and rough boys, and settling into the belief that the boys, at least, are by nature incorrigibly rude, fit only to be kept out of sight until they assume responsibility for themselves. The wise mother is not given to worrying over trifles. She does not expect perfection in a day. And she has put from her, as far as the east is from the west, the ghastly possibility of setting vanity up in the room of love. So she does not begin with exhaustive attention to the minutiæ of etiquette, knowing that way lies the danger of making her boys prigs and her girls self-conscious society misses before they are in their teens. She lays down, as the laws of her household, the broad principles of respect for elders, reverence for women, kindness for all; and she permeates the home atmosphere with her finest conceptions of the deference and the sympathy due from soul to soul.

Her children very early delight to place a chair for grandmother, and to save father steps. They learn to be proud of that restraint which enables them to keep self in the background, and to defer to brother and sister. It never enters their heads that servants are less worthy of respect than other people. They are as unabashed in the presence of wealth and power as they are tender toward suffering and poverty. When she teaches them from time to time her code of manners—and she is careful to perfect it according to her best judgment—she teaches it for home use, and it becomes fixed by becoming natural.—Harper's Bazar.

A Secret of Management.

Management, when recognized by those on whom it is exerted, whether children or their elders, is usually resented as an indignity. Nobody likes to be "managed." The secret of management is not known to all, but those who have learned it from the good fairies who preside over domestic tranquillity have attained brevet rank among the fortunate of this world.

A secret it is, yet an open one, which she who wishes may make her own. The good manager keeps her servants for months and years, carries out her cherished plans, bends everything to her will, and still is seldom accused of depotism, and seldom suffers from the humiliation of defeat, or the inconvenience of ill-considered arrangements.

Such a woman is business-like and practical. She knows her resources, and acknowledges her limitations. She studies the disposition of her husband and children, and wins rather than drives. There is everything in taking people at the right moment, and in suggesting an arrangement instead of ordering an arbitrary change of base. "My cousin Cornelia," said a lady, "always has her own way, without ever seeming to want it. Jabez, her husband, constantly proposes things in a masterful fashion, which he imagines first occurred to his own brain, the truth being that he is merely carrying out what Cornelia determined upon before the good man had so much as had a glimpse of the situation."

A secret of successful management in the home campaign is briefly stated in a sentence: "Keep your temper, and do not antagonize anyone." "I am leaving home for a week," a mother observed, "and I have given Phyllis charge of the house, her father, and the boy."

"But Dorothy is the older daughter, is she not?" was the inquiry of the person addressed.

"Yes, Dorothy is the older, but not the wiser, in this particular instance," said the mother. "Dorothy never conciliates. She asserts, and endeavors to enforce her wishes; the result is strife and bitterness. Phyllis is gentle and patient. She yields in minor matters, and only makes a stand where something worth struggling for is involved. I go away with a light heart when it is a question of dropping my cares into the hands of Phyllis."

In the control of the kitchen cabinet, the sensible mistress gives the cook and the laundries credit for their good intentions, even when their performances are not entirely satisfactory. If she must reprove, she takes an opportunity when she can do so pleasantly. She summons the culprit to her presence, instead of standing at one end of a kitchen table, with Bridget on the angry defensive at the other. In her own room, and seated in her own easy-chair, she possesses an advantage which greatly assists her, if she is obliged to find fault.

Management implies no deceit. The good manager may be sincerity itself. She simply knows how to handle the reins; she has an eye on the road, and a light touch on the bit.—Exchange.

A BOY'S MOTHER.

BY JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

My mother she's so good to me,
Er I was good as I could be,
I couldn't be as good—no, sir!
Can't any boy be good as her!

She loves me when I'm glad er mad;
She loves me when I'm good er bad;
An', what's a funniest thing, she says
She loves me when she punishes.

I don't like her to punish me;
That don't hurt, but it hurts to see
Her cryto'—neo I cry; so' nen
We both cry—an' be good again.

She loves me when she cuts and sews
My little cloak and Sunday clothes;
An' when my pa comes home to tea,
She loves him 'most as much as me.

She laughs so' tells him all I said,
An' grabs me up an' pats my head;
An' I hug her, so' hug my pa,
An' love him purt' nigh much as ma.

Plain Speaking.

There are people who take great credit to themselves for their extreme plainness of speech, which they fancy to be a sign of sincerity. "I say precisely what I mean," one of these persons will calmly tell you, intimating, in most cases, that what they meant was disagreeable and likely to hurt somebody's feelings, but that they had too much strength of mind to hesitate on that account. It never occurs to these well-intentioned, but brusque and overcandid souls, that it is not an absolute necessity always to speak, that there are times when silence is golden.

We are not called upon invariably to pronounce judgment on our fellow-creatures. Often we are not in possession of all the facts in a given case, we do not know the circumstances, we can not accurately discern motives, and our conclusions, being based on imperfect acquaintance, and being formed by infallible minds, are wholly erroneous. This is especially so when we have a grievance, when we think that we have been neglected, when our vanity or our self-love has been wounded. By hasty speech we may become guilty of great injustice; we may plant the seeds of distrust and suspicion, or trample friendship under foot.

There is no insincerity in saying a pleasant thing, for there is fortunately always one point of view from which some pleasant word is justifiable. In that beautiful twelfth chapter of Romans, which formed the basis of a blessed lesson in the Sabbath-school, a consecration of our whole selves to God found its natural outcome in a tender and thoughtful altruism. As Christians we are in duty bound to forget ourselves and to live for and with others, in all gentleness, sympathy and courtesy. "In honor preferring one another!" Can there be a nobler rule for daily life at home and in society?—Selected.

Good Advice to Young Women.

There is nothing so certain to make you disliked, as to tell your troubles to a friend. Prosperity means friendship, but once you take it into your head to retail your woes you will soon discover your company is not wanted, and the people who once bowed to you in pleasant recognition now walk on the other side of the way with a cold and stony glare that looks over your head or through your body, but never meets your eyes as of yore. The people are not hard-hearted that turn the cold shoulder to you. They are only averse to knowing of any more misery than they already have to bear. We everyone of us have our little troubles. In some cases they grow to be very large ones, and it isn't pleasant to have the dark side continually thrust before us just when we begin to feel a bit comfortable in our minds over some unpleasant occurrence that has upset us for a time. Take a bit of valuable advice, and when you feel like telling some one of your spat with your intended, or how low your finances are, just remember our warning and don't do it. Your mother, your father and your husband are the truest sympathizers, and, outside of them, you are certain to be soon called a bore if you persist in your harrowing confidences.—Philadelphia Times.

True Economy.

Some women entertain curious ideas of what constitutes economy. A fragile little housewife saves seventy-five cents each week because she can not afford to hire some one to do the ironing. But she never hesitates to pay a dollar a pair for stockings, or two dollars for a pair of gloves, or three for the doctor's visit occasioned by overtaxing her strength. Another considers fruit a luxury beyond the reach of the family purse, but she has no scruple whatever in buying new material for the dress which she has worn only a few months, and employing a dress maker to alter the sleeves to accord with the present voluminous fashion. We recall a dear woman, the delicate mother of six active children, who would not save her strength by using a carpet sweeper, because, she said, "They do wear out the carpet so." But the habit of what she called economy wore her out long before the carpets, and the motherless children have the things mother saved instead of her precious self. True economy considers other values than dollars and cents. It also studies how to secure the largest returns from the expenditure of money. The purchasing power of a dollar varies greatly in the hands of different women. She who has the most to show, not necessarily in material goods, or increased savings in the bank, but in health and comfort, in friendships, and growth of character, is the one who has most wisely used her Lord's talent.

Wings By and By.

"Walter," said a gentleman on a ferry-boat, to a poor helpless cripple, "how is it, when you can not walk, that your shoes get worn?"

A blush came over the boy's pale face, but after hesitating a moment, he said: "My mother has younger children, sir, and while she is out washing, I amuse them by creeping about on the floor and playing."

"Poor boy!" said a lady standing near—not loud enough, as she thought, to be overheard. "What a life to lead! what has he in all the future to look forward to?"

The tear started in his eye, and the bright smile that chased it away showed that he did hear her. As she passed by him to step on shore, he said in a low voice, but with a smile: "I am looking forward to having wings some day, lady."

Happy Walter! poor, crippled, and dependent on charity, yet performing his mission. Doing in his measure the Master's will, patiently waiting for the future, he shall by and by "mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint."

If You Want to Be Loved.

Don't find fault.

Don't contradict people even if you're sure you are right.

Don't be inquisitive about the affairs of even your most intimate friend.

Don't underrate anything because you don't possess it.

Don't believe that everybody else in the world is happier than you.

Don't conclude that you have never had any opportunities in life.

Don't believe all the evil you hear.

Don't repeat gossip, even if it does interest a crowd.

Don't go untidy, on the plea that everybody knows you.

Don't be rude to your inferiors in social position.

Don't over- or under-dress.

Don't get in the habit of vulgarizing life by making light of the sentiment of it.

Don't jeer at anybody's religious relief.

Don't try to be anything else but a gentlewoman—and that means a woman who has consideration for the whole world and whose life is governed by the golden rule, "Do unto others as you would be done by."

A FEEBLE WOMAN—suffering from nervous prostration, excitability, or dizziness, the result of weakness, derangement, or displacement of the special organs—will find health regained after using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

The one remedy—standing solitary and alone—for woman's weakness, which is guaranteed to benefit or cure, or the money refunded, is the "Favorite Prescription."

It's a powerful invigorating tonic, a soothing and strengthening nervine. For women who are run-down and overworked; at the critical periods in woman's life—the change from girlhood to womanhood, and, later, the "change of life"—this is especially adapted to her needs; for it strengthens, regulates, and CURES.

Whether it's Catarrh itself, or any of the troubles caused by Catarrh, the makers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will pay you $500 if they can't give you a permanent cure. They take the risk!

HART—Mrs. ANN HART, the widow of T. L. Hart, of Madisnn cnunty, Miss., was born in Adsnn county, N. C., and died at her hnme, near Sharon, Miss., Oct. 21, 1893. Devout as a servant nf Gnd, devoted in the relations of wife and mother, kind and peaceable as a neighbor, the call Irnm heaven for her to enter tpon rest has saddened a home, a churnh, a community.

In early childhood Sister Hart moved with her parents to Mississippi, but was sent back to her native State to bn educated at Salem under the care nf thn Moravians. By intimate association with these pions people the yonng girl acquired a gentleness of manner and a spiritual repose which through all her life drew hearts to her in love and trust.

Her life of energy and thrift, her systematic attention to the details nf domestic dnty, so essential to family cnmfort, were a demonsiration that "a meek and quiet spirit" does not hinder the growth of those aggressive virtues, prnminent in strong characters.

A "keepnr at hnmn" in the best sense of that phrase, Sister Hart was also a nhurch gner, because she lnved and realized her need of the church, and was fnnd of social life because she lnved and sympathized with those who, like herself, needed love and sympathy. Her children did nnt need to hnar her last words to them, "Follow Christ as I have," for thrnugh all their lives, in the days when the father lifted the burthens from her heart and hands, and through the long years of widowhood, when overwhelmed by deep waters, or walking in the midst of the fiery furnace, they saw that she was walking in his steps and oomfnrted with his comfort.

May she be "honored" in the lives of her five sons and two daughters!

E. M. HUNNICUTT.

DICKERSON—JOHN RILEY DICKERSON, son of C. L. and Martha Dinkerson, was born July 14, 1883, and died at Shrock, Miss., Dec. 1, 1893, being ten years and a few months old when his pure spirit was summened to the "Father's house" above.

Johnnie was a very remarkable child. He was unusually bright and intelligent. He was manly, but modest. He was affectionate guileless and dutiful. He was also a true Christian. His character was nf that type of which Jesus said, "Of snch is the kingdom of Heaven."

Johnnie professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist Churnh at Shronk when about eight years old, under the pastorate of the writer, and was true and faithful unto death. He loved the Savior, the church and his pastor. The Sabbath-school was his delight. He was very fond of gnod literature. The NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE was a special favorite. He paid fnr and had it sent in his own name. Oh! how strange and sad that one so promising and so yenng should so soon be taken from us. But we murmur not, since we know he is forever blessed. We miss Johnnie, but will see him again on the other shore. God bless and keep the snrrowing ones!

E. F. EDGAR.

COBB—Mrs. RACHEL J. COBB was born in Amite cnunty, Miss., Feb. 27, 1817, and died in Wilkinsnn nounty, Miss., Oct. 6, 1893. She was the oldest daughter of Daniel McNiel, nnw dnceased, of Amite conuty. She was first married in Thns. Tillery, who died in 1847, leaving her a widow with five small children, one of whom is the wife of Rev. H. P. Lewis, of the Mississippi Conference. In 1850 she married David Bowland, who only lived a few years, when she again was left a widow. In 1860 she was again married to Joshna Cobb, who lived and died a happy Christian, September, 1891.

She was, with all her husbands, three in number, a loving, confiding wife, an affectionate and indulgent mother, a good neighbor, and, above all, a most deeply consecrated Christian. Her religinus life was of a high character, simple and pure. Her humble home was ever open to the itinerant preacher, whose visits to her were welnnme.

She was converted when young and joined the M. E. Church, South. She spent, at least, fifty years in the service of Jesus. I am her brother. In all her Christian life I never knew her to be in a backslidden state. She now rests from labor.

J. W. MCNEIL.

MAXWELL—Mrs. MARTHA EMMA MAXWELL (nee Banorsdale) was born near Thomastown, Miss., Feb. 26, 1850, and died in Camden, Miss., Nov. 8, 1893; was married, Decemher, 1871, to D. Maxwell, who survives her with six children. She became a trun Christian very early in lifn and jnined the Baptist Church, but afterward united with the Methodists, and remained devnni and faithful unto death. She possessed almost all the Christian graces. Submission meekness, patience and self-sacrifice were most especially recognized in her spirit. She was gifted in prayer, and exercised that gift both at home and in the sanctuary. Her cheerfulness was such as brightened the lives of all who were associated with her. She was made happy when allnwed to do even the most humble service for others or fnr her Lord.

She was a devoted friend to her pastor, and aided him in every way in her power. The great missionary cause filled and thrilled her very soul. Only a few days before her death she wrote a touching appeal to the Camden Juveniles, exhorting them to greater zeal and faithfulness.

For many months she was sorely afflicted, but she bure her afflictions with perfect submission. Just hefnre her dnath she said to me: "I feel it a privilege to snffer. Oh, I can not suffer nnough when I think of how much Jesus suffered for me. And what a glorious home he has in store for me." She also related hlessed experiences and visinns of the heavenly attendants ministering to her. Clasping her hands, and gazing towards heaven, she said: "I have nnt been living in this world for snme time. I have been living and talking with Jesus and with loved ones in heaven."

Sweetly she "fell on sleep" and awoke in heaven. May her mantle fall on the nnble daughters!

E. F. EDGAR.

JONES—At nnon, on the last day of the old year, 1893, the pure spirit of our Lillian (J. LILLIAN JONES), took its flight from its tenement of clay to that house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. She was the third daughter nf Frank A. Jones and Ollvia Wallis. She was born in Jefferson county, Miss., Nov. 1, 1868, and died in Catahoula parish, La. After a year of most patient suffering with that slow destroyer, consumption, at the early age of twenty-three she fell on sleep.

Lillian was a bright, deeply conscientious Christian, welcome to every circle and giving pleasure to all. Her coming among those who knew her was looked for with great delight. Her influence over her associates was a gracious benedintion.

Though dying so yonng, in my own home she will be remembered as a blessing. We have rarely met with one so thoughtful and conscientinus in the discharge of religious dnties. A pure character, an unselfish, devoted daughter, well may her bereaved parents cry out in their great grief, "Why, oh, why, this heavy stroke?" She was converted at the Crystal Springs Camp Ground in 1887. She loved her Bible and rejoiced in the songs of Zion. Her death was trustful and peaceful. She sleeps in peace. We shall meet again.

GREENE—MARY LOU LYON was born Sept. 13, 1862, and was married to David M. Greene, Dec. 17, 1884, and died Dec. 28, 1893.

Sister Greene was converted very young and joined the Methodist Church in Starkville, Miss., where she remained a consistent member until after her marriage, when she took her transfer to Kilmichael, Miss., where she died. Sister Greene leaves a father and mother, a brother and sisters and a twenty-two-months'-old babe to mourn her loss. May God comfort them. She went to meet a rejoicing husband and two little girls.

Early last spring-time I was aroused about one o'clock at night to go and try to comfort this sister on account of the loss of a beautiful little girl. I found her disconsolate and praying to be taken herself. The hand of sorrow had extracted all the roseate tinges from this world. A few months, and the answer to her prayer found her in the same mind. May all her relatives live so as to meet her in heaven.

J. W. DUNAGAN.

GREENE—WILLIE EDGAR GREENE was born Oct. 3, 1879, and died Jan. 2, 1894.

The subject of the above was a young Christian of the best type, raised by Christian parents. His mother, Mrs. S. S. Greene, a widow, was made cheerful in the companionship of her dear son, an amiable in disposition, affectionate, obedient and cheerful. But God, in his infinite wisdom, has called the dear son to the saints' everlasting rest, after a week's severe suffering from malarial rheumatism. May God's richest blessings strengthen and alleviate the bereaved mother in her sore affliction, and his brothers and sisters imitate his pure life! When one by one have "passed over the river of death," there will be a happy reunion in the paradise of God.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

There are people who never hear any music that suits them except when they are playing first fiddle.

For over fifty years Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has cured coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, throat and lung affections. It is the regular prescription of a physician of extensive practice, who, after prescribing it for twenty years, was induced by the gratifying results to make it a proprietary medicine. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar soon became known as the best remedy for all throat and lung troubles. Why? Because it has merit and will cure. A. C. Hafflefinger, Philadelphia, says: "I knew a man suffering with his lungs who was in the hospital a year without benefit. I induced him to take Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and to-day he is well. I knew it saved his life." Try it.

One of the first covenants that every young man ought to make himself is that he will never run in debt.

PIANOS AS PREMIUMS.

READ THE DESCRIPTION BELOW OF STYLE 10.

The list price of this instrument is $330. We will furnish this elegant instrument as a premium for new subscribers. If this offer interests you, write us for terms. You may be surprised at the terms we can give you.

STYLE 10.

Seven and one-third Octaves: Chaste Design; Overstrung Scale; Heavy Iron Frame; 3 Strings; Carved Trusses; Improved Sounding Board; Perfect Repeating Action and Sliding Music Desk. Height, 4 feet 4½ inches; length, 5 feet 2 inches; depth, 2 feet 4½ inches.

In offering this piano to the public our object is to provide for the existing demand for an instrument which, although taking up but a small amount of room, possesses the same quality of tone, the same high grade of action, work and material found in our larger pianos, at the same time a plainly but thoroughly well-finished exterior, enabling us to offer it at a price within the reach of everyone who wishes to secure a perfect piano for a small amount of money. This style is a favorite with ministers, as it takes less room and is more easily moved than the larger instruments.

Made in Rosewood, Ebony, Walnut or Mahogany finish.

Boxed with good Plush Stool, Embroidered Cover and Instruction Book. Every instrument warranted for five years.

Constitutional History of American Episcopal Methodism.

OCTAVO. 414 PAGES. Price, $1.50.

BY JNO. J. TIGERT, D. D.

Most Constitutional histories are dry reading, but this has interested me very much. I have been especially impressed by its vivid portrayals of signal events, its felicitous illustrations of the way in which the most important matters of ecclesiastical polity have been determined by the opinions and acts of individuals, and its omnipresent proofs of the Providential origin and development of Methodism on both sides of the Atlantic.—Bishop C. D. Foss, of the M. E. Church.

Few books have ever been issued from the presses of our Publishing House at Nashville equal in importance and value to this one. It fills a place occupied by none other. The scope of the work is full and comprehensive, and the subject is treated from beginning to end with rare ability. The publication of this work is timely. It ought to be read and studied by every intelligent preacher and layman of our Church. Particularly ought it to be mastered by every delegate to our General Conference.—Southern Christian Advocate.

From the care with which you have sifted statements, examined documents, and analyzed facts, I think you have produced a work which will reflect credit on your industry and ability, and entitle it to a place of a classic in Methodist literature, not to say ecclesiastical literature.—Bishop E. R. Hendrix.

Hon. Daniel Lamont, Secretary of War, arrived in this city on March 31. He is on an inspection tour of the various government military posts.

Herr Johann Most, the apostle of anarchy in this country, is sad and disgusted. He thinks there is no hope for the glorious cause of anarchy in America, and in a four-column screed in his paper, the Freiheit, advises his followers to go back to the more hopeful fields of Europe.

Mr. Preston, the State Superintendent of Education in Mississippi, recently visited Biloxi, and was favorably impressed with the place as a location for the Summer Normal School. The citizens of the town are at work to raise the necessary subscriptions to help pay the expenses of the faculty. It is said the school will not open later than May 15.

Gov. Tillman is determined to enforce the dispensary law in South Carolina. Owing to resistance offered to the constables, the governor has declared Darlington and Florence counties in a state of insurrection. Several companies of militia when ordered to Darlington refused to go and disbanded. All available militia has been sent to protect the constables.

The largest gathering of ex-Confederate soldiers held since the war will be the fourth annual reunion of the United Confederate Veterans' Association, which convenes in Birmingham on Wednesday and Thursday, April 25 and 26. Birmingham has prepared to receive and entertain from 40,000 to 50,000 visitors during the reunion, and there is now every indication that fully that number will be there. There are now 470 camps in the association, with applications on file for nearly 100 more.

There seems to be little doubt of the closing of the New Orleans mint at the end of the present fiscal year, unless in the meanwhile Congress should adopt legislation requiring an increase of coinage. The appropriations committee have no intention now of making an appropriation to maintain the mint in operation after June 30, next. In the event of closing up there the 8,000,000 silver dollars stored there will be transferred to the sub-treasury, but it is a question what would be done with the $8,000,000 of silver bullion.

On March 17 the United States government, through Secretary of State Gresham, and the Chinese Empire, through Yang Yu, Chinese minister at Washington, entered into a treaty to settle the details of the classes of Chinese subjects that are to be excluded from this country. The terms of exclusion are made absolute against all Chinese laborers; but the following are the classes of Chinese that may be admitted into this country without restriction, namely: All Chinese subjects who may be officials, teachers, students, merchants, travelers for curiosity or pleasure.

April 1 was the anniversary of the birth of Prince Bismarck.

People are dying at Rio from the yellow fever at the rate of 70 a day.

The new Siberian railroad is being built mostly by the labor of exiles and convicts.

Dr. Brown-Sequard, the celebrated French physician, whose reported discovery of the elixir of life created quite a sensation a few years ago, died in Paris on Monday last.

The tripartite government of the islands of Samoa causes trouble between the natives. King Malietoa marched against the rebellious natives, and thirty were killed in an engagement.

The English torpedo destroyer Hornet, which is undoubtedly the fastest boat in the world, having made 28 knots an hour, is one of more than thirty vessels of a similiar type ordered from several firms in England at a cost of from £33,500 to £39,000.

The visit of the Emperor Francis Joseph, of Austria, to the Emperor William, of Germany, during the progress of the trouble in Hungary growing out of the funeral ceremonies over the remains of Kossuth, the patriot, proves that no serious importance is attached to the disorders by the Austrian government.

Never before, not even at the death of royalty, has there been such a genuine display of popular regret as that which marked the arrival of Kossuth's body in Budapest. Black flags and other crepe emblems are very profusely displayed, every shop in the city containing in its windows draped busts or portraits of the dead man. An immense crowd awaited the arrival of the funeral train at the station.

The Queen and Crescent Route

Is the only line running solid vestibule trains from the principal cities of the South to Cincinnati.

Through car lines are run from New Orleans, Meridian, Birmingham, Chattanooga, Jacksonville, Macon, Atlanta, Asheville, N. C., Knoxville, Harriman, Lexington, and intermediate points, without change, connecting in Cincinnati with through trains to the North, East and West.

Through car lines Shreveport and Vicksburg to Birmingham and Atlanta.

All through trains make close connection at Lexington with double daily service to Louisville.

When Admiral da Gama, commander of the Brazilian insurgent forces in Rio Janor, surrendered, some time ago, it was generally hoped that the revolution was at an end. It now appears, however, that the insurgents are anything but destroyed by the defeat inflicted at Rio. That event has, indeed, lost them a foothold in the northern States, but it has consolidated their energies in the more southerly provinces.

Spare Pearline, Spoil the Wash!

"Better use too much than too little." Too much Pearline won't do any harm—too little may. Use too much, and you only waste it, that's all. But use too little, and it's only a bit better than none at all. You'll have to work harder, and you'll have to rub—and then the wear and tear begins. It's this rubbing, and this wear, and this work that Pearline, if properly used, takes away. Use it just as directed on every package, no more, no less, and you'll get the best results. You needn't try to improve upon it. You can't.

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 385 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

Domestic Missions.

Brethren, please forward some portion of your domestic missionary money. There is now only $1.90 in the treasurer's hands. Most of the brethren in forwarding their reports to me also forward some part of their assessment for domestic missions.

Now, if I receive two reports the same day each from very poor missions, and each asking for 60 per cent. of first quarter—one with his report sends part, at least, of his domestic missionary assessment, the other sends nothing—and there is just funds enough on hand to pay one, which ought I to send it to, or ought I to divide it?

"Disfigured For Life"

Is the despairing cry of thousands afflicted with unsightly skin diseases.

Do you realize what this disfiguration means to sensitive souls?

It means isolation, seclusion.

It is a bar to social and business success.

Do you wonder that despair seizes upon these sufferers when Doctors fail, standard remedies fail, And nostrums prove worse than useless?

Skin diseases are most obstinate to cure. CUTICURA REMEDIES Have earned the title Skin Specifics, Because for years they have met with most remarkable success.

There are cases that they cannot cure, but they are few indeed.

It is no long-drawn-out expensive experiment. 25c. invested in a cake of CUTICURA SOAP Will prove more than we dare claim.

In short CUTICURA WORKS WONDERS, And its cures are simply marvellous.

Sold throughout the world. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. POTTER DRUG AND CHEM. CORP., Sole Props., Boston.

THE WORLD FOR CHRIST.

A MISSIONARY EXERCISE

For Children's Day,

Sunday, May 20, 1894.

A LEAFLET OF SIXTEEN PAGES.

THIS PROGRAMME emphasizes the missionary idea strongly and interestingly, while its general make-up is very bright and attractive. In the selections for reading and declamation there is a pleasing variety, and the music (given in full) is mostly new and of an inspiring character. It is hoped that every Sunday-school that possibly can will order and use this exercise, so appropriate to this Methodist quadrennial year.

Price: 10 cents per dozen; 60 cents per 100.

THE TIME FOR PRAYER.

When is the time for prayer?
With the first beams that light the morning sky,
Ere for the toils of day thou dost prepare,
Lift up thy thoughts on high;
Commend thy loved ones to His watchful care—
Morn is the time for prayer!

And in the noontide hour,
If worn by toil or by sad care oppress,
Then unto God thy spirit's sorrows pour,
And he will give thee rest;
Thy voice shall reach him through the fields of air—
Noon is the time for prayer!

When the bright sun hath set,
Whilst yet eve's glowing colors deck the skies;
When with the loved, at home, again thou'st met,
Then let thy prayer arise
For those who in thy joys and sorrows share—
Eve is the time for prayer!

And when the stars come forth—
When to the trusting heart sweet hopes are given,
And the deep stillness of the hour gives birth
To pure, bright dreams of heaven,
Kneel to thy God—ask strength life's ills to bear—
Night is the time for prayer!

When is the time for prayer?
In every hour, while life is spared to thee—
In crowds or solitude—in joy or care—
Thy thoughts should heavenward flee—
At home—at morn and eve—with loved ones there,
Bend thou the knee in prayer!

Was There a Flood?

We are indebted to a correspondent in England for the following report of the recent meeting of the Victoria Institute. It was written March 22, and reached us April 2. We tender thanks to our correspondent for his prompt and able report.

One of the largest meetings ever held by the Victoria Institute, of London, England, took place in the third week of March, to hear that well-known "Nestor among geologists," Prof. Prestwich, F. R. S., read a paper on "A Possible Cause for the Origin of the Tradition of the Flood," in which he proposed to treat the subject "from a purely scientific standpoint." The chair was taken by the ex-president of the Royal Society, Sir George Stokes, Bart., F. R. S., the present occupant of that professorial chair at Cambridge University once occupied by Sir Isaac Newton, and also the president of the Victoria Institute, whose aim is to investigate all scientific questions bearing on the truth of the Bible, and to associate all scientific men, and people generally, in the colonies and America, in aid of this work. The great hall was packed in every part, as those who arrived late found. The business was commenced by Capt. F. Petrie, the honorary secretary, reading a letter from the Duke of Argyll, who was unable to be present, after which Prof. T. Rupert Jones, F. R. S., read the paper prepared by Prof. Prestwich, he not being sufficiently recovered from a severe cold to do so himself. In it the author described at considerable length the various phenomena which had come under his observation during long years of geological research in Europe and the coasts of the Mediterranean. Among these he specially referred to having found the flints of the drift to be of two classes—one with bones of animals, carved, and interspersed with the remains of man, and the other, which he termed the Rubble-drift, containing bones of animals of all ages and kinds in vast heaps. He cited the confirmatory opinions on this point of Prof. Geikie, F. R. S., a member of the Institute, and drew special attention to the geological surroundings of these strange deposits, and the manner in which the bones were found. He then referred to phenomena in regard to raised sea beaches, and the constant occurrence of "Head," the large masses of transported rock, loam and Loess, covering the high plains in Hungary and Southern Russia, and the Osiferous Breccias in various localities. From the circumstances attending these and their surroundings he said he had been forced to the conclusion that all their phenomena were "only explicable upon the hypothesis of a widespread and short submergence, followed by early re-elevation, and this hypothesis satisfied all the important conditions of the problem," which forced one to recognize that there had been a submergence of continental dimensions. The age of man was held to be divided into paleolithic and neolithic, and he considered rightly so. He concluded by suggesting that thus there seemed cause for the origin of a tradition of a flood.

The paper was followed by reference to a communication from Sir W. Dawson, F. R. S., who welcomed the paper as confirming his conclusion come to on geological and palæontological grounds of a physical break in the anthropic age. The evidence for this was afforded by the cave remains and from a vast quantity of other sources. The discussion which ensued was commenced by Sir George Stokes, Bart., F. R. S., referring to the great value of the author's contribution to our knowledge and right understanding of the phenomena he had so long studied. Among those present were Mr. Huddleston, F. R. S., the past president of the Geological Society, and Dr. Woodward, F. R. S., the present president. The latter proposed a cordial vote of thanks to his friend and teacher, Dr. Prestwich, "the Nestor among geologists," whose contributions to our knowledge of that science were recognized by all as greater, more far-reaching and more valuable than those of any other in the present century. After sundry other remarks Sir Henry Howorth, Bart., F. R. S., spoke, urging the great importance of recognizing the value of the arguments in the paper, and many others which had come under his own observation in Asia. Prof. McK. Hughes, F. R. S., of Cambridge University, followed with some criticisms, and bore warm testimony to the value of the paper, after which Prof. Hull, F. R. S., late director of the Geological Survey of Ireland, spoke strongly in favor of the scientific nature of the author's arguments. Prof. Rupert Jones, F. R. S., in a few sentences replied to the speakers, and the brilliant gathering dispersed.

The Educational Loan Fund.

The following from Dr. Candler, president of Emory College, which was published in a recent issue of the Wesleyan, is worthy of the notice of all who are interested in this most noble work:

A LETTER THAT HELPED.

The following letter, recently received from one of the boys who was able to go through Emory College by the aid of the loan fund, speaks volumes for that noble benevolence:

Dr. W. A. Candler, Oxford, Ga.:

Dear Doctor: I feel just like you are needing money to help those boys get through the pinch. I remember how it was with me during my last term. I didn't have enough to buy a new suit for commencement, and left, mainly on that account, before commencement.

Enclosed find check on Citizens' Bank at Valdosta for $100. I may not be able to pay the balance when due, but will do so before the opening of school next September. Hoping that the check will be received when most needed.

He pays $100 before his note is due. He remembers the straits I was often in when trying to get money enough to carry him and his classmates through, and he now helps me to carry others. He acquired more than mere mental stores when in college; his heart is rich in thoughtful consideration for others. Growth in knowledge, which is not accompanied by growth of soul, is of doubtful value.

The Loan Fund Association has helped about one hundred students since its organization. Most of the notes given are not yet due. But of those whose notes have matured, twenty-three have met their obligations promptly—some paying before their notes were due.

Almost the entire income of the loan fund during the current year has been from repayment on notes. No new subscriptions were taken in 1893. The fund is carrying twenty-two young men.

No money expended at the college has brought better returns than the money spent on these struggling boys. I say this, notwithstanding four young preachers who borrowed money have let their notes go unpaid, and two young teachers and three others have disappointed us. It is a good crowd where we find only about a half dozen sorry fellows in a hundred.

W. A. CANDLER.

The District Conferences are now soon to begin in the North Mississippi Conference. It is very important for the presiding elders, who are ex officio presidents of the district auxiliaries of our Conference Loan Association, to call attention to this important benevolent work, and emphasize it. It is thought to be the best plan for the secretaries and treasurers of the auxiliaries to collect the annual dues, or shares, at the District Conferences. It is very important that they look after this matter closely, and collect up every cent they can, whether they have a candidate for its use or not. Let us be ready with a good, available fund in each district. I will take pleasure in furnishing loan fund literature to any who may want it.

Where and When to Save Souls.

BY REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D. D.

There are two methods of dealing with human temptations to sin. One method is to save people from being ruined; the other method is to attempt to save what is left of them after they have been ruined. The one plants its forces far up the stream to prevent persons from venturing into the rapids; the other spends its strength in desperate efforts to fish up and restore those who have been carried over the cataract.

We have a striking illustration of these two methods in the various efforts to deal with the drink evil. Societies are organized, meetings held, and appeals are made for the reformation of inebriates. They are to be commended for their good intentions, but the work they undertake is exceedingly difficult, and even when successful it only saves the remnant of a life that has been terribly shattered by sin. The right place to apply moral suasion is with the young, and with those who have never acquired the habit of using intoxicants. The best time to stop drinking is before you begin. The total abstinence pledge which I took in my early childhood was a very happy safeguard amid the temptations of college life when the habit of hard drinking was very rife in that college. An eminent minister said to me lately, "My pastor made a teetotaler of me when I was a boy by his tremendous sermons against strong drink." That meant prevention, and one ounce of it is worth many pounds of attempted cure. The right place to apply effectual temperance efforts is far up stream, to keep people—especially the young—from venturing into the rapids. In addition to these wise efforts, we should aim at righteous law to prohibit the iniquitous saloon keeper from beckoning people toward the rapids and pushing them in. Such a combination of moral suasion and legal prohibition is the most effectual style of temperance effort. Where it is thoroughly attempted, there will not be many drunkards to be reformed. Along these Christian lines for the prevention of a stupendous evil, every minister, every church, every Sunday-school, every wise parent, can be invoked to labor strenuously. In that direction lies success. Prevention is sure; reformation is difficult and doubtful. Save the children!

The same principle that applies to the particular sin of drunkenness—for it is both a sin and a self-inflicted disease—applies to all kinds of temptations. The time to kill any evil habit is in the egg. Going deeper yet into the matter, the best time to become a Christian is in early life, and the chief efforts of pastors, parents and teachers should be directed to the young. A church that allows its young people to be drawn into the rapids of sinful temptation, and to drift down the accelerating current of worldliness, can expect nothing else than that the majority of them should go down over the cataract of perdition! It is an indisputable fact that the chances of conversion to Christ diminish with every year after the age of twenty is passed. During my own pastorate of five and forty years I have received to the Lord's table hundreds of persons under eighteen years of age. I received very few who were past fifty, still fewer who were past sixty, and only a half-dozen who had passed threescore and ten. As the wintry sun of life draws nearer to its setting, an impenitent heart is apt to freeze into a hardness that almost defies the plowshare of truth.

Yet how large a portion of preaching in our average pulpits is aimed at the conversion of adults! How few are the sermons directly addressed to children! No small number of truly evangelical and awakening discourses are aimed entirely over the heads and the hearts of the very persons who are most susceptible to spiritual influences! Satan is wiser than too many of the servants of Christ; he "gets in his work" of temptation from the start. It is not too much to say that the vast majority of all the discourses that we ministers preach ought to be so constructed as to be within the comprehension of an average child of ten or eleven years old. Nearly all of Spurgeon's sermons would bear this test of clearness and simplicity.

If ministers make a monstrous mistake in not directing their chief efforts toward the conversion of the young, many Christian parents err in that direction most fatally. "My boy is too young to be a Christian," says Bro. Purblind. Pray, how old is he? Is he old enough to do wrong intelligently? Then he is old enough to do right. Is he old enough to sin? Then he is old enough to be sorry for it. Does he trust and obey you? Then he is old enough to trust and obey Jesus Christ. Now, if your child can exercise repentance and faith, he is practicing the identical graces that are required to save a sinner of threescore. Remember, too, that you have the promise and the offer of the omnipotent Holy Spirit in all your sincere efforts for the salvation of your children; and your child has the same promise of divine aid likewise.

The plea is often urged that children are so fickle and volatile. So are adult sinners; yes, and so are many adult church members, or else there would not be so many backsliders. Spurgeon testified that, as a rule, those church members held out best who had been converted in early life. They were less ingrained in evil habits, and had fewer tares to be plucked up. That children are more susceptible to all kinds of impressions and influences is true; then all the more important to bring the best influences to bear on them. If it is easier to become a Christian at ten than it is at thirty, then pastor and parents and teachers should work when there is the best promise of success. The great point to be kept before a child is that true piety is a matter of conduct, and that the proof of conversion is that they are seeking to obey the commandments of Jesus Christ. It is not every child who "rises for prayer" in a meeting, or who glibly says that he or she "loves Jesus," is a genuine convert. Above all things, the child should be made to understand that Bible religion means to do what Jesus Christ bids him or her to do, and to be what Christ would have them be.

The admission of a child into the church is a matter for the most careful and prayerful consideration by both pastor and parent. The "wholesale" method of dealing with the young, especially in a season of revival, is little less than atrocious. Every child should be studied closely, and dealt with according to its temperament, character and surroundings. Conversions may be instantaneous; but to assume the solemn vows of church membership requires careful instruction, self-examination and prayer on the part of everyone, but especially of the young.

I hope that no one will misunderstand this article, or imagine that I am seeking to "throw cold water" on efforts to reform inebriates, or to save sinners who have grown old in sinning. "With God all things are possible." He can save sinners on the verge of a Niagara of perdition; but that does not alter the indubitable fact that the best time and place to save a soul for this world and for the next is before they have flung themselves into the rapids. God did save Saul of Tarsus by a flashing miracle of grace; but Timothy was led by a good mother.—Exchange.

Religion Bottled Up in Church.

It was a characteristic declaration of the late Charles Terry Collins that religion is too apt to get selfishly "bottled up in churches." "Launch out into the deep" was our Lord's words to his disciples when the great haul of fishes was taken in. "Launch out into the deep!" was the vehement cry of that fervent English preacher, Rev. J. Baldwin Brown, in the noble sermon he preached in the great hall at Manchester, at the jubilee meeting of the Congregational Union of England and Wales. The agencies that are to save the populations of earth must indeed have their springs, their training and their everlasting reinforcement in the bosom of the Christian church; but, with memorable eloquence he insisted, they must not linger timidly at the shallow margins, but strike boldly forth out into the deepest places of the world's surging life. But, we may be sure, the men who, as Browning says, "do out their duty" in any bold and outreaching ministry, are not the men who allow themselves to be "bottled up" into the exclusive enjoyment of a certain narrow round of religious privileges. They have not so learned the spirit of Christ. Somewhere, somehow, they will be found launching out into the deep. We still have need of the men and the women who know how and have the power to rouse the slumbering forces of the churches, and to point out the more effective conditions and lines of effort, to meet the existing necessities of these new times. No one can look forth, clearly and largely, and see the actual position of the Christian church and the condition of the world as filled with so much that is antagonistic to the spirit of Christ, and not seem to hear once more the old shout, "The Philistines be upon thee!" We have many churches, many schools, many Bibles, and an endless variety of Christian institutions, instrumentalities and agencies of good; and no one, in any sane mood of mind, imagines that the aggressiveness of bold, right endeavor in the ways of the evangelization of the millions being born among us who are not born into any well-protected Christian homes, was ever more needed than it is to-day. Religious ingenuity and consecrated freedom of outlook are not under paralysis; nor is the moral force of Christian communities spent. Our churches have not wholly bottled themselves up; nor are they likely to. The word of the Master is still heard, and more and more being heeded. "Launch out into the deep!"—Advance.

Literary Culture a Source of Happiness.

One very efficacious method of increasing the amount of happiness in the world is to increase the capacity for it. No vessel can receive more than it can hold, nor can the mind of any man; but the difference is that, while the limits of the former are fixed and unalterable, those of the latter are capable of continual enlargement. Incidentally, all education, all training and all development are actually increasing this capacity for happiness, although they may not be carried on with that distinct object in view. Everything which broadens the mind, strengthens the powers and stimulates the activities, not only opens up new sources of enjoyment, but actually creates new ability to enjoy. This is, indeed, quite too valuable and important an element in life to be overlooked.

Perhaps there is no branch of education in which this advantage may be more rapidly and widely spread than that of literature. We are happily a nation of readers. That of itself means an amount of happiness which can never be fully estimated. Books, periodicals and newspapers abound on every hand, and the simple ability to read them is of itself an unfathomed mine of pleasure. So manifest a blessing is this, that people are very apt to be satisfied with it. They are so gratified with this stage of progress that they are contented to remain in it without looking to another. Yet it is not too much to say that the capacity for happiness which the mere power to read has developed may be multiplied a hundred-fold by a wise literary culture.

The pleasure we receive from any work of art is largely proportioned to the degree in which we understand it, and are able to view it with discrimination. We go over a fine building in our cursory way, and take a certain pleasure in it; but let a skilled architect do the same, and how keen is his interest in every detail! How fully he appreciates the construction of its various parts, the harmony of its arrangements, the objects that were held in view, the difficulties that were overcome. We gaze with admiration upon a master painting, but it is an artist's eye which alone can discern its real beauties of coloring, its unity of design, its fineness of execution. Now, we can not all be architects or painters, but we are all readers, and if we would drink deep of the happiness to be derived from books, we must enlarge our capacity for such enjoyment by cultivating a fair knowledge of and taste in literature.

This is not the vague and difficult task that some may think it. Of course, like any other kind of culture, it is best and easiest when begun in youth. Our schools already are waking up to this necessity, and reading is no more the meaningless and mechanical practice that it once was. Even the youngest classes are now stimulated to interest in what they read; their books are no longer collections of desultory extracts, but are chosen carefully for their real value and purity of style; and they are taught, year by year, to discriminate, and thus to enjoy in a rational manner. Yet, with our present large classes, there remains much to be still accomplished in this direction. An intelligent home culture may well supplement that of the school. Especially is the habit of reading aloud in the family, with occasional suggestions, calling attention to interesting passages or beauties of style, conducive to this end. There are mothers who claim that they have no time for such purposes, but who spend hours daily in delicate embroidery and other decoration of their little ones' clothing, which must perish with the using, instead of laying a lasting foundation for their perpetual and increasing happiness, by cultivating within them a love of pure and good literature.

Although youth is pre-eminently the time for this work, much may be done by the adult for himself if he is resolute in forming or reforming his habits and his taste. We will suppose a very common case of one who has so perverted his mind that he can enjoy no reading but fiction, and that of the lightest order. He, perhaps, regrets that it is so; but he sees no help for it. If he be weak and self-indulgent, he will probably never escape the situation. But, with an earnest purpose, and the power of self-restraint, he may yet raise himself to a higher mental level, and become able to taste a purer and more intelligent happiness. One thing he can always do—restrict his reading of fiction to the best authors. There are so many excellent standard novels in every book store and library that there is no excuse for wasting time over the mountains of trash in circulation. No one can carefully read such authors as Scott and Dickens, George Eliot and Thackeray, without having his imagination kindled, his thoughts stimulated, and his curiosity awakened concerning the many points of history, and of nature, of science, and of art, which are so freely alluded to in them. From these to books on kindred subjects will be an easy transition, and if the reader will select only the best of its kind, perusing it slowly and thoughtfully, making notes, comparing styles, consulting authorities, and in other ways making something of a study of his reading, he will insensibly find his taste improving and his pleasure in the practice growing, both in depth and intensity.—Public Ledger.

The Medical Missionary.

The medical missionary claims the marching orders of the apostles, he witnesses to the divine pattern set by the Master, he follows in the steps of the saints of old, and in doing so he endeavors also, bound by no slavish literalism, to carry out the principles taught by the Great Healer, and to utilize all the appliances of modern civilization to attain the end. It is no small thing that strength and health, skill and knowledge, tenderness and wealth should be devoted to the service of the poor, the destitute, the decrepit, and the diseased. It is no small thing that humanity should ever be thus ennobled by the service of the sick; counting nothing too costly to be given for their use, nothing mean or degrading that is done for their relief. Well might the late Bishop Fraser say that hospitals were as truly the houses of God as were our churches. Certainly this is the case where the work is done in a Christ-like spirit; and, above all, may not this be postulated of medical missions, whether among the crowded poor of our European and American cities, or among the ignorant multitudes of semi-civilized and heathen nations?—Dr. Arthur Neve, Kashmir.

Be careful of your family and friends; they are the best gifts the Almighty can give you.

THY WILL BE DONE

BY LUCY LARCOM

Shall we say, "Thy will be done"
And on our own errands run?
Vain and evil the design
We pursue, apart from thine.

Teach us how to live this prayer;
Reverently thy plans to share!
More than echoes of thy voice
Make us partners in thy choice!

Let our deeds be syllables
Of the prayer our spirit swells;
In us thy design fulfill;
By us work thy gracious will!

—Exchange.

Tempori Parendum.

(Concluded.)

It is generally known that the M. E. Church is preparing some sort of overtures to the M. E. Church, South, which overtures, it is thought, will come before the latter church at her next ensuing General Conference. Just what these overtures are to contain seems, as yet, unknown, even to some of those who aided in the appointment of the commission from the M. E Church. The supposition is that the adjustment of our Mexican affairs is the main point. Just why we should leave confusion and strife at home, and go abroad to make peace, is certainly a very suggestive thought. If we are ashamed of the clash of interests in Mexico, we ought to be ashamed of it in the United States; and if we have grace and intelligence enough to harmonize our foreign relations, we ought to be able, with the same helps, to harmonize our domestic affairs. While organic union may be to the distant future, for reasons satisfactory to those who oppose such a thing, there can certainly be no reason why harmony should be so far away. It is very easy for those who are blinded by prejudice or imaginary difficulties, or who are uninformed as to the real conflict and the hinderances resulting therefrom, to say, "We are independent; let us alone." This is the independence displayed by the tramp who, when begging for bread, was offered fifteen cents an hour for work at a mill. "No," said he, "I'll starve first."

Yes, we are starving. Preachers along the border, North and South, are starving. Souls are starving for "the Bread of Life," which, in the weakened condition of the forces, neither church is able to give them. We ignore the motto of our national fathers, "In union there is strength." We ignore that broad charity which "hopeth all things, endureth all things," etc., and seek to push sectional ecclesiastical organization rather than press the cause of our Master.

However great may be the difficulties in the way of organic union, there are none in the way of harmony, which can never come while we seek to occupy the same territory at the same time. The individual ministers and members may be on the most intimate and brotherly terms; but the two churches? They are striving each for the prestige of the community, and running about after the new comers who are already members of the church, seeking rather to save them from the other church than sinners from perdition. This is not poetry, but a cold fact, which has been seen by hundreds of people on both sides.

The history of the operations of the M. E. Church in the South is known to be the history of an unsuccessful struggle for position. So, too, is the history of our operations in the Northwest. In Washington, Montana, Colorado, Nebraska, Oregon, and all along, we have done little more than pay out money to keep starvation from the doors of men who have done but little soul-saving, which the M. E. Church would not have done had our men not been there in the way. That this is the case of the M. E Church in Texas, Louisiana, Alabama, Florida, and so on all around, everyone who has been in position to see knows full well. Good has been done on both sides by the representatives of both churches, but only such as the one would have done had the other been somewhere else doing some good which was out of reach of the other. No thought of disparagement shall be in my heart, nor in my mind, against those brave, consecrated men who have been sent to the border. They are as thoroughly in the line of individual duty as any of the servants of the churches. The responsibility is not on them, but on the churches which sent them. They promised to do the work assigned them, and have been assigned to the work of saving Methodist of this church from being Methodist in that. This they are doing, and while matters remain as at present, this they must continue to do. But there was never an intelligent action without responsibility for it, and some one—maybe many—will be called to answer to this waste of time and sectarian strife.

There is within the State of Louisiana both a Conference and a mission of the M. E. Church. Taking their organizations as a nucleus, there is not a square mile of territory occupied by these organizations that would not be occupied by the M. E. Church, South, if the M. E. Church was out of the way. If the thing be true of us here, why not equally true of them in Oregon? Those preachers of the M. E. Church in the South who would like to remain there would find a hearty welcome in our Conferences, while, no doubt, the same would be true of our preachers in the Northwest who choose to remain in that country.

If, to the proposition to mutually withdraw the forces north and south of forty degrees and thirty-five degrees north latitude, there is a partial organic union, all the better, since such union will make the feeble organizations on the border strong and self-supporting, and stop a waste of missionary money. The Evangelist.

A DILEMMA.

MR EDITOR: Will you allow me space in your columns for this one more deliverance on the much-discussed subject, "The Evangelist"? If so, I may not again tax your patience by asking a place in the ADVOCATE for an expression of opinion. The subject is one of vital importance to the church, and of widespread and growing interest. I do not see how the approaching General Conference, composed of representative men from all the Annual Conferences, can fail to consider it again, and take some action upon it. May they have grace and wisdom to do what is best for the good of the church and the glory of God!

Many things written in criticism of "the evangelist," and modern evangelism in a general way, I have thought were intended, in a special way, for Sam Jones and his work, for he is, facile princeps, "the evangelist" among all others, at least, in the Methodist Church.

An intelligent gentleman in high social position, and a member of another church, said to me, 'I look upon Sam Jones as the greatest evangelist in the world."

The critics of "this giant of the pulpit and platform," as he was styled by the late Dr. Winfield, are either men who care little for the gospel, however preached, or they are good men, some, it may be, in high places, who have seldom or never heard him preach, nor witnessed his marvelous power for good over the thousands who attend upon his ministry. The former class of critics we need not notice, while the latter are not well capacitated to form correct opinions of the evangelist or his work.

Many are wont to inquire, What is the secret of his wonderful power? It is, doubtless, the resultant of many elements, some of which are not easily defined, while others are apparent to all. He seems animated by a fervid and consecrated spirit; he is fearless and bold; he has wit and humor that sparkle with irresistible effect; he has a warm and tender sympathy for sinners. How earnestly, yet with what pathos and gentleness, does he plead at the end of his sermon with men to give up their sins and turn to a better life! What multitudes, running up into the thousands, attend upon his preaching! Great railroad corporations pay court to the fame and power of the wonderful preacher, and for purposes of gain advertise reduced rates to the place of meeting. We venture the opinion that Sam P. Jones preaches the gospel to more people during the year than any living minister. While the churches are inquiring, "How can we reach the masses?" the question finds solution in the vast audiences that crowd to the ministry of this master of assemblies.

Of the constrained location of Rev. Sam P. Jones at the late session of the North Georgia Conference, I write more in sorrow, less in criticism. It goes without question that the Bishop presiding was fully persuaded in his own mind that the course pursued was right and proper. There are, however, influential opinions, analogies and precedents in the history and polity of the church, tending to a different conclusion, to wit: that Sam Jones, agent of the Orphans' Home by appointment of the Bishop, and preaching in Nashville, or other cities, as an evangelist, was "in regular orders." So thought the "Great Commoner," Dr. McFerrin, at Richmond, nearly eight years ago. No difficulty in finding a place for a man of rare gifts to labor as an evangelist under existing law. So thought Dr. E. E. Hoss, now occupying the sanctum of the Great Official of Southern Methodism. A member of the Annual Conference may be appointed president or professor in a church or State school, or he may be appointed as agent for some enterprise of the church, and go abroad preaching and evangelizing. Other Bishops presiding successively over as many, perhaps, as ten former sessions of the North Georgia Conference, had said, by their action, that Sam Jones, agent for the Orphans' Home and general evangelist, was "in regular orders." The course pursued by these former Bishops was traversed by the action of the Bishop presiding at the late session.

Now, here is an issue of administration, a dilemma. If the Bishops presiding at the ten former sessions were right, then the Bishop presiding at the late session was in error; but if he were right, then the former Bishops were in error. Take which horn of the dilemma you will, and episcopacy is impaled upon the other horn. It is a perplexing, not to say distressing, case. I am unable to decide which was the proper course to pursue. There is diverse opinion and some confusion, perhaps, in the public mind. Can not the approaching General Conference, in its wisdom, take such action as shall preclude a possible recurrence of like embarrassing result?

Let the General Conference enact a law recognizing the office and work of the evangelist, providing, at the same time, some appropriate system for the operation of such law. Or, what may be still better, let the General Conference, in its "interpretative function," so construe existing law that the presiding Bishop shall be clearly authorized to appoint a preacher to some agency, or nominal position, in connection with which he may work as an evangelist, if he have suitable gifts. And then, let Bro. Sam Jones go back to the North Georgia Conference at its next session, be readmitted and reappointed as agent of the Orphans' Home and as evangelist; go all over the world, if he choose, preaching the gospel to every creature.

T. C. WIKE.

From Dr. Sullivan.

I wish I had time to write with more fullness on some questions which are likely to come before the next General Conference. But the care of my flock consumes my time. So I state only, in short, the bent of my mind towards a few of these matters.

It seems to me that our educational work ought to be, and for the best results must be, put under system. We need a Board of Education clothed with such powers as will give unity to this department of our work and a true correlation of its parts. The colleges need training-schools as essential feeders; while the college is the proper passage into the university. There ought to be better arrangement and stronger requirement for scholastic preparation for our ministry. Let us have emphasis and method here.

I am in full accord with those who think it important for a preacher in charge to have authority to baptize and marry in his own charge. Our unordained pastors and their flocks are put to great disadvantage, and often loss. I think there is a consistent remedy, and I hope it will be found.

I believe the number of Bishops ought to be increased by two. There are several reasons for this.

I have long felt the need of such provision in our law as will enable the church to get rid of certain offenders without public trial, unless the offender himself should demand trial. The church is this day, in many places, mocked and harmed by members who pay no regard to their vows and obligations and give no heed to admonitions of pastor and friends. They are as thoroughly worldly, and sometimes as vicious, as men of the world. It will be said that we have law for all these cases, and that it is the fault of the preacher if the law is not executed. The law is written in the book; but that its non-execution against these transgressors is generally the fault of the preacher I do not believe. Many of these preachers, the wisest, truest, most courageous, know that often it is impossible to bring an open, persistent offender to trial; and often if that were done, it would rend the local church or work direct harm to innocent souls. Why not have the law so arranged that an offender who persists in violation, and will give no promise of amendment, but rather excuses and defends his conduct, may be reduced to a probationary relation or cut off without further process or trial. It is presumed here that the offender admits the accusation as to the fact. What is now recommended does not infract the fifth restrictive rule; for it does not propose to hesitate to try a member who wishes a trial. The integrity of his "privilege" is left secure. Such a procedure would cut away many dead branches sticking to the great tree, marring its beauty and diverting the currents of its life.

The "evangelists," what shall be done with them? Let them alone under the law of demand and supply. As the case now stands, the preacher in charge is at liberty to choose whether he will have help in his meeting and whom he will ask; and the "evangelist" is at liberty to respond to calls as suits his views of duty. It may be well to modify the law governing local preachers, so that the "evangelist," after giving proper notice to his presiding elder, may be free to fix the limit of his labors; being required, as now, to report in writing to the fourth Quarterly Conference. So far as concerns membership in the Annual Conference, let the decision made by Bishop Hargrove in the North Georgia Conference stand as the permanent law. The Bishop has done the church a service, and the "evangelist" no harm, by the decision he rendered. If the law were to allow an "evangelist" to be a member of an Annual Conference once, then his appointment would have to be given under one of three forms, substantially; either:

(1) To be designated simply as "evangelist," and left free to go where he would choose and make what arrangement he could for support; or (2) to have a "nominal" appointment to something else, with the understanding that he would really work at his own election as an "evangelist;" or (3) to be sent as "evangelist" within his own Conference, with specific duties and privileges, and with definite arrangement for his support. Grave evils would follow either one of these forms. W. T. J. SULLIVAN.

Intermediate Exhibition of Centenary College.

The annual debate between the two literary societies of Centenary College—the Franklin and the Union—took place this year, on March 30, in Franklin Hall, before an audience which filled the hall to its utmost capacity. The question was, "Resolved, That Louisiana should adopt educational qualification for voting." The speakers on the affirmative side were D. W. Wordsworth and R. D. Alexander. Those on the negative were J. Alexander Wall and R. Benjamin Putnam. The discussion was an able one and unusually interesting. The umpires decided in favor of the negative.

The debate was followed by an address on the "Formation of Character," by Dr. John T. Sawyer, of New Orleans, who presented some very practical thoughts in his usual eloquent and forcible style. He spoke inspiringly of Centenary's glorious past, and predicted a still more glorious future. His address was enthusiastically received, and a shower of bouquets fell at his feet at its close.

The Centenary Glee Club, under the skillful management of Miss Mary Pearce, furnished vocal music throughout the entire programme. **

Training the Church.

One of the ablest and wisest ministers has said that the first duty of the pastor is not preaching the gospel to the unconverted, but training and developing the spiritual life of the church. If this is effectually done, the individual members become the most successful workers, by the power of a godly life and by direct effort, in reaching the unconverted.

Perhaps one of the greatest needs of church life at this present time lies just here. There is often a lack of adequate training of those who have been gathered into our churches. No observing Christian can fail to notice that a large proportion of the young people that join our churches are exceedingly ignorant of the Christian world. Many of them have not been brought up in Christian homes, and many, alas! of those who have are almost unacquainted with the Bible, with the principles held by the church which they have joined, with religious literature, with the state of religion in the world and with the doings of the great denominational societies and general agencies for the propagation of the gospel. Now is the time for them to be instructed and educated. They have the essential, the divine life already begun in the soul, they have experienced a real change of heart; but they have yet to learn the new world into which they have been born, to rise to an appreciation of the heritage which is theirs, to grow in grace and be developed into full-statured manhood and womanhood in Christ.—The Standard.

How to Become a Capitalist.

Somebody must save money; and the people who save it will be the capitalists, and they will control the organization of industry and receive the larger share of the profits. If the workingmen will save their money, they may be not only sharers of profits, but owners of stock and receivers of dividends. And the workmen can save their money, if they will. It is the only way in which they can permanently and surely improve their condition. Legislative reforms, improved industrial methods, may make the way easier for them, but there is no road to comfort and independence, after all, but the plain old path of steady work and sober saving. If the working people of this country would save, for the next five years, the money they spend on beer and tobacco and baseball, they could control a pretty large share of the capital employed in the industries by which they get their living; and they could turn the dividends of this capital from the pockets of the money-lenders into their own. There is no other way of checking the congestion of wealth and of promoting its diffusion, so expeditious, so certain, and so beneficent as this. I wish the working people would try it.—Washington Gladden.

You can't prevent the devil from shooting arrows of evil thoughts into your heart; but take care that you do not let such arrows stick fast and grow there. Do as an old man of past times has said: "I can't prevent a bird from flying over my head, but I can prevent him from making a nest in my hair." Martin Luther.

W. P. and H. M. Society.

The Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society is one of the grandest and most charitable works the good Lord has impressed upon the minds of the true and noble Christian women of our fair Southland. Who would fail to assist in this great cause, thereby bringing cheer and comfort, a welcome home to every pastor? "Help one another!" This little sentence should be written on every heart and stamped on every memory. There is a chord of mutual love existing in the hearts of all true Christians. "Praise the Lord." With united effort, a home for every preacher can be had. I will cast in my mite, hoping others will do the same. My fondest memories cluster around my childhood home, when my father's home was a parsonage for the weary itinerant. I was reared in the lap of Methodism, and I love its cause. The latch of my doors have ever been open to give all ministers a cordial welcome. We are rather circumscribed in our church privileges, but a weekly visit from the dear ADVOCATE strengthens and encourages me most wonderfully in the absence of a good sermon. I do not see how any Christian can afford to do without it. It is interspersed with the best collection of tender, touching lines of poetry, which I love to read and re-read.

A FRIEND AND HELPER OF THE W. P. AND HOME MISSION SOCIETY.

"Like as a Father."

A king is sitting with his council deliberating on high affairs of state involving the destiny of nations, when suddenly he hears the sorrowful cry of his little child, who has fallen down or been frightened by a wasp; he rises and runs to his relief, assuages his sorrows and relieves his fears. Is there anything unkingly here? Is it not most natural? Does it not even elevate the monarch in your esteem? Why then do we think it dishonorable to the King of kings, our heavenly Father, to consider the small matters of his children? It is infinitely condescending, but is it not also superlatively natural, that being a Father, he should act as such?

Well, he has given us the promise, "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him." And, despite the cavilings of unbelievers, it is true that he numbers the very hairs of our head, and, while not a sparrow falleth to the ground without him, yet in his sight his children are "of more value than many sparrows."—Selected.

Praying at People.

Public prayer addressed to God, and aimed at the congregation, neither gains his ear or persuades them. It not only falls short of being pious, it is not manly. At a recent religious convention, when a brother, who rose after an address by another brother, attempted to demolish his arguments in a form of prayer, he left the impression on some of the hearers that he was afraid to stand up manfully and reply to what had been said. Once, when a young minister, who was displeased with the conduct of some of his people, had expressed in public prayer his opinion of their actions, a good sister said to him: "When you want to scold us, do so; but don't spoil our devotions by praying at us." He has since said that that was some of the most valuable advice he ever received.—New York Christian Advocate.

The Art of Forgetting.

Memory's studies are all the rage nowadays. But every Christian ought to drill himself in the art of forgetting.

Forget evil imaginations.

Forget the slander you have heard.

Forget the meanness of small souls.

Forget the faults of your friends.

Forget the misunderstandings of yesterday.

Forget the disagreeable people whose talk poured vinegar into your spirit.

Forget all malice, all fault finding, all injuries, all hardness, all unlovely and distressful things.

Start out every day with a clean sheet.

Be lovely, be loving. See how much sunshine you can produce.—Christian Helper.

A Wise Saying.

A man who held a prominent position in the commercial world was once asked what he considered the most difficult part of his business. He thought a moment and then replied, "To find enough boys who have had wise mothering."—Guardian.

A preacher reluctant to lift the lids of a new book has passed the dead-line. The sap is going out of him. His strength will dwindle into dust around the roots, as the growing years, like wood-borers, eat away the fibres. He will come soon to emptiness and impotency. There is loss in tone and temper. His efforts are as the weak whirl of wind, spinning the dry leaves and dust for a moment, and then sinking back into tame and stagnant air.—Richmond Advocate.

Prof. Blackie Makes it Right.

Prof. Blackie was lecturing to a new class with whose personnel he was imperfectly acquainted. A student rose to read a paragraph, his book in his left hand.

"Sir!" thundered Blackie, "hold your book in your right hand!"—and as the student would have spoken—"No words, sir! Your right hand, I say!"

The student held up his right hand, ending piteously at the wrist. "Sir, I hae nae right hand," he said.

Before Blackie could open his lips, there arose a storm of hisses, and by it his voice was overborne.

Then the professor left his place and went down to the student he had unwittingly hurt, and put his arm around the lad's shoulders and drew him close, and the lad leaned against his breast. "My boy," said Blackie—he spoke very softly, yet not so softly but that every word was audible in the hush that had fallen on the class-room—"my boy, you'll forgive me that I was overrough! I did not know, I did not know!" He turned to the students, and with a look and tone that came straight from his heart, he said: "And let me say to you all, I am rejoiced to be shown I am teaching a class of gentlemen." Scottish lads can cheer as well as hiss, and that Blackie learned.—Exchange.

Sympathy.

We can be angels to one another in showing sympathy. Sympathy is, in its inmost essence, the response of feeling, the answer of thought to thought; and, thus understood, its effects are akin to those we have just considered. Weakness of belief is born of loneliness, but is overcome by communion; and in like manner the spirit gathers strength from sympathy. Sympathy cures. It can calm passion, soothe sorrow, and charm even bodily pain away. It is good for the headache and heartache. It comforts the child, encourages the youth, heartens the toiler, and smoothes the last stages of the aged. It is the angel who never dies, and whose word never ceases.—John Page Hopps.

A Sensible Church.

We have recently read of a vacant church which is a decided exception to the general run of churches lacking a minister. Usually such churches insist out that there are peculiar circumstances in their case which make it necessary that they should have a minister greatly above the average. But the folks we have in mind say expressly that they do not want an angel—because they fear the gap between pastor and people would be too wide! Surely here is a pattern of humility or modesty.—Christian Intelligencer.

Empty-Handed.

Think of men going empty-handed into another world, and saying, "O Lord, I made a big fortune in Manchester when I lived there, and I left it all behind me;" or, "I mastered a science, and one gleam of the light of eternity has antiquated it;" or, "I gained prizes, won my aims, and they have all dropped from my hands, and here I stand, having to say in the most tragic sense, 'Nothing in my hands I bring.'"

These words from the Central Christian Advocate should be read by all: "Put the church paper at the head of your periodical list. It is surely unwise to cut off that paper and leave the family little chance to get in touch with the great enterprises and movements of the church to which they belong. How can they be intelligent church members under such circumstances? It is especially important that they should be informed about their own work. It marches in the van. It does not belong to the reserve corps, is on the line of battle where that line has been pushed farthest toward the enemy. Its movements must be prompt and steady. Its companies must move together. If it were a body of skirmishers, there might be room for much independent action on the part of each soldier. But this is the van of the army itself, and its success depends upon its unity of action. Each soldier must know something of what his fellows are doing. You must keep posted if you would be a good Methodist in these days."

An old man said, "I can talk more religion in a day than I can live in a year." His remarks deserve pondering in these days of devotion to the great god of talk.—True Guardian.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

SALAD EGGS.—Are always nice and easily prepared. Boil one dozen eggs hard, cut in two when cold, and remove the yolks; rub smooth with a little vinegar, and season with salt and mustard; then return to the whites, and smooth. Garnish and serve on a large platter.—Exchange.

PUMPKIN PIE.—One egg, the white and yolk beaten separately. To the yolk add a heaping tablespoonful of stewed and mashed pumpkin, with one cupful of milk, half a teaspoonful of ground cinnamon, half a teaspoonful of ginger, one teaspoonful of molasses, one-quarter teaspoonful of salt; lastly, the white of an egg beaten to a froth.—Mrs. John G. Carlisle's Kentucky Cook Book.

A BOILED BREAD PUDDING—Take a pound of stale bread, and pour over it a quart of boiling milk; let it soak one or two hours, then rub it quite fine with the hands. Add five well-beaten eggs, two cupfuls of sugar, half a cupful of molasses, half a nutmeg grated, half a teaspoonful of ground cloves, the grated rind of a lemon, half a pound of suet, chopped fine, and one and a half pounds of raisins. Boil it for four hours. Serve with a rich sauce.—Selected.

To make chocolate cake, take one cup of butter, two cups of sugar, three and one-half cups of flour, five eggs (keeping out three whites), two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one cup of milk, flavor with vanilla. Bake in square sheets. Take the three whites of eggs, add to them one and one-half cups of sugar, one cup of grated chocolate; flavor with vanilla; beat the whites to a stiff froth before putting in sugar and chocolate. Put between and on top of cakes.—Exchange.

A GOOD CELERY SALAD—One heaping tablespoonful of butter, one dessertspoonful of mustard, one dessertspoonful of salt, half a saltspoonful cayenne pepper, four eggs, two-thirds cupful of vinegar. Cook until it creams and begins to thicken, stirring constantly to prevent burning or sticking. When thoroughly cold stir through the chopped celery, reserving enough to smooth over the top. Garnish with curled parsley, carrot leaves, or the tops of celery.—Housekeeper.

VARIETY SOUP.—Chop some cold cooked meat fine, put in a stew pan with any gravy left over, salt and pepper, and boil moderately half an hour. Add a little flour moistened in water, some cubes of toasted bread and a tablespoonful of boiled rice. Or use an onion, a cabbage leaf, a potato sliced fine, a small piece of red pepper and a bit of parsley. Thicken with a tablespoonful of flour blended with water. A little celery root may be grated into it. In fact, anything may be used, and an ingenious housekeeper is never at a loss for expedients.—Housekeeper.

HYGIENE.

The Alcohol Question from the Medical Point of View.

The subject of my paper is one of far-reaching significance, whether for the general advancement of science or for the importance of its bearing on the well-being of the community. On the one hand, we have the deep-rooted and ever-spreading habit of indulgence in alcoholic drinks, presenting to the physiologist and the physician an exceptionally rich material for the study of the many-sided and, scientifically, most interesting subject of intoxication—a study whose teachings are of first-class importance to the student of toxicology generally. On the other hand, the peculiar operation of alcohol is conditioned by the fact that it not only produces many pathological derangements of the physical system, but further exerts an enormous influence on the mental constitution; now paralyzing the activity and the will, and again generating imperious desires and impelling to acts which, without its influence, would never have been called into existence. Here we have conditions the existence of which imperils the well-being of the race and of civilization. Shall and dare we allow this thing to go on without at least making an effort to remedy a condition, the fatal tendency of which displays itself more fully the longer and more closely we devote our attention to it? As regards the economic and social significance of the alcohol problem: It is necessary only to open one's eyes to realize the intimate relation which subsists between the habit of alcoholic indulgence and the working and productive capacity of a people, their earnings, their habits and their domestic surroundings. The thoughtless expenditure which hundreds of thousands of persons of moderate means incur in beer-drinking constitutes a very heavy drain upon their incomes. Among the workingmen generally as much as a sixth of their total earnings is devoted to this object, under the impression that beer is one of the prime necessaries of life. It is, however, in its medical aspect that the question is of prime importance to us as physicians, and I have been driven to devote exceptional attention to the subject by the force of the facts which have obtruded themselves upon me in my daily professional practice.

The present epoch in medicine is with justice characterized as the etiological. It is now universally recognized that the determination of the causes of disease is the first essential step, not only for its treatment, but, what is of more importance, for its prevention. Now, alcoholic poisoning is responsible for more disease than any other single cause, and its action, being chemical, is more easily investigated than the complicated biologic influences of parasitic micro-organisms. It is, in fact, remarkable that clinical observation has been so little directed to this branch of study.

Alcoholic intoxication exhibits in its action phenomena of the same class as present themselves in the case of other chronic poisons. The daily administration of small doses may be continued for an indefinite period without any apparent noxious effect, but its action is cumulative, and may at any moment announce itself as chronic disease. All the indications point to the conclusion that it is the nervous tissue which is especially exposed to the cumulative action of the alcoholic poison. The alcohol sets up a chemical action in the nervous tissue, which at first inaugurates only perceptible change; but once inaugurated, the process goes on until the tissue passes into a permanently diseased condition. Hence, medical opinion is becoming more and more strengthened in the conviction that it is by no means only the free drinkers and notorious drunkards who are victims of this insidious habit, but also innumerable persons who would repel the appellation "drinker" with indignation.

The influence of alcohol on the nerves, and especially on the motor nerves, is seen in the acute stage of intoxication, and in its chronic form is exhibited in delirium tremens, and various forms of neurotic disease. But, fearful as are these diseases, they are of comparatively rare occurrence; while diseases springing from the action of alcohol on the physical organs are of much far more frequent occurrence as to render their consideration of greater practical importance. Alcohol exerts its essential and most significant influence on the vital organs by being taken up in the circulation, and thus brought into direct contact with the cellular tissues of the vital organs. Cirrhose liver, diseases of the heart, of the arteries, of the kidneys, and of the mucous membrane of the alimentary canal, along with gout, diabetes, and fatty degeneration, are all ascribable to it. This is a formidable list when we take into consideration their frequent occurrence, and I can only ascribe the indifference of the profession to a want of realization of the injurious consequences flowing from the pernicious habit. Alcohol is frequently prescribed under the mistaken impression that it possesses wholesome and ever-healing properties. The physican, as family friend and adviser, should be careful not to err in this direction; but especially should alcohol never be administered to children. The prevention of the evils of alcoholism, when once realized, should appeal to us as physicians to enlist all our forces in an earnest effort to grapple with them. Prevention is, in principle, so easy. Nothing is needed but insight and good-will? Shall we not, then, gladly embrace the opportunity to avert such endless misery! The ridicule with which the opponents of alcohol are assailed will lose all its force when one is supported by the firm conviction that he is toiling for a good cause in the service of humanity.—Dr. Adolf Strumpell, in the Literary Digest.

AGRICULTURE.

BY REV. J. W. MCNEIL.

Truck Farming.

The truck growers in our vicinity have certainly had a very hard time this Spring. The cold waves have been of such character as to cause a great deal of loss to many kinds of vegetables, and all kinds of fruits. Now, we do not claim that the wave has anything to do with the changes of the weather, but we have observed that the weather repeats itself. The first cold wave that struck in January was with a shower, the fourth day from the full moon, and continued with unabating severity for four days. This was not supposed to have done much damage, especially to vegetables, as there were none far enough advanced, and none to fruits. The cold wave of February began again with a shower, and again on the fourth day from the full moon, and also continued four days with a like severity as that in January. This wave did a great deal of damage, especially to such vegetables as were in hot-houses and cold frames. The per cent. lost of the tomato crop has been variously estimated from twenty five to forty per cent. March began like an artful coquette—with smiles, and flattering Spring opened with all its loveliness. Many truckers were deluded; many were saying: "This is delightful. We are going to have an early Spring. Winter has gone." Hence planted beans earlier than usual; not a few carried many of their tomato plants to the field. A few of the most observing were cautious, apprehending danger.

Again, as a fact, a shower came in March the fourth day from the full moon; a cold wave followed as the others in January and February, and again continued four days. The wind changed as in the former months; the thermometer ran up as in the instances mentioned to 60 degrees. This was deceptive, the only instances of difference in these waves. The wind did not move from the Southeast more than eight or ten hours before another change took place. The wind began to blow from the north. The thermometer ran from 60 degrees down to 30 degrees in twelve hours. In this many were caught. The man that escaped entirely is the exception. This left a black line of disaster in its course, long to be remembered. Now, the loss in tomatoes at a low calculation of those left in February is twenty-five per cent. Add this to the loss in February, which was estimated from twenty-five to forty per cent., and it makes a total loss of the whole crop planted, fifty per cent. The loss in the bean crop has been variously estimated. It is safe to say twenty-five per cent. The root crops have also suffered. Advanced radishes are said to be ruined, with some damage to turnips, beets and carrots. At least one-half of the strawberry crop is lost. It is thought now there may be a few peaches.

In our last we stated that the loss to the community would reach seventy-five thousand dollars. It is now safe to say not less than one hundred thousand dollars. The question may be asked what crops have we that amount to so much. The original tomato crop planted would have, if not disaster had befell it, run up to twenty-five or thirty carloads a day. The bean crop from five to seven carloads a day. The peach, with a full crop, it would be difficult to estimate. One farm has a peach orchard of five hundred acres. It was said only two years ago that Crystal Springs planted and grew more tomatoes than all the Gulf States together. This is hardly so now, as so many other localities have the last two years engaged in this production. It can be said what Cobden, Ill., is to the West, Crystal Springs is to the South.

To Prevent the Ravages of the Cabbage Worm.

Editor of The Southern Cultivator: As the cabbage worm frequently proves very destructive, I herewith give a remedy that experience has proved to be very efficacious:

Dissolve one pound of alum in any convenient quantity of rain water by means of heat, then add a sufficient quantity of cold rain water to bring the mixture up to three gallons. Apply of this solution to the cabbage as occasion may require, preferably late in the evening. The alum tans the hides of the worms, causing death without injury to the plants. The solution is also believed to be equally good for preventing the ravages of insects on other plants, such as melon vines, etc. BRYAN TYSON.

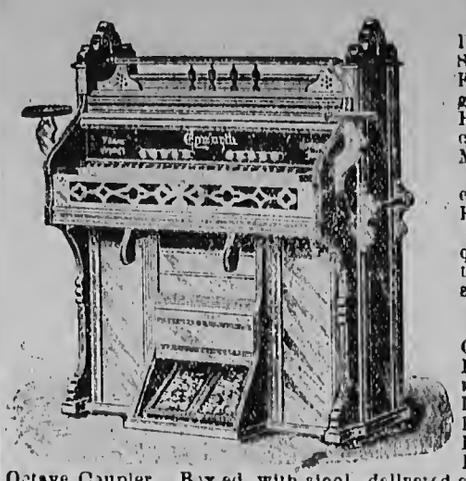
ORGANS AS PREMIUMS.

We have made arrangements to offer a rare bargain in the way of organs as premiums to our subscribers. The organs which we handle are the Epworth Organs. These have not heretofore had much sale in Mississippi and Louisiana, though they have had an immense sale throughout the North and West and also in some of the Southern States. Do you want a small organ for your church? If so, read the description given below of Style No 102, and see how it would suit you.

STYLE 102. THE EPWORTH CHAPEL ORGAN.

HEIGHT, 51 IN.; WIDTH, 23 IN.; LENGTH, 48 IN.



Best Low-Priced Chapel Organ.

Walnut case; Hard Wood Panels; Finished Back; Lamp Stands; Handsome Fret Work; Full Length Music Desk; Engraved Ornaments; Hand Rubbed; Oil Finish; Pedals covered with Brussels Carpet; Metal Guards on Pedals.

This is the Organ for Churches and Sunday-schools, where a First-Class Action is Desired. In a good, plain case, the quality of action and tone being the same as in the higher priced styles.

Style 102, 12 Stops.

EPWORTH CHAPEL.—Five Octaves, containing four sets of Reeds of two and one-half Octaves each. STOPS—Principal; Dulcet Diapason; Diapason Forte; Vox Angelica; Principal Forte; Cremona; Melodia; Echo Horn; Celeste. Metal Octave Coupler. Boxed, with stool, delivered on board cars at factory. $

The catalogue price of this is $87. We will give it as a premium for one hundred subscribers. Send us the cash $200, for the subscribers, and you get the organ free. If you can't get one hundred persons to subscribe personally, perhaps you have well-to-do members of your church who will pay for several poorer members, thereby bestowing a blessing upon them by giving them a religious paper and at the same time helping to procure an organ for your church. If you don't exactly like Style 102, then read the description of Style 302.

IMPROVED STYLE 302 "SPECIAL." EPWORTH CHAPEL ORGAN.

Denominational Statistics.

The following extract from a pamphlet published by Rev. G. E. Chandler, of the Presbyterian Church, furnishes food for reflection on the part of those who have to do with ecclesiastical affairs:

There are, in the State of Louisiana, among the whites, 26,978 Baptists, 20,483 Methodists, 5,256 Episcopalians, 4,855 Presbyterians. For other Evangelical denominations, such as the Lutherans, Congregationalists, etc., 4,000 would be an ample estimate. For the colored churches, 109,777 would be a safe estimate. Making a total of 171,547 professing Christians, black and white. Just think of it! Out of a population of 1,118,587, only 171,547 professing Christians, and leaving, so far as the Protestant churches are concerned, 947,028—nearly a million who are destitute of the gospel.

There are within the bounds of this Synod* a population of 2,083,326 souls. Think of it! Out of this vast number, there are only 456,350 persons whose names are enrolled upon the records of all denominations, black and white. To this may be added the adherents of the Church of Rome, estimated at 350,000—which is nearly three-fourths of the number of Protestants, black and white, for the entire Synod, and is believed to be an ample estimate—and we have, all told, 806,350 followers of Christ.

Just think of it again! 1,276,976 souls! More than a "round million and a quarter" of people, within the bounds of this Synod, who make no pretense to serve God in any church, black or white, Protestant or Romish!

There are within the bounds of this Synod thirty six counties and parishes without a Presbyterian Church; twenty parishes without a Baptist Church, and five parishes without a Methodist Church. And, so far as is known, there are five parishes in Louisiana without a Protestant church of any kind.

*The Synod of Mississippi embraces the southern two-thirds of the State of Mississippi and the whole of Louisiana.

At Indianola.

We left New Orleans on Friday morning at seven o'clock, via the I. C. R. R., for Indianola. We reached Jackson, Miss., at two P. M., and stopped off until midnight. During our stay we enjoyed the hospitalities of our friends, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Griffith. We had the pleasure of exchanging greetings with a number of old friends, among them several of the itinerant fraternity, viz., Bishop Galloway and Bros. Watkins, Dominick and West. Daylight found us at Winona, where we remained two or three hours awaiting the west-bound train on the Georgia Pacific. We reached Indianola about half-past nine. At Winona and at nearly every station on the Georgia Pacific several ladies boarded the train, all ticketed to Indianola. We soon learned that, besides the District Conference, which was set for Monday, Indianola had on her programme another gathering, viz.: the Woman's Missionary Conference of the Winona district.

The pastor, Bro. O. L. Savage, assisted by an efficient corps of men and women, was at the depot to assign delegates to their homes. Within less than an hour after the arrival of the train the Woman's Missionary Conference was in session, under the presidency of the district secretary, Mrs. Mary V. Jones, of Sunnyside.

The opening devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. W. S. Shipman, of Greenwood. Mrs. Nina Thayer was elected secretary. Reports from the auxiliaries showed the society to be in a very healthful condition. While the number of members is smaller than it should be, yet there is everywhere a faithful few who are doing what their hands find to do towards advancing this great interest of the Redeemer's kingdom.

We were especially struck with the work of the juvenile societies, as brought out in the reports. If the juveniles are doing as well everywhere as in the Winona district, the church is to be congratulated. We say this, not so much with reference to the amount of money raised for the cause of missions as with reference to the effect upon the youthful workers themselves. No better work can be done by any church than to train its children to love the cause of missions and to be willing to make sacrifices in its behalf.

The sisters held an afternoon session, and a night session on Saturday, and also on Sunday.

One of the sessions was given to the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society. The exercises throughout were quite well attended by the people of Indianola. Several preachers of the district were present and were introduced to the Conference.

On Sunday, at eleven, we occupied the pulpit. Although the weather was quite unfavorable, the audience just about equalled the capacity of the building. The service, we hope, was not without good results. One young man professed conversion as a result of the service. The night session, which was the closing service of the Conference, was a very enjoyable one. Methodism is certainly on the up-grade in Indianola as well as in the regions roundabout.

We have here a new, neat, tasteful house of worship of ample dimensions to meet the wants of the community. We have also a good parsonage with ample grounds. The congregations are good, and the tendency is upward along every line. Methodism has displayed her usual sagacity in occupying promptly the new towns in this Delta region. Of this we shall say more at another time.

Of the District Conference we shall speak in our next issue. This is mailed too early to give any of its proceedings. The brethren have laid off considerable work for us. We are booked for a sermon at Baird on Monday night, and Greenville on Tuesday night. So we shall see but little of the District Conference.

We expect to take in the Greenville District Conference, which meets at Cleveland, on Thursday morning. The pleasure of our brief stay in Indianola has been brightened by the courtesies extended to us by our host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Baird, and also by Bro. O. L. Savage and his excellent wife.

Bishop Sessums and Christian Unity.

The Annual Council of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Louisiana was in session in New Orleans last week. The body was small, as that church has not a large membership in the State. Only about thirty-two ministers are in the entire diocese. Possibly, the most notable feature of the occasion, to persons outside of that communion, was the diocesan address of Bishop Sessums. It was a lengthy document and discussed many things. Its practical value was obscured, doubtless, by too much mere homily and labored writing. To many readers the young Bishop has style too involved for terse, strong statements. As evidence, read this reference to the atonement:

> The statement, instead of meaning the legal fulfillment by the representative of humanity of a disciplinary necessity that man should suffer just what he inflicted, or a negative destruction of the barriers of sin between man and God in order to justify God in not cursing man, must signify the actual unification of God and man, a complete fidelity of man to God in a perfect love, and the purpose of God to prevail by his love until the human spirit shall glorify him by a divine life. All this language, relating first to Christ, and describing not an objective drama but spiritual realities, and then requiring to be applied to the subjective and personal history of each soul, is too much made to apply solely to Christ, as to some fact outside the spirit. The devotional contemplation of Christ, profoundly realizing him as the revealer of salvation, commits the unreality of externalizing the whole process of God in the soul, and striving to conceive it true of some substitute, of something other than personal experience, of finding the truth of it in an eternal mediator, instead of the conscious worship of each soul; in more language, instead of personal being; in supernatural mechanics, instead of personal character.

The spirit of the address, in its discussion of Christianity, was kindly and respectful. He approaches the subject with these words: "Possessed as we are of a great community conception of Christianity, there is call for us in the diocese of Louisiana to undertake some effort toward Christian unity." Just how that "great community conception" differs from that held by other evangelical churches he does not state. If evidenced by their success in reaching and saving the "community," the conception is not so great. But whatever the "conception" that occasions the "call," the Bishop is sincerely desirous of a genuine, intelligent Christian unity. After referring to what others had attempted, and to the recent symposium in the Independent, and "hoping to avoid the extreme of either sentimentalism or ecclesiasticism," he proceeds to discuss the "misunderstanding touching the term 'unity.'" To those abstract observations there need be little objection, but from the implication of this statement, which has no logical connection with the foregoing, every "non-churchman" will emphatically dissent: "That ministry best illustrates the ideal and duty of the Christian body, as a society, true to Christ, by descending from the founder instead of ascending from the system." All churches that insist on a "divine call" to the sacred office have, in an eminent sense, a ministry "descending from the founder." Those accepting men who have chosen the pulpit as they select any profession or trade have a man-made ministry "ascending from the system." We believe in a divine call, "descending from the founder," and that no one should dare assume ministerial responsibility without clear, satisfactory assurance of such a call. The regulations of his functions and the ordering of his spiritual energies inhere in the church—ascend from the system.

If the following paragraph is correctly understood, it is accepted and reciprocated:

> Without discussing the probabilities as to whether other Christian ministers would accept such invitations from our communion, or whether they would reciprocate them, the function of preaching need not be made to exhaust the meaning of the ministry, and it might be possible to reserve witness to a fundamental truth and still open a way to such interchange. But the probabilities would be against any helpful result; as it is likely that such superficial contracts would be taken for the millenium; that real differences would be unreasonably sunk from view, and a united devotion to a real essence in Christianity, be the longer postponed. If Christian ministers could, by any influence, be brought into touch in order to understand their actual divergencies, instead of to minimize their own platforms and felicitate one another upon generalities of concord, it might truly be possible to approximate nearer to unity. If Christian teachers could be constrained to probe into one another, apart from their congregations, until the whole ground of division was laid bare, reconstruction would be inevitable, recognitions universal and reunion not long delayed.

Such association and conference as is here suggested—such respectful and honest "touch" as is here advocated—must be had before there can be any substantial advance toward a closer unity. And ministers ought to have grace and sincerity "to probe into one another" "until the whole ground of division was laid bare." But who is responsible for the failure to cultivate closer personal relations and interchange of views among ministers? Who decline invitations to preachers' meetings—meetings "apart from their congregations?" Who are supersensitive lest their presence on such occasions should weaken protest against ecclesiastical error, and compromise clerical dignity and authority? And if such opportunities are declined, how can men "probe into one another," and reach the higher, clearer reconstruction, the catholic-spirited young Bishop so much desires? Of course, there must be mutual and respectful recognition of honesty, purpose and view before there can be any profitable ascertainment and consideration of "real differences" and "actual divergencies." With the prayer of the Bishop for Christian unity on a broad scriptural basis, Methodism has ever been in hearty accord.

The American Church History Series.

THE AMERICAN CHURCH HISTORY SERIES. Vol. XI. Christian Literature Company, New York. 1894.

This volume contains the history of four denominations—viz., the M. E. Church, South, the United Presbyterian Church, the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and the Presbyterian Church—in the United States. These histories are written respectively by Prof. Gross Alexander, D. D.; James B. Scouler, D. D.; Prof. R. V. Foster, D. D., and Prof. T. C. Johnson, D. D. We have had the time to read only the first. This consists of a hundred and forty-two pages.

From a literary standpoint, it is a gem, being written in the vigorous, concise, transparent style which one would naturally expect from the learned Vanderbilt professor. As a history it is equally meritorious. We do not see how it would be possible to put into the brief compass of a hundred and forty-two pages a fuller statement of the leading facts connected with the origin and history of the M. E. Church, South. And yet, compressed as it is, there is not a dull page in it. We read it through at a sitting, and reached the finis with regret. If this work were published by our Publishing House apart from the other histories that are here bound with it, we believe it would have such a sale as no Methodist history has never had. It is just such a compend of history as ought to be in the hands of every member of the Southern Methodist Church.

From what little reading we have done in the other histories contained in this volume, we judge that they are all excellent. Every preacher and every intelligent layman should, at his earliest convenience, place this work in his library. The price of the volume is $3.

The Secret of Happiness.

One of the happiest Christians I know is happy on a small income and in spite of some very sharp trials. The secret of happiness is not in the size of one's purse, or in the style of one's house or the number of one's butterfly friends. The fountain of peace and joy is in the heart. If you would only throw open your heart's windows to the sunshine of Christ's love, it would soon scatter the chilling mists, and even turn tears into rainbows. Some professed Christians pinch and starve themselves into walking skeletons, and then try to excuse themselves on the plea of ill health or "constitutional" ailments.

The medicines they need are from Christ's pharmacy. A large draught of Bible taken every morning, a throwing open of the heart's windows to the promise of the Master, a few words of honest prayer, a deed or two of kindness to the next person whom you meet, will do more to brighten your countenance and help your digestion than all the drugs of the doctors. If you want to get your aches and trials out of sight, hide them under your mercies.

Bear in mind, my friends, that your happiness or your misery is very much of your own making. You can not create spiritual sunshine any more than you can create the morning star, but you can put your soul where Christ is shining. Begin every day with God. Keep a clear conscience, and a good stock of Bible promises within reach. Keep a strong, robust faith which can draw honey out of a rock and oil out of the flinty rock. Never spend a day without trying to do something good; and then, keeping step with your Master, march on towards home over any road, however rough, and against any headwinds which blow. It will be all sunshine when we get to heaven, and "there is no night there."—Dr. Cuyler.

Paradoxes of Life.

The hand that beckons us to glory waves us out of impenetrable clouds. We walk in a way that we know not. We labor for our Master, but never know beforehand which shall prosper, whether this or that. We lay wise plans, and they miscarry; we commit gross blunders, and they are overruled for good. We run toward the light, and it goes out in darkness; we sink shivering in the darkness, and find light. We pray for joys, and they mildew into griefs; we accept the griefs, and they blossom into joys. To-day the apple turns to ashes, and to-morrow the stones to bread. We exult in some prosperity, and get leanness with it; we murmur at some adversity, and find it big with blessings. We run toward an open door, and dash our heads against a granite wall; we move against the wall at the call of duty, and it opens to let us through. The lines of our lives are all in God's hands. What shall befall us we can not tell; what is expedient we can not know. Only this we know, that God would shape us to himself, whether it be by discipline of joy or the discipline of sorrow. To make us perfect as he is perfect, this is the choice of our heavenly Father; this is the end of all his revelations; while everything not helpful to this he hides away out of sight.—Dr. Roswell D. Hitchcock.

Kosciusko District Conference.

The third session of the Kosciusko District Conference was held in Ackerman, Miss., April 1-3, 1894. Bishop R. K. Hargrove presided, and R. G. Porter was secretary. The representation was not full, but fairly good, considering the season of the year.

The Conference began on Sunday with a strong, full, mellow sermon on "What must I do to inherit eternal life?" by Bishop Hargrove. The preaching was done by Rev. I. W. Cooper, L. D. Worsham, J. A. Leech, W. D. McCullough, J. W. Dorman and W. C. Lester.

Bishop Hargrove's method of getting the reports and bringing out the facts is by far the best this scribe has ever seen. All this work was done by committees, and their reports were considered and discussed by the Conference. Instead of dull and tedious routine work, we had a live Conference from the opening to the close.

Every interest, financial, spiritual, Sunday-schools, missions, literature, temperance, education, was carefully considered and freely and fully discussed. Some of the facts brought out were encouraging and some very painful.

Strong emphasis was laid on the law of the church as it stands related to these interests, and the importance of our Methodist methods of carrying on the work of the church was greatly magnified. The good seed sown will yield good fruit.

Rev. I. W. Cooper, agent of Millsaps College, was present and did good work for that great enterprise.

The Conference determined to try to raise funds sufficient to build a cottage on the campus of Millsaps College, to be called "The Robert Paine Mitchell Home," in memory of Rev. R. P. Mitchell of blessed memory. It was agreed to ask the Winona and Aberdeen District Conferences to co-operate in this work.

The presence and counsel of the Bishop was a pleasure and a great blessing.

The next Conference will be held in Lexington.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: J. G. Irving, F. M. Glass, G. B. Ramsey and W. T. Newsom. Alternates: B. A. Clarke and Frank Townsend.

Taken altogether, this was the liveli, most interesting, most pleasant and most profitable District Conference this scribe ever attended.

The hospitality of Ackerman was abounding. GILDEROY.

April 4, 1894.

NOTES

Rev. W. T. J. Sullivan, D. D., will preach the sermon, and Rev. W. R. Sims, Ph. D., will deliver the address, at the commencement of Edward McGehee College, June 17-19.

Some of our new subscribers will not get our last week's issue for the reason that our stock was exhausted. We received more new subscribers than we anticipated, and hence did not issue papers enough to meet the demand.

Rev. J. W. Davis, of the Louisiana Conference, has been in the city several days watching at the bedside of a sick wife, who is now, we are glad to learn, convalescent. Bro. White preached at Felicity last Sunday night.

From a private letter from Rev. J. G. Sibley we make the following extract: "My work is moving on and up. The prospects are fine for a prosperous year in spiritual things. The people treat us well and seem to love us much."

Rev. H. Walter Featherston, D. D., has resigned the presidency of Edward McGehee College, to take effect at the close of the current term in June. Dr. Featherston takes this step that he may devote himself exclusively to the ministry.

With pain we chronicle the death of Hon. E. C. Postell, of Canton, Miss. Bro. Postell has been for many years an active worker in the church, filling the various church offices—steward, trustee and Sunday-school superintendent—with great acceptability and usefulness. He has often been a delegate to the Annual Conference. His obituary will appear in due time.

Correspondents will have to exercise the grace of patience. A number of communications now on hand will have to wait for some time before they make the acquaintance of the compositor. These delayed communications are in good company. We have been crowded out several times of late. But what we have written will not spoil by keeping, and the same may be said of much else that is in the mill.

Miss Laura Haygood, of Atlanta, sister of Bishop Haygood, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who has been a missionary to China for a number of years, is coming home for a vacation, the first one she has had since going to China. In 1884 Miss Haygood was principal of the Girls' High School in Atlanta. She resigned her position and announced her intention of going as a missionary to China. In the Fall of 1884 she went to China and has been there ever since. She has been for some time in Shanghai, where she is in charge of the educational institution under the auspices of the mission. She will spend her time with her brother, Bishop Haygood, at Oxford.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

A POWERFUL and the ONLY KNOWN Solvent of STONE IN THE BLADDER.

The following plate is from a photograph which forms a part of a communication of Dr. Geonge H. Pierce, of Danbury, Conn., to the New England Medical Monthly for Nov. 1890 (see page 76 of that journal), and represents some of the largest specimens of

Two Ounces and Twenty-seven Grains of Dissolved Stone from a patient under the action of Buffalo Lithia Water. Smaller particles, and a quantity of Brickdust deposit, Dr Pierce states, were not estimated.

Commissioner of Health, New York City, and President of the Board of Pharmacy.

"I have frequently made use of

in my practice, with excellent results. It is a potent remedy for correcting Rheumatic Diathesis. In a case of uric acid gravel, in which I recently prescribed it, its beneficial effects were apparent after the third dose. I have also prescribed it with great benefit in Bright's Disease of the Kidneys."

This Water has proved not less efficacious in BRIGHT'S DISEASE OF THE KIDNEYS, GOUT, RHEUMATIC GOUT, RHEUMATISM, NERVOUS DYSPEPSIA, NERVOUS EXHAUSTION, &c.

An Appeal to the Young People of Mississippi.

Dear Young Friends: Millsaps College needs a large hall for young men of limited means. We must build it. The hall is a necessity. Would it not be a handsome work for the young Mississippians to furnish the agent with money to build this hall? If we can get at the work right, we can do it. I want the young Methodists of Mississippi to send me five thousand dollars. Let us go to work in earnest. Let the young people from five to twenty-one years of age send me from fifty cents to one dollar each. Let every church and community be represented. The name and amount will appear in the New Orleans Christian Advocate. May our Father inspire your hearts, dear young friends, to help us build this hall! Let me hear at once from you. Your friend,

I. W. COOPER.

Tried and True is the verdict of people who take Hood's Sarsaparilla. The good effects of this medicine are soon felt in nerve strength restored, appetite created and health given.

Hood's Pills do not weaken, but aid digestion and tone the stomach. Try them.

Notice.

The church at Cross Roads will be dedicated by Rev. R. A. Burroughs, P. E., the first Sunday in May. All the former pastors of the Atlanta circuit are invited to be present on that day.

S. B. Myers, Pastor.

Our Pianos and Organs.

The musical instruments which we are offering as premiums are manufactured by the Williams Piano and Organ Co., Centerville, Iowa. This is a large establishment which has branch offices in other cities. The descriptions we give of the instruments are taken from their catalogue. Our subscribers may write to them for catalogues and prices, if they choose. We will give them as good terms, as they can get from the manufacturers themselves. Notice that if the requisite number of subscribers can not be procured, the instruments can still be had. Get as many subscribers as you can, and then write us for terms.

From the Work.

Rev. C. F. Emery, P. C., Lumberton, Miss.: "Truly the lines have fallen to us in pleasant places. The people are just as kind, generous and hospitable as a preacher could wish to serve, and we are very grateful for the affectionate reception they have accorded us. This charge embraces Purvis, Lumberton and Poplarville. The collections for support of the ministry have been paid in full for the quarter, and nearly one-half of the amount assessed for Conference claims has been collected, with the balance secured in good subscriptions. It gives me great pleasure to report that the amount assessed for foreign missions has been forwarded to the treasurer. We are now contemplating the erection of a fine brick church at this place. But of this more at another time."

Rev. R. W. Bailey, P. C., Hazlehurst, Miss.: "Our first Quarterly Conference held yesterday, March 26, furnishes occasion for a few words from Hazlehurst. Primarily, there would be no discussion as to the wisdom of maintaining the office if there were enough presiding elders like Norsworthy to go around. He tells important truths, and tells them vigorously. Hazlehurst station was among the last of the first round of Conferences. Not a charge in the district has cut on last year's salary, and in many instances there has been material increase. And if the presiding elder does not get sick, the salaries are going to be paid. His visit here was wonderfully invigorating to our Board of Stewards. The reports indicated financial condition better than for years. Congregations are growing; increase in membership of fourteen during the quarter. Sunday-school and prayer meeting improving as the warmer season comes on."

Rev. J. W. Honnoll, Holly Springs, Miss., March 28: "The second quarterly meeting for the Tupelo station embraced last Sabbath. Rev. W. S. Lagrone, our presiding elder, came on Friday, and remained until Tuesday. He did all of his work faithfully and efficiently. The result was, we had a precious service. The assessments for the preacher paid in full to date. When Bro. Moon laid down his arms, his work was in excellent condition. In more than thirty years' labor as a traveling preacher, I have never before entered on a work as well organized and in as good working condition. His faithful wife, instead of sitting down and grieving over her great sorrow, has gone on with her faithful work for the church, and its prosperous condition to-day is due to her more than to any other living person. We have almost as many scholars in the Sunday-school as we have members in the church, and our League has ninety members. Our presiding elder made a good speech for the Conference organ."

Rev. R. M. Standofer: "We have won a great victory for temperance in Lowndes county. Every box in the county went dry by a surprisingly large majority. The Christian people of Columbus have been holding thanksgiving services and praising the Lord for the great victory. It is now believed that this election is the death of the whisky traffic forever in Columbus. Our city had been dry for nearly a year, and the good effects of prohibition on the business of the city made many friends for our cause, many of our Hebrew friends voting the dry ticket. I have never witnessed a quieter election nor have I ever seen men work and pray with more earnestness for the last ten days. Before the election a men's prayer meeting was kept up daily in the pastor's study, and at every service earnest prayer was offered for the success of the temperance cause. Not only this, but at the morning and evening sacrifice in the homes of our people many devout men and women prayed that the Lord would guide us to victory, and the answer came. A singular fact is this: the antis lost several votes by failing to mark the ballot correctly; not a single vote was lost from anon cause by the temperance party."

Rev. C. McDonald, P. E. Forest, Miss., March 27: "We have just finished the first round, and will send you a few items from the district. We have a neat study in front of the district parsonage not yet finished, but so we can use it. Our District High School, at Montrose, is doing well. The new circuit parsonage at Montrose will soon be finished. Bro. Bradley and family occupy the old parsonage. Bro. Rayner has finished work begun last Fall on his parsonage at Morton, amounting to $250. The parsonage at Trenton is being rebuilt. It will be virtually a new one. Bro. Barr and his people are justly proud of their work. The first payment has been made on the Raleigh parsonage. So we expect to own the house bought on a credit last Fall. Work is progressing on the new Raleigh church-house. Carr's Church, on Lake circuit, has been repainted. Some of the parsonages have been furnished to some extent. The financial reports are better than for the last two years. Peace generally prevails, with prosperity, that is encouraging to the preachers and people. The preachers are working with an energy that is commendable."

E. I. C., Hermanville, Miss.: "As I never see anything in our Advocate from our church or Sunday-school, I will be pleased to have you publish this for the encouragement of the children. I have a little twelve-year-old girl in my class who is a very fine pupil. She recites a scriptural verse at roll call; has memorized the Ten Commandments, Lord's Prayer, Apostolic Creed; always has a perfect lesson and is very attentive while in the class. About one year ago I gave her a savings bank with one dime in it, requesting her to work, save all she made, and give a tenth to the missionary cause. She has been in school eight months of the time. Had fever during the Summer and Fall vacation. As soon as she was able she picked peas and cotton for her papa, and made the money herself. Her bank was robbed once of one dollar and ten cents. Notwithstanding all this, she brought in on yesterday (Missionary Day) twenty-five cents, and as she handed it to me her eyes sparkled and her face beamed with joy as she said, 'This is the tenth of my savings, and I give it to the missionary cause.' I hope many in our school will follow dear little Irene Torrey's example. May God's blessings rest upon her, and go with her contribution! is the prayer of her teacher."

Caseyville Circuit.

Truly the lines have fallen to us in pleasant places. The people of this circuit have been kind to us indeed, and when we came were accorded a warm and generous reception.

This work has been served by some of the best preachers of the Mississippi Conference, and with their labors in organizing and developing the work, added to the fact that we have here some of the best men and women you can find anywhere to assist us, surely success ought to crown our labors. We came to the work while tussling with la grippe, which interfered with our doing what we had desired; but with the return of warmer days we are beginning to get all right again, and we thank God and take courage. Our first quarterly meeting was held at Sweetwater last Friday, and Bro. Norsworthy came to us in the spirit of the Master; preached us a most excellent sermon, after which the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered, and the services were profitable indeed. It was good to be there. The Quarterly Conference was a successful one every way, spiritually and financially. We all missed Uncle Dave McRee, who rarely missed a quarterly meeting, and one whose wise counsels and mature judgment were so highly valued. "God buries his workmen, but carries on his work."

W. G. Backus, P. C.

Resolutions.

At the first quarterly meeting on Caseyville circuit, held at Sweetwater, March 2, 1894, the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That in the death of Uncle Dave McRee we realize our loss and bow in submission to him who doeth all things well.

Resolved, That in his relation to the church as steward, which office he held so long, he was ever found faithful, and his life of devotion and loyalty to the church was beautiful and worthy of our imitation.

Resolved, That we extend to the relatives of the deceased our heartfelt sympathies, and pray that the God of all comfort may sustain them in their affliction.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the members of his family, and also furnished the New Orleans Christian Advocate and Brookhaven Leader for publication.

Notice.

To the Preachers of the Aberdeen District, North Mississippi Conference—

Dear Brethren: Those of you who have not sent me the names of your delegates and officials who expect to attend the District Conference at Shannon, April 27 and 28, will please do so at once, that homes may be provided for them. Fraternally,

M. E. Tumlin.

REMEMBER there are hundreds of brands of White Lead (so called) on the market that are not White Lead, composed largely of Barytes and other materials. But the number of brands of genuine is limited. The following brands are standard "Old Dutch" process, and just as good as they were when you or your father were boys:

Strictly Pure White Lead

"Southern," "Red Seal," "Collier."

If you want colored paint, thut any of the above strictly pure leads with National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, a pound of color to 25 pounds of lead. The best merchants sell them, the best painters use them.

A good many thousand dollars have been saved property-owners by having our book on painting and color-card. Send us a postal card and get both free.

Epworth League.

By Rev. Henry H. Ahrens.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE CONVERSION OF LYDIA; THE INTRODUCTION OF THE GOSPEL INTO EUROPE.

(Acts xvi, 6-15; Isaiah ix, 6-5.)

1. A vision appeared to the Apostle Paul, requesting that he should come to Macedonia.

(1) Miraculous assistance from the Master was at that time necessary in order to give firm foothold to the church. Such aid was repeatedly rendered.

(2) In our day miraculous interference is not necessary. As a rule, dreams have no significance. No supernatural voices and visions.

(3) If we walk prayerfully with God, the Holy Spirit will lead us into all truth.

2. Arriving at the chief city of Macedonia, Philippi, Paul and his associates, on the Sabbath, resorted to the place where prayer was wont to be made.

(1) We should be grateful for houses of prayer, for churches. Help to support them. Beautify them.

(2) On the Sabbath we, too, should be found in the house of God. Too much Sunday-sickness.

3. Many heard the apostle preach, but only one was converted.

(1) That one was Lydia, of Thyatira, a migratory vendor of purple. A well-known character, it would seem. Intelligent, energetic, influential.

(2) The Lord opened her heart. She was prayerfully attentive to what the preacher said. She heeded his instructions.

4. Lydia gave proof of the genuineness of her conversion.

(1) Being baptized, she insisted that her household also join the church. Having become a child of God, she desired that everybody should enjoy that privilege.

(2) She constrained Paul and his companions to partake of her hospitality.

The Ideal League.

It rests not until all the young people of the congregation where it is located have been enrolled as members.

It is not aristocratically formal, nor socially unrestrained.

It helps the pastor in winning members for the church.

It gladly assists the poor and visits the sick.

It takes warm interest in home and foreign missions.

It familiarizes itself with the history of our church.

During protracted meetings the members are indefatigable in securing large attendance on divine worship.

It sees to it that the weekly prayer meeting is a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord.

It takes a lively interest in the Sunday-school, canvassing the neighborhood for children, teaching class, etc.

League Dots.

In Kentucky the Leagues of our church and of the Methodist Episcopal Church held a Union State Convention. Result: A general falling out; bitter recrimination.

The Leagues in New Orleans are invited to attend the annual meeting of our City Church Extension Society, Thursday, May 1, 7:30 o'clock P. M., at Carondelet Street Church.

In First Church, St. Louis, the Christian Endeavor Society has been converted into an Epworth League. We expect to hear of many such conversions.

Old Bethel Camp Ground, near Woodville, has been rehabilitated with modern tabernacle, hotel and numerous tents. Two camp meetings have been held there—one last year and one the year before—resulting in over two hundred conversions. Preparations are being made for the next one, to begin Aug. 9. One suggestive fact connected with this camp ground is that no gate fees are charged, no noted evangelists are announced, none of the modern methods of drawing attendance are used, and yet the attendance is large, the improvements and other expenses are all paid, not a cent is owed to anybody, and there is money in the treasury. Old-fashioned Methodist collections are taken every year, and old-fashioned Methodist revival methods are used.

Chambers' Encyclopædia,

Complete in 30 Handy Volumes.
Over 12,000 Pages.

A reprint of the Edinburgh and London edition of Chambers' Encyclopædia, a library of universal knowledge for the people, with very large additions upon topics of special interest to American readers, giving American statistics of population down to and including the census of 1890.

Remember, this great Encyclopædia contains thousands upon thousands of articles, embracing all subjects within the limits of human knowledge; yet, in its more than 27 000 specially prepared articles, while giving pointed, practical, explicit and most interesting and instructive information both for the student and the general reader, it is free from ambiguous technicalities and comparatively void of the mass of scientific signs, symbols and foreign nomenclature which crowd the pages of most other cyclopedias prepared for scientific and professional use alone. The Philadelphia Press well says:

Do you ever want to post yourself easily and speedily, on some facts or matters belonging to the domain of Biography, Chemistry, Religion, Geography, Medicines, Health and Disease, Physical or Mental Recreation in Popular Games, etc.; Literature, Natural Philosophy, Astronomy, Agriculture, Mathematics, or any of the Arts and Sciences? If you do, avail yourself of this opportunity to secure a set of this great Encyclopædia.

OUR OFFER.

The regular retail price of the imported edition of this immense reference library is $30.00. The cost to you for a full set, complete, printed on good paper, in beautiful, clear type, bound in flexible covers, delivered, free of cost to you, together with one year's subscription for this paper, will be only $4 50.

How to Avail Yourself of This Offer.

If you are not a subscriber to the Advocate, subscribe at once. Send us $2 00 for a year's subscription with $2.50 additional for the Encyclopædia. We will send it to you postpaid. If you are already a subscriber, pay your subscription to June, '95, at the rate of $2.00 a year or $1.00 for six months, and we will send the work, postpaid, at the same price.

THE BOOK MY MOTHER READ.

I have it yet, the dear old Book,
That lay upon the stand,
In which she often used to look,
And always at her hand;
The corners rounded are with age,
The leaves are worn and thin,
And dim the lines on many a page
She so delighted in.

A half hour's rest in household toil
For needed strength she caught,
And in the light of fragrant oil
She found the place she sought;
And heavy labor turned to love,
And duty led away
To visions of the land above;
A Sabbath hour each day.

The Book remains more sacred still
Because of her dear eyes,
That saw therein God's wondrous will,
And saw not otherwise;
For thus she found the way to him
Who down to evening late,
And through the valley, lone and dim,
Brought her to his dear gate.

Politeness.

I do not mean by this word the smooth manners that are sometimes assumed, but something more, the true politeness and gentle manners that come from an unselfish and honest desire to make others happy. William Wirt, in a letter to his daughter on "The small, sweet courtesies of life," says: "I want to tell you a secret. The way to make yourself pleasing to others is to show them that you care for them."

Many persons entirely without wealth, beauty or extraordinary talents often find an easy entrance into society and become favorites of all who meet them, simply because they have pleasant, winning manners.

The unrivaled fascination which Madame Recamier exerted on all who came in contact with her was the result of the genuine and unaffected interest she showed in the good and ill fortunes of her friends.

No adornment of beauty, learning or accomplishments attracts one as the fine and gentle breeding of those who never think of themselves, but only of the pleasure they can give to others.

Parents and others who have the care of the young are too careless and negligent in impressing upon them the value of a true politeness of manner. In the struggle for wealth and knowledge and power, the courtesies and amenities of polished and refined life are too much ignored. These are things which can not be put on and off at will, but must be so much a part of ourselves and our daily life that they will be spontaneous. Cultivate unselfishness and a regard for the feelings of others, along with a proper training in the conventionalities of good breeding, and your children will be polite and courteous under all conditions and circumstances, and will have cause for gratitude through all their lives.—Maida McL., in Farm and Fireside.

Keep It Back.

Husbands and wives do not know till they learn by experience—which some never do—how much can be added to the sum of their happiness by thinking twice, and indefinitely postponing when either is tempted to say a cutting thing to the other. It does not take a great while for a young couple to win the confidence each of the other, that nothing designed to wound will be said. When this confidence is established, words which otherwise would inflict pain become harmless. In a family where this confidence is secured by uniform respect for the feelings of one another, there is a degree of freedom from restraint, and of general happiness, which is impossible where it is not. Every good family is a training-school, in which the husband and wife, from the nuptial day, are pupils.

He is an exceptional and rarely fortunate young man who has not some habits of deportment which mar his character and influence. It is expected of the wife that she will correct and eradicate these. Unless the husband have an incurably coarse nature, she is justly held responsible for the polish and neatness of his manners, as much as for the purity of his linen, when he appears in church or society. And if the wife has unpleasant imperfections of manner or conduct, it always reflects upon the husband. This shows that by common consent the family is regarded as a training-school in which the husband and wife, as well as the children, are learners. Such being the case, each should submit to the necessary discipline with pleasure.

But if the habit of cutting and sarcastic words prevails, it will break up that school, and neither can be of any benefit to the other. There is injury as well as unhappiness of a very serious character resulting from a sharp tongue in the family. And the sharp tongue may not—usually at first does not—represent the real sentiments of the heart; but the bitterness is not long in finding its way to the heart, and there it is liable to remain—not always active, but always ready and always suspected.

Before you say a cutting word to husband, wife or child, think it over deliberately.—Exchange.

The Children for Christ.

O, let us not hinder, but help our children to come to Jesus! For child-religion may be hindered. The words of Jesus suggest the thought. The child is weaker than the older disciple, is under his influence, can be kept back by him. God has given the making of the children into the hands of their elders. And the natural religiousness of the child, his simple faith and sense of love and duty to Jesus, may be terribly checked by the example and conduct of those around him. And so Jesus says, "Forbid them not." The word means (as it is elsewhere translated) hinder them not. The religion of the child is feeble, and can so easily be hindered. Christian parents are appointed as guardians, to watch and foster its growth. All growth comes from within, and depends upon a healthy life. But young and feeble growth needs to be preserved from danger without, and to have provided for it the sustenance it demands.

Often parents have been bitterly disappointed in their children; when young they could feel so deeply and speak so beautifully; but they had not lived long before all was lost. It was probably because parents trusted to what was a blessed, but still only a feeble, beginning. They did not watch over the evil influences which the young plant could not yet resist. They allowed the spirit of the world in their own religious life or their friends; they allowed company or pleasure and the enjoyment of the world to choke the good seed; or they failed to supply the needful nourishment. There was not, as the child grew up, any more the personal speaking of this blessed Jesus, the helping of faith and obedience by the fellowship and example of a warm living Christianity—a living love to Jesus. The child's religion disappeared because the parents hindered it in coming to Jesus.

How different the result is when this coming to Jesus is, in a right spirit, fostered and encouraged, not only in the little ones, but in the growing boy and girl through the years that lead to maturity. We need to be kept from right-hand as well as left-hand errors. On the one side, we must beware of despising a child's religious impressions as of little value. Like all beginnings of life and growth, they may be feeble and easily lost; they are still of infinite value as the preparation for that which abideth forever. We must, on the other side, be kept from overestimating or trusting in it. We must remember that the tender plant needs unceasing watching, and that only in the congenial atmosphere of a home holy to the Lord, and wholly dedicated to his service, can we count on its ripening fruits to eternal life.—Andrew Murray.

SINCE PAPA DOESN'T DRINK.

My papa's awful happy now,
And mama's happy, too,
'Cause papa doesn't drink no more
The way he used to do.
And everything's so jolly now,
'Tain't like it used to be,
When papa never staid at home
With poor mama and me;
It made me feel so very bad
To see my mama cry,
And though she'd smile I'd spy the tears
A-hiding in her eye.
But now she laughs just like we girls—
It sounds so cute, I think—
And sings such pretty little songs,
Since papa doesn't drink.

You see my pretty Sunday dress,
It's every bit all new;
It ain't made out of mama's dress,
The way she used to do.
And mama's got a pretty cloak,
All trimmed with funny fur,
And papa's got some nice new clothes
And goes to church with her.
My papa says that Christmas time
Will very soon be here,
And maybe good old Santa Claus
Will find our house this year.
I hope he'll bring some candy, and
A dolly that can wink.
He'll know where our home is, I'm sure,
Since papa doesn't drink.

About Your Boys.

Treat your boys as though they were of some importance if you would have them manly and self-reliant.

Be careful of the little courtisies. You can not expect your boy to be respectful, thoughtful and kind unless you first set him the example.

If you would have your boy make you his confident, take an active interest in all that he does, don't be too critical, and ask for his views and opinions at all times.

Don't keep your boys in ignorance of the things they should know. It is not the wholesome truth, but the unwholesome way in which it is acquired that ruins many a young man.

Don't act as though your boy amounted to nothing, nor be continually making comparisons between him and some neighbor's son to his disadvantage; nothing will dishearten him quicker.

Don't think that anything is good enough for the boys, and that they don't care for nice things; have their room fixed up as nicely as possible; let them understand that they are to be kept in order, and the results will justify your pains.

Furnish your boys with good wholesome reading matter. Have him read to and with you. Discuss with him what you read, and draw out his opinions and thoughts on the subject. Help him to think early for himself.

Make home a pleasant place; see to it that the boys don't have to go somewhere else to secure proper freedom and companionship.

Take time to make them feel comfortable and contented, and they will not want to spend their evenings away from home.

Pick your son's associates. See to it that he has no friends you know nothing about. Take an interest in all his troubles and pleasures, and have him feel perfectly free to invite his friends to the house. Take a little pains to make him and his friends comfortable and happy. He will not be slow to appreciate it.—Evangelist.

The Results of Coddling.

We know what is the matter with him, and have known it all along. He is very delicate, and the least draught of air will throw him into a chill. He suffers from cold feet and darting pains, and has the most miserable kind of an appetite. He is either greatly depressed or highly elated, and has an abiding conviction that he is soon to be called to render up his accounts. He believes in faith-cure and Christian science, yet he is the constant patron of his family physician, thanks to his faithful wife. Poor woman! She warms his shoes for him every morning, for fear they may be a trifle damp. She gets all his clothing ready, so that he may jump into it quickly without too long exposure of the body to the air. She feels of his head for fear it may be too hot, and chafes his feet that the circulation may be good for the day. The poor, careworn, anxious wife declares "he is so delicate," and he, the fool, thinks he is. Now, what is the diagnosis in this case? She fusses too much! If such men had no one to fuss over them, they would become strong and well within three months. We often write of the nervous, hysterical woman; but deliver us from the grunting man spoiled by the mistaken kindness of a devoted wife!—National Medical Review.

Always Bad; Never Good.

TO THE BOYS AND GIRLS: My Dear Little Friends: I who am about to die salute you. Before I go I send to you a few words of warning and counsel. Some of you may not understand all of it now, but your parents and friends can tell you what it means. When you are older, and have seen more of the world, and know more of men than you now do, you will see that many of them made a failure in life for lack of listening to good advice or refusing to accept it. The young are everywhere exposed to temptations to evil to which they many fall victims without the help of persons older and wiser than themselves.

At every great seaport there are men called pilots; their business is to guide ships safely over the shallows and among the rocks which would be fatal to vessels not guided by those who have been all over the ground and know where the dangers are hidden away under the water. Those ships are safe when the pilot's hands are at the helm; but if guided by men without experience, the danger of shipwreck would be imminent, if not certain.

Now, dear boys and girls, I advise you earnestly never to take intoxicating drink of any kind; it is always bad, never good. I can not take up the time to tell you what my reasons are for saying this; and many of you are not yet old enough to understand what the reasons are if I were to explain them all to you. The pilot, when he goes on board a great ship to guide her into port, turns her this way and that way and every way among the rocks and sandbanks which nobody sees. The captain never questions him as to his reasons for doing this and that, trusting the safety of the ship entirely to the skill and fidelity of the pilot. Now, I know the ground thoroughly over which you must pass to reach my age; I warn you and advise you as to the course you should take; for the present you must trust my word as the result of experience and long observation; you can not understand all about it now. In taking strong drink of whatever name, there is great danger; it is bad for the health; it is dangerous to good morals because of bad tendencies; it is a bad example for others. No one in all the world was ever harmed by avoiding it; millions and millions of men and women and children have been ruined in health, in morals and character and life, because they did not avoid strong drink. Let all your influence be against this great evil—a greater danger to those who do not avoid it than any other. You are old enough to know what it is to sign the pledge; if your parents are willing, I urge you strongly to do it, and make of it a solemn obligation never to use intoxicating drinks. No matter by whom the bad example may be given; no matter who they are, I urge you to avoid them as dangerous; always bad and never good. And when you are old enough to understand and act, be sure that your vote shall never, under any pretence, tend in any way to uphold and perpetuate the drink traffic, through which all the danger comes.

Dear boys and girls, my last words to you are: Avoid strong drink of whatever name.—From a Great Temperance Reformer, Neal Dow.

A Woman May

So live that her work shall praise her.

Be old, and wrinkled, yet beautiful and sweet.

Be poor in material possessions, yet rich in character.

So live that she will be sorely missed when she is gone.

Be a "mother" to all the little waifs in her neighborhood.

Be "crowned with praise," and yet possess herself in humble bearing.

Have a wardrobe full of silks and satins, and yet know nothing of the pleasure of helping a poor sister.

Forget that a smile and a kind word not only have a keener power than sharpest tongue-thrusts, but that they react upon her who gives them utterance, no less potently than they influence others.—Good Housekeeping.

A wise man will turn adverse criticisms and malicious attacks to good account. He will consider carefully whether there is not in him some weakness or fault which, although he never discovered, was plain to the eye of his enemy. Many men profit more by the assaults of foes than by the kindness of friends.—New York Christian Advocate.

A GENTLE CORRECTIVE is what you need when your liver becomes inactive. It's what you get when you take Dr. Pierce's Pellets: they're free from the violence and the griping that comes with the ordinary pill. All medical authorities agree that in regulating the bowels mild methods are preferable. For every trouble of the liver, stomach and bowels, these tiny, sugar-coated pills are most effective. They go about their work in an easy and natural way, and their good lasts—they strengthen and tone up the lining membranes of the stomach and bowels, thereby promoting digestion. Sick and Bilious Headache, Constipation, Sour Stomach, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, Dizziness, are prevented, relieved, and permanently cured. They're the cheapest pill you can buy for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction or your money is returned.

OVERTON—Miss KATIE OVERTON died Feb 3 1894. Miss Katie had been a member of the M. E. Church, South, from childhood, in which she lived a consistent member till her transfer to the church triumphant. The South Vicksburg Church has lost an exemplary member. Miss Katie was an earnest and faithful worker in every capacity of Christian duty. Her precept and example were always good. She loved God and kept his commandments. She was a great advocate of prayer and class meetings took much delight in love-feasts, and believed in keeping up all the social meetings of our beloved Zion.

She had been a member of the Sunday-school five years. First as scholar, then as teacher, and lastly as secretary, which office she filled faithfully till her death. As teacher her influence continues to be felt by her pupils, and will never die. Though she is dead, she yet speaketh. In Sunday-school we sadly miss her. Her cheerful face and pleasant smile won the love and admiration of all who knew her. In fact, her generous disposition and irresistible charms made her quite a favorite with the aged and young. Being organist in the church, it was her delightful privilege to cheer the hearts of the audience with sacred music, and, oftimes, her sweet, melodious voice thrilled our souls with a blessful hope and joy unspeakable and full of glory—our hymns of thanksgiving, in harmony swelling, has raised us from earth to that rapturous dwelling where we shall sing God's praises forever.

In prayer and class meeting we shall sadly miss the sweet gospel singer. We need her prayers, sympathy and tears, also her clear and bright testimonies which were so beneficial to all who heard them.

She was called upon to take an active part in all social meetings of the church, and bore some humble part in every good work.

Although we have great need of her as we walk life's toilsome road, we would not call her back again to earth.

Whereas, It has pleased the great Head of the church to call the soul of our dear friend and beloved sister from labor to her eternal rest and reward; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, as members of the Sunday-school, church, class meeting and missionary society, of which she was a member, will try to imitate her example of faithfulness and good works.

Resolved, That we sympathize with her bereaved father and brother, and pray God to grant them sustaining grace in this time of need.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE for publication, also that a copy be published in the daily papers of this city.

MRS. L. C. SMITH, for Com.

KING—The following resolutions were passed unanimously by the first Quarterly Conference of Benton charge, Jackson district, Mississippi Conference, at Benton, Feb. 17, 1894:

Whereas, God has seen fit, in his wise providence, to remove from our midst Bro. WM. L. KING, who had been a steward and trustee for over forty years; And whereas, Bro. King had always been a faithful servant and officer for the church, looking after her interest as a tender father looks after the welfare of his child; And whereas, During these long years of service he has taken a deep interest in all church auxiliaries; therefore, be it

Resolved, That by the removal of our beloved brother we, the members of the Quarterly Conference of Benton charge, have sustained a great and felt loss, and we shall ever hold him in affectionate remembrance and will strive to emulate his life and good works.

Resolved, That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to his loved ones in their great affliction, and pray that God, who giveth grace in time of need, may uphold and comfort in this trial.

Resolved, That a copy of this testimonial of our sympathy and love be sent to the family; that a copy of same be sent the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication, and further that this preamble and resolutions be spread upon our minutes

Benton Miss.

BOUNDS—MARY BOUNDS was born in Richmond county, N. C. She joined the M. E. Church, South, at the age of thirteen years. Married William Bounds, with whom she lived fifty-eight years. She died in Kemper county, Miss., in the seventy-fourth year of her age.

Sister Bounds had no children, but she was a mother to the orphans around her. She was a good wife and a conscientious Christian. She leaves an aged, sainted husband and many friends to mourn her loss.

The writer received a note from Bro. Bounds saying: "My good wife is gone, but I would not recall her. She was a great sufferer, but she is now at rest."

She died Dec. 29, 1893, after seven weeks of intense pain.

J. F. ROBINSON.

TRAVIS—MRS. AVERILLA V. TRAVIS (nee Lee) was born in Hinds county, Miss., Feb. 23, 1832, and died at the residence of her son in Bristol, Tenn., Feb. 23, 1894. On the fourth day of January, 1863, she married Mr. S. S. Travis, of Mississippi. She was the mother of four children. All the children are living, and all are servants of their mother's God, except one, and he is a good citizen, and, we trust, will also soon become a follower of the Savior. Her husband lived with his happy wife but seven short years, dying in February, 1870; but he had lived a Christian life and died in the Christian's hope.

Sister Travis was converted in very early life (the exact date I have not been able to obtain), and was always devoted to the church. For several years she has been in feeble health; but when she was strong and vigorous, she took a very active part in church and philanthropic work. She had the reputation of a consistent and consecrated life, and her children will revere her memory. When she came to Bristol she brought her church letter, and set a good example by depositing it at once in the hands of the pastor. I was not very familiar with her, but she impressed me, from the first, as a remarkably good woman. Her confidence in God was unshaken in the face of death, and I can not doubt she is with her husband in heaven. May the children meet them there!

Her Pastor, D. V. PRICE.

CARRUTH—JAMES A. CARRUTH was born in St. Helena parish, La., Feb. 12, 1853. He was happily married to Miss Aurelia Lee, April 13, 1876. Having been brought up in the home of true Christian parents, he always had a feeling of reverence for God's holy name and a true love for all his people. He professed religion and was received into the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, under the ministry of the writer, October, 1884. From that time he was a consistent and faithful member of the church he loved.

He was highly respected by all who were acquainted with him, and those who knew him best loved him most. He was killed by the hand of a black assassin on Dec. 25, 1893. He was quietly attending to his business when a burly negro rushed into his store, with gun in hand, and fired the fatal shot which, without a moment's warning, hurried our friend and brother into eternity.

Oh, how sad the end! But thank God he was ready for the bright world above, where there is no more sorrow nor death. He leaves a wife and eight children to mourn his untimely death. May God sustain the sad-hearted widow and be a father to the fatherless children!

J. S. PARKER.

BARRETT—BENJAMIN FRANCIS was born in Elbert county, Ga., May 1, 1857; moved with his parents to Newton county, Miss., near Decatur, February, 1858, where he spent the remainder of his life. He was happily married to Miss Georgie L. Freeman, Nov. 16, 1882. To them were born six children, two of whom have preceded him to the spirit-world. Bro. Barrett professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, Aug. 8, 1886 under the ministry of Rev. I. L. Peebles, and died in the faith, March 8, 1894.

He leaves a heart-broken wife and four little children, an aged mother, a brother and sister, to mourn his loss. He was a consistent Christian and devoted member of the church, always ready to do his part. He was a Christian in whom everyone had confidence. His death was a great loss to this neighborhood. God's ways are past finding out. But still we know he doeth all things well.

W. M. WILLIAMS, P. C.

Decatur, Miss.

BUATT—MRS. LIZZIE F. KNOX BUATT was born in Morehouse parish, La., Jan. 6, 1861, and died at Bonita, La., Jan. 6, 1894. Joined the M. E. Church, South, at Bastrop, under the pastorate of Rev. J. A. Parker, and lived a consistent member of the same to the time of her death.

Everyone who speaks of our beloved sister says, "Oh, how good, how kind, how true!" We feel so deeply our loss (for there are few such gentle spirits; few so ready to give a helping hand to the different lines of church work within the range of their ability), but we realize that our loss is her infinite gain.

May this dispensation of God's providence, so sad, be sanctified to the spiritual and eternal good of the loved ones who grieve, though not as those who have no hope; and may this tie, so ruthlessly severed, be rebound in the "sweet-by-and-by!"

J. H. BROWN.

Texas Advocate please copy.

DAVIS—MARY, daughter of W. E. and S. J. Davis, was born at Arcola, Miss., March 15, 1891, and died March 9, 1894. Little Mary was bright, attractive and a favorite of all who knew her. She was dedicated by baptism to the Lord, and the Master, who doeth all things well, has seen fit to call her to his arms. The precious flower is not dead, but has only been transplanted to the heavenly land, where it will shed its fragrance for evermore. Weep not, dear parents, for your precious child. Your loss is her eternal gain.

May the Master give grace to enable you to say, "Thy will be done!" May you resolve to live so as to meet her in the home of the saints!

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1012 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Be careful of your family and friends; they are the best gifts the Almighty can give you.

Timothy Davis, postmaster at Pattersonville, La., says: "Some years ago, while living in Algiers, I contracted a cough that everyone thought would cause my death. I was unable to sleep, had night-sweats, and soon became too weak to work. I had several doctors and tried many remedies, but with no improvement. An old friend hearing of my condition recommended Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. It had cured him of a serious lung trouble, and he had great confidence in Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar. Before three bottles had been taken I was up and about, a well man. It saved my life. I always recommend it for consumption, asthma, bronchitis, any lung or throat trouble." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

A good deed is never lost. He who sows courtesy reaps friendship, and he who plants kindness gathers love.

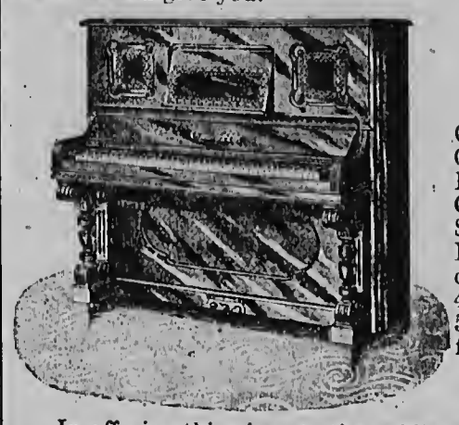
PIANOS AS PREMIUMS.

READ THE DESCRIPTION BELOW OF STYLE 10.

The list price of this instrument is $330. We will furnish this elegant instrument as a premium for new subscribers. If this offer interests you, write us for terms. You may be surprised at the terms we can give you.



STYLE 10.

Seven and one-third Octaves: Chaste Design; Overstrung Scale; Heavy Iron Frame; 3 Strings; Carved Trusses; Improved Sounding Board; Perfect Repeating Action and Sliding Music Desk. Height, 4 feet 4½ inches; length, 5 feet 2 inches; depth, 2 feet 4½ inches.

In offering this piano to the public our object is to provide for the existing demand for an instrument which, although taking up but a small amount of room, possesses the same quality of tone, the same high grade of action, work and material found in our larger pianos, at the same time a plainly but thoroughly well-finished exterior, enabling us to offer it at a price within the reach of everyone who wishes to secure a perfect piano for a small amount of money. This style is a favorite with ministers, as it takes less room and is more easily moved than the larger instruments.

Made in Rosewood, Ebony, Walnut or Mahogany finish.

Boxed with good Plush Stool, Embroidered Cover and Instruction Book. Every instrument warranted for five years.

Constitutional History of American Episcopal Methodism.

OCTAVO. 414 PAGES. Price, $1.50.

BY JNO. J. TIGERT, D. D.

Most Constitutional histories are dry reading, but this has interested me very much. I have been especially impressed by its vivid portrayals of signal events, its felicitous illustrations of the way in which the most important matters of ecclesiastical polity have been determined by the opinions and acts of individuals, and its omnipresent proofs of the Providential origin and development of Methodism on both sides of the Atlantic.—Bishop C. D. Foss, of the M. E. Church.

Few books have ever been issued from the presses of our Publishing House at Nashville equal in importance and value to this one. It fills a place occupied by none other. The scope of the work is full and comprehensive, and the subject is treated from beginning to end with rare ability. The publication of this work is timely. It ought to be read and studied by every intelligent preacher and layman of our Church. Particularly ought it to be mastered by every delegate to our General Conference.—Southern Christian Advocate.

From the care with which you have sifted statements, examined documents, and analyzed facts, I think you have produced a work which will reflect credit on your industry and ability, and entitle it to a place of a classic in Methodist literature, not to say ecclesiastical literature.—Bishop E. R. Hendrix.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

At a fire in Milwaukee, Wis., on April 9, nine men were killed.

Rabbi Heller, of the Temple Sinai, occupied the pulpit of the Unitarian Church in this city on last Sunday.

Sam Jones will head an anti-saloon movement in Tennessee for the election of a Legislature pledged to local option.

The Iowa Senate passed a resolution, on April 6, congratulating President Dole on the occasion of Hawaii becoming a republic.

Dr. J. J. Lafferty, of the Richmond Christian Advocate, lectured in this city this week for the benefit of the Confederate veterans.

April 6 was celebrated in this city as Decoration Day. The graves of the Confederate dead were decorated by their surviving comrades.

Women's suffrage is a success in Kansas. At Spring Hill and Mortonville they swept the town, and filled every municipal office with women.

A fireworks factory in Blandford, Va., was blown to atoms, on April 7, by three successive explosions. Eleven men were killed instantly and as many more were wounded.

A force of six hundred "Industrials," recruits for Coxey's Brigade, to march on to Washington, were run out of Oakland, Cal., on April 6, by a formidable force of police and firemen.

The State troops which have been at Florence and Darlington, S. C., to quell the insurrection there caused by the enforcement of the Dispensary law, have all returned to their homes.

The Free Church of the Annunciation, in this city—Rev. Dr. John Perolval, rector—celebrated its jubilee anniversary on April 8. Fifty years have elapsed since the original dedication of the church.

It is said by some that the Coxey movement is a very dangerous thing. They say that there is little doubt that, by May 1, there will be a horde of 150,000 idle men clamoring around the capital at Washington, and predict a crisis such as the country has not seen since the war.

Representative Meyer, of Louisiana, introduced a bill providing for the coinage of the seigniorage in the treasury. It has been prepared by him with the view of meeting the objections of the President to the Bland bill, recently vetoed. From the talks which Mr. Meyer has had with administration men and the officials, he thinks his bill will be satisfactory.

The total number of Baptists in the United States is 3,496,988. This shows a net gain for the year of 113,828, an average of 310 every day the year through. Contributions aggregate $12,660,713, which is a falling off from the previous year of $1,346,704. This decrease, of course, is due to the unsettled financial condition of the country. The value of church property has increased from $71,000,000 to $78,605,000, or over $7,500,000.

The bill agreed on by the Indian Affairs Committee of the House for a settlement of the troublesome question of the disposition of the Southern Ute Indians in Colorado is in the nature of a compromise. By its terms the Indians will be located on the western end of the present reservation and on a strip of land in New Mexico. This course the commission believes will be satisfactory to the people of Colorado, who want the reservation opened to settlement.

FOREIGN.

A reign of terror is reported in Honduras. Political executions are the order of the day, and another and bloody revolution is predicted.

Petroleum has been discovered near Ashwick, Somersetshire, England, and the oil interests of the United States are troubled at the prospects of more competition.

Signs are accumulating that the reconstructed Liberal Cabinet in Great Britain, headed by Lord Rosebery, is likely to prove shortlived. It began its career in Parliament with a defeat on the reply to the Queen's speech, and on nearly every important decision since then the government has fallen far short of the normal Liberal majority.

Admiral Da Gama, the Brazilian insurgent, and a host of his fellow-refugees escaped from the Portugese warships on two tugs and landed at Martin Gracia Island, the quarantine station of Buenos Ayres.

Nova Scotia has voted for prohibition. In Halifax the majority for a prohibition law was 1,435. Every ward of the city voted Yea. In one county (Shelburne) the majority against liquor was in the proportion of thirteen to one. It is a great victory.

William Mather, the head of the Salford Iron Works, in England, and a member of Parliament, has made a public report of the success of the experiment tried in the works of giving the operatives an eight-hour day, without reducing their pay. He says that the output of the works has been greater than ever before, with no increase of the expense, in spite of the reduction in working time.

Bright Spring Days.

Anything which will bring the physical system into harmony with budding Nature, confers an enormous benefit upon the nation, besides the mere allaying of physical discomfort. Hood's Sarsaparilla does this, as thousands of grateful and happy men and women can testify, and increased use of this standard spring medicine is of more real practical importance in promoting health and quiet in the business world than reams of abstract theorizing.

One reason why some people find it so hard to lead a Christian life, is because they devote so little time to it.

Reunion United Confederate Veterans

Will be held at Birmingham, Ala., April 25 and 26, 1894. It will be one of the greatest occasions of its kind ever known.

The Queen and Crescent Route will sell tickets to Birmingham and return at One Fare for the Round Trip, selling from points on N. O. & N. E., A. & V., and V., S. & P. Divisions, April 22, 23 and 24. Good 15 days for return.

A Good Reflection.

CHICAGO, ILL., OCT. 18th, 1893.
THE BAILEY REFLECTOR CO.,
Pittsburgh, Pa.

GENTLEMEN: The two 54 inch reflectors have been received and placed in position. They have been thoroughly tested and give perfect satisfaction. Our audience room is 48 by 80, with ceiling 30 feet high; with your reflectors we can see to read with ease in any part of the room. We had two reflectors of another make and firm in the former building that was destroyed by fire, but they did not give satisfaction. When it came to lighting our new building our Building Committee agreed not to buy the reflectors we had, but to try yours. We are pleased with the change.

Respectfully yours,
J. W. WARNSHUIS, Pastor
First Reformed Church.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

If you want your life insured, you can't do a better thing than read the ad. of that mammoth company, the New York Mutual, which you will find in another column.

Philip Werlein,

New Orleans, wants you to write to him if you want to get a good Piano cheap, or an Organ, Music or Musical Instruments. His is the old reliable music store of New Orleans.

Here Is Your Chance.

During the next sixty days we make the following offer:

For $2.50 we will send the ADVOCATE one year and a copy of Christian Womanhood. The price of the ADVOCATE is $2; the price of the book, $1. This book has had an extensive sale, the sixth thousand being now on the market. This offer applies to renewals as well as new subscriptions, provided the renewal extends the subscription to January, '95.

The following notices, selected from a vast number that have appeared in the church papers, will give some idea of the character of the work:

The best thesaurus of facts concerning womanhood with which we are acquainted.—Dr. C. F. Deems.

We hope it will be read by every man and woman in the church.—Florida Advocate.

We hope it will be extensively circulated and carefully read.—NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Heartily recommended.—Dr. John E. Edwards.

This volume is the result of patient investigation and thoughtful study of the whole question treated. In the formulation of the case and in analyzing the testimony a vigorous, well-poised, legal mind is brought to bear. Dr. Black, moreover, establishes the points of his discussion as a skillful general establishes his lines in the face of an alert enemy. As he begins, so he closes, leaving the impression that a master in Israel has written bravely and tellingly of Christian womanhood, maintaining his position at every turn. The book is needed, and will long be in popular demand.—Sunday-School Magazine.

Integrity.

No amount of singing and prayer, of church-going and profession is sufficient to maintain a Christian character in a man who is not honest in his dealings, or truthful in his relations with men. The moral character is just as essential as a spiritual experience. If his faith does not dominate his life, influence his conduct, and shape his character, it is not saving faith.—Evangelical Messenger.

WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN.

BY MARION HARLAND.

I might have said a word of cheer
Before I let him go.
His weary visage haunts me yet;
But how could I foreknow
The slightest chance would be the last
To me in mercy given?
My utmost yearnings can not send
That word from earth to heaven.

I might have looked the love I felt;
My brother had sore need
Of that for which—too shy and proud—
He lacked the speech to plead.
But self is near, and self is strong,
And I was blind that day;
He sought within my careless eyes,
And went, athirst, away.

I might have held in closer clasp
The hand he laid in mine;
The pulsing warmth of my rich life
Had been as generous wine,
Swelling a stream that, even then,
Was ebbing faint and slow.
Mine might have been (God knows!) the art
To stay the fatal flow.

O word and look and clasp withheld!
O brother-heart, now stilled!
Dear life, forever out of reach,
I might have warmed and filled!
Talents misused and seasons lost,
Over which I mourn in vain—
A waste as barren to my tears
As desert sands to rain!

Ah, friend! whose eyes to-day may look
Love into living eyes,
Whose tone and touch perchance may thrill
Sad hearts with sweet surprise,
Be instant, like your Lord, in love,
And lavish as his grace,
With light and dew and manna-fall,
For night comes on apace.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the West.

BY H. M. DU BOSE, D. D., EDITOR PACIFIC METHODIST ADVOCATE.

The extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, into the region west of the Rocky Mountains has furnished our connection with a problem which has affected to a remarkable degree its life, policy and growth. This movement has resulted, in part, from the operation of forces distinct from the inherent missionary spirit of the church. It has been missionary in the best sense, but has been intensified by the logic that grows out of the relation of those things for which we stand as a distinct ecclesiasticism. The peculiarities and issues of an eventful history of discussion, legal interpretation, differentia of conscience in many and vital matters, have necessarily entered into the problem of Southern Methodism in the West. The facts of our Western experience, then, must not be regarded as the results of an arbitrary policy, but as the sequence of an ecclesiastical life guided by the infallible Spirit of God to the indication of important phases of the truth committed to the company of the disciples. Intelligent study of the record leads me to affirm this of the history of Southern Methodism in the isolation of its Western field. I do not by any means advance these considerations to precedence of the evangelical influence of our church and ministry in these remote communities. Emphasis will be given this in another connection. I am addressing the conscience and intelligence of Methodism, and shall not be misunderstood. Holding these views, the admitted difficulties of our situation, and the niceties of our relations to other ecclesiastical bodies, have furnished me no suggestion of disparagement, nor discovered to me a single portent of failure in the end. The logic of duty makes our task a plain one, and the abundant tokens of providence set the outcome in the order of certainty.

I am glad of the opportunity offered me by the editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate to bring a discussion of this problem into prominence before the general church. I crave the power to put my own convictions into the hearts of the princes of our Israel. If I should inspire the belief that the perpetuity of our church on this continent depends on the adoption and persistent support of a policy of aggression in Western America, I should accomplish no more than the cause of truth and Methodism justifies. When one finds his life and faith concreted in a system, the least thing to do short of disloyalty is to obey the logic of that system. Southern Methodism is possessed of a unique individuality; its influences are pronounced; it has developed a distinctive and independent social power; or, rather, it has perpetuated eclectic social tendencies, as we believe, the best and safest results of the past; it pursues a path, to it, plainly marked by providence; but, at the same time, it falls into its appointed place in the unity of Christianity. It is catholic without sentimentality; denominational without bigotry; conservative, but still progressive. Its history of procreation and growth is unparalleled this side the apostolic ages. It can not have run the cycle of its destiny in fifty years. As its genesis is in the spiritual life cradled in the revivals of the sixteenth and eighteenth centuries, so it is destined to divide in a new century the heritage of the world's spiritual wealth. The men who hold this view respecting the church of Soule, Pierce, McTyeire, Marvin and Kavanaugh, will find few difficulties in the problem of Southern Methodism in the West. I trust I shall not discount the cause I seek to serve when I lay claim to a knowledge of this problem such as I believe no other man in the church has had the same opportunity to acquire. During the past four years I have covered more than 12,000 miles in editorial visitations of the patronizing field of the Pacific Methodist Advocate; besides, I have in that time crossed this territory eight times, going and coming, on trans-continental journeys. During six years I have done little else than study the work to which I have all the while been related as pastor, and for upwards of four years as church editor. I mention these things only to show that my opinions are older than the stubble straw of last year's wheat harvest.

THE WESTERN FIELD.

The arena of Southern Methodist activity in the cis-Rocky region is confined to the States of California, Oregon, Washington, Montana and Colorado, and the Territory of Arizona. A very few appointments are maintained in the State of Idaho. These States are the cream of Western America. It is not likely that the church shall soon enter the other States, which are, for the most part, sparsely populated and remote from our present organizations. The States now occupied by us in the West contain an area of 751,295 square miles, a territory nearly equal to all the other States of the Union where our church is represented. The population of these States is estimated at about 2,500,000, one-half of which is in California, whose chief city contains one-fourth of her own. The agricultural, mining and industrial possibilities of this vast region can not be imagined. It is—

"The last of God's heritage—best."

Archæological remains in the Valley of the Salt river in Arizona indicate that it probably supported half a million people in the times of a remote civilization, and that under imperfect conditions, what a higher civilization can do for it is already being shown. In that valley our church is wisely planted; and not here only, but everywhere throughout this West a mighty population is to be gathered. It is coming now, and is bringing hither the destinies of mankind. Here is to be fought the world's Armageddon. The Occident and the Orient are to meet in that struggle. The fate of our country and the perpetuation of our faith will depend on the outcome. Shall we be enrolled with the hosts that go forth to that conflict? The church has no field that can not better wait than this, for the reason that if this be lost, our inheritance is gone; we then shall not have whereof to share with the isles of the sea. Heathenism is here, come from the shores of "Sinim" and "Cipango;" atheism, anti-Christ, diabolism, are here; a menace to every altar from the Pacific to the Atlantic. This is our field, than which there is none more urgent, more inviting. To shun it would be cowardice, perfidy; to cultivate it indifferently would be folly, hypocrisy!

OUR RECORD.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has been an organized factor in the religious life of the country west of the Rocky Mountains since the beginning of American occupation. It came in with the earliest of the Protestant missionary movements, and in California antedated in its first organization all other Methodist bodies. Through a history of almost unparalleled vicissitudes it has maintained its organization and pressed its cause with a steady, though often varying, success. This side the mountains the church has a membership of, perhaps, somewhat more than 14,000 lay communicants, divided amongst six Annual Conferences, comprising over 200 pastoral charges. These Conferences hold a church property valued at present at $884,882. The same Conferences give yearly to the cause of foreign and domestic missions and church extension a sum nearly equal to $10,000. Last year these figures were increased by several liberal special donations, which run the total up to between $1,100 and $1,200, which is a per capita for these important interests that would, if maintained throughout the church, increase contributions 100 per cent.

The revival record of our Pacific coast churches ought forever to settle their claims on the love and confidence of Methodism. From the earliest times revival power has been their marked characteristic. If the people converted under the ministry of our preachers in these States could have been retained in our communion, we would to-day rank with the first churches in numbers. Literally tens of thousands of converts have been lost to us because of lack of representation at important points. I mention it as one of the features of our "problem" that in the large cities of this coast where we are not represented, or, if represented at all, only feebly, hundreds of the people converted in our churches, housed and unhoused, are to be found. Oh, that we had homes for these! But, alas! the land in these cities has become as pavements of diamonds. We have not wherewith to buy, and this is the most difficult "problem of all."

One year within my knowledge the reports of conversions in the Pacific Conference equalled twenty to each and every pastor in the body. I did not keep a record last year, but I believe the average was even higher; the net gain in the Conference was 550, being about 9 per cent. Four years ago the Los Angeles Conference reported a net increase of nearly 30 per cent. Last year was one of marked growth in the work in Montana, Idaho, Washington, and a considerable part of Oregon. Already stirring reports of revivals are coming from those fields. If our organization and equipment were equal to the revival power developed by the churches, our year books would show different statistical returns. Two revivals in the Pacific Conference—one at Willows City, the other at Selma—are noteworthy in the annals of general Methodism.

ESOTERIC METHODISM.

Our Western work is a hostage to Heaven and a pledge to Christendom. We are not a sectional church. The charge that we are has been brought against us and urged with persistence and bitterness. Our army on the sunset slope of the continent is the refutation of this calumny. I verily believe that the marvelous growth of our membership during the past twenty years has been a favor of Heaven upon us not unconnected with our sincere efforts to show ourselves true to God and our profession by pushing our cause beyond its old boundaries. If this be true, and Heaven is my witness that I believe it to be, we can not safely falter. If we withdraw one impulse of committed conscience, or sever one bond now binding together the church in the South and the West, we shall fall back to the perilous possibility of becoming sectional. If we believe that our suffix means "south of the North Pole," let us fully prove that faith by extending east and west through the north temperate zone.

The sacrifices which the maintenance of the Western work has imposed on the general church has been the greatest blessing of its history. To forego this sacrificing sustenance of a feeble child would dry up the motherhood springs in the heart and bosom of Methodism. On the basis of the money lender, even, our investments in the West have returned us large interest.

A knowledge of the work and fortunes of other churches on the Pacific coast would cure the most pronounced case of anti-West in Southern Methodism. We are feeble; but we are not alone in that; some other evangelical churches are far weaker than we. With only driblets of missionary money from our Central Board, by comparison with lavish expenditures of other bodies, our church has won and maintained its place amongst the stronger ecclesiasticisms of the coast. Southern Methodism in California ranks well in point of strength and influence. The statistics of the Sunday-school Association show it to be third in that interest. Our evangelical spirit is recognized by all. The Southern Methodist who is too narrow, local or sectional, to recognize the hand of God in our work, needs an addendum to his conversion.

OUR NEEDS

Southern Methodism in the West will live, whatever course the church pursues. It is of God; it can not die. But the church at large must be true to itself. It must send blood from the heart to the extremities. In view of the trying times through which the church and the country have just passed, we can not ask more in the way of financial aid than we have had; but we do ask that this be not diminished, and that at the earliest moment enlargement in every direction be undertaken. We ask that the General Conference continue to give the Coast a connectional paper, and that provision be made for its publication. This is the link and bond of our scattered communities. They have prospered under its help. It gives definiteness to our cause; speaks our convictions; serves as a vigilant pioneer before our moving column. A withdrawal, or any discouragement, or neglect of the Coast paper by the General Conference would prove an irreparable hurt to our cause. Let neither be thought of. We need the best men Methodism can give. It is not demanded that these men come to spend their lives here. It would be good for the church if every pastor in it could have a few years of experience in the West. They would return to the old land better fitted for the work. Let those who come, stay with us, if possible; but let us have, anyhow, a few years of service from the best men in the connection.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

MR. EDITOR: I wrote you of the workings of the "Dispensary Law" in our State last year. At the meeting of our last Legislature great changes were made in the law. It is now quite different from the law as it first stood, and its provisions are very strict. The bill is considered "bomb-proof" in its present shape. It is very lengthy, but among the chief provisions are the following:

The manufacture, sale, barter, or exchange, receipt, acceptance, delivery, storing and keeping in possession of malt, vinous, fermented, brewed (whether lager or rice beer), or other liquor, or other mixture or compound thereof, by whatever name called or known, which contains alcohol and is used as a beverage by any person, the transportation, removal, the taking from the depot or other place of consignment, or the payment of freight thereon, is punishable by thirty days' imprisonment or one hundred dollars' fine; the liquor to be confiscated. Railroads are prohibited from hauling liquors, and liquor is seizable by constables without warrant. Dispensaries can be opened only by day time. The bond of the dispenser is fixed at three thousand dollars, and the dispenser is liable for damages to the wife, children, etc., of any man to whom liquor is illegally sold. There may be one, or more, dispensaries in each county, but a majority of ten free-holders in any township can prevent the establishment of a dispensary. Dry counties must pay for constables to enforce the law. In wet counties citizens can have liquor shipped to them from the dispensaries. Any person can make wine for his own use, and can sell same through the dispensary, by paying a commission of ten per cent. Payment of United States tax, or any place indicating that liquors are for sale, is evidence that the law is being violated, for which a penalty of one hundred dollars, or thirty days' imprisonment, is provided. Druggists can purchase through dispensaries by paying a commission of ten per cent. Manufacturing druggists can buy at wholesale cost. Hotels where tourists stop are exempt from the "nuisance" provision. All penalties are reduced to trial justice jurisdiction, and warrants are issuable upon the oath of any person who swears that upon information and belief liquor is sold in violation of the law. If liquor is found, it must be confiscated. Distillers must report quarterly to State dispenser as to their product and its disposition. Constables can search depots without warrant, and a penalty is prescribed for receiving liquor from any railroad, or for its delivery by a common carrier. No person can bring liquor into the State under penalty of one hundred dollars, or thirty days' imprisonment, even though the liquor be for his own use. Any person who resists a constable or officer, or attempts to seize, liquor illegally sold, is made guilty of a misdemeanor. A provision is made to allow dispensers to sell beer by the glass or any quantity.

The enforcement of the constabulary feature of the law has led to much trouble in our State. The spies are allowed to search private residences. To this our people will not submit. Where the matter will end I do not know. May the God of peace reign among us!

A Rev. J. H. Brooks Memorial Cottage

On the campus of Millsaps College would be an excellent way to perpetuate the memory of this godly man, who, for over fifty years, was a faithful and successful minister of the gospel. His name is like ointment poured forth in all North Mississippi and the surrounding country where he was known. The placing of a suitable cottage there in his honor, and to perpetuate his good name, has been suggested, and, of course, it meets with general favor. We ought to raise easily, at least, six or eight hundred dollars from the many friends and admirers of Bro. Brooks. Let us have contributions of $1, $5, $10, $20, and up, for this noble object without delay. In every case where it is possible, let the cash be sent; but we will gladly take notes payable next Fall. Major Millsaps will duplicate whatever is given. Let us put not less than twelve or fifteen hundred dollars in this monument to "Uncle Joe" Brooks at Millsaps. A good man of precious memory would thereby be honored, and the means provided by which indigent, but worthy, young men could attend Millsaps College at the very lowest possible cost. The idea is to have rooms and boarding arrangements so very cheap that the poorest of the poor, who desire it, can have the benefits of a college education. As this matter has been placed in my hands, contributors will please send all moneys and subscriptions to J. W. MALONE.

Helping Others.

Every true and sincere effort, whether the probable result is failure or success, should be rewarded and encouraged with a kind, helping word. Perhaps the attempt may not merit approval. If not, a word showing wherein merit is lacking, with a word of encouragement that will, perhaps, bring about, or help to bring about, a second effort in the right direction, is no more than is due to one who has had the courage to make a first trial. Who can tell what the world has lost through rough criticism of first essays? None but the bravest survive them. How many would have had the fortitude to make a second speech before the Parliament of a great nation when the first met with such ridicule and laughter as Lord Beaconsfield's maiden speech met with? Few, indeed. While some have united to their genius this bravery, who knows but many, with even greater natural powers and abilities than any the world has known, have fallen for no other reason than lack of approbation at the critical moment when the soul trembled in the balance of success and defeat.

It is true that a person who allows himself to be so easily discouraged as to give up an effort he is convinced is right and worthy on account of adverse criticism, or lack of appreciation, is, in reality, unworthy of encouragement, and deserves failure. It is also true that, after all, the world is generally correct, and in time estimates justly the work of each individual. But even this conviction should not discourage. All can be brave, and should strive to be. For our encouragement life presents many noble examples. The heroes, the noble men and women of the world, whose hearts are filled with tender heroism, have not all left us. They live among us yet, though, perhaps, we know it not until some noble act reminds us. A burning building crowded with helpless employees, a tunnel accident, a wrecked train, a bridge disaster, will remind us of this truth when we least expect it, and have a better and broader influence over us than a hundred sermons. But even these acts are not the greatest. Many a life of heroism goes unchronicled. He is the greatest hero who does each day some duty distasteful to him. He has need of more courage than the boy who stopped the leak in the Holland dyke. With such reflections it is well frequently to encourage ourselves. We may not be appreciated, but we need not on this account be discouraged or faint of heart in any of our undertakings.

And since discouragement, weariness, defeat and disappointment is the common lot of so large a proportion of earth's toilers, it is well often to recall to our minds the duty of helping, sympathizing with, and encouraging others. It requires but a small effort to speak words of comfort and cheer to those about us.

Kind words cost nothing, and a kind word or action may put sunshine into the hearts of discouraged fellow-beings. The employer's word of approval when a work is well done will often give great happiness. A fellow-worker's word of sympathy and encouragement spoken in the right hour—the hour of dejection, and we all have such hours—will lift half the burden and the heavy weight of the labor, if it is not a love-work, and give a new love and tenderness for the cheerished and self-imposed task of the artist.—The Interior.

Defense of the Faith.

The defense of the faith is the business of the learned. Not the exposition of the faith. The humble Methodist preacher who read out on a snowy morning to twenty people, "Look unto Me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth," had among his hearers a youth called Charles Spurgeon, who dated his conversion from that hour. Jacob Bohme was a poor Silesian shoemaker, almost wholly without education, but he read the Scriptures, was diligent in prayer, and clave especially to the promise of the Holy Spirit; and he has instructed in the mysteries of the kingdom of Christ thousands of the most learned. Some of the finest intellects in the country among the company who, three years ago, made a pilgrimage to the grave, where his friends wrote upon a cross, "Here rests Jacob Behme, born of God, died in Christ, sealed with the Holy Spirit." Time would fail us to tell of a thousand other such of whom the world was not worthy. Nor are we bound at every man's challenge to dig up the foundations of the house that shelters us. To sift current speculation is not the business of Christians in the mass. Suffice it that they have come to Christ, their rest. But when questions are raised by masters in learning and science, the case is different. These should be met by their peers. If an appeal is made by skeptics to Hebrew scholarship, the champion of Christianity must be able to say, "Unto Hebrew scholarship thou shalt go." If the scientist disputes the existence of a Creator, there must be Christian men of science who, in the name of science, can confute him. It is monstrous that men should pose as constructors in theology who can not read a line of their Bibles in Hebrew or Greek. This applies to both sides. It is equally monstrous that men should rush into controversy on such subjects as evolution without the most rudimentary acquaintance with natural science. It can not be too often said that Christianity loves the light, welcomes all truth, is ready to hear patiently every new interpretation, and cleaves only to that which is good. Let us make this understood: that we are ready to meet philosophy by philosophy, learning by learning, science by science, and we shall find that the younger men will be as steadfast in the faith of Christ Jesus as their fathers have been.—British Weekly.

Home for Aged Methodists.

One of the most beautiful charities in this city is the Memorial Home for Old Men, which is maintained by the Women's Christian Association. In Philadelphia there is a similar home for aged Methodists, which commends itself as an excellent idea. If every church would make provision for its aged and indigent members who have no home of their own, it would brighten the last days of many who are helpless and infirm. It is sad to think of any Christian man or woman having to go to a county poor-house, and it would be very easy in this way to make provision for those who have laid up nothing for the "rainy day" of old age.—St. Louis Advocate.

HOME-COMING.

When life's hours of toil are ended,
And my day draws to a close;
When the bells of evening, chiming,
Call me to my long repose,
Eagerly my feet shall hasten,
And my eyes shall look to see,
Standing close by heaven's portals,
Loved ones, waiting there for me.

They who look from that far country
Watched me as I faltered too,
In earth's weary round of labor,
Strength and courage almost gone,
When they see me drop life's burdens
And to heaven's refuge flee,
Swift will gather round the portals,
Loved ones, waiting there for me.

And when on their silver hinges
Wide the gates of pearl shall swing,
And by grace of Him who loved me
I am suffered to come in,
First of heaven's joys to greet me,
In that joyful hour shall be,
As I pass those shining portals,
Loved ones, waiting there for me.

Then the cords which earth's rude conflict
Here had broken shall be joined,
And beyond death's gloomy kingdom
Still more strongly shall be twined;
Ah! my heart, fail not thy singing!
Though the way may weary be,
Soon my joyful eyes shall see them,
Loved ones, waiting there for me.

A Cry for the Light.

"Our souls have holy light within,
And every form of grief and sin
Shall see and feel its fire."

This double testimony completes the experience of every true child of God. There is not any more doubt of the existence of this light in the soul of the converted man, and of its influence over his sorrows and his sins, than there is of his individuality. The diseased man could not doubt he had taken the medicine that cured him; no more can the man doubt that the holy fire that consumes the sorrows and sins of his heart has been kindled in his soul. The existence of doubt is proof of absence, and the Scripture is true which says: "And he that doubteth is damned if he eat, because he eateth not of faith: for whatsoever is not of faith is sin." And no thoughtful Christian can contemplate the sad experience antedating the entering in of this light into the soul, and not feel that it is the need and the right of every other soul that hath sorrow and sin. And no conscientious Christian—and the Word of God knows no other class—can fail to recognize the need of others, and his obligation to help them. Yet the deceitfulness of the heart often cries "Peace," when there is no peace, while we excuse ourselves for reasons that are not reasons. The following will explain what I mean:

"Some years ago there lived a little girl in Kentucky, who was the only child of her parents, and they were members of our church. She was very fond of going to church, where she listened with all the attention she could give to what the minister said. One evening she heard a sermon upon the subject of family worship, which she seemed to understand perfectly, for, as soon as she got home, she asked her father why he did not have prayers with his family. He tried, for a while, to put her off with evasive answers, but she pursued the subject with such direct simplicity that, at length, he told her if she would go into the parlor and bring him the Bible, he would have prayer. Now, the child was five or six years old, very much afraid of dark places, and there was no light in the parlor, so that her father had not the slightest idea she would go. But, very much to his surprise, she arose, with a mingled expression of timidity and resolution, and started for the Bible. She could not open the folding-doors, and, therefore, had to reach the parlor through the dark hall. But she felt her way along, and in a few seconds her father heard her stumbling against the chairs in the parlor. This was more than he could bear. He was a Christian gentleman, intensely fond of his little daughter, and his heart was stung with remorse. 'Merciful God!' he exclaimed, 'is that my child groping about in the dreadful dark for the Light of Life, wherewith to guide my erring feet into the path of duty?' He sprang to the door, threw it open, and discovered his baby preacher with her dimpled arms strained around the big family Bible, the weight of which was a full match for her strength. God was keeping the dark and the fear off, while his little friend won her first trophy. In a few minutes more she was kneeling with her parents at their new family altar."

She triumphed, indeed; yet none but God knows what the conditions imposed by her Christian father made that victory cost her hungering spirit. The act may be credited to a spirit of thoughtlessness; yet that does not fully explain the real state of the case. There is the manifest prescribing of conditions that must merit the blessing bestowed, or, failing, justify the withholding of needed mercies. It is this spirit that destroys spirituality and cripples the energies of the church of God. We are losing sight of the fact that ours is purely a life of faith in what we do, as well as in God, and that we are not planning for a harvest in this life, but in that which is to come. Why should we, so ignorant and short-sighted, think of prescribing conditions of working and giving, save the one condition of doing both, which is the privilege? And besides all this, that which is made to come up to the measure of an elected condition of work or gift, must assume a new relation in responsibility. If I accept God's conditions, which are such as confront me at every turn, then may I do and give, leaving the increase to God. But if I assume to prescribe the precedent conditions, I must also assume the responsibility as well. But the rule with this class of Christians is the excuse for not doing, and not the doing. "He that observeth the wind shall not sow, and he that regardeth the clouds shall not reap. In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand: for thou knowest not whether shall prosper, either this or that, or whether both shall be alike good."

Length of Sermons.

The object of preaching ought to be purely to accomplish good and be benefited, on the part of both the preacher and the people. Consequently, no fixed limit can be set to the length of sermons. It seems, because different subjects necessarily require different lengths of time for their elucidation and application. While some may be profitably disposed of in half an hour, justice can not be done to others in less than a full hour, if in that length of time.

St. Paul preached once all night, and as he was under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, we must conclude that was the proper length of time he ought to have preached on that occasion, at least. It is true that one young man went to sleep during that long discourse, and fell out of a window and came near losing his life; but some people go to sleep in less than half an hour during preaching, but keep wide awake all night during amusement.

The preacher, it seems, ought to make it a rule to treat his subject as fully as it may deserve, but in as short time as he can do it justice. Those who are really interested in the subject-matter will listen and be profited by hearing the conclusion of the whole matter, even if an hour, or more, be required to finish it, while those who take no interest in it would not be benefited by cutting it short in fifteen minutes.

The preacher ought to "study to show himself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." In the first place, it is absolutely necessary that he be born again and endued with power from on high, and that he acquire a clear understanding of the subject he is to present to the minds and hearts of his hearers; and then he ought to deliver his sermon in as appropriate and brief language as he can. If these essentials be scrupulously attended to, the people will almost invariably hear the preacher gladly, and much good will be accomplished; but if he have not a clear conception of the message he is to deliver, and be not filled with the Holy Spirit, he will accomplish little or no good, whether he cuts it short in fifteen minutes, or spins it out to an hour. It is not the length of sermons, whether long or short, that accomplishes the good, but the spirit and the matter they contain. The more one objects in life to the length of sermons, the more he will regret, when he comes to die, that he had not devoted more time to getting ready. This must be true, as necessarily as it is more important to prepare for endless eternity than for short-lived time. So thinks

ONE OF THE PEOPLE.

Rev. W. P. Lovejoy, Dr. D. C. Kelley and a Woman vs. the Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

MR. EDITOR: Rev. W. P. Lovejoy's article, "What Shall Be Done with the Parsonage and Home Mission Society?" stirred out Dr. Kelley and "A Woman." The articles of his coadjutors—Dr. Kelley and "A Woman"—were written evidently while their ears were filled with the whispers of "a few," whose eyes can see no harvest to reap save that of the foreign field. Now, there are others who see two harvest fields—the foreign and the home field.

1. Every argument that can be made for the existence of the Woman's Missionary Society can also be made to sustain the Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

2. The Parsonage and Home Mission Society is designed to occupy to the Board of Church Extension the same relation that the Woman's Missionary Society sustains to the Board of Missions. Now, if the Mission Board needs the help of the Woman's Missionary Society, the Church Extension Board certainly needs the assistance of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

3. Methodism is connectional. Nearly every church has a local aid society to do local work. If the church does not present these organizations with a program and specific work, they are going to be influenced by every local movement that sweeps through the community, and the connectional spirit will, in a great measure, be marred. There are, too, very few local aid societies that are capable of preparing a spiritual and edifying program themselves. As it is, they are furnished with a program that not only gives spiritual food, but general missionary news, which stir them to greater endeavor. It would be folly to localize again that which has been made connectional.

4. "The time has come," says Bro. Lovejoy, "to weigh this society in the light of the history it has made, and pronounce judgment according to the work it has done." Very well; I quote from the last annual report: "What the labor of effecting our organization has been, only those who entered into this work in its earliest stages will ever have any conception. There are some who might tell much of this. But the dark days have passed; God carried us through them; good seed we sowed broadcast, and behold our sheaves! In seven years besides effecting our organization, the society has raised for all purposes, general and local, $87,131 30. And this has been done by a society that had to struggle mightily for existence, and even now reaches but 554 adult and 87 juvenile auxiliaries." Splendid record, sure! Bear in mind that this work has been done in the face of intense opposition. Can the Woman's Missionary Society, in the first seven years of its existence, make a better showing?

5 Friction between the Woman's Missionary Society and the Parsonage and Home Mission Society ought not to exist, nor will it when the work is properly understood. The societies are not rivals; they are mutual helps. Many charges, like the one I serve, never organized the Woman's Missionary Society until the connectional spirit was stirred within them by the Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

6 The main objection urged by Rev. W. P. Lovejoy and his coadjutors—Dr. Kelley and "A Woman"—is that the same women run both societies. Then the plea—"they are overworked." Show me a man, woman or child doing too much for the Lord in Southern Methodism, and I will suggest that they be retired on a good, comfortable pension. Dr. Kelley is, in his usual role, opposing where the Bishops propose.

Examine Your Heart.

There are many professing Christians who do not seem to enjoy the religion they profess. There must be some cause for this, for Christians should be the happiest people on earth. Examine closely, and see if you can find where the trouble lies.

First, on what is your faith founded? Are you sure that it is resting entirely on Jesus, and the precious promises contained in the Bible? Is your faith strong enough to believe that God will fulfil all his promises to you? Do you love and thank God as you ought for the many blessings you have received? Do you take everything to him in prayer? Do you believe that God answers your prayers in the way that is best, though often different from the way that you asked? Do you go to him morning, noon and night? Are you fully consecrated to his service, giving to him so much of your time, life, means, etc., as your conscience dictates? Have you sought him with all your heart, preferring him to anything the world might offer? Do you ask God to bless you in reading or hearing his Word? Are you careless in your devotions? Do you try to live up to your conscience and to God's laws? Are you living in any known sin, which you are not asking God to help you overcome?

I ask you to put the above questions to your own heart, and see if some one of them does not locate the trouble. Be sure that your heart is rid of all self. Come to Christ, pleading his promises and merits. If you feel that your faith and love are not strong enough, pray God to strengthen them, and believe that he will grant your request, for he has promised to do so. Cast yourself and all you have at the foot of the cross, and Jesus will receive you and give you the Holy Spirit to guide you in the way of life everlasting. Cast all your care upon him. If you have done all this, and can say from the bottom of your heart, "Thy will be done," I do believe that you will rejoice and that you will enjoy your religion more, and your eyes will be opened to see some work around you that you can do for Jesus—be it to visit the sick, speak a cheering word to some lonely heart, or to point some one the way to heaven. Whenever a Christian is led to feel that "peace which passeth all understanding," he is sure to want to make others feel it. Lean on Jesus, and he will bear your burden.

Easy indeed it were to reach
A mansion in the courts above,
If swelling words and fluent speech
Might serve instead of faith and love!
But none shall gain the blissful place,
Or God's unclouded glory see,
Who talks of free and sovereign grace,
Unless that grace has made him free.

"Or when saw we thee sick or in prison and came unto thee? . . . Inasmuch as you have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye did it unto me."—Mat. xxv, 39, 40.

MR. EDITOR: A few weeks since I was called upon to bury an old man who was slain by his own son. On yesterday I visited that boy in the county jail at Woodville, Miss., where he occupies a cell along with a fellow-prisoner who protests his innocence of the offense with which he is charged. These men's names are, respectively, J. R. Wilson and J. M. McDowel. These men ask the prayers of the host of Christian readers of the ADVOCATE.

It is not hard to visit the sick. They are our friends, our neighbors, our loved ones, but these other! May it not be that we are often losing opportunities to win the plaudits of our Master? Yes, may we not be in danger of losing our crown? A few hundred unfortunates are in the jails of our State. Jesus called them his brethren; are they not ours? Thousands of Christians in those same towns. Can not there be found one in those towns to go and talk to them about Jesus, pray for them and give them Bibles to read, that they may be led to him who alone breaks the power of sin and sets the prisoner free? If you can not go you can pray, and at even great distances your prayers may avail with God and make these poor ones rich and bound ones free. Brethren, pray for these. Yours in Christ Jesus,

K. S. ENOCHS.

Do Your Best and Leave the Rest.

A young minister, for the past year over a country parish, declares that every Monday is a genuine "blue Monday," in which he re-reads the productions he has offered to his people the day before, realizes their poverty of thought and expression and fears he has mistaken his calling. But, since he has the work upon his hands, he feels forced to take up the burden of its responsibility, screws his courage to the sticking point by Tuesday, and goes on with renewed endeavor until the next Monday. His success with his charge has been indifferent. His people do not dislike him, indeed, they consider him clever and feel an interest in all he does, but they do not find food for their souls in his utterances. They say, "He seems to have some good ideas, but he isn't fairly broken to the harness." Since their minister is college-bred they wonder if he is not beyond their capacity—a little ahead of an old-fashioned community. They are faithful in going to hear him, but their spiritual enthusiasm is not what it ought to be.

They asked for him again this year because there was really nothing to say against him. They will not oppose him next year unless something unexpected develops. They believe he will be all right—"give him time enough." Meantime, though they have never put it into so many words—perhaps have not definitely thought it—the cause of God languishes in their midst.

This case is, doubtless, only one among too many. In truth, one is too many. And the simple fact is, the young preacher has not learned to do his best and leave the rest. Like too many of us, in and out of the pulpit, his powers are paralyzed by morbid sensitiveness about the effect of his efforts. He is looking in, and not out, in one sense. That is, he is burdened with his personality. To his congregation he fancies he says, "What think ye of Christ?" In reality his anxious query is, "What think ye of me?"

It is a common fault—the solicitude about the reception of our words because they are our words, instead of solicitude about them because they carry the message of God. And this erring solicitude, if not checked, can wreck a life-work, the hopes of reform, the projects of love and benevolence.

There is one sure way to make preaching and teaching effective. Having been certainly called to it, let teacher and preacher take up his work absolutely above the thought of the impression his individuality may make. Full of his message, let him adapt it to the needs of his people, and put the truth—not himself—before them. Having thus done his best let him leave the rest. God gives the increase.

Doubtless, the young often deceive themselves and fancy their extreme concern about the acceptability of their work is due to their desire to magnify their vocation. But let each person who finds himself tormented thus, ruthlessly search out his hidden thought. It will be of himself!

The man racked by over-sensitive doubts will grow morbid and lose power with God and his brother. The man that rests secure in cheerful and unselfish devotion to service, and the knowledge that God, having chosen, will use him, can heartily do his best and trustfully leave the rest.—Northern Advocate.

Don't think you have lost all your religion because you have made a mistake, or conclude that God is dead because the sky turns black. God is in the storm as much as in the sunshine.

The House of God.

Notwithstanding the numerous attractions of our time, so unfriendly to sanctuary service, what multitudes of hungry hearts are being satisfied with the "fatness of his house!" Never, we are confident, has the privilege of sitting where "strength and beauty are in his sanctuary" been more widely appreciated than at the present. Never have greater numbers in the aggregate sought his courts, or have exclaimed with joyful hearts: "A day in thy courts is better than a thousand. I had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness." Many souls in Christian and heathen lands not only find delight in God's earthly temple; they also anticipate with joy an entrance upon the heavenly city. In the marvelous description given by the revelator of that abode, the temple of earth vanishes away, and God becomes evermore all and in all: "I saw no temple therein; for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it." We claim that the world is coming to see the value of religious truth as never before. A bright, hopeful view of Christ's kingdom is fully justified by the facts. Depression should never rest upon our spirits. The hour calls for men and women of buoyant faith, for those who rejoice even in the midst of obstacles, thankful that all over the earth multitudes assemble steadily for worship, and have the truth of God sealed upon their hearts for edification as they sit together in earthly temples.

O, let us never lose confidence in the gospel, God's merciful provision for needy souls. It matters not that we are unable to explain the secret philosophy of redemption. It is enough to know that Jesus was "wounded for our transgressions," and that "by his stripes we are healed." The world is waiting to hear this glad announcement. Only let it be delivered by us in sincerity, tenderness, and fullness of consecration.—New York Advocate.

A Waste of Money.

The Atlanta Constitution gives the following startling figures: "Amounts spent by Americans in the last twelve months for whisky, $609,000,000! Spent during same time for beer, $617,258,000. Spent during same time for cigars and tobacco, $275,750,000." The Constitution says: "These grumblers and growlers who talked economy to their wives and children and prayed for the return of good times, managed to scrape up about $1,600,000,000 for their common drinks and their cigars, and what their wines and brandies cost we may imagine. This enormous sum, our correspondent says, is more than our entire volume of circulation. It is $27 per capita more than the present per capita circulation. It is $195 for each head of every family in the United States! This money would pay all the appropriations of a billion dollar Congress and leave enough to more than half pay the expense of another such Congress. It would pay six times over for our annual cotton crop. It would pay the cost of a long foreign war. It would feed and clothe in a plain fashion every family in the Union! We do not present these startling figures with the hope that they will bring about an economic revolution, but we believe they can not fail to influence thousands of thoughtful readers and create a prejudice against extravagance and waste. This is simply a statement of facts which must open the eyes of men to the true explanation of most of the poverty and suffering now prevailing. The American liquor and tobacco bill would be frightful enough in a period of prosperity, but what shall we say of it in these hard times?"

God's Promises.

A promise is like a cheque. I have a cheque, what do I want with it? Suppose I carried it about in my pocket, and say, "I do not see the use of this bit of paper, I can not buy anything with it," a person would say: "Have you been to the bank with it?" "No, I did not think of that." "But it is payable to your order. Have you your name on the back of it?" "No, I have not done that." "And yet you are blaming the person who gave you the cheque! The whole blame lies with yourself. Put your name on the back of the check, go with it to the bank, and you will get what is promised to you." A prayer should be the presentation of God's promise endorsed by your personal faith. I hear of people praying for an hour. I am very pleased that they can; but it is seldom that I can do so, and I see no need for it. It is like a person going into the bank with a cheque and stopping an hour. The clerks would wonder. The common-sense way is to go to the counter and show your check, and take your money and go about your business. There is a style of prayer which is of this fine, practical character. You so believe in God that you present the promise, obtain the blessing, and go about your Master's business.—Spurgeon.

Character Building.

Let us make no mistake here. It makes a vast difference what we build on. The Lord tells us of two shepherds who led their flocks down by the water courses and sought for a suitable place whereon to build their watch huts. One selected a place by the riverside, where the herbage was green and easy of access. The other, more prudent, preferred a shelf of the rock. Every handful of straw for its thatching must be carried up a toilsome path. It would be a difficult matter, moreover, to hold his flocks at eventide. But presently the stormy season was at hand; the rains descended, the floods came, the winds blew and beat upon his house, but it fell not. He stood in his doorway and saw the torrent roll through the wady below; with infinite, but vain compassion, saw it sweep away his neighbor's house to utter destruction. O yes, it makes a difference what a man builds on.

The foundation is already laid for us. "Other foundation can no man lay than is laid, which is Jesus Christ," the Rock of Ages.

And what is it to build on Christ? It is not merely to receive his teaching by an intellectual assent. The learned Grotius, who had taught theology all his life, lamented at the last that truth had taken no vital grip upon his heart. It is not to receive Christ sentimentally. To be a Christian is something vastly other than merely to rhapsodize about the Lord or to sing, "All hail the power of Jesus' name!" Nor is it merely to enroll ourselves upon the roster of the Christian church, for there will be multitudes, who at the last shall knock, saying, "Lord, Lord, open unto us. We have cast out devils in thy name, and in thy name done many wonderful works;" but he shall say, "I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

To build on Jesus Christ is to receive him in such a manner that our lives shall be blended in his, and we shall be able to say, "I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless, I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me."

It is to accept him with such an all-embracing consent that his will shall be our will, his work our work, his people our people, his manner of life our rule of action, his Bible the man of our counsel, his slightest wish our law, himself our first, last, midst, and all in all.—From "The Morning Cometh," by D. J. Burrell, D. D.

Counsel to Young Converts.

Don't think you have lost all your religion because you have made a mistake in something; or conclude that God is dead because the sky turns black sometimes. God is in the storm as much as he is in the sunshine. Make up your mind that you are going to believe in God no matter what happens. No sensible man will tear up his railroad ticket because the train runs through a tunnel.

Determine to be a happy Christian whether you have a cent in your pocket or not. With God's grace, it won't take much to make you rich.

Don't be a wobbling Christian. Keep your eye on Christ, and you won't have a bit of trouble in keeping even in your experience. Adopt a plan which will mean loyalty to God always and stand upon it.

Get into a habit of feeling that God is interested in everything which concerns you. Keep in the closest communion with him by asking and trusting him constantly to manage you.

Never make a plan and leave God out. Make him first in all your undertakings. If you make a mistake, instead of sitting down to cry and fret about it, tell God all about it, and ask him to overrule it for good.

Maintain habits of secret prayer, and pray and praise while you work or rest or think. Ask God to help you love people you don't like.—Ram's Horn.

Social Christianity.

The Master was not a recluse, but was a man among men. He was easily approached, and took special pains to meet the people. As church members we may not have much wealth, we may not be gifted in speech or in song, we may lack the ability to teach the Bible, though in all these particulars we can at least, partially succeed; but there is no possibility of failure in commending our religion to others if our hearts are full of love to God and man. Call on the stranger in your neighborhood, the cordial recognition of the young man at the Sabbath service, or at the prayer meeting, the warm grasp of the hand, the kind, loving word of commendation, the calling on your Sunday-school scholar, or the occasional entertainment at your home for the entire class, in these and other ways are we to preach the gospel. While we are not to infringe on the rights and privileges of sister churches, for we are brethren, yet we should have a pride in making our church as bright, cheerful as possible. The pastor can be greatly helped by every member attending the services of his own church and cultivating Christian sociability.—Exchange.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

POTATO CROQUETTES.—To four cups of mashed potato add one cup of milk, four well-beaten eggs, and salt to taste. Put a spoonful into egg, then into breadcrumbs, then into boiling lard until golden brown. Serve immediately.—Exchange.

SHORTCAKE.—To one orange allow two bananas. Peel and slice the bananas very thin; grate the rind of the orange, and then peel and take out the pulp. Mix with the fruit a cup of sugar and the grated rind. Make a rich biscuit dough, bake in a thin sheet; when done split and butter it, spread over it the fruit mixture, and serve with whipped cream.—Exchange.

SANDWICH MEAT.—Boil an egg very hard and mash it with the yolk; add a teaspoonful of white sugar, half a teaspoonful of salt, half a teaspoonful of mustard, one tablespoonful of olive oil, and two tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Chop fine remnants of cold meat (steak is best), mix it with the dressing, and spread on thin pieces of bread cut into squares. Garnish with lemon and parsley.—House and Farm.

RAISIN PUFFS.—One-half teacup of sugar, one-half teacup of milk, two eggs, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a pinch of salt. Flour enough that the butter will drop from the spoon. Stir in a cup of seeded and chopped raisins. Fill buttered teacups half full. Steam one hour. This will make six or seven cupfuls. Eat hot with whipped cream and sugar or any kind of rich sauce.—House and Farm.

CURRANT COOKIES.—The following recommended in Good Housekeeping is an excellent recipe: Two cupfuls of sugar, two eggs, one cupful of butter (one half of each butter and lard), one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a half teacupful of hot water (or sweet milk, if you have it), one tablespoonful of cinnamon and cloves and one grated nutmeg, one cupful of currants, and flour enough to mix soft. After rolling out, sprinkle well with sugar, and cut any shape desired.

WHITE CANDY.—There are two methods used in making this. For the uncooked the whites of eggs are required. Into a bowl break the white of an egg, with one-half its bulk of cold water and one teaspoonful of cornstarch; stir well, but do not beat, and gradually add fine sugar until stiff enough to form into balls with the fingers; flavor as desired. Form some of the mixture into cubes or balls. Into another portion stir powdered chocolate and make sticks, or stick the white balls on the end of a darning-needle and roll in chocolate which has been melted in a saucer. Set over a kettle of boiling water. Into another portion stir dessicated cocoanut, and shape. These are delicious. Color a part pink with fruit juice, and spread a thin layer on a greased platter, put over a layer of pure white candy, then a layer brown with chocolate.—Housekeeper.

HYGIENE.

The Healthfulness of Lemonade.

A paragraph in the Evening Post some time ago, referring to the doctrine of the German physician, Dr. Wilhelm Schmoele, that he who eats lemons in sufficient abundance need never die, inspires me to give my personal experience of the healthfulness of lemon juice in lemonade, particularly for persons subject to frequent bilious derangements resulting in dizziness, yellow complexion, and so-called "liver spots" on the skin. In 1875 I began drinking lemonade regularly, taking the entire juice of two or three lemons at a time in an ordinary goblet of water, with a small teaspoonful of sugar for each lemon, afterward rinsing my mouth with clear water to remove the acid and sugar from teeth and gums. With rare exceptions, I have now taken lemonade in this way four times daily for ten years—on rising in the morning, about one o'clock P. M., half an hour before dinner, and on retiring at night; and whenever professional duties prevented it, I have felt at once the absence of the lemon juice in my system. I take only two meals daily, but consume besides a considerable quantity of fruits of the season, such as grapes, peaches, oranges, melons, etc. I have no taste for and do not use ale, porter, wine, or spirits. Formerly, my ordinary weight was about 150 pounds, my height being, as now, 5 feet 7¼ inches. For six or eight years past I have weighed in the neighborhood of 190 pounds without feeling any inconvenience. The coating of my stomach is unimpaired, my step is quick and firm, and I have the vigor of youth. During the forty-three years of my residence in New York I have not been out of the city altogether more than six months, and I have been in uninterrupted active practice for over thirty years. For twelve years past I have indulged freely in surf bathing in the season, usually at Coney Island. My head is not bald, and there is but little gray in my hair. I am stronger, both physically and mentally, than I was twenty years ago, and I am taken by everybody to be ten or fifteen years younger than I am.

While I attribute these favorable conditions largely to the use of some 3,000 lemons a year, I have not "lemons on the brain." My patients frequently ask if it would benefit them to drink lemonade as I do. The answer must necessarily depend upon the appearance, temperament, condition, etc., of the questioner. I do not think that lemon juice is injurious to anybody, but would not advise that my example should be followed indiscriminately. People are apt to rush to extremes, and do some very foolish things when any new idea is advanced—although, for that matter, lemons have been in domestic use for ages. The trouble is that they have been used too sparingly or in the wrong way. After all that I have taken, I can not even now suck the juice of a lemon or relish it without the addition of sugar and water.—Otto Fullgraff, M. D.

Women Must Do It.

"The way America uses up its men is fearful. We must cry a halt—and women must do it. Our society women who keep men up at dances and routs until no time is left them for sleep and rest, are very short-sighted. They complain that no men can be had at entertainments, and they will not recognize the fact that we have no great leisure class of men who can lie in bed as our (worthless) girls can in the mornings. I had five women to luncheon lately and four of them were widows under forty! All but one had children—all had lost active, splendid, young husbands; practically killed them by demanding that they should not only do their work, but help them to keep up a fashionable existence besides. There is a limit to what a man can do, and if he does not keep within his physiological resources he will become a bankrupt, physically, in a short time."—Journal of Hygiene.

A Fifteen-Minute Rest.

"Do you remember old Dr. L?" asked a woman of society the other day. "He believed in what is now called 'rest cure,' years and years ago. I remember very well a formula he gave me when I was first married, which was practically the same thing that everyone advocates nowadays. 'Whenever a woman feels tired,' he used to say, 'or discouraged, or depressed, or out of sorts generally, she should lie down and be absolutely quiet for fifteen minutes. The eyes should be closed, and the mind should be made a blank, as far as possible. No pillow should be used, her head reclining on a level with her shoulders. She should not even think of the time, but have some one call her at the expiration of the time. This treatment,' he used to say, 'repeated twice a day, has a wonderful effect on nervous women.'"

Be careful of your health; it is a blessing that can never be too highly valued; it is simply priceless.

AGRICULTURE.

Truck Farming.

DEEP VERSUS SHALLOW COLD FRAMES.

During the cold wave that struck our community, on Feb. 22, 23 and 24, many tomato plants were killed in the different kinds of frames used for their protection. We have in use for this purpose hot beds, single and double cold frames. There were on the date alluded to more plants killed in hot beds than in single cold frames, and more in single than in double cold frames. This sprung a question among the growers: Why this difference of loss in the different kinds of bed? We believe the question answerable. Our hot beds are so constructed that their depth is about one foot on the back to six inches in front. Our single cold frames, two feet on the back to one foot in front. Our double, about three feet deep in center to one foot in front. Therefore the double cold frame is deeper than single, and the single deeper than hot beds. The loss of plants on the date mentioned increased as the depth of the frame went from the deepest to the more shallow. There were a great many lost in hot beds, less in single frames than hot beds, and double frames scarcely any. The question sprung is certainly an important one: Why this difference? Now, science teaches that confined air is a non-conductor, and the more confined to a certain extent, the less liability to freeze. There was less confined air in hot beds than in single cold frames, the single frame being deeper as before mentioned. There was more confined air in the double frames than either of the others, therefore, the answer—it was the result of the depth of confined air. The lesson taught: Our cold frames should be deeper and so constructed as to be certain to confine the air, and they will be almost proof against losses against cold so far as it becomes in our climate. When we reach cold frames, we will give our methods of covering.

Breed from Blooded Stock.

A great deal has been written in regard to the use of only blooded stock for breeding purposes, but the subject is by no means exhausted. It is one of those topics which need to have their truths constantly reiterated.

The great majority of people who keep live stock have a great deal more faith in individual excellence than they have in pedigree. They know that very many animals that are only grades are handsomer than many which have irreproachable pedigrees. They know that in various lines of production grades are often as profitable as full-blooded animals; while for the performance of farm work the grades are often equal, if not superior. Consequently, they reason that as the better class of grades are just as satisfactory for productive purposes and for work as are the full-blooded animals, they will certainly answer all requirements for breeding. In this they make a serious mistake. They overlook the great fact that while each animal may possess good qualities, and may have these qualities in an equal degree, the full-blooded one has a far greater power than has the grade to transmit its character to its offspring. The grade represents only itself. The full-blooded animal represents not only itself, but also the breed to which it belongs. The grade inherited certain qualities from its parents. The full-blooded animal has its inheritance not only from its parents, but also from a long line of their predecessors.

A grade may be an excellent animal to keep. It may be worthy of as much care and as high feeding as a full-blooded one. There are grades which for most purposes are as good as any animals. But when it comes to breeding, the grades are deficient. They must now, and this will be true for a long time to come, be used in a considerable extent because a sufficient number of full-blooded animals can not be obtained. But they should be used only as a matter of necessity. Just as soon as possible their places should be taken by animals of better breeding. This is especially important in the case of males. Whatever class of animals is kept, grade males should never be used if good ones of full blood can be secured.—John E. Read, in American Farmer.

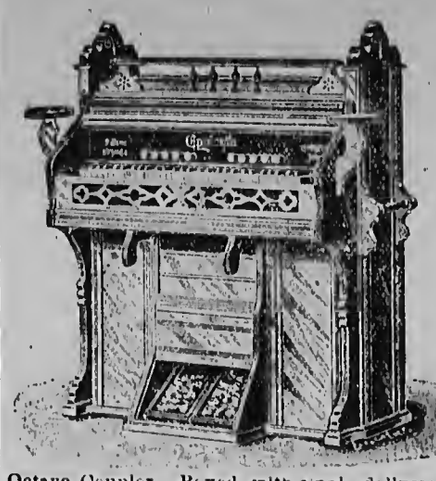
ORGANS AS PREMIUMS.

We have made arrangements to offer a rare bargain in the way of organs as premiums to our subscribers. The organs which we handle are the Epworth Organs. These have not heretofore had much sale in Mississippi and Louisiana, though they have had an immense sale throughout the North and West and also in some of the Southern States. Do you want a small organ for your church? If so, read the description given below of Style No 102, and see how it would suit you.

STYLE 102. THE EPWORTH CHAPEL ORGAN.

HEIGHT, 51 IN.; WIDTH, 23 IN.; LENGTH, 48 IN.



Best Low-Priced Chapel Organ.

Walnut case; Hard Wood Panels; Finished Back; Lamp Stands; Handsome Fret Work; Full Length Music Desk; Engraved Ornaments; Hand Rubbed; Oil Finish; Pedals covered with Brussels Carpet; Metal Guards on Pedals.

This is the Organ for Churches and Sunday-schools, where a First-Class Action is Desired.

In a good, plain case, the quality of action and tone being the same as in the higher priced styles.

Style 102, 12 Stops.

EPWORTH CHAPEL—Five Octaves, containing four sets of Reeds of two and one-half Octaves each. STOPS—Principal; Dulcet Diapason; Diapason Forte; Vox Angelica; Principal Forte; Cremona; Melodia; Echo Horn; Celeste. Metal Octave Coupler. Boxed, with stool, delivered on board cars at factory.

The catalogue price of this is $87. We will give it as a premium for one hundred subscribers. Send us the cash $200, for the subscribers, and you get the organ free. If you can't get one hundred persons to subscribe personally, perhaps you have well-to-do members of your church who will pay for several poorer members, thereby bestowing a blessing upon them by giving them a religious paper and at the same time helping to procure an organ for your church. If you don't exactly like Style 102, then read the description of Style 302.

In the Delta.

We remained at Indianola until Tuesday morning, and had a pleasant time among the brethren. We will not attempt an account of the proceedings of the District Conference or the Woman's Missionary Conference, as both will, doubtless, be written up in an official way. The exercises of the meeting on Sunday night were specially good. Besides good music and several appropriate recitations by juvenile missionary workers, there were well written essays by Mrs. W. S. Shipman, Mrs. Bew, and Mrs. G. H. Lipscomb. We met several old friends and parishioners at Indianola. Among others, we had the pleasure of meeting Dr. F. A. Jones, and enjoying the cordial hospitalities of himself and his accomplished wife.

Tuesday, accompanied by the pastor, Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, we proceeded to Greenville, where we had been advertised for a sermon at night. We were most handsomely entertained during our stay with our old-time friends, Bro. and Sister T. L. Mount. We also enjoyed the hospitalities of the pleasant home of Bro. R. Somerville. We remained at Greenville until Thursday morning, and had the pleasure of hearing, on Wednesday night, an excellent sermon by Bishop Hargrove on Enoch. Pastor Ramsey has his work well in hand. He is much beloved by his flock, who speak highly of his work both in the pulpit and out of it.

Thursday morning we boarded the train for Cleveland, reaching there a little before noon. With Bishop Hargrove and Presiding Elder Randolph we enjoyed the generous hospitalities of Bro. and Sister Matthews. The District Conference convened at two o'clock P. M. Of the District Conference we will not attempt a report, as the secretary, Bro. Ramsey, has promised something official in that way. We will say, however, that we heartily endorse what "Gilderoy" said in our last week's issue about Bishop Hargrove's method of conducting a District Conference. We think his method would be hard to improve upon. We preached at night, and went from the pulpit to the train. Dr. I. W. Cooper was on hand, representing Millsaps College, and made an effective talk, which met a generous response, the brethren of the district pledging themselves to raise, if practicable, five hundred dollars during the year for the cottages on the college campus. At Cleveland, as in most other places in the Delta, Methodism takes the lead. Under the pastorate of Rev. H. P. Crowe the church is prospering.

A Layman's Wise Words.

BY HON W. L. NUGENT.

[The following article clipped from the Nashville Advocate is heartily commended to the powers that be. We are in hearty sympathy with the views it expresses]

The discussion about the organic union of the two branches of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States is unwise and unprofitable. The proposition thus broached is impossible of accomplishment. The federation of all Methodism, if I may be allowed the expression, is possible, and, in the existing condition of things, is both feasible and proper. To one familiar with the course of parties and politics in the United States since the flags of contending armies were furled at Appomattox, it is marvelous that the hearts and minds of Christian people have not before this drifted into closer fraternal relations. In National Conventions Northern and Southern men meet in happy accord, and forget, in the discussion of great economic and political questions, that they ever faced one another in deadly conflict. Confederates take part with Union ex-soldiers in legislating for the common welfare of the American people, and sit together around the council board at Washington to deliberate about the affairs of state. The minds of civilians have forgotten, or barely preserve, the recollections of the internecine strife of thirty years ago. And this is the outcome of Anglo-Saxon civilization and the result of our organized government. There can not be a nation with us without States. Indeed, it was not possible to reconstruct the Confederate States without a recognition of the several States as quasi distinct and sovereign corporate entities.

This furnishes us with an object-lesson in the effort to break down the barriers that separate us and bring the forces of Methodism into unity of purpose and harmony of action against the combined forces of evil. The way has always appeared to me to be plain. The nexus to bind the Northern and Southern Churches together must be found in an Ecumenical Conference, constituted of all the Bishops and selected clerical and lay delegates from the General Conferences of the church. But a Conference of this sort without jurisdiction would be powerless for special good. It should, therefore, have direct control of all foreign missionary enterprises, and, perhaps, publishing interests, while its prime duty should be to preserve in perpetuity the doctrines and polity of Episcopal Methodism. Other powers might be given to promote homogeneity of policy and unify the entire religious body committed to its supervision, but these must be gradually and prudently evolved.

The General Conferences are already too unwieldly. They are not fairly representative bodies, and it is difficult to accommodate them. They might be increased in number, each to represent a membership of not over five hundred thousand, no change being made in the powers and jurisdictions now possessed, except such as are necessary to prevent conflicts with the supreme judicatory. They should elect Bishops, and all Bishops elected should be of equal dignity and hold office "for life or good behavior." The Ecumenical Conference should convene once in eight years, while more frequent sessions might be held to meet recurring exigencies. The Bishops of the entire church could meet annually for consultation, and interchange of districts might be effected so as to bring the people in touch with all the superintendents. It might be well enough to give the body power to assign territory to each Bishop when occasion demanded, without reference to the General Conference by which he is elected. The details of the plan could be worked out by a wise and godly committee from each General Conference, and we have no time to lose. The General Rules, the body of the Discipline as we have it, and a thoroughly itinerant episcopacy and ministry, would constitute the basis on which all could stand; and with them and our forces properly mobilized we would be prepared for aggressive work "all along the line." As it is, our money and resources are wasted; sometimes we needlessly wrangle among ourselves; we often strive for mastery in fields of labor that ought only to be occupied by one of the two bodies, and develop antagonisms that bring reproach upon the cause of Christ. Of course, it goes without saying that the negroes would follow our example, and their churches might be organized and bound together by representation in a like Ecumenical Conference. Let our General Conference, to meet in May, take the initiative, appoint a committee to confer with a like committee from the Northern Church, and report four years hence what has been accomplished. Nothing but good can come out of this movement. The olive branch thus extended would quicken the sensibilities of our people everywhere, and make them realize the fact that God is in our midst.

On the Wing.

Since Conference the financial agent of Millsaps College has traveled five thousand miles in the interest of the college. The greater part of the time has been spent in the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference. The next three or four months will be given to this Conference. It is with profound gratitude I return thanks to the brethren of the North Mississippi Conference for their uniform courtesy and interest shown me for my work's sake.

Mr. Editor, did you ever meet Dr. Cameron, Bros. J. W. Malone, H. C. Morehead, W. S. Shipman, T. Y. Ramsey, Jr., John H. Mitchell, S. M. Thames, O. L. Savage, T. B. Hargrove, R. G. Porter, J. W. Anderson, J. A. Randolph, J. A. Leach, W. A. Dollar, J. J. Brooks, T. J. Newell, C. I. Allen, Geo. Lipscomb, R. M. Davis, R. P. Goar, J. D. Newsom? No Conference was ever blessed with a nobler band of Christian gentlemen than the brethren whom we have met in the North Mississippi Conference. By letter, by resolutions, by personal appeal, the agent is invited to visit them. The laymen are giving us the right hand of fellowship. With J. R. Bingham, of the Winona district, and J. A. Leach, of the Kosciusko, in charge of the Robert Paine Mitchell Home (to cost $1,500), this movement will be a success. With J. W. Malone, H. C. Morehead, J. D. Cameron, J. J. Brooks and J. A. Bowen in charge of the Brooks Memorial Home, this movement will be a success. These brethren propose to raise funds to build a memorial home to honor the memory of Rev. Robert Paine Mitchell, also one to the memory of Rev. J. H. Brooks. There could be no more fitting monument to the memory of these sainted brethren than the building of these homes. Each home will cost $1,500 or $1,600.

Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, Jr., has charge of the college's interest in the bounds of the Greenville district, and will do fine work.

Bro. J. T. Lewis, of Utica, is helping us to erect a cottage, which will be called the Henry T. Lewis Home. There is also a movement on foot to build a cottage in memory of Rev. Jno. A. Ellis, of holy memory. One or two of these homes will be used as professors' homes. Bro. Peter James, who is a friend of everything which helps this country, has given us substantial encouragement.

With the help of the Sunday-schools, the children, and the Methodist preachers of Mississippi, we are making a forward move, and getting ready for 300 boys next session. Mrs. A. B. Finlay, of Greenville, has given the college over $100 worth of choice books. Bishop Hargrove, in the three District Conferences he held, gave us fine talks, and did us much good.

Be it known far and wide that every Methodist in Mississippi who will not help us, the command is, Get out of the way, for with the Lord on our side, and so many friends working for the college, we are going to succeed.

I. W. COOPER,
Financial Agent Millsaps College.

Meeting Modern Skepticism.

BY THE LATE PRESIDENT MARK HOPKINS.

Modern skepticism is to be met by us just as it would be by an individual of good common sense. And

1. We are not to be afraid of it. We are to divest ourselves and, if possible, free others from any impression that skepticism involves superior sagacity or strength of mind. There has been an assumption of this on the part of skeptics, and an admission of it by others for which there is no foundation. Skepticism may indicate power, but never the highest power, either in kind or degree. It may also, and more often does, indicate weakness. The highest form of power is in affirmation and construction. So God intended. The greatest men have always been builders. But skepticism is negation. Its work is destructive, and to deny, to doubt, to object, to find flaws, to destroy anything that can be destroyed is comparatively easy. It does not require the highest form of power, and is a kind of work in which a thoroughly healthy and robust intellect does not readily engage. Strength is indicated by estimating evidence just as it is, and by believing, doubting or disbelieving, according to that. To accept as evidence what is not evidence is weak. That is credulity. Not to recognize as evidence that which is evidence is also weak. That is skepticism, and which shows the greater weakness it would be difficult to say. Credulity is often from indolence, and tends to superstition. Skepticism is often, perhaps most often, from vanity, and tends to conceit. Strength finds the rock and builds upon it.

2. We are to distinguish between facts and inferences.

Much of what is called science is mere inference. It may be the inference of scientific men, but it often happens that those most reliable in observation are least so in inference. When Darwin states the fact that a black bear was seen swimming in the Northern seas, and opening his mouth to catch the insects on which the whale feeds, we are to accept the fact, but not necessarily his inference that, by continuing to do this, bears might ultimately become aquatic animals, and as monstrous as whales. When he observes similarities, heretofore unnoticed, between man and the lower animals, we may accept the facts without adopting his inference that the progenitor of man was a monkey, probably an African monkey, and more remotely a low aquatic animal. Of the fact that the Cardiff giant was dug up in the State of New York, there can be no doubt. Of the inference from that fact by a distinguished paleontologist that it must have lain there at least ten thousand years, we may be permitted to doubt.

It is also to be observed here that we are to be careful respecting our own inferences, and not to charge men with holding facts and theories incompatible with the Bible and with religion when they are not. This has often been done, and the past is strewn with dead issues that have been fought over with fury, but are now seen to have had no relation to essential truth.

3 In dealing with skepticism we are to welcome candidly and fearlessly all truth, and to respect every honest doubt.

In the mind of a being coming forward as man does, doubt is as legitimate as the uncertainty of sight in the twilight. For every young man there is a period of doubt as he comes up to the great questions of all time, and begins to wrestle with them. This is a critical period. It is not necessarily skeptical doubt, but the doubt of ignorance and of inquiry. He is willing to believe, but needs sympathy and light. Give him these. At the same time win him over by every legitimate means from evil associations and from vice, and in almost every case he will come out into clear vision. Reproach and repression of inquiry will have the opposite effect.

I will only add that the most efficient remedy against skepticism which Christian young men can employ is the cultivation and exercise by themselves of the very faith they wish to produce in others.

This is in accordance with the great law that like begets like. Would you produce kindness in others? Manifest kindness before them, and to them. Would you produce hostility? Manifest hostility. And so, would you produce faith in others, you must manifest before them and toward them the fruits of faith. If an intellectual result simply were aimed at, this would not be so, but aiming at a practical result nothing can be substituted for this. Without this there may be arrangements, expenditures, meetings, addresses, but the work will be superficial. The unleavened mass, untouched by any particle with the true leaven in it, will remain unchangod. The whole secret of the spread of Christianity over the world is in this figure of the leaven. It is fire that kindles fire; love that kindles love; Christianity manifested that spreads Christianity. Talent, learning, conviction from argument are well in their place, but avail little. Belief is needed, but it must be in the form of trust. It must be belief on the Lord.—Exchange.

The World Is Changed.

Say what men will about the "decadence of piety" in these days, speak what they may about the inefficient relation of Christianity to the world, it is a very solid truth that this world is vastly different since Christ closed his earthly ministry from what it was before he came to it.

The presence of Christianity in the world has created changes which make it utterly impossible to place the world back to the condition of things before the Christian era. And this is true even though there should be a declension of true piety far below anything witnessed during the last century. Well did Horace Bushnell say: "The world itself is changed and is no more the same that it was; it has never been the same since Jesus left it. The air is charged with heavenly odors, and a kind of celestial consciousness, a sense of other worlds, is wafted on us in its breath. It were easier to untwist all the beams of light in the sky, separating and expunging one of the colors, than to get the character of Jesus, which is the real gospel, out of the world." The light of Christ can not be turned into blackness.—Exchange.

The Southwestern Presbyterian joins us in a plea for the abolition of the liquor traffic in grocery stores in Louisiana. If the friends of the cause will make a judicious effort, they can bring about this reform in the near future.

The Advocate for Twenty-Five Cents.

We will send the ADVOCATE from now until the first of July for twenty-five cents. This period embraces the session of the General Conference. The ADVOCATE will contain reports of the proceedings of the General Conference. All Methodist people ought to keep posted in regard to the action of the General Conference. Let all our subscribers make this offer known and constitute themselves agents for the paper. Let it be remembered that the cash must accompany each name. We will do no book-keeping for anybody on this proposition. This offer is made only to new subscribers.

An Appeal to the Young People of Mississippi.

Dear Young Friends: Millsaps College needs a large hall for young men of limited means. We must build it. The hall is a necessity. Would it not be a handsome work for the young Mississippians to furnish the agent with money to build this hall? If we can get at the work right, we can do it. I want the young Methodists of Mississippi to send me five thousand dollars. Let us go to work in earnest. Let the young people from five to twenty-one years of age send me from fifty cents to one dollar each. Let every church and community be represented. The name and amount will appear in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. May our Father inspire your hearts, dear young friends, to help us build this hall! Let me hear at once from you. Your friend,

I. W. COOPER.

Jackson, Miss.

P. S.—Remember Major Millsaps duplicates every cent you send.

NOTES.

A revival is in progress in Arcadia, La., which is stirring the whole town.

Morean Street Sunday-school takes the banner this year for the best general average among the Sunday-schools of the city.

The Annual Reunion of the Methodist Sunday-schools of the city was held last Sabbath afternoon at Carondelet. There was a large attendance and the exercises were quite interesting.

Bishop Galloway has been selected to write the life of Bishop McTyeire, and has consented to undertake the task. In our judgment a better selection could not have been made. The Bishop's facile pen is admirably adapted to such work.

Episcopal Methodist: Mrs. Julian Hayes, president of the Woman's Missionary Society of M. E. Church, South, is seriously indisposed. She has been in feeble health the past year. Recently an attack of la grippe has further reduced her strength.

At the approaching commencement of Vanderbilt University, Rev. Dr. Jno. A. Broadus, president of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, will preach the baccalaureate sermon, and Mr. Richard Watson Gilder, editor of the Century, will deliver the literary address.

This from the Pacific Methodist Advocate causes us much solicitude: "We regret to state that Bishop Fitzgerald continues in feeble health. The prospect of his being able to fill any engagements for a fortnight, at least, is small. At this writing he is improved a little, but still under dictation of the medical men.

We invite attention to the able paper of our friend, Dr. H. M. DuBose, of the Pacific Advocate, anent Southern Methodism on the Pacific Coast. As the question he discusses will come before the General Conference, we take this opportunity of expressing ourself as in hearty sympathy with Dr. DuBose's views.

"The Progress of the World" of the April Review of Reviews contains a timely discussion of the question why the English game of politics is more exciting than the American game. This question is suggested anew by the resignation of Mr. Gladstone and the intense interest aroused by that episode among Americans, to the partial neglect of Washington politics. Other topics covered in "Progress of the World" are the Seignorage bill, filibustering in Congress, the outlook for bimetallism, the Wilson bill in the Senate, Louisiana and free sugar, the Senate report on Hawaii, the triumph of the Brazilian republic, the Bluefields incident, the prosecution of election crimes, the present positions of the Democratic and Republican parties, the fight against the House of Lords, the Russo-German commercial treaty, the services of the late Dr. Poole, of Chicago; the death of Louis Kossuth, and many matters of international interest.

Catarrh of Pelvic Organs.

A CLASS OF DISEASES NOT GENERALLY UNDERSTOOD.

It is a popular impression that catarrh is a disease confined to the mucous membranes lining the nose, throat and bronchial tubes and other of the respiratory organs. The real fact is, that all mucous membranes, wherever located, are subject to catarrh, and unless recognized and properly treated chronic ailments are sure to follow. No organ of the whole body is more frequently affected than the bladder. The symptoms of catarrh of the bladder are: frequent voiding, which is generally scant in quantity and highly colored, with a thick, white or slightly pinkish sediment. Catarrh of the bladder is also liable to extend downwards to the pelvic organs. This will soon cause smarting, and sometimes difficulty and pain. In females the extension of the catarrhal disease is certain to involve the female pelvic organs, and produces leucorrhœa, painful periods, and bearing-down pains. In using Pe-ru-na for catarrhal affections of these organs a tablespoonful four times each day is sufficient for cases of ordinary severity, but there are acute cases for which it is necessary to take six doses each day to get the full benefit of the treatment. Old persons who are annoyed by frequent calls and burning pains, day or night, never fail to find complete cure by a few months' faithful use of Pe-ru-na. Send for free copy of Family Physician No. 2, in which these subjects are fully explained. Address The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio.

Domestic Missions.

Bro. D. G. W. Ellis criticises the action of the Missionary Board in your last issue. If the object of the Board is to distribute certain funds among certain men according to the necessities of each man, the size of their families, his arguments are unanswerable. But if the object is to build up our domestic mission fields, make self-sustaining works and works that will assist in sustaining other works, much of his reasoning and array of figures fall to the ground. I know a work, a city mission, that had $300 appropriated to it, and then $250 and so on for some years. Now, it has been paying a salary of $1,000 and over for ten years. I know another work in our Conference that some fifteen years ago had $800 appropriated to it, and then $300 always under protest. It has been a self-sustaining station for several years. To each of these, works they sent strong men. The difference in the ability and availability of men Bro. Ellis overlooks. Having five children does not necessarily make a preacher acceptable and able to do efficient work in every place.

Our Pianos and Organs.

The musical instruments which we are offering as premiums are manufactured by the Williams Piano and Organ Co., Centerville, Iowa. This is a large establishment which has branch offices in other cities. The descriptions we give of the instruments are taken from their catalogue. Our subscribers may write to them for catalogues and prices, if they choose. We will give them as good terms as they can get from the manufacturers themselves. Notice that if the requisite number of subscribers can not be procured, the instruments can still be had. Get as many subscribers as you can, and then write us for terms.

Mississippi W. C. T. U.

The eleventh Annual Convention of the Mississippi Woman's Christian Temperance Union will meet in Canton, May 5-8, 1894.

We expect to have with us Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman, of Missouri; Mrs. Mary McGee Snell, Miss Belle Kearney, Mrs. Kyle, Mrs. Mary I. Hoskins, and, perhaps, Miss Francis Griffin, of Alabama; Mrs. H. B. Kelly, and Mrs. Charlton Edholm, of Chicago.

The convention sermon will be preached by the noted evangelist, Rev. W. M. McIntosh, of Alabama. Delegates are requested to reach Canton by Friday, May 4. Friends of prohibition in Mississippi are invited to meet with us. We ask your prayers that God's Spirit may be present in great power.

Greenville, Miss.

Biloxi, Miss.

The church here is in the midst of a glorious meeting. God is wonderfully blessing his people. Four daily services are held, and they are all deeply spiritual. The church is powerfully stirred, and sinners are being saved. The Holy Ghost was present in last evening's service and worked mightily. The altar was filled with penitents. Six joined the church. Bro. D. L. Mitchel and the writer are assisting Bishop Selby.

T. W. Adams.

From the Work.

Rev. J. W. Chambers, Crystal Springs: "The results of our protracted services were good. We will have fifteen accessions by certificate and on confession of faith. We now have seven class meetings running successfully and all the interests of the church are improving."

Rev. C. H. Pittman, P. C., Corinth circuit: "Corinth circuit is moving forward grandly—with leaps and bounds. Our second Quarterly Conference embraced March 24 and 25. We were gratified to report five accessions to the church, and collected for all purposes $220, which is only $12.55 less than was paid altogether last year. We are expecting a harvest of souls this year. This is to be one of our best circuits before long, at its present rate of progress. Our presiding elder, Bro. T. W. Lewis, fills the bill. He is an elegant and eloquent and spiritual preacher, and graceful and efficient presiding officer."

Rev. Hesiep R. Tucker, Booneville, North Mississippi Conference: "Since coming here in December the ladies have put in the parsonage needed and valuable furniture. We have organized a Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society with 19 members, a ladies' prayer meeting, and Epworth League with 27 members, with promise of more; and many members have taken the course of reading, organized a Juvenile Missionary Society, and revived Woman's Missionary Society. We have supplied the church with hymn books. We have just closed a meeting of nearly two weeks' duration, which resulted in much good. Many were reclaimed and many church members blessed. Bro. Lewis, P. E., preached 16 sermons and did faithful work, all of which is appreciated by the pastor and congregation. Bro. Bachman was with us preaching and singing and selling books. He left among our people about $70 worth of good books, and also many good papers. Glad he was here. Bro. McKeown gave appreciated help."

Rev. G. R. Ellis, Escatawpa, Miss.: "As the trumpet has not been sounded from these 'ends of the earth' this year, perhaps a few blasts would not be out of place. On Feb. 7 we organized a Ladies' Parsonage Aid Society with the following officers: Mrs. A. E. Colmer, president; Mrs. Lola Herring, vice-president; Mrs. Jane Mayers, second vice-president; Mrs. E. McGregor, secretary, and Mrs. Drucilla Ferrill, treasurer. Numerically, the society is small, but is composed of energetic ladies who have gone to work vigorously to furnish and paint the parsonage. Considering the terrible financial pressure under which we have been laboring for months past, with the inclement weather all through February and March up to date, we are moving on well on this (Escatawpa) circuit. I am serving a kind and appreciative people. While money is exceedingly scarce with most of them, yet they are endeavoring to keep the preacher's larder supplied with the necessaries of life, for which I am deeply grateful. And right here let me extend my heartfelt thanks to the dear friends of Moss Point station for a half barrel of flour and other articles of food, too numerous to mention here. May the great Giver of all good reward them tenfold and my own dear people, is the daily prayer of their unworthy servant."

Maggie Magee Flowers, Adams circuit: "The last Annual Conference made a circuit of Adams, Ebenezer and the newly organized church, Pisgah, giving Adams two Sabbaths of each month. Since the Conference, however, the presiding elder, Bro. Norsworthy, has changed the work by taking Pisgah off and making a new circuit of Pisgah, Whitestown, Fernwood and Muddy Springs, and giving to Adams three Sundays instead of two. The debt which has been hanging over our parsonage for several years has been arranged to the satisfaction of the creditors. Encouraged by this, a few of our members resolved to complete the house by putting blinds on it and painting it. The paints and blinds were bought and work immediately begun. A great deal of credit is due our beloved pastor, Bro. Tinnin, who not only worked up an interest in the enterprise, but did a large amount of the painting himself. The work is very nearly completed, and the house presents a handsome appearance. The ladies of the church have formed an organization for the purpose of buying needed furniture for the parsonage. On March 11 we organized an Epworth League with twenty-one members. It was decided that the League should hold its meetings twice a month. Our first meeting was held March 25, following the afternoon service. A large number of the congregation remained by invitation—all of whom seemed much interested. Several persons applied for membership after the League was dismissed. From the beginning which was made there is prospect of doing much good for the Master. The District Conference of the Brookhaven district is to be held in our church in July, to which we cordially invite the editor to be present and see for himself if the foregoing report is not correct."

Great Revival at Muskogee, I. T.

We have been in a revival meeting here for nearly two weeks. The Lord is with us in great power. One hundred and thirty-one conversions have been reported, and seventy-seven have united with our church to date. The work continues with unabated interest. The country is stirred for miles around. I go from here to Marceline, Mo.

THAT'S WHAT:

When with your head you suffer pain,
Indicative of weary brain,
You simply take that substance pure,
PRESTON'S HED-AKE—the cure is sure.

Rev. Jos J. Jones.

On Friday, April 20, Bro. Jones will begin a meeting at Utica. A tabernacle of seating capacity of over a thousand people has been built. A grand revival is expected. The brethren on adjoining works and all others interested are cordially invited to attend and assist us. They will please announce the meeting. All Christians are requested to join with us in their prayers.

The Poisonous Acids

In the blood should be taken up and removed by the Liver and Kidneys, but these organs get out of order—fail to do their work—and the result is Rheumatism. There are a thousand remedies for the Liver and Kidneys, but there is only one cure for Rheumatism, and that is Dr. Drummond's Lightning Remedy. If you have the disease, send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Malden Lane, New York, and they will send to your express address two large bottles—enough for one month's treatment. Any one who is having an argument with the Rheumatism will feel fully repaid by the first dose. Agents Wanted.

Mississippi State Sunday-School Convention.

THE best investment in real-estate is to keep buildings well painted. Paint protects the house and saves repairs. You sometimes want to sell—many a good house has remained unsold for want of paint. The rule should be though, "the best paint or none." That means

Strictly Pure White Lead

You cannot afford to use cheap paints. To be sure of getting Strictly Pure White Lead, look at the brand; any of these are safe:

"Southern," "Red Seal," "Collier."

FOR COLORS.—National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors. These colors are sold in one-pound cans, each can being sufficient to tint 25 pounds of Strictly Pure White Lead the desired shade; they are in no sense ready-mixed paints, but a combination of perfectly pure colors in the handiest form to tint Strictly Pure White Lead.

A good many thousand dollars have been saved property-owners by having our book on painting and color-card. Send us a postal card and get both free.

Epworth League.

By Rev. Henry H. Ahrens.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

LOVE GREATER THAN ALL THINGS.

(1. Cor. xiii; John xiv, 12-14; I. John iv, 15-21.)

David wrote not a sweeter psalm than the one contained in our lesson. Paul, the prosaic logician, could have excelled as bard. In his own inimitable way he says that

1. Without love all else is vain.

(1.) In vain is eloquence. "Though I speak," etc.

(2) Love equally so. "Though I understand all knowledge," etc.

(3) Loveless faith is but historical credence.

(4) Even charity is devoid of value without love.

(5) Without love self-sacrifice would not avail.

2. In verses four to seven the apostle portrays love negatively and positively.

(1) Negatively: Is not envious; not boastful; not arrogant; not rude; not selfish; not morbidly sensitive; not unduly suspicious; not basely rejoicing at others' misfortune.

(2) Positively: Love is long suffering; is benevolent; exults in truth's victories; suffers contradiction without irritation; confiding and almost credulous; optimistically buoyant; bears life's burdens cheerfully.

3. The apostle declares, that love is greater than faith and hope. Hope is the life-buoy in earth's afflictions. Hope dries our tears. Hope is our rod and staff. Hope is our pillar of a cloud by day, and of fire by night. Faith opens the gate of paradise. No other key. Can there be anything greater than these? Let's see:

(1) Hope's reign is sublimary. In its highest reach it clings to the tree of life in paradise. When domiciled in heaven, in the fruition of absolute joy, hope's function ceases. But love continues to sway her scepter. Love continues to scatter flowers of pleasure on the saints' pathway for ever and ever.

(2) Faith saves. When saved its office ceases. No faith in heaven. We see God face to face. But in heaven love finds fields for tillage.

Love—God is love. Love high as heaven, deep as hell. God's children desire to be made perfect in love.

Union Epworth League.

The Union Epworth League of New Orleans met Thursday night, April 12, in the Louisiana Avenue Church. A goodly number was present, and seemed to thoroughly enjoy the program.

The religious exercises were led by Rev. J. T. Sawyer, D. D., pastor of the church.

The reports read by the secretaries of the different Leagues showed a marked improvement along all lines.

The feature of the evening was the paper read by Miss Ella Crebbin, of the Louisiana Avenue League—subject, "The History of Louisiana Avenue Church." The paper was most carefully prepared and was highly interesting.

Rev. W. H. LaPrade, D. D., pastor of Carondelet Street Methodist Church, invited the co-operation of the Leagues in the New Orleans Church Extension Society.

The next meeting will be held at Parker's Chapel.

The meeting adjourned with singing and the benediction by the pastor.

North Mississippi Conference Notes.

This itinerant has recently visited Aberdeen, Okolona, Guntown, Booneville, Corinth, Corinth circuit, West Point, Starkville and Ackerman. He was treated everywhere with ministerial courtesy and Christian kindness, for which he is very grateful.

The longest time spent in one place was in Booneville with Bro. Tucker and his people. More than one week was given there in the services of a protracted meeting, and to the promotion of colportage, Sunday-school and Epworth League work with gratifying results. Success is always expected when we have such a hearty co-operation as was rendered here by the pastor, Bro. Tucker, and the presiding elder, Bro. Lewis. The latter did most of the preaching during the meeting, and did it well. He is in good favor, and is making a fine impression as a preacher and officer of the church throughout his district. Bro. Tucker has the work well in hand in his charge.

The Epworth League recently organized at Booneville bids fair for prosperity. I supplied them with several sets of the "Course of Reading" books, which is ominous of intellectual and religious culture, which will issue in sound piety and good works.

I also found the Epworth League doing well in Corinth, Okolona and Starkville. This newest development of our progressive church enterprise only needs the fostering care of our pastors and people to make it a power for good.

In West Point I found the revival fire kindling under the ministry of Evangelist McIntosh, who was assisting the faithful pastor, Dr. Sullivan. I hope the meeting will result in great good. The Preachers' Meeting at Okolona was an occasion of interest. Important topics were discussed and there was some good preaching.

Time and space preclude special mention of other brethren and places visited. Suffice it to say, that I found all in place and at work cheerfully and hopefully. Bishop Hargrove is spending two weeks with us holding District Conferences and visiting whilom friends.

Winona circuit carries the banner for Children's Day collections last year; the amount collected being over twenty dollars. Who will carry it for this year? The programs are ready for distribution without cost. Send me your orders at once, pastors and Sunday-school superintendents, and let us observe the day in every Sunday-school in our Conference. Read the Discipline, page 142, paragraph 245.

Chambers' Encyclopædia,

Complete in 30 Handy Volumes.
Over 12,000 Pages.

A reprint of the Edinburgh and London edition of Chambers' Encyclopædia, a library of universal knowledge for the people, with very large additions upon topics of special interest to American readers; giving American statistics of population down to and including the census of 1890.

Remember, this great Encyclopædia contains thousands upon thousands of articles, embracing all subjects within the limits of human knowledge; yet, in its more than 27,000 specially prepared articles, while giving pointed, practical, explicit and most interesting and instructive information both for the student and the general reader, it is free from ambiguous technicalities and comparatively void of the mass of scientific signs, symbols and foreign nomenclature which crowd the pages of most other cyclopedias prepared for scientific and professional use alone. The Philadelphia Press well says:

Do you ever want to post yourself easily and speedily, on some facts or matters belonging to the domain of Biography, Chemistry, Religion, Geography, Medicines, Health and Disease, Physical or Mental Recreation in Popular Games, etc.; Literature, Natural Philosophy, Astronomy, Agriculture, Mathematics, or any of the Arts and Sciences? If you do, avail yourself of this opportunity to secure a set of this great Encyclopædia.

SLEEP, LITTLE DARLING, SLEEP.

BY HETTIE A. FARRAR.

Sleep, little darling, sweetly sleep,
Tho' now beside thy grave I weep,
I know thou art not here;
In yonder fair and happy land,
You're joined a bright and happy band,
I know this, little dear.

But still I linger here and sigh,
A weary, hopeless mortal, I—
Beside thy little grave;
It seems to me I must have dreamed,
That life was bright as once it seemed,
And oh! such blessings gave.

For years have melted into one,
Without a star, without a sun,
To cheer my dark despair;
And yet I know there's One above,
A God of Wisdom, Truth and Love,
Who heeds the mourner's prayer.

Ah! baby dear, I little thought
Thy destiny with his was wrought,
That both so soon would go;
When last I held that hand of thine,
And pressed thy little cheek to mine,
And yet, oh! God, 'twas so.

Sleep, little darling, sweetly sleep,
Angels now a guard will keep
Above this sacred spot,
But thou, and mine on yonder shore,
Will feel the sorrows never more,
That falls to mortal's lot.

Two shadowed homes, with shadowed hearts,
Where oft the bitter tear-drops starts,
Will sadly miss its own.
But oh! the wrecked, the ruined life,
For weary broken-hearted wife,
Is known to God alone.

The Duty of Being Pleasant.

We all recognize, in a vague, general way, the fact that we ought to treat our neighbor as ourself. While he is at a respectful distance, outside our gate and withdrawn a little from the wear and tear of daily life, we do treat him with courtesy, if not with effusiveness. We listen with outward patience to his tiresome platitudes, and respond without seeming effort to his sometimes unreasonable demands upon our time and good nature.

But when our neighbor comes into the sacred citadel of home and is transformed into the wife we have pledged to cherish, the husband we have promised to obey, the brother or sister or child who has a special claim on our forbearance, the aspect of the case changes with marvelous rapidity. We no longer have the slightest hesitation in telling them plainly what we think of them, even when our opinion of them is decidedly unflattering. If they are cross, or stupid, or unreasonable, we say so with a frankness that would be charming if it were not exasperating, and we excuse ourselves on the plea that it does them good to hear the truth.

Yet we love those who are nearest and dearest to us a hundredfold more than we love ourselves. We would cheerfully suffer bodily pain to save them from harm, we would gladly share anything that we have with them, we would resent an injury to them as if it had been done to ourselves, and yet we consider ourselves privileged to hurt their feelings and cause them unhappiness because they belong to us and we to them. We should hesitate a long time before we told a friend that he was ill-tempered or grasping, or mentioned any of the plain truths that we bestow on the members of our family without shrinking. Why should the intimacy of the home life be taken advantage of to inflict wounds that bleed long after we have forgotten that we dealt them?

Many of us lead busy, anxious lives. We are oppressed with cares and laden with burdens that we scarcely have strength to carry, and we make this an excuse for frowns, cross tones and impatient words. We think we have not time for the small courtesies which yet we manage to extend to strangers. We smooth our brows and summon a smile when some one speaks to us on whom we wish to make a good impression, but we will not take this trouble for the dear ones who are entitled to it, and who really are of far more importance to us. We do not mind shutting out the sunshine from them and spoiling their day by an exhibition of ill-temper which we would not dream of showing to an acquaintance.

If we are dining with a friend, and one of the dishes is a failure, we amiably try to console the hostess by pretending that we have not noticed the defect, or if this is impossible and our attention is called to it, we make light of it and say that accidents will happen and everything else was so delicious this is only the imperfection that is inseparable from human undertakings. Or we refer civilly to the innate perversity of inanimate matter, which accounts for much that is otherwise inexplicable. At home we hold the house mother to strict account by remarking, "This pudding is not fit to eat," or, "I wonder why we never can have decent bread," when no doubt she had done her very best and is more perturbed over the failure than we can be. Would it not have a more distinctly encouraging effect if we said, "Never mind, dear, better luck next time; no one can expect to be always successful?"

Differences of opinion there may be and must be in the household. It would be very monotonous if all the members of a family thought alike. Good-tempered discussion and the mutual agreement to differ hurts no one's feelings. It is the want of self-control, shown in snappish tones, curt replies and sulky looks, that spoils the peace of mind of those who are subjected to them. For a person to come to table and sit buried in gloom throughout the meal, not vouchsafing a word or smile or contributing in any way to the pleasure of those assembled there, shows a selfishness which is appalling and inexcusable. Away from home he would make an effort to be agreeable, and it is no less necessary because he happens to be in the privacy of his own house.

It will surprise many persons to learn that being pleasant is merely a matter of habit. It must be cultivated like every other good habit. It has its roots in an unselfish desire for the happiness of others, not excluding one's own family. It will require a great effort at first to check the hasty words, to forego the profitless argument, to withhold the impertinent criticism, to speak the truth in love, but it is an effort that is well repaid by the results. Rudeness is never justifiable. It is sometimes necessary to reprove, to warn, to remonstrate, even to speak gravely and plainly of faults that should be corrected; all this can be done without encroaching in any way upon the courtesy that is due from one human being to another. Well-bred persons are never rude: the chivalrous man, the refined woman, hesitate to hurt the feelings of anyone with whom they are brought in contact. They treat them with the respect which they exact for themselves. There is no surer sign of a flippant, ill-regulated, narrow mind than a disregard for the rights of others. "Be courteous" is a divine command as binding as "Be pitiful."—Congregationalist.

How to Select a Boy.

A gentleman advertised for a boy, and nearly fifty applicants presented themselves to him. Out of the whole number he selected one and dismissed the rest. "I should like to know," said a friend, "on what ground you selected that boy, who had not a single recommendation." "You are mistaken," said the gentleman; "he has a great many. He wiped his feet when he came in, and closed the door after him, showing that he was careful. He gave his seat instantly to that lame old man, showing that he was thoughtful. He took off his cap when he came in, and answered my questions promptly, showing that he was gentlemanly. He picked up the book which I had purposely laid on the floor and replaced it upon the table; and he waited quietly for his turn instead of pushing and crowding, showing that he was honorable and orderly. When I talked to him I noticed that his clothes were brushed, his hair in order; when he wrote his name I noticed that his finger nails were clean. Don't you call those things letters of recommendation? I do; and I would give more for what I can tell about a boy by using my eyes ten minutes than all the letters he can bring me." Little things show character, and frequently determine a boy's whole career. It is the boy who does the kind, polite and thoughtful acts unconsciously that wins his way to employment and success. And success does not mean wealth or fame. True success means the development of a character that is worthy of example—a character that is honest to every duty, faithful to every trust, and that is unselfish enough to find time for kindly acts that are not forced, but the simple expression of a warm and generous principle. True success is fidelity to every relation in life.—Christian Union.

BEAUTIFUL THINGS.

Beautiful faces are those that wear—
It matters little if dark or fair—
Whole-souled honesty printed there.

Beautiful eyes are those that show,
Like crystal panes where heart-fires glow,
Beautiful thoughts that burn below.

Beautiful lips are those whose words
Leap from the heart like songful birds,
Yet whose utterance prudence girds.

Beautiful hands are those that do
Work that is earnest, and brave, and true,
Moment by moment the long day through.

Beautiful feet are those that go
On kindly ministries to and fro—
Down lowliest ways if God wills it so.

Beautiful shoulders are those that bear
Ceaseless burdens of homely care
With patient grace and daily prayer.

Beautiful lives are those that bless,
Silent rivers of happiness,
Whose hidden fountains but few may guess.

Jenny the Great.

"Now, mama," said Ben, "it's a good time to hear a story."

Mama did not think it was a very good time to tell a story, for she was sick in bed, and she and Ben, between them, were taking care of the baby, while dear little Jenny, their big sister, or at least the biggest they had, was flying about cleaning up the house.

But Ben seemed to be so sure that mama would tell him a story that she didn't like to refuse.

"What is the story to be about, Benny?" she asked, in a rather weak voice.

"Oh, a hero, 'course," answered Ben.

"What do you think a hero is?" asked mama.

"Why, a fellow that does something big and gets praised for it," said the little boy confidently.

"I know a hero that is doing something big right now," said mama, "and not getting praised for it either."

"Do you, mama? Who is it? Don't they call him Peter the Great, or something like that?"

"I never heard my hero called great," said mama, smiling; "in fact, my hero is a girl, a rather small girl, who would like to be off on a picnic with some nice girls who invited her; but instead of that she is dusting the parlor and hall, and singing merrily over the work."

"Oh, mama, you just mean Jenny!" exclaimed Ben. "Well, I don't think anything of Jenny for a hero. She hasn't even got a sword."

"When you grow a little bigger, Benny," said mama, "about as high as the mantelpiece, you'll find that doing disagreeable things sweetly and cheerfully is a bigger job than slaying a whole army of men."

Ben didn't seem to think so; but when the little girl came to carry off the restless baby, to let mama get a nap, Ben almost made baby jump out of her arms by hurrahing so loud for Jenny the Great.—E. P. A.

John Jones' Monument.

John Jones began at the age of fifteen to build a monument and finished it at fifty. He worked night and day, often all night long, and on the Sabbath. He seemed to be in a great hurry to get it done. He spent all the money he earned upon it—some say $50,000. Then he borrowed all he could: and when no one would loan him any more he would take his wife's dresses and the bedclothes and many other valuable things in his home and sell them to get more money to finish that monument.

They say he came home one day and was about to take the blankets that lay over his sleeping baby to keep it warm and his wife tried to stop him; but he drew back his fist and knocked her down and then went away with the blankets and never brought them back, and the poor baby sickened and died from the exposure. At last there was not anything left in the house. The poor heart-broken wife soon followed the baby to the grave. Yet John Jones kept working all the more at the monument. I saw him when he was about fifty years old. The monument was nearly done; but he had worked so hard at it that I hardly knew him, he was so worn; his clothes were all in tatters, and his hands and face, indeed his whole body, were covered with scars which he got in laying up some of the stones. And the wretched man had been so little in good society all the while that he was building that he had about forgotten how to use the English language; his tongue had somehow become very thick and when he tried to speak, out would come an oath.

That many seem strange, but I have found out that all who build such monuments as John's prefer oaths to any other word!

Now come with me and I will show you John's monument. It stands in a beautiful part of the city where five streets meet. Most men put such things in a cemetery. But John had his own way and put it on one of the finest lots to be found.

"Does it look like Bunker Hill monument?" asked little Amy Arlott by my side.

Not at all. John didn't want to be remembered that way. He might have taken that $50,000 and built an asylum for poor little children that have no home, and people would have called the asylum his monument.

But here we are at the front door. It is a grand house! It is high and large, with great halls and towers, with velvet carpets, elegant mirrors and a piano, and I know not what all, so rich and grand.

This is John Jones' monument. And the man who sold John nearly all the whisky he drank lives here with his family, and they all dress in the richest and finest clothes.

Do you understand it?—Michigan Christian Advocate.

The Boy Ben Franklin.

Few of you small people who are familiar with the name of Benjamin Franklin are acquainted with the circumstances of his childhood, nor do you realize how much of his fame was achieved through persistent, untiring effort to master the many obstacles which would have crowded success from the pathway of a less persevering character.

Born in the city of Boston, Mass., in the year 1682, one of the seventeen children of an obscure tallow chandler and soap boiler, his very early childhood was passed in poverty.

He seems to have been exceedingly clever, and his parents thought at one time of educating him as a clergyman, but owing to their poverty were unable to do so. He was put to learning writing and arithmetic, but was removed from school at the age of ten, his father intending to make a tallow chandler of him. After some months spent by the sturdy little boy who was to become so illustrious a man, in cutting wicks for candles, filling moulds, going upon errands, and doing all the drudgery connected with his father's business, he took so strong a dislike to the trade that he resolved to go to sea rather than continue at it. Finally, however, he was indentured as a printer to his brother James, and at this time his real life seems to have begun.

We read of how he was known to spend whole nights in study; of his attempts at writing poetry and prose, of his love of reasoning and of his wonderful self-denial, and, indeed, we find in the boy Ben Franklin fascinating promise of future greatness.

Energy and perseverance characterized his whole life, than which there is none in the history of our great country which offers greater encouragement or more splendid lessons to boys who wish to impress themselves upon the times in which they live. The pale-faced, discontented, ambitious and stout-hearted errand boy in the tallow chandler's shop knew how to make golden opportunities of leaden obstacles by the simple alchemy of determination. You remember, do you not, old Midas of the golden touch? He turned base metal into shining material gold, but our immortal Franklin's was the noble power to make stepping-stones of barriers, and a glorious and shining career from poverty, obscurity, and discouragement.—Southern Churchman.

THE RACE IS WON—over to good health and rendered impervious to disease when the blood is pure and the liver active. For the liver is the sentinel which permits or forbids the germs of disease to enter the circulation of the blood.

You ought to be germ-proof against Grip, Malaria, or Consumption; you will be—if you take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

When your flesh is reduced below a healthy standard, when you are troubled with pimples and boils, or if you have dizzy, weak and sleepless, spells—its best to heed the warning.

Build up your strength, purify the blood, and set all the organs of the body into activity, by taking the "Discovery." It's guaranteed to benefit or cure all diseases resulting from impure blood or inactive liver, or the money paid is refunded.

There's no case of Catarrh so hopeless that Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cannot cure. The proprietors of this medicine will pay $500 for any incurable case.

CATCHINGS—Mrs. ARCHIA STEELE CATCHINGS, wife of Dr. J. M. Catchings, died at their home in Hazlehurst, Miss., on Monday, March 5, 1894, after a protracted and painful illness. Mrs. Catchings was the daughter of Capt. A. and Mrs. M. J. Steele, and the niece of Rev. Elijah Steele, one of Mississippi's great preachers. She was of Methodist ancestry, her family having been one of the most prominent and devout of our denomination. She joined the church in early life, and ever afterward lived a consistent Christian life. Her influence in purity and trustfulness remains with all who knew her.

Mrs. Catchings was the mother of four children. Two had gone before; two remain with her bereaved husband to mourn her loss. During three years of sickness and suffering she never once murmured on account of her affliction, but prayed continually for God to be merciful, and to give her patience to endure her sufferings. The last days of her life were filled with agony; but a brief respite came as they closed. She died triumphantly, praying for her loved ones and praising God. Her pathway was brighter and brighter, and, in her own words, all was light when the hour of death was with her.

Sister Catchings was born Oct. 10, 1861; was married Feb. 11, 1885; she went to her rest March 5, 1894. R. W. BAILEY.

ANDERS—Mrs. SUSAN ANDERS was born in Amite county, Miss., Jan. 12, 1818; was converted and joined the M. E. Church in her sixteenth year under the ministry of Bro. Watson (then junior preacher on the Amite circuit); was married to Michael Anders, April 6, 1841, and died Nov. 16, 1893.

For fifty-nine years Sister Anders led a faithful Christian life, and though for years after their marriage her husband was not religious and seemed to care very little for the church, yet her faith was firm in God, and thus she went daily to him in earnest, fervent prayer, pleading only as a Christian wife can plead for the salvation of her husband, and in 1880 her prayers were answered in his conversion.

It was my privilege to be her pastor for some time, and I can say she was a devoted wife, a kind and patient mother, a good neighbor and, above all, a true Christian. Her house was always a pleasant home for the preacher, and many who read this notice will remember the hospitable home of Bro. and Sister Anders. She leaves a son, Rev. J. B. Anders, several daughters and many grandchildren to mourn her loss. HER OLD PASTOR.

SPARKS—J. HAROY SPARKS was born, Aug. 13, 1841, in the Teche country; moved to North Louisiana in 1851, where he resided until his death, Feb. 5, 1894.

Bro. Sparks had been a member of the Methodist Church for about sixteen years, and died in the faith. There was nothing harsh in his nature. A kind and gentle husband and father, in all his dealing with his fellows he was eminently a "gentle man." His death was occasioned by a stroke of paralysis, under which he lay for about ten days before the summons came. He was conscious until near the end and was perfectly resigned to God's will. There was no suffering or terror, but, as the morning star melts away into the light of heaven, so his spirit was lost to earth. He leaves a wife, two daughters and a large circle of friends to mourn his loss. May God bless and comfort them in their bereavement! Being unable to understand this dispensation of Providence, may they find refuge in an implicit trust in God, and with Job exclaim, "Though he slay me yet will I trust in him." HIS PASTOR.

HAYGOOD—Mrs T. J. HAYGOOD was born in Escambia county, Ala., Jan. 11, 1874; died in Ponchatoula, La., Jan. 4, 1894, lacking only seven days of being twenty years of age. She had been a member of the Baptist Church three years. Had she lived until May 19, she would have been married five years.

Her faith in God vanquished all dread of death. She leaves a husband, mother, two sisters and a fond brother to mourn her loss. May the same spirit that was precious to her be their comforter too! W. T. WOODWARD.

HART—At his home near Camden, Miss., Feb. 18, 1894, ELIJAH HARRY HART quietly and peacefully "fell on sleep." He was born March 13, 1843. He was married, Jan. 18, 1866, to Miss Emma Newland, who with three daughters and two sons, survive him. He was a good and affectionate husband and father. He was a good citizen and a kind neighbor, faithful in all the relations of life.

BROWN—The following resolutions were adopted at Fannin, Miss., March 11, 1894:

Whereas, Our Heavenly Father, in his all-wise providence, has taken from our midst our dear Bro. S. O. BROWN, who has been a member of the Fannin Methodist Sunday school for more than a quarter of a century; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we bow submissively to this seeming affliction, believing that "all things work together for good to those who love the Lord."

Resolved, That in the death of this faithful man of God, our Sunday-school has lost one of its most efficient and faithful members; the church, one of its purest and strongest advocates; the community, one of its most praiseworthy and exemplary citizens; his wife, a devoted husband; his children, a loving, tender father.

Resolved, That we will ever cherish his memory and keep in our recollection his liberal and charitable heart; and extend to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy, invoking the divine blessings of his grace, who is ever ready to bind up the broken-hearted.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased, and a copy to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication, and that these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this Sunday-school.

E. M. ODAN, for Com.

HERNDON—Bro. JOE E. HERNDON, son of Geo. E. Herndon, departed this life Feb. 12, 1894. Bro Herndon was born in the year 1852, professed faith in God and joined the M. E. Church, South, in early life, and remained a true member thereof till the day of his death. Although he had been threatened for several weeks with dropsy, yet his death was not at all expected at the time, being up and at his mill Saturday before his sudden death, Monday. He leaves a kind wife and five lovely children to grieve his death, but their temporal loss is his eternal gain. The good Lord will be a husband and father to the faithful.

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God to take from us our brother, Joe E. Herndon; therefore, be it

Resolved, That our Sunday-school has lost a faithful superintendent, the church at Murrah's Chapel a devoted member, and the community a good citizen; his afflicted wife and children, a kind husband and devoted father, and his aged father and afflicted sister, an affectionate son and brother; but we all humbly bow to the Holy One, and say, "Thy will be done."

BOAT. GUNTER, for Com.

MASSEY—MARY AMANDA, daughter of Sister and Bro. D. B. and N. E. Massey, was born at Decatur, Jan. 7, 1877; died at Decatur, March 3, 1894.

Dear little Mary was afflicted all of her life. She never knew, even from her infancy, what it was to be well. She was a constant care to her mother, as much so as an infant, all of her life. But God was not willing that she should suffer anymore; so he sent his angels and took her to himself in that home where there is no disease and no suffering.

Yes, dear parents and loved ones, she is clothed and in her right mind, and enjoying as much of the glory of that happy home as anyone else. So let us not grieve any more, but let us strive to meet her and see her in that glorified state.

W. M. WILLIAMS, P. C.

Decatur, Miss.

BULLOCK—Bro. JESSE A. BULLOCK was born in Washington parish, La., Feb. 24, 1841. Bro. Bullock was twice married; his first wife being Miss Lizzie Watson, of St. Helena parish, La., who only lived about one year. He afterwards married Miss Martha Alford. To them were born eight children, six of whom are living—five daughters and one son. As I write I think of the many pleasant hours I have spent with him and his dear wife and children, whom he loved so tenderly and devotedly. Bro. Bullock united with the M. E. Church, South, about the year 1870. He loved his church, and was serving her in the capacity of steward when called from labor to rest, which sad event occurred Sept. 2, 1893, at his home in the bosom of his family, near Holmesville, Miss. He was ready. A devoted wife and children and a host of friends mourn his departure. May the Lord comfort the bereaved ones!

W. F. HARDAN.

HUITO—Mrs. CATHARINE HUITO was born March 15, 1829; joined the Methodist Church in her fourteenth year; married in her twentieth. She was happily converted in her twenty-sixth, and died in her sixty-fifth year.

Mr. Wesley said of the people called Methodists, "they die well." It was true of our sister, as she looked into the great mysterious future and considered the reasons for her hope. She took her loved ones to her heart, and bade them meet her in heaven. With no fear she bowed her head and met the destroyer. Behind are left a devoted husband and three children to mourn their loss. May this great sorrow be sanctified of God to their good in a greater devotion to his cause!

G. H. GALLOWAY, P. C.

GRIFFIN—SUSAN TINKER, daughter of Rev. C. C. and Mrs. E. E. Griffin, was born Nov. 2, 1892, and died at their home, near Pulaski, Scott county, Miss., Feb. 2, 1894.

This precious little darling lived long enough to gather the affections of all the family. She was the baby—bright, attractive, lovely. What a beautiful angel she will be in heaven! This being the first death in the family, the sorrow is inconceivably great; but the joy of meeting her again will more than compensate for the sorrow of parting. So may it be with every sorrowing member of the family!

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures nightsweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1039 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Unquestioning obedience to the will of God is the highest test of loyalty to him.

Many people neglect a cold, thinking it will go as it came. Frequently with serious results, the cold of to-day may be the pneumonia of to-morrow. Nothing will cure a cough or cold so rapidly as Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. Its reputation has been established for over fifty years as the best remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma, all throat and lung troubles. For croup and whooping-cough it is invaluable. Mothers will be saved much anxiety and loss of children by having Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar always on hand. Consumption has been cured many times by its use. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

The man who knows a good deal never has to call attention to the fact.

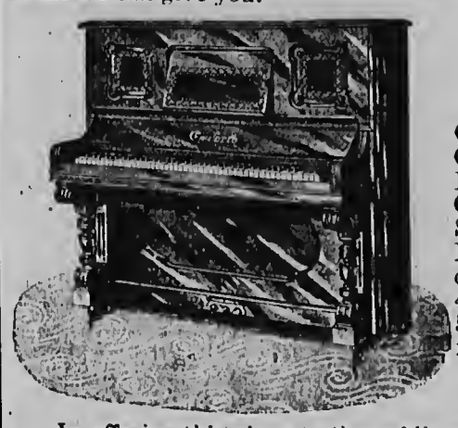
PIANOS AS PREMIUMS.

READ THE DESCRIPTION BELOW OF STYLE 10.

The list price of this instrument is $330. We will furnish this elegant instrument as a premium for new subscribers. If this offer interests you, write us for terms. You may be surprised at the terms we can give you.



STYLE 10.

Seven and one-third Octaves: Chaste Design; Overstrung Scale; Heavy Iron Frame; 3 Strings; Carved Trusses; Improved Sounding Board; Perfect Repeating Action and Sliding Music Desk. Height, 4 feet 4½ inches; length, 5 feet 2 inches; depth, 2 feet 4½ inches.

In offering this piano to the public our object is to provide for the existing demand for an instrument which, although taking up but a small amount of room, possesses the same quality of tone, the same high grade of action, work and material found in our larger pianos, at the same time a plainly but thoroughly well-finished exterior, enabling us to offer it at a price within the reach of everyone who wishes to secure a perfect piano for a small amount of money. This style is a favorite with ministers, as it takes less room and is more easily moved than the larger instruments.

Made in Rosewood, Ebony, Walnut or Mahogany finish.

Boxed with good Plush Stool, Embroidered Cover and Instruction Book. Every instrument warranted for five years.

Constitutional History of American Episcopal Methodism.
OCT. VO. 414 PAGES. Price, $1.50.

BY JNO. J. TIGERT, D. D.

Most Constitutional histories are dry reading, but this has interested me very much. I have been especially impressed by its vivid portrayals of signal events, its felicitous illustrations of the way in which the most important matters of ecclesiastical polity have been determined by the opinions and acts of individuals, and its omnipresent proofs of the Providential origin and development of Methodism on both sides of the Atlantic.—Bishop C. D. Foss, of the M. E. Church.

Few books have ever been issued from the presses of our Publishing House at Nashville equal in importance and value to this one. It fills a place occupied by none other. The scope of the work is full and comprehensive, and the subject is treated from beginning to end with rare ability. The publication of this work is timely. It ought to be read and studied by every intelligent preacher and layman of our Church. Particularly ought it to be mastered by every delegate to our General Conference.—Southern Christian Advocate.

From the care with which you have sifted statements, examined documents, and analyzed facts, I think you have produced a work which will reflect credit on your industry and ability, and entitle it to a place of a classic in Methodist literature, not to say ecclesiastical literature.—Bishop E. R. Hendrix.

DOMESTIC.

Senator Vance, of North Carolina, died in Washington, D. C., on April 14.

New York spent $13,000,000 for the support of the poor during the year ending Feb. 28.

The necessary guarantee fund has been raised for the exposition which is to be held in Richmond, Va., in the Fall.

Atlanta has got more than the $200,000 guarantee fund for its cotton exposition, which it set out to raise, and considers its great show an assured success.

A cyclone struck the town of Melville, La., on April 15. The Methodist Church was entirely demolished, one cabin destroyed, two houses blown off their blocks, two women and one child injured.

The Ferris Wheel is to be removed from Chicago and set up in New York. The company has leased a plot of land bounded by Broadway, Seventh avenue and Thirty-eighth and Thirty-ninth streets.

A report on the production of coal in 1893 has been compiled for the United States Geological Survey. It shows the total production for the year to be 179,326,612 short tons, with a valuation of $205,256,479.

The Century Magazine proposes to make a thorough investigation of the liquor traffic, such as Congress has for so long been urged to make, but which the political influence of the brewers and distillers has hitherto prevented.

A British-American Colorado colony has been organized for the purpose of establishing communities of English, Scotch, Canadian and north of Ireland people in Phillips and Logan counties, Colo. It is said that between fifty and one hundred families have already joined the movement.

After a session of two hours, on April 16, the Democratic members of the House Committee on Rules agreed on the new quorum-counting rule, and, thereupon, sent for Messrs. Reed and Burrows, the Republican members of the committee. It is understood that the rule provides for ascertaining a quorum by counting members present, but not voting, and also for fining members who absent themselves from the House.

The mine situation at Birmingham, Ala., threatens to become serious as the result of the strike of the 8,000 men on April 14. It is said that the operators will attempt to put negro labor in the Blue Creek Mines, and race trouble may result. At the request of the operators, Sheriff Morrow sent a strong posse of well-armed deputies to Blue Creek to quell any disturbance that may occur when the negroes go to work.

It is announced from Washington that Senator Morgan, of Alabama, has about completed his report on the Nicaragua Canal bill, and will shortly be in a position to present it to the Senate. It is understood that Senator Morgan's plans have the sanction of the President, and will, without doubt, find both houses of Congress predisposed to act favorably upon any reasonable proposition which promises to secure the completion of the canal.

An important decision affecting the interests of labor organizations was rendered by Judge Caldwell at Omaha, Nebraska, last week, in the case of the employees of the Union Pacific railway, who protested against reductions of wages by the receivers of that road. Judge Caldwell sustained the plea of the employees, setting aside the order of Judge Dundy to the contrary. He also delivered the opinion that organizations of labor were entitled to the same privileges in their endeavors to look after their interests as are incorporated organizations of capital.

FOREIGN.

Ever since the retirement of President Dole, of Hawaii, from the office of Minister of Foreign Affairs, he has been engaged in drawing up a new Constitution to be submitted to the convention to be held in May.

Reports from Friedrichsruhe say that Prince Bismarck is now more robust and vigorous than he has been for a long time past. The Prince takes much longer walks, and has expressed his desire to resume his exercise on horseback.

Lady Henry Somerset is trying to close all the saloons on her estate, and the trustees of the estates have petitioned the courts to enjoin her doing so.

Admiral De Mello and 1,500 insurgent troops were disembarked on the frontier of Uruguay, after having been driven out of the State of Rio Grande do Sul by the troops of Peixoto, have surrendered to the Uruguarian authorities, and the rebellion in Brazil may be said to have completely collapsed. The authorities of Uruguay have disarmed the Brazilian insurgents.

Emperor William arrived in Vienna, on April 13, and was welcomed by Emperor Francis Joseph, ten archdukes, the heads of the civil and military departments, the municipal authorities and by the German ambassy and its staff. The railroad station was profusely decorated for the occasion and was surrounded by troops who kept back the crowds of people assembled to greet the German Emperor.

For Indigestion and Nervousness

Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. W. O. Hoyt, Rome, Ga., says: "I have found it both an agreeable and useful remedy in many cases of indigestion, and also in nervous troubles attended with sleeplessness and a feeling of exhaustion."

The troubles in Samoa are far from being settled. The rebels, having mustered a formidable force, fought a desperate battle with the army of the recognized ruler. A movement has been inaugurated to release the United States from the entanging alliance, into which it drifted as a result of the troubles in Samoa, culminating in the treaty of Berlin in 1889, by which the United States, Germany and Great Britain undertook for the protectorate over the Samoan group.

The use of Hall's Hair Renewer promotes the growth of the hair, and restores its natural color and beauty, frees the scalp of dandruff, tetter, and all impurities.

Friends of General Booth propose to raise by July, next, a thanksgiving fund of £50,000 in celebration of the fiftieth year of his ministry, says the Manchester Guardian. In his reply to a communication announcing this intention, General Booth suggests that in addition to raising £50,000 his friends should organize an International Congress to be held next July, including a day of thanksgiving at the Crystal Palace.

Sunday-school superintendents should send their orders at once for Children's Day Programmes to Bro. F. D. Van Valkenburgh, No. 9 Chartres St.

Change of Time on Queen and Crescent Route.

On Sunday, April 1st, the Spring schedules of passenger trains on the Queen & Crescent will go into effect.

The service has been carefully arranged with a view to the convenience of the public, and in order to handle Spring and Summer traffic in a manner most comfortably and promptly.

The equipment of the Queen & Crescent is known everywhere for its elegance and convenience, and the new schedules are intended to increase its value to the traveler.

Ask agents for time, information, etc.

Notice to the Brethren.

It is my intention to spend the Summer in assisting the brethren in their revivals. Those of the brethren who may be able to use in any way my services to God's glory and to men's salvation, will please address me.

Care of Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss.

Nothing but Dirt

is taken away by Pearline. It won't make black white — it gives you a clean black, instead of a dirty black, that's all. Colors are restored and freshened by it, and look just as they did when new. They are cleaned, but they are never altered or changed. Safety comes first in washing. The easiest and cheapest way to get things clean safely is to wash them with Pearline.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 383 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

Prevention is better than cure, and you may prevent that tired feeling by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which will keep your blood pure and free from acid taint and germs of disease.

Hood's Pills do not purge, pain or gripe, but act promptly, easily and efficiently. 25 cents.

Periodicals.

The magazines are on hand with their usual budget of fresh reading matter. Among those that lie on our table we name Harper's, Scribner's, the Cosmopolitan, Cassell's, the Preacher's Magazine, the Treasury, the Popular Science Monthly, Godey's, St. Nicholas, Babyland, the Century.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

For Over Fifty Years

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

If you want your life insured, you can't do a better thing than read the ad. of that mammoth company, the New York Mutual, which you will find in another column.

Philip Werlein,

New Orleans, wants you to write to him if you want to get a good Piano cheap, or an Organ, Music or Musical Instruments. His is the old reliable music store of New Orleans.

Here is Your Chance.

During the next sixty days we make the following offer:

For $2.50 we will send the Advocate one year and a copy of Christian Womanhood. The price of the Advocate is $2; the price of the book, $1. This book has had an extensive sale, the sixth thousand being now on the market. This offer applies to renewals as well as new subscriptions, provided the renewal extends the subscription to January, '95.

The following notices, selected from a vast number that have appeared in the church papers, will give some idea of the character of the work:

The best thesaurus of facts concerning womanhood with which we are acquainted.—Dr. C. F. Deems.

We hope it will be read by every man and woman in the church.—Florida Advocate.

We hope it will be extensively circulated and carefully read.—New Orleans Advocate.

Heartily recommended.—Dr. John E. Edwards.

This volume is the result of patient investigation and thoughtful study of the whole question treated. In the formulation of the case and in analyzing the testimony a vigorous, well-poised, legal mind is brought to bear. Dr. Black, moreover, establishes the points of his discussion as a skillful general establishes his lines in the face of an alert enemy. As he begins, so he closes, leaving the impression that a master in Israel has written bravely and tellingly of Christian womanhood, maintaining his position at every turn. The book is needed, and will long be in popular demand.—Sunday-School Magazine.

Don't miss this opportunity.

THIS CURIOUS THING

Is a Sweat or Exudatory Gland. Its mouth is called a Pore. There are 7,000,000 in the human skin. Through them are discharged many impurities. To close them means death. Sluggish or clogged pores mean yellow, muddy skin, pimples, blotches, eczema. The blood becomes impure. Hence serious blood humors. Perfect action of the pores Means clear, wholesome skin, Means pure blood, Means beauty and health.

Cuticura Resolvent

Exerts a peculiar, purifying action upon the skin, and through it upon the blood. Hence its cures of distressing humors are speedy, permanent and economical. Like all of the Cuticuras, it is pure, sweet, gentle, and effective. Mothers ate its warmest friends.

A MISSIONARY EXERCISE

For Children's Day,

Sunday, May 20, 1894

A LEAFLET OF SIXTEEN PAGES.

THIS PROGRAMME emphasizes the missionary idea strongly and interestingly, while its general make-up is very bright and attractive. In the selections for reading and declamation there is a pleasing variety, and the music (given in full) is mostly new and of an inspiring character. It is hoped that every Sunday-school that possibly can will order and use this exercise, so appropriate to this Methodist quadrennial year.

Price: 10 cents per dozen; 60 cents per 100.

"HIS CARE."

BY REV. JOHN PARKER.

God holds the key of all unknown,
And I am glad;
If other hands should hold the key,
Or if he trusted it to me,
I might be sad.

What if to-morrow's cares were here
Without its rest?
I had rather be unlock the day,
And as the hours swing open say,
"My will is best."

The very dimness of my sight
Makes me secure,
For, groping in my misty way,
I feel his hand—I hear him say,
"My help is sure."

I can not read his future plan,
But this I know,
I have the smiling of his face
And all the refuge of his grace,
While here below.

Enough; this covers all my want,
And so I rest;
For what I can not he can see,
And in his care I sure shall be Forever blest.

In Japan, from Kobe Port to Aso Volcano.

BY HENRY G. HAWKINS.

The Japanese, like the ancient Egyptians, restrict free foreign residence to certain localities. Kobe, on the main island, is one of the five open ports. The little native steamers which ply between Kobe and towns on the western coast of Shikoku (Four-province) island pass through some of the fairest portions of the Japan Inland Sea, famed for its beauty.

All Japanese schools have a holiday of two weeks in the Spring; so, one afternoon of last Spring two of us, teachers in Kobe—one of Kentucky, one of Georgia, U. S. A.—found ourselves with traveling passports in hand, buying tickets and boarding one of these steamers. As the big ships lying in the busy port are left behind, the fairy lands come into view—some large, others small; some green, others rocky and barren; but each one more beautiful than the last. A village nestles along the shore, or in yonder nook; the terraced fields stretch far up the mountain-side; higher still, where a little of the Winter's snow remains, the smoke rises from a farmer's charcoal pit; sails of fishing-boats and junks dot the sea; a herd of dolphins not far away gambol in exuberance of animal spirits; the mainlands are dimly visible; the sun gives numerous tintings to the varied landscape, and, enchanted, we peer into the deep blue water, as our vessel glides along; now in a channel, with its mysterious current; now out into the calm, open sea, and again happily turning at the mountain-side. But night comes. We must spread our blankets upon the floor of the little cabin and sleep as best we can.

Upon waking at daybreak we find the vessel moored at Tadotsu. Near by is the place is Kotohira Jinsha, one of the most famous Shinto shrines of Japan. Upon the deck several passengers are even now clapping their hands and worshiping towards it.

About noon the vessel moors at Mitsugahama, the port of Matsuyama, capital of one of the "Four-Provinces." Though four miles distant, from the dock we get a splendid view of the Matsuyama Castle, a well-preserved and extensive relic of the Japanese feudal age. It crowns the summit of a mountain in the middle of the city. At Mitsugahama we are joined by another American teacher. This one is from the State of Mississippi, and is employed in the provincial school of Matsuyama.

About nightfall the vessel moved out into the Bungo Nada. Nada means "a stormy part of the sea," and this was rough that night as to make one of our party seasick. Into this Nada extends a long projecting cape, in order to get around which the vessel goes so far west that it touches at several points on Kiushiu Island. One of these is a good starting-point for Aso; but we had a day to spare, and we got off for Beppu, for here is one of the three most famous hot water regions of Japan. Immediately after landing at midnight we took a hot bath in the bath-tory attached to our hotel. The next morning we visited some of the free public bathing-places, and without a guide wandered along the mountain. We came across many thermal springs. Some of these were of continual, uniform ebullition; others, eruptive; some put forth a good supply of clear water; others only spurted up a little mud. In one or two the peasants were boiling vegetables.

There are bathing resorts, villages and towns far up the mountain-side. At one of these a kind woman gave us each a cup of hot water, which was found slightly mineral. There is a lake of boiling water; and we were told afterwards that there are 700 of the hot springs and one geyser which throws water up several feet every ten minutes.

The jinrikisha ride of an hour from Beppu to Oita is along the sea, looking far out upon which you may see the curling smoke of beautiful steamers and the sails of countless fishing-crafts.

Oita is the capital of the province of Bungo. Its old name was Funai. It was here that the Portuguese landed in 1543, and found a friendly reception. It was then the residence of the most powerful lord of Kiushiu, who was the first Daimio of Japan to go over to Christianity. In his capital there was established a Jesuit college and a university, in which twenty Portuguese patres labored and bestowed academical degrees. The friends and disciples of Loyola possessed besides three monasteries near the town, and in 1582 an embassy of four young men went from Bungo and the neighboring provinces to Lisbon, Madrid and Rome to pay their respects to Philip II., and to kiss the feet of Pope Gregory XIII. They were gone eight years, but during that time great changes had occurred, and after a few decades more the Jesuits and their converts in Japan had been exterminated. Now, after the lapse of three centuries, a young American of North Carolina is living at Oita on a passport, and attempting to establish Protestant Christianity in this same Bungo. He joins us in our trip to the volcano.

Aso-yama (Aso Mountain) is near the center of Kiushiu, a league south of the road leading from Oita, on the northeast coast, to Kumamoto, on the west. This road must have been constructed at great cost to the government. Thirty years ago it was a path; now it is a highway. There are several tunnels, and often the way had to be cut in the rocky mountain bases along the river beds.

By starting from Oita at sunrise, Sakanashi, a village in Aso's extinct crater, may be reached by sunset. Takeda, a town of 5,000, is about half way. The teacher from Kentucky led the way on a bicycle; the rest of us went to Takeda in jinrikishas, and then took a kind of back called basha.

In the morning were glorious views of river, snow-crowned mountain, terraced fields, and picturesque valleys, with numerous water-moved rustic mills. One wooded region was passed said to be frequented by wild monkeys, though at Takeda, just beyond, we heard the sound of a steam engine.

Our slow pace in the afternoon gave good opportunity to observe the beautiful clusters of large cedars, signs of ancient devastating eruptions, and during the last ten miles smoke rising from the volcano ahead. Though the soil is dark and the last season's cornstalks are fairly good, the population is sparse. We incline upward, but at last a long, steep descent is made, and we arrive at Sakanashi. This and the villages beyond lie in a valley supposed to be the volcano's extinct crater—the largest in the world, thirty miles, or more, in circumference. Here we engage a guide for the morrow, and, too tired to dream of Etna or Vesuvius, we pass the night in pleasant sleep.

The back in the morning quickly took us to the second village, from whence the remaining three miles up to the present crater's edge are not suitable for a wheeled vehicle, though they would, for the most part, do for a horseman. We went on foot, quickly getting above the wooded base; then surmounting gently rolling, grass-covered hills, and at last passing through eroded chasms and over numerous conglomerated volcanic hills, with no vegetation except a few shrubs. As we drew near to the top ice was visible in the clefts of the rocks, but we could get nothing for our thirst until we reached the tea-house farther on. Surmounting the opposite side of the volcano from us was a peak covered with snow. By and by the sound of roaring is heard, and the cone, composed of ashes, lava and stones, is reached. But the ascent, which before had been gradual, has even here an inclination of, perhaps, not more than thirty degrees. A quarter of a mile up this brings us to the highest point, from which we step down a few feet and are upon the level caldera, which stretches as a broad, uneven race-track around the western edge of the crater. Two small shrines are on the caldera, and three pilgrims who arrived soon after us cast into the receptacle of one of these a copper coin or two, clapped their hands, and briefly asked the volcano's god to save them from misfortune and grant earthly prosperity. A half-minute sufficed for it all, and then they were ready to look at nature's wonder. The crater is, perhaps, two miles in circumference, from 100 to 200 feet deep, in shape an ellipse, stretching north and south, with its western side irregular. A wind was blowing the rising fumes to the north, so that we could stand upon the western edge and look down upon the rolling, hissing, seething mass, plain glimpses of which were got through the glowing steam. The southern part of the crater is not so deep and active as the other, and may be descended with some risk. Here I scraped up some of the sulphur. The southern end of the more active part is called Yu No Tani—"Valley of Hot Water." Here the ugly fiery liquids spurt and roll and writhe, as if from unmanageable, exploding, subterranean engines. It was cold and about to rain. We secured specimens of stone, and hastened down to the valley. Once we stopped to admire some columns of rocks which creation had left wall-like and beautiful.

A Japanese teacher of mineralogy told me that he found samarskite and iron sulphide in Aso's crater. Six thousand two hundred and fifty feet is the estimated height of the mountain. The village natives say that their valley, the extinct crater, was once a lake. At the mountain-base rises the Shira-Gawa (White river), which, after making a considerable waterfall, flows on to Kumamoto and the sea. The river takes its name from the white tinge given to the water when the pumice ashes, from time to time, are sent down by the volcano. This occurred last in 1884. At that time the villages were damaged, and stones two or three feet in diameter fell near the crater.

Letter from Oregon.

MR. EDITOR: I have been so pressed with work I have not sent you an expression of my feelings of gladness and congratulations on your ascension to the throne of the tripod. Allow me to do so now, and also to say we have so much enjoyed your weekly visits to us through the paper. It is so like a letter from absent friends. While we have plenty people out here, yet sometimes we are inclined to feel like one "lost in a crowd," for ways and manners are so different. For instance, you seldom hear even a child say, "Yes, sir," etc., but, "Yes," "No," etc., even to the oldest people, and so few say Mr. Even teachers say those prefixes smack too much of royalty. This, coming from people who claim to be Republicans, seems inconsistent to me, for the central idea of the Republican party is centralization, and if that does not do far more to the establishment of royalty than the use of prefixes, then I confess I do not understand much about it. But it is the old fact of straining out a gnat and swallowing a camel.

I have just read Bishop Galloway's account of his trip to Boston. Was glad he received such a hearty welcome; but I could not but remark the sharp contrast of this eclat with the treatment the rank and file of our ministry receive at their hands in this Western field, where we are brought into working contact with each other. For instance, the case in the Los Angeles Conference, when Dr. Stradly appeared before their Conference as a fraternal messenger; how their Bishop took advantage of the occasion to speak such abusive words of us and our people; then Bishop Haygood coming in, knowing nothing of what had occurred; how that same Bishop put his arms around him and spoke such words of welcome and fraternity.

We have recently had a touch of the same "hold-out-the-hand, side-thrust" sort of treatment. An eminent professor from the Oregon University is our co-laborer or co-pastor, and when we reached here we were told by our people of his good fraternal talks and hearty, cordial invitations to them to co-operate with him. This was while our people had no pastor. He was quite profuse in his eagerness to organize a preacher's association. The Presbyterian, as the oldest pastor, was elected president; I was elected secretary. When the time came to arrange for the thanksgiving service, another than the M. E. Church was chosen as the place, and I was elected to preach the sermon. He has never been to another meeting. He had urgent business in the country that day. The service was not announced in his church the preceding Sunday, so about one dozen of his people were present. Still we had "the largest congregation ever seen here on a similar occasion." I am thus particular to show the animus of the people.

I began my meeting Dec. 10. He was then in the country in a meeting. As soon as he returned, though he had never called to see me, I went to see him, and asked him to help me. I continued till Jan. 21, and came twice; excuse was, "A brother in the country wanted me."

January 14 they called a Church Conference, and voted to begin their meeting that night. About five or six of their members insisted they would not attend while our meeting continued. They then postponed a week. On morning of the fourteenth a committee came to see if I were going to close the next Sunday, saying they wanted to begin if I closed, though they had voted to begin anyhow. I told them I'd close if I failed to get help. They announced at night that I had promised to close on the twenty-first, and so they would begin. That week was our best meeting. Many said, "Never have seen such a prospect." Many scores of sinners were under deep conviction, and we had twenty conversions. How I did wish for an evangelist then! I'd been willing to vote for their establishment as a class. But my health gave way, and I could get no one to promise to come, so the general feeling was, we must close. Saturday night I had a telegram from a brother, saying he could come Monday; but our leading members thought that it was so late it would be construed into an attempt to prevent the M. E. brethren doing anything, and would be used against us. And "he has announced that the meeting shall be for the conversion of sinners, and not for members, saying, 'I will not, nor shall any of my members do, anything to influence anyone to join the church.'" So we decided to close and go work with them, and I so announced on Sunday night, urging my people and congregation to go. I was much surprised to find the general sentiment in the world against closing. I did not then know of the votes spoken of above. I rested a week. He came on Saturday, urging me to help him. I began on Monday to attend; preached Tuesday night. Thursday night he asked me to preach again Friday. I insisted, as his presiding elder would be with him, "Use him while you have him," to which he consented, "If you will agree to preach turn about with me next week." Saturday night he and the presiding elder urged me to preach again. I did so. Sunday night he announced, "I will do all the preaching after this." I went to his meeting three times, but he never explained or gave any reason for his change of purpose. I learn the presiding elder told him if he kept me, that my preaching would carry the larger influence to our church, and that he had better get rid of me. Up to this time there had been thirty or forty conversions; but little more real work was done. Much was done in this way: After close of a sermon many of his people would go and persuade young people and children to come to the altar, or consent to remain for an after-meeting. He would ask them: "Are you trying to seek the Lord? Do you believe he is willing to save you?" If answered affirmatively, he would say: "You are all right. All you have to do is to acknowledge it, get up and confess it." If they did not do so, he would announce for them, and thus he counted 175 conversions. Another piece of instruction two sinners told me he used with them: "You just say you believe Jesus Christ has forgiven your sins, and you are all right." I relate these facts to show the animus of these people, and to show the character of the work being done by them. About 75 of them have gone into their church, and 50 or 60 into the Campbellite Church, and 40 or 50 into the other churches.

Before I left the South I felt a growing hope that the day was near when there would be a union of the Episcopal Methodisms; but since I've been thrown into contact with the M. E. Church I see that the same spirit that actuated New England Methodism in 1844 rules in the body of the M. E. Church to-day, and union would be only absorption. Our people out West, at least, would go to almost any church rather than to the M. E. Church. This is shown in our large cities now. Some of our people who live in Portland, Or., tell me they are sure there are 300 to 400, or more, of our people in that city, but they are sure not more than 50 of them are in the M. E. Church. An editor of a prominent paper there told me very few Southern people could stay in that church and hold their self-respect. I find the same fact holds good in Tacoma and Seattle. Why do we not enter these places? I can not tell.

I wanted to say something about the propriety of a change of name, but I fear to start on this, else I might land in the waste-basket. Let me say to my friends that when I voted against the change, I did it "ignorantly in unbelief." I have now repented, and had I one hundred votes, they would all go for a change; not that I love the South less, but that I love my church more. I hope all our delegates to the General Conference will read and re-read the articles that have recently appeared in the Christian Advocate (Nashville) on this subject, especially the ones by Bros. Duncan, Stanton, Few, and the brother from West Texas. One point made by all of them is the local significance of the suffix (South), as also the political significance many attach to it. True, some, as Dr. Barbee, argues it has no significance. If so, why hold so tenaciously to it? That it is a great hindrance to our progress, especially in those portions of our work where we are thrown into contact with the M. E. Church, all who have had experience admit. It teaches no spiritual, theological, or historical truth; is only a local or geographical factor. I could tell several instances which have come under my own observation within a few months where this suffix has cost us several members; and if this be true in one or two charges in so short a time, what must be the number in the many hundred similarly situated charges during the past twenty-seven years? Let's not be controlled by sentiment, but by a desire to do good. If I allowed sentiment to direct me, I would be more in favor, for my sentiment in favor of all that is Southern has been intensified by coming West. I have found that the South and Southern people are much better than I thought they were. They will bear comparison in every good way; so let us amend and be simply "Episcopal Methodist Church."

Old Testament Saints.

BY PRESIDENT JAMES H. CARLISLE, LL.D.

"My observation is, that one great difficulty which keeps many young men from becoming believers is found in the errors and faults of the Old Testament saints." A man with more than usual experience from travel made this remark not long since. As several months are now given to the Old Testament, this difficulty, in some shape, may meet young teachers or older pupils. To these a few suggestions may be made.

The Bible does not sharply divide saints and sinners in the history. The writer does not usually say, "Now, I am about to introduce a wicked man into my story." It does not always comment on the good or bad deeds of good men. The author of the Book of Job does not tell us, "Job is right here, but he is wrong there," or, "Bildad is narrow in his theology at this point." In the New Testament, Luke does not stop to apportion praise or blame to Paul and Barnabas when he tells us about their sharp contention. Perhaps we may say that the Bible is not only a true history of the lives of inspired men, but an inspired account of the lives of all kinds of men. Men of various degrees of inspiration, and of no appreciable inspiration, move across the pages, and they are not labeled definitely, as we might wish to have them. It may be added that we meet the same difficulty in watching the strange current of life around us to-day. We are left to draw our own conclusions as to the spirit prompting the men who jostle us in daily intercourse. Phillips Brooks says: "We shall find by our side upon the sea of glass—if God's mercy bring us there—some saint whom an inconsistent habit, or a scandalous report, has made us think that we dislike, and find, as we look him through and through with the insight of that perfect world, and know him for the first time, that we can not hate, but must completely love, so noble, true and pure a soul as his."

The whole scheme of revelation is progressive. After waiting for thousands of years, the world was visited by the "Light of the World" in a human form. He confined himself to a very small part of one continent. He devoted special time and care for several years to a dozen men. Yet to these he said, a few hours before his death, "I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye can not bear them now." In our ignorance and haste we might say, "Let the Creator tell us at once all he wishes us to know." This is certainly not his plan, and, therefore, it can not be the best plan. Individuals are left to grow in knowledge and moral discernment, and why not nations, races, worlds? Those living nineteen centuries after Christ surely have light, privileges, opportunities, responsibilities, not given to those who lived nineteen centuries before him. If it is asked, "Why leave Abraham with less light than we now have?" the question may be carried further, "Why leave us with less light than others may have on earth a century hence, or than we may have a century hence in another stage of life?"

As examples, there are the instances of untruthfulness in the lives of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, David, and others. It may be noticed that the first time the word "truth" occurs in our English Bible is in the speech of Abraham's servant (Gen. xxiv, 27). It is still a stock question with some moralists, "Is a lie ever justifiable?" Some writers decide it, theoretically, in the affirmative, even now. Is it strange that four thousand years ago a patriarch, in a crisis of his life, decided it practically on the same side? Abraham, it may be, did not lose self-respect by this act, as a believer of to-day necessarily does by a kindred fault. The great test of probation may be applied in dim or brighter light. Part of Abraham's trial was in the vague instructions given him. Part of our trial may be in the effort to read his wonderful life-history wisely and charitably. Tried by the light of his time, his character, in its vast bulk, was elevated, majestic, spiritual, to a remarkable degree. It may show some traces of weakness, enough to keep us from worshiping him.

"But is not truth in the abstract, infinite, always the same?" We come in contact with truth concrete, not abstract. Truth, as God knows it, as it is embodied in his perfections and attributes, is infinite, incapable, it may be, of increase or change. Truth, as he sees fit to impart it to any of his finite creatures, is a very different thing. This is a variable, growing quantity. There are duties binding on us now which did not meet the men of old. Delicate points of justice and right, social questions, international claims and rights, are now seen more or less clearly, which were not even dimly seen by men in Old Testament times. Their views of truth, personal purity and honor, treatment of enemies, etc., were to be enlarged and made clear by experience, mistakes, and suffering. There was as much electricity, active and sleeping, in the time of Noah, as there is in the world to-day; but the men of that day were not able to draw it out from its secret place, nor were they able to use it if it had been drawn out for them. The rays of the sun falling on Abraham's tent were as able and as willing to paint a picture as are those which fall on the photographer's plate to-day; but the patriarch was not ready to use them. The amount of truth in the universe of the great Creator was as great then as to-day; but the amount of truth, the ideal of truth, the standard of truth, within Abraham's reach, was not equal to that offered to us to-day. He rejoiced to see the coming of the great Teacher from afar; but he could not see, as we may see, what was in the life of Him who could say, "I am the truth."

"But after all explanations and apologies, did not these men of old know enough to keep them from these sins?" Perhaps so. Then let all those who now live habitually and fully up to all the light within their reach—let these men cast a slight on the memory of the saints of earlier times!

It will be profitable for us, as we pass over these lessons, to notice closely the failings of the heroes, that we may try to guard our own lives. We can often find reason to say: "It may not be surprising that this believer, in his day, committed that wrong; but it will be surprising and inexcusable if, in this day, I repeat it." The author of the Epistle to the Hebrews, running over the history of centuries with discriminating, yet charitable eyes, selects a muster-roll of worthies. He surprises us by putting on such a list the name of wild, frolicsome Samson. We stumble over the records which the lives of men in earlier ages present. If our lives were written out as honestly and fearlessly, would not coming generations of readers stumble over the faults and errors of the churches and saints of to-day?

In some moods we feel like saying: "Give us a Bible all as clear as the multiplication table, with no poetry, parable, or mystery; with no deep truth requiring the experience and study of generations to exhaust it; with none but perfect saints in its pages." No such Bible has been given, and for this we may well be thankful. If our Bible was filled with the experiences, speeches, and deeds of perfect, faultless men, the critic and skeptic would have abundant reason for criticism and offense.

As we read these venerable records, we may often find occasion to say, with feelings of tender sympathy, "This man is just like one of ourselves!"

"Heir of the same inheritance,
Child of the self-same God;
He hath but stumbled in the path
We have in weakness trod."

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER.

To the home of the father returning,
The prodigal, weary and worn,
Is greeted with joy and thanksgiving,
As when on his first natal morn.
A "robe" and a "ring" is his portion,
The servants as suppliants bow,
He is clad in fine linen and purple,
In return for his penitent vow.

But, ah! for the prodigal daughter,
Who has wandered away from home—
Her feet must still press the dark valley,
And through the wide wilderness roam.
Alone on the bleak, barren mountains—
The monotains so dreary and cold—
No hand is outstretched in kind pity
To welcome her back to the fold.

But, thanks to the Shepherd whose mercy
Still follows the sheep, though they stray,
The weakest, and e'en the forsaken,
He bears in his bosom away;
And in the bright mansions of glory,
Which the blood of his sacrifice won,
There is room for the prodigal daughter
As well as the prodigal son.

Col. William R. Stuart.

Col. WILLIAM R STUART was born on the eastern shore of Maryland, and died at Ocean Springs in the seventy-third year of his life, March 29 1894. He was the son of William R. Stuart, of Maryland, who died in New Orleans of yellow fever in the year 1853.

For some years Col Stuart was a planter near Baton Rouge; but the greater part of his active business life he was a commission merchant in New Orleans. For the last twenty years he has been living at Ocean Springs, and has been largely engaged in the orange culture, in raising blooded stock, and, at the last, in the pecan cultivation. Few men have shown more enterprise in the several pursuits which have occupied his energies from his early manhood, and few have been more generally known throughout Mississippi and Louisiana. He was gifted with a fine person and most pleasing address, and an extensive acquaintance with all the arts of commercial and agricultural employment. Socially, he was known as the most hospitable person to be met with. Strangers and visitors to this town where he lived could scarcely escape his generous attention. His house was open to everyone who wished to become acquainted with the resources of this part of Louisiana. For thirty years he has entertained his friends, and exercised toward all a boundless hospitality and unstinted personal attention.

Though in early life he was far away from the Savior, upon the sudden death of his father and brother in 1853 he became a member of the Methodist Church in New Orleans at Carondelet Street, where, for many years, he was steward and class leader. He was in religion, as in everything he undertook, an ardent follower of the Master. He supported and advanced the church liberally. At one time he gave a thousand dollars to Centenary College. He delighted to entertain the preachers, and his house was open to all of them, equally, from the Bishops to the youngest circuit rider. He numbered among his most intimate friends Bishops Kavanaugh, Pierce, Wightman, Parker. They all have partaken of his hospitality. He corresponded with them, and his service was at their command. In church and at camp meeting, and especially at an experience meeting, he was at home. His talks and songs and prayers could always be counted on in furtherance of a work of God. His reading was mainly in the Holy Scriptures, and the Wesleyan literature, and in the hymn book. He delighted in the sermons and biographies of godly men. He was a capital hearer, and has aided many a prosy preacher by the fervency of his responses. His Christian cheerfulness, activity and religious zeal kept pace with all other of the many enterprises of his active life. He was never ashamed or slow to announce himself as a Methodist, however worldly or fashionable the company.

Like other men of decided character, he had a few acquaintances who saw in him much that was defective; yet, taking many years, who has been more active in upholding whatever was praiseworthy and estimable among men? We shall never see another like him, who, to so many admirable traits of Christian quality, added so many graces of social intercourse. He will be missed as a citizen, as an acquaintance, as a member of the church of Christ, as a dear friend, as an ever affectionate and tender husband, and by all who love those that love the Savior. He realized that he was a sinner saved by grace, and he delighted in all sermons that emphasized a gospel that called sinners to repentance. All of the young people regarded him as a delightful companion in all the families he visited, and his interest in them followed them on through all their maturing fortunes.

He, doubtless, has found an abundant entrance into the kingdom of his Lord, and is already at home among hundreds of those dear brethren who have preceded him to glory. He leaves one behind him to whom his soul was bound by many years of tender care and sympathy, and who has watched as angel over the fading light of a life that never wearied in loving attention to her, his first and only wife. Many friends have gone before, and we all shall soon follow after.

FIRST ROUND.

Perhaps the first impulse of a new presiding elder upon completing his first round of appointments is to write and inform his friends and the public of it; but from far higher motives, we trust, this brief note is penned. During the past three months the undersigned has traveled hundreds of miles through one of the most beautiful and romantic countries of the Western world, at a season of the year when it can be seen to least advantage, and for at least two months of which it can be said to have been a veritable storm center. All nations are represented in the field thus traversed, and all languages spoken, so that heterogeneous is the word to apply to the population; and though we might not use so expressive a term in speaking of the latter, surely a polyglot of idioms could be constructed from the jargons that one might chance to hear in a day's travel. So many growing towns and cities constructed out of truly cosmopolitan material, and located on railroads and rivers, can hardly be found in a region of equal compass, North or South. But for all this, the district is largely rural, and embraces every variety of population usually employed in the farming, fruit, fishing, cattle, and lumber industries. Our itinerary was accomplished in all sorts of weather, and by railroads, steamboats, wagons, buggies, jumpers, on horseback, and afoot. We preached to all denominations of Christians, and all classes of people, in churches, meeting-houses, school-buildings, court-houses, and private residences, during all the days of the week. Through grace accompanying the word, we saw numbers of persons brought to repentance, many converted and sanctified, and numbers besides these join the church, which we are persuaded is as much a haven for returning sinners as the bays along our sea coast for battered vessels escaping from the storm. It was our privilege often to preach to assemblies composed of strangers from as many lands as waited upon the apostolic ministry at Pentecost, with effects, in some cases, we trust, not less profound, if less overwhelming. As an additional summing up, one educated young man (engaged in teaching school) was called to preach, and sent into the itinerant field; two local preachers were called to enter the itinerant work, and given employment; three new missions started in needy and populous fields, and eight church-buildings enterprised, with a fair prospect of completion during the present year. Perfect harmony prevails throughout the district, moreover, and the preachers and people who, in the beginning of the year, professed themselves disappointed in their appointments are, at this writing, perfectly joined together in the bonds of mutual admiration. In the light of such facts, who will pretend that there is no presidence or providence in the decrees of the Bishop's cabinet. During many trials and toils and privations, not a few, the writer has had a sufficiency of grace, and, with much of diversion for both heart and mind, has realized at all times the comforts of redeeming love.

Brethren, pray for us, that this open door may be effectual, and that the present material storms, which have so threatened to impede the good work, may be the precursor of equatorial outbreaks in the spiritual sky, and of "times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord," for all this thirsty land.

Winona District Conference.

The Winona District Conference met in twenty-fifth annual session at Indianola, Miss., April 9, 1894. Bishop R. K. Hargrove presided to the entire satisfaction of all. Gentleness and firmness are delightfully blended in this chief pastor. His visit to this district proved a benediction. His strong and forceful sermon met the warmest commendation. Bros. Ritchey, Shipman and Davis did good preaching during the Conference.

On Sunday preceding the Conference the editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE preached to the delight of the people of Indianola. The Conference gladly welcomed Dr. Black, and was surprised that he would not make a speech for the paper. Rev. I. W. Cooper, agent for our college, was present and made a speech for the college. The only fault of the speech was its brevity. The Conference resolved to co-operate with the Kosciusko and Aberdeen districts in building the "Robert Paine Mitchell Home" on the campus of Millsaps College, and appointed a committee to put the resolution into effect. In all this territory where Bro. Mitchell labored as presiding elder his name is as "ointment poured forth."

The Winona district has been fortunate in the character of the men who have served it as presiding elders. None was held in higher esteem than "Bro. Paine Mitchell." Of the present incumbent the District Conference adopted the following resolution:

Whereas, The labors of our presiding elder, Rev. S. M. Thames, will close with us, as a district, at the end of this ecclesiastical year, by limitation; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we heartily commend him to those with whom he may hereafter be thrown as an earnest, fearless preacher of the gospel of Jesus Christ, and as one who looks well to all the interests of the church. We pray that God's blessings may attend him and his family, and that they may have constantly the comforting influence of the Holy Spirit.

The methods for getting at the facts and true condition of the work were thorough; and if there had been more time for Conference, the results would have been better and more lasting. The reports showed that the work in the district is prospering. There have been more than one hundred additions to the church since last Annual Conference, and more than $500 paid on the general collections to date.

The General Conference was memorialized to transfer the licensing and recommendation of preachers from the Quarterly to the District Conference.

The following-named brethren were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: Rowan Thayer, J. R. Bingham, J. H. Fraiser and Rev. Chas. A. Spraggine. Alternates: J. B. Streater and H. H. Estes.

The next District Conference will be held at Carrollton.

The Conference adjourned on Tuesday. On Wednesday, at 11 A. M., Bro. R I. Allen preached in Indianola, and Dr. Cooper preached at night.

Indianola is the county site of Sunflower county, and is one of the prettiest towns in the Delta. Situated on both sides of Indian Bayou, it is beautifully located and is well drained. It is sadly in need of a new court-house, which the county is well able to build, as it is one of the richest of Delta counties and has, as I learned from the efficient sheriff, Mr. E. A. Andereon, Jr., about $6,000 in the treasury. The citizens extended a most bountiful hospitality. Your correspondent was never more royally entertained and made to feel more at home than he was in the elegant home of Mr. E. A. Anderson, Jr., and his charming wife,

The pastor, Rev. O. L. Savage, is in favor with his people. DELEGATE

Seashore Camp Ground.

The Board of Trustees held their annual Spring meeting on the grounds on April 12 and 13.

The officers of the Board elected to serve for the ensuing year were as follows: E. P. Mackie, president; J. H. Campman, vice-president; P. Werlein, treasurer; H. W. Spear, financial secretary; J. E. Michael, recording secretary.

The Executive Committee: J. H. Campman, Dr. E. F. Griffin, D. Zable, W. W. Sutcliffe, A. C. Danner, A. S. Daniels, J. L. Dantzler.

The Tents and Lodging Committee: J. H. Chapman, W. W. Sutcliffe, E. B. Vaughan.

The Transportation Committee: A. C. Danner, E. B. Vaughan, H. W. Spear.

The Advertising and Printing Committee: H. W. Spear, J. E. Michael, J. H. Lakin.

The Restaurant Committee: D. Zable, A. S. Daniels, W. W. Sutcliffe.

The Gates Committee: D. Zable, H. W. Spear, J. E. Michael.

The Music Committee: P. Werlein, J. H. Campman, J. H. Lakin.

The Hauling Committee: A. S. Daniels, J. H. Lakin, W. A. White.

The Building Committee: J. H. Campman, J. P. Carter, E. B. Vaughan.

The Reception Committee: E. P. Mackie, P. Werlein, J. L. Dantzler.

The time for holding the twenty-third annual camp meeting was fixed for Wednesday evening, July 11, next, and to continue for eight days.

The presiding elders of the three sustaining District Conferences have charge of the services during the camp meeting.

The usual gate fees will be in force, in order to contribute to the expense for sustaining the grounds.

Owing to the unusual expense incurred for rebuilding the two wharves and bath-houses, to replace those swept away by the storm last Fall, the Board were forced to levee a tax on each tent of five dollars, to aid in meeting the cost of same.

The Board approved the action of the Executive Committee in the selection of J. R. Everitt, as keeper of the grounds, in place of C. W. Blake, resigned. The Board also enacted a rule requiring all tenters to supply themselves with covered, galvanized garbage cans.

The season for residence on the camp ground begins May 1, and closes November 1. It is expected that a larger number than usual will summer on the grounds this season, as applications are already being made for purchase and rent of tents The grounds are beginning to put on an inviting look, and preparations are now taking shape towards several important improvements. The artesian well is still sending forth an abundant flow of exhilarating and superb water.

All communications concerning the purchase or rental of tents and rooms should be addressed to the resident keeper, Biloxi P. O., Miss., or to J. H. Campman, chairman Tents and Lodging Committee.

New Orleans District Conference.

The New Orleans District Conference met in Baton Rouge, La., April 5, 6 and 7; Bishop Jno. C. Keener in the chair.

The Conference organized by electing Rev. H. H. Ahrens, secretary; Rev. F. S. Parker, assistant secretary. Rev. S. S. Keener was appointed a Committee on Public Worship, and Revs. Robt. H. Wynn, J. M. Henry and L F. Jackson the Committee on Quarterly Conference Records.

The reports of the brethren showed a marked improvement along all lines. The spirituality of the churches on the whole was good, Sunday-schools improving, Epworth Leagues doing good work; finances in fair condition.

The brethren were requested to state the number of religious papers taken in their congregations, and the number reported was distressingly small.

Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, president of Centenary College, was introduced to the Conference and made a strong appeal for Old Centenary.

The Conference adjourned regularly each day at 11 A. M. for preaching, and services were again conducted at night. May God's blessing rest upon the words spoken by his servants and bring forth much fruit to his glory!

A resolution of thanks was offered the Methodist families of Baton Rouge for their generous hospitality. Every preacher thought he had the best home.

The short talks by the senior Bishop were freighted with wisdom, and always greatly delighted all who heard.

The following brethren were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: W. B. Thomson, C. L. Andrews and E. P. Mackie; T. J. Reams and M. C. Aldrich, alternates.

It was a matter of much regret that the presiding elder, Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D., was unable to be present on account of illness.

The Conference adjourned to meet next year in the Dryades Street Church, New Orleans.

H. H. AHRENS.

Greenville District Conference.

The Greenville District Conference met at Cleveland, Miss., April 13, 1894 at two o'clock P. M.; Bishop R. K. Hargrove in the chair. T. Y. Ramsey was elected secretary, with D. M. Broyles assistant. The Bishop's method of conducting the business of District Conference is decidedly unique, but eminently satisfactory. He gets at the bottom of things. The reports of the preachers gave evidence of growth and healthfulness in spiritual and material things. Every pastor present but one, and a goodly number of laymen. The preaching was of a high order. Rev. J. C. Mimms preached the opening sermon. Bishop Hargrove, Dr. W. C. Black and Dr. Julien C. Brown each gave us a strong sermon. Dr. Black looked after the interests of our organ, the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and Dr. Brown the Memphis Advocate, of which he is now associate editor. Dr. I. W. Cooper, agent of Millsaps, and Rev. J. W. Honnoll, president of Malone Female College, were on hand pressing the claims of these worthy institutions. The Committee on Education made flattering mention of Grenada Collegiate Institute. Bishop Hargrove told us of the great work the Vanderbilt University is doing. A communication from Rev. J. W. McLaurin was read, and the interests of the American Bible Society, of which he is district agent for Mississippi and Louisiana, given careful consideration. The District Conference passed the following resolutions:

Resolved, That we urge the pastors in the district to instruct their congregations fully what the law is for estimating and raising the pastor's salary; also the general collections.

Resolved, That the stewards and members be directed to observe them.

J. D. Palmer, J. D. Davenport, E. V. McKinney, S. C. Blanchard, were elected delegates to the Annual Conference. Alternates: Thos. Mount, R. Henderson.

Tunica was selected as the next place of meeting.

Cleveland dispensed a most generous hospitality. Bro. H. P. Crowe, the efficient pastor, and his accomplished Christian wife are held in high esteem and affection by all his people. One of his leading laymen told me that the wonder was how they ever got him.

We were glad to have you with us, Mr. Editor, and we desire you to come again. T. Y. RAMSEY, Sec.

Greenville, Miss., April 14, 1894.

The District Meeting of the Greenville District.

"Whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive."

This promise was graciously fulfilled in the district meeting held at Cleveland, April 11 and 12.

Those who had the care of the meeting asked our Father for a large attendance, for increased interest among preachers and people, and especially that the meeting might be a spiritual blessing to all who attended. The answer was abundant. The attendance was much larger than at any previous meeting. There were present as delegates and visitors seventeen women from all parts of the district. Ten of the preachers of the district were in attendance, and Bro. Bachman also honored us with his presence. Has any district made a better showing? Three services were held. On the afternoon of the eleventh an experience meeting, led by Rev. J. L. Bowling, of Lula, the same night the annual meeting, and on the morning of Thursday the business meeting of both the W. M. S. and P. and H. M. S.

The night service was opened with devotions by Rev. J. M. Wyatt, of Clarksdale. The address of welcome was beautifully rendered by Mrs. Hicks, of Cleveland, The response by Mrs. Mimms, of Arcola, was appropriate and suggestive. A sweet recitation was given by Maggie Pierman, of Cleveland. The work of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society was presented by the district secretary, and a beautiful and touching appeal in behalf of the Woman's Missionary Society was made by Mrs. Gibbs, of Jonestown. Mittie Echols recited "Biddy Red Wing's Nest" as a collection speech, and after a song the meeting closed with benediction by Rev. J. M. Wyatt. The audience was large and appreciative, and many said that the exercises were appropriate and interesting and not in any way tiresome or tedious.

At nine o'clock the next morning the business meeting for the Woman's Missionary Society was called to order. The district secretary was unable to be present, and at her request Mrs. Robert Somerville, district secretary for the P. and H. M. S., presided. Devotions were conducted by Rev. B. F. Phillips, of Tunica. Bro. Phillips' brief talk was to the point and was gratifying to the women present. Mrs. H. P. Gibbs was elected secretary. The report of the district secretary, Mrs. Clifford, was read, showing an increase of four societies during the year. The reports of delegates were heard, several pastors reporting for societies which had not sent delegates. Attention was called to the literature of the W. M. S., and the president spoke in the interest of the "Little Worker." Here Bro. Phillips rendered invaluable service by suggesting that it was time to take a collection. Mrs. Shelby and Mrs. Archer were appointed for that service, and twenty-nine subscribers were secured in a short time. This concluded the session of the Woman's Missionary Society.

After a short intermission the meeting was called to order to hear the report of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society. Mrs. Mimms was elected secretary. The district secretary reported seven adult societies in the district. Two new auxiliaries, reported by Rev. B. F. Phillips, increased the total number to nine. Reports of auxiliaries were heard, and several pastors reported work for the society in charge without a regular auxiliary. A paper on the work of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society was read by Miss Lillian Derrick, of Shelby. After brief remarks by the presiding officer, the meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. Gibbs.

Thanks are due the organist and choir for sweet music throughout the meeting and to the pastor and people of Cleveland for their abundant kindness and hospitality. Nothing gave us so much encouragement as the attendance and hearty sympathy of the preachers. We expect a great advance in our work during the year.

Dis. Sec. P. and H. M. S.

Remedies for Fits.

For a fit of grumbling, visit those who are ill, or blind, or totally deaf, or without daily bread, or in some other way really afflicted, and you will be ashamed of making such a fuss over your little annoyances.

For a fit of rage, go out into a large field, and, taking your stand in its exact centre, express your mind with the utmost freedom concerning him who has provoked you. Where this is not feasible, sit down and write him a scorching letter, and then carefully put it into the fire.

For a fit of idleness, count carefully the ticks of the clock for a full hour, and you will probably be glad then to take hold of something useful. If that does not avail, a visit to some humming hive of industry, or a literal hive where the bees are busy, might have a good effect.

For a fit of ambition, study the history of famous men, and see both how hard they worked and how little real satisfaction they found in their honors when they came. If you are still consumed with this fever for applause, visit the graveyard and spend a little time reflecting on the small amount of space which the mightiest men must occupy in a very short time.

For a fit of envy or covetousness, go to the watering-places or the fashionable Summer resorts, and count the number of wealthy invalids, and the forms draped in mourning, and the faces that show bad temper and care, and listen to the accounts of the domestic unhappiness of those possessing the largest wealth.

For a fit of boastfulness, walk through the alcoves of a large library and remember how very small a portion of the learning there entombed is yours, or ever will be.

These recipes for the prevention or cure of fits are not patented, nor will any charge be made for the prescription. Nearly all are more or less subject to snob attacks, and they are hereby exhorted not to suffer them to become chronic. If they will follow the advice above given, they will escape so sad a fate.—Zion's Herald.

Empty Lives.

It is most surprising the way some women of means waste their time and money. Their dresses are made to order; so are their hats and their wraps. They send their washing to the laundry, and their gloves and laces to the cleaners. The maid who does the bedroom work darns the stockings and sews on buttons. Once a week a manicure comes by appointment, and spends two hours treating fingers and feet; another specialist is engaged by the month, and calls at least once a week to shampoo and dress the hair. Now, this is what might be regarded as the luxury of living, from the standpoint of a busy woman overburdened with the cares of domestic or professional life. Such care-taking should leave ample time for some great work. Instead of that, it does little more than give industrious women the means of a livelihood.

The waking hours of these childless women are idled away in novel reading, gossiping visits, matinee-going or lounging. No attention whatever is given to study or to uplifting of the helpless classes. The number who lead those empty lives is on the increase.—Selected.

For Making Every Day Happy.

When you rise in the morning form a resolution to make the day a happy one to a fellow-creature. It is easily done. A left-off garment to the man who needs it, a kind word to the sorrowful, an encouraging expression to the striving, trifles in themselves as light as air, will do it, at least for the twenty-four hours; and if you are young, depend upon it, it will tell when you are old, it will send you gently and happily down the stream of human life to eternity. By the most simple arithmetical sum look at the result; you send one person, only one, happily through the day—that is three hundred and sixty-five in the course of the year, and supposing that you live forty years after you commence that course of medicine, you have made fourteen thousand and six hundred human beings happy, at all events, for a time. Now, is not this simple? It is too short for a sermon, too homely for ethics, too easily accomplished for you to say "I would if I could."—Stylus.

It is told of a certain Chinaman who applied for Christian baptism, that on being asked where he had heard the gospel, made answer that he had never heard it, but had seen it. That a man in Ningpo, who had been an opium smoker and a man of violent temper, had become a Christian, and his whole life had been changed. He had given up his opium and had become loving and amiable. "So," said his neighbor, "I have seen the gospel, and I want to be a Christian, too." There can be no more effective "evidence" for Christianity than the life that exemplifies it. "What have they seen in thine house?" was the prophet's searching question to King Hezekiah after the ambassadors from Babylon had visited him. "What does the world see in your daily life?" is the question which the followers of the Lord should ever hear resounding in the heart. As has been said: Christians are the world's Bible. And, alas! too, they are the only Bible many of "them that are without" ever study. What do they see in us? A man, who had long been irreligious and a scoffer, but who afterward came to the knowledge of the truth said, concerning his pious wife, "I could easily answer all her arguments against my unbelief, but I could not answer her holy life."—Exchange.

Happiness is not the end of life. Hope is better, and holiness is best of all. It is our incompleteness which is the prophecy and pledge of our greatness. We are appointed to die daily in order that the inner man may attain his stature, as the acorn dies that the oak may wave its branches in the upper air. A restless striving for something better and higher is the sign and the seal of our superiority over plants and animals. As John Stuart Mill pithily said, "It is better to be a dissatisfied man than to be a satisfied pig."—Dr. A. J. F. Behrends.

Rose Tobacco Cure

A CHEAP QUICK, PLEASANT and ABSOLUTE CURE for the Tobacco Habit in all forms. Ask your druggist or write to ROSE DRUG CO., 21st St., Birmingham, Ala.

Here Is Your Chance.

During the next sixty days we make the following offer:

For $2.50 we will send the ADVOCATE one year and a copy of Christian Womanhood. The price of the ADVOCATE is $2; the price of the book, $1. This book has had an extensive sale, the sixth thousand being now on the market. This offer applies to renewals as well as new subscriptions, provided the renewal extends the subscription to January, '95.

The following notices, selected from a vast number that have appeared in the church papers, will give some idea of the character of the work:

The best thesaurus of facts concerning womanhood with which we are acquainted.—Dr. C. F. Deems.

We hope it will be read by every man and woman in the church.—Florida Advocate.

We hope it will be extensively circulated and carefully read.—NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Heartily recommended.—Dr. John E. Edwards.

This volume is the result of patient investigation and thoughtful study of the whole question treated. In the formulation of the case and in analyzing the testimony a vigorous, well-poised, legal mind is brought to bear. Dr. Black, moreover, establishes the points of his discussion as a skillful general establishes his lines in the face of an alert enemy. As he begins, so he closes, leaving the impression that a master in Israel has written bravely and tellingly of Christian womanhood, maintaining his position at every turn. The book is needed, and will long be in popular demand.—Sunday-School Magazine.

Don't miss this opportunity.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

DEMONTFORT CAKE.—One cup of sugar, one-half cup of butter, one-half cup of milk, two cups of flour, two eggs, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Bake in layers with any kind of filling.—House and Farm.

APPLE PUDDING.—Steam the apples and press them through a colander; take the yolks of five eggs, half a pound of sugar and six ounces of butter; beat them well together; then add apples to the taste; season with nutmeg and bake in pastry.—Woman's Work.

BUNS.—One egg, one pint of flour, one-half teacupful of yeast, one teaspoonful of loaf sugar, one teaspoonful of soda, and as much sweet milk as will make it soft enough; mix this at night and put it to rise. In the morning add three-fourths of a teaspoonful of acid, and knead the dough well. Put the buns in a deep pan and bake them.—Woman's Work.

LEMON JELLY WITH BANANA.—Make some lemon jelly, using three lemons, a pound of sugar to half a box of gelatin. Let it get a little stiff. Peel and slice quite thin some fine, solid bananas. Pour a layer of jelly into a mold, then put in a layer of bananas, then another of jelly, and so on until the mold is full. Let it stiffen, and serve in a bed of stiff-whipped cream.—Nashville Advocate.

DEVILED EGGS.—Boil a dozen eggs for fifteen minutes, and throw them in cold water for half an hour; remove the shells, and cut the eggs in halves lengthwise. Take out the yolks, and rub them to a smooth paste with a teaspoonful of French mustard, two tablespoonfuls of cold boiled tongue, a tablespoonful of melted butter, and a squeeze of lemon juice; season with salt and pepper. Fill the whites with the mixture, press together, and arrange on a bed of lettuce leaves.—Harper's Bazar.

ORANGE CAKE.—Three eggs, one tablespoon of butter, one and a half cups of sugar, two cups of flour, with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder sifted through it, half a cup of rich milk, a very little salt, orange juice or some extract of lemon. Bake on jelly cake tins. Jelly for Orange Cake.—Take two good oranges, grate a part of the rind of one, then peel and grate them both; remove the seed and add one cup of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of water, and scald in a tin pail; set in a kettle of hot water. Take one tablespoonful of cornstarch, mix smooth with a few spoonfuls of water, and stir into the orange, and cook just enough to cook the cornstarch. When nearly or quite cold, beat the whites of two eggs, and add powdered sugar for frosting; leave out a little of this for the top of the cake, if you like, and stir the rest into the orange, and you will have a jelly that will not run off or soak into the cake.—Woman.

HYGIENE.

Suicide by Inches.

A valuable article on inebriety in the New York Sun says:

Heredity is doubtless of the highest importance as an etiological factor in the production of either the vice or the disease. In an analysis of 600 cases admitted to an institution for inebriates in this country direct inheritance of a tendency to drink was traced in 239 cases and insanity was noted in the progenitors of thirty-eight others, so that nearly one-half of them were born in a condition to become victims of the inebriate malady. Inebriate parents not only beget children who may fall a prey to the same morbid impulse, but their progeny are often feeble, idiotic, epileptic or insane. It is the custom of physicians in all cases of insanity, epilepsy, idiocy and many other disorders to inquire into the record of intemperance in the family history. . . . Alcohol affects the system in such a variety of ways, perverts the functions of so many organs, invades and corrodes so many tissues, that the physician is often puzzled as to what part of the organism needs treatment first. The poison produces chronic inflammation of the stomach; it gradually inflames the liver and, in fact, strangles it like an iron hand; it injures the heart; it affects the kidneys; it does harm to the lungs; it produces neurasthenia, delirium tremens, insanity and epilepsy by its influence upon the nervous system; it attacks the spinal cord and causes pseudotaxia. Sometimes the physicians treat one of these conditions in a patient and sometimes many. But the worst condition is that of the vice or disease itself. He may treat and relieve to a certain extent the disorders just enumerated, but the habit offers terrible difficulties to overcome in order to conquer it.

Living at the Expense of Life.

This great practical error, though extremely common, seems as yet to have attracted but little attention.

There are thousands who are daily and hourly living at the expense of life, and yet suppose—and so do their friends—that they enjoy the best of health. It is true they have bad feelings now and then, and perhaps a few trifling diseases, but these they suppose are the common lot of humanity.

They are plump and rosy, and what do they want more? Is not this the best evidence of health?

We say it is not. People often become full, and apparently robust, by excess of wine, whisky or cider. Is their fullness an evidence of health? Far from it. In like manner they sometimes become full and ruddy by what is commonly called high living; and everybody will say of a person of this description—"He is the very picture of health." But is it therefore so? The physiologists would say no. Reason says no. And the lapse of a few more years will say no. He may do very well for a time; he may even run on in this way to fifty years of age. But he is living too fast; he is living at the expense of life; he is destroying himself by excess of nutriment.

This, reader, is not an exaggerated picture. Would that it were so.

Half of what we call the infirmities of old age—and thus charge them upon him who made the human frame subject to age—have their origin in the same source; we mean, in this living too fast, and exhausting prematurely the vital powers.

When will the sons of men learn wisdom in this matter? Never, we fear, till they are taught, as commonly as they now are reading and writing, the principles of physiology.—Hall's Journal of Health.

The Best Disinfectant.

"What is the best disinfectant to use in the house, doctor?" said a fashionable woman to the family physician. "Fresh air, madam," was his prompt answer.

Notwithstanding the fact that the gospel of fresh air has been preached unremittingly for the last few years, and every intelligent person understands the beneficial effects of oxygen and the equally injurious qualities of the impure air which is breathed out of the lungs in a confined space, there still remains an unaccountable prejudice against letting in the outer air in cold weather. In many houses, except when the beds are being aired or the floors swept, the windows are never opened, the one airing being deemed sufficient, if the temperature is below freezing. Very few people comparatively would dream of leaving their windows open at night, although it is a practice that has been recommended by physicians over and over again; and it is a known fact that fresh air in a bed-room even on the coldest night is not harmful, but healthy. "Instead of colds coming from atmospheric changes, as people generally suppose," says a noted physician, "they generally originate, in my opinion, by breathing impure air. Ninety-nine per cent. of what are termed colds are nothing more or less than the poisoning of the mucous membrane by bad air."—Chicago Journal.

AGRICULTURE.

BY REV. J. W. MCNEIL.

Strawberries.

There is no fruit more delicious than the strawberry. It is a genuine luxury, sweet and palatable, with a rare exception, to nearly every one. We have just finished a heaping dessert dish twice full, and we know of what we speak. It is not an imaginary emotion, but a real fact. Again, it is the earliest of all fruits; comes at a time the most desirable, after the long Winter months have just closed, and the warm days of Spring are upon us, languishing in their effects and the human system needing the acid they supply. Another feature of this fruit: there is none more universal in its growth nearly everywhere found upon the habitable globe.

Juan di Cuba, as far back as 1485, thus eloquently speaks of it: "To traverse the globe from north to south, from mountain to mountain, forming in its passage over prairie and plaine, a thousand mingled patches of obeckerwork of its fair flowers and scarlet and rose-colored fruit, with plants of every clime—how it has been able to scatter itself from the mountains of Cashmere to Archangel, from Kamschatka to Spain; how in word we find it in equal abundance on the continent of America, from the bleak fields of Terra del Fuego to Oregon and Watson's Bay, though myriads of animals are making incessant and universal havoc upon it; yet no gardener is necessary to sow it again. We are struck with wonder and admiration at so precious a gift."

With all its desirable qualities it is easily grown. It needs no professor of agriculture, learned chemist, no professional gardener to give a long list of specifics as to how it shall be grown; yet any one among the least learned who can manage a cotton or corn crop can grow the strawberry.

Again, the quantity as to acreage need be only very small—one-sixteenth of an acre is sufficient for almost any family. It is strange so few farmers have it. The poorest could with an amount of labor they never could miss. Now, it is our intention to tell what we know of this fruit through our columns; its nature, varieties, how to cultivate, fertilize, the best kinds for our climate. We began growing it in the year of 1872; have never seen a Spring since but what our table has been supplied with it in its season; have been engaged in its cultivation for, at least, fifteen years for market purposes.

Those who desire to know how to grow it will do well to file the numbers of the ADVOCATE containing these communications.

Canker in Fowls.

When the poultryman discovers a yellowish white substance on the face of his birds, he may conclude at once that canker is present. The disease spreads very rapidly, and therefore should be taken promptly in hand on its first discovery. The fowl affected with this difficulty should be removed at once from the pen with the other fowls and put in quarantine. Canker develops with great rapidity among the flock, hence the necessity of removal of the sick birds. We should not advise the ordinary farmer or poultryman whose birds are not valuable, that is, not pure-bred stock, to fuss very much with them in attempting to cure them of canker or, indeed, of roup or any kindred difficulty. But in regard to birds that are valuable, it is well to apply a saline wash and alum water, frequently cleansing the affected parts, then alternating with a wash of burnt alum or of chlorate of potash in solution. It is important that the sore places be cleansed every morning and evening and the cankerous matter removed. A remedy which has always proved efficient is after the removal of the cankerous matter, wash the mouth and throat with water and apply equal parts of tincture of myrrh, borax and chlorate of potash. Dust over with powdered borax until healed.—American Farmer and Farm News.

A Veteran's Story

Jos. Hemmerich.

Mr. Joseph Hemmerich, an old soldier, 529 E. 140th St., N. Y. City, writes voluntarily. In 1852, at the battle of Fair Oaks, he was stricken with typhoid fever, and after a struggle of several years in hospitals, was discharged as incurable with Consumption. Doctors said both lungs were affected and he could not live long, but a comrade urged him to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. Before he had finished one bottle his cough began to get loose, the choking sensation left, and night sweats grew less and less. He is now in good health and cordially recommends as a blood purifier and tonic medicine, especially to comrades in the G. A. R.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

HOOD'S PILLS are purely vegetable, and do not purge, pain or gripe. Try a box. 25c.

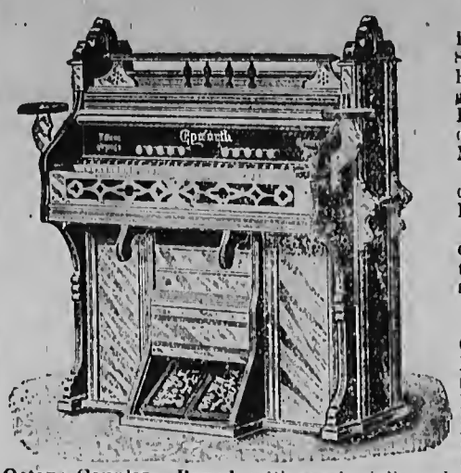
ORGANS AS PREMIUMS.

We have made arrangements to offer a rare bargain in the way of organs as premiums to our subscribers. The organs which we handle are the Epworth Organs. Those have not heretofore had much sale in Mississippi and Louisiana, though they have had an immense sale throughout the North and West and also in some of the Southern States. Do you want a small organ for your church? If so, read the description given below of Style No 102, and see how it would suit you.

STYLE 102. THE EPWORTH CHAPEL ORGAN.

HEIGHT, 51 IN.; WIDTH, 23 IN.; LENGTH, 48 IN.



Best Low-Priced Chapel Organ.

Walnut case; Hard Wood Panels; Finished Back; Lamp Stands; Handsome Fret Work; Full Length Music Desk; Engraved Ornaments; Hand Rubbed; Oil Finish; Pedals covered with Brussels Carpet; Metal Guards on Pedals.

This is the Organ for Churches and Sunday-schools, where a First-Class Action is Desired.

In a good, plain case, the quality of action and tone being the same as in the higher priced styles.

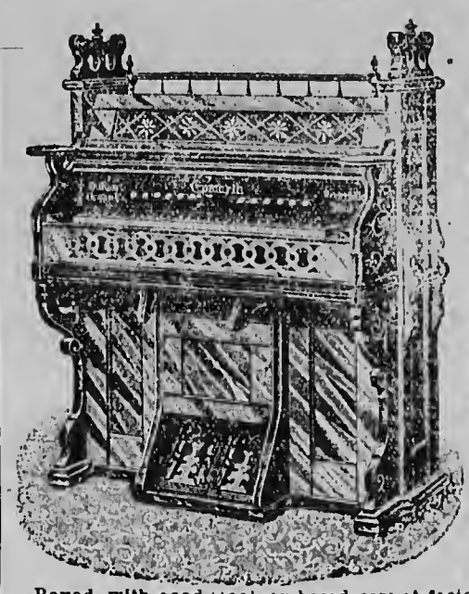
Style 102 12 Stops.

EPWORTH CHAPEL.—Five Octaves, containing four sets of Reeds of two and one-half Octaves each. STOPS—Principal; Dulcet Diapason; Diapason Forte; Vox Angelica; Principal Forte; Cremona; Melodia; Echo Horn; Celeste. Metal Octave Coupler. Boxed, with stool, delivered on board cars at factory.

The catalogue price of this is $87. We will give it as a premium for one hundred subscribers. Send us the cash $200, for the subscribers, and you get the organ free. If you can't get one hundred persons to subscribe personally, perhaps you have well-to-do members of your church who will pay for several poorer members, thereby bestowing a blessing upon them by giving them a religious paper and at the same time helping to procure an organ for your church. If you don't exactly like Style 102, then read the description of Style 302.

IMPROVED STYLE 302 "SPECIAL." EPWORTH CHAPEL ORGAN.

HEIGHT, 55 IN.; LENGTH, 49 IN.; WIDTH, 21 IN.



The Choir's Choicel The Organist's Favorite!

Boxed, with good Stool and Book, on board cars at factory.

If this instrument is your choice, send us one hundred and fifteen new names, with the cash $230, and you will get it free. If you can't get the requisite number of names, get as many as you can, and then write us for terms. No doubt you can make satisfactory arrangements. Of course, this offer applies to individuals as well as to churches. What we want is the subscriptions, let who will get the organ.

These instruments have had a great run among Methodist people in the North. More than a thousand preachers have purchased Epworth Organs. We offer special bargains to the clergy.

If you have any inclination to accept any one of these offers, don't delay. Now is the time. Address

The Advocate for Twenty-Five Cents.

We will send the ADVOCATE from now until the first of July for twenty-five cents. This period embraces the session of the General Conference. The ADVOCATE will contain reports of the proceedings of the General Conference. All Methodist people ought to keep posted in regard to the action of the General Conference. Let all our subscribers make this offer known and constitute themselves agents for the paper. Let it be remembered that the cash must accompany each name. We will do no book-keeping for anybody on this proposition. This offer is made only to new subscribers.

Children of Mississippi.

The work of raising money to build a boarding hall for the poor young men of Mississippi on the campus of Millsaps College goes on slowly, but surely. Here is a good letter on this subject:

Smithville, Miss., April 10, 1894.

Rev. I. W. Cooper, D. D.:

Dear Sir: The proposed scheme to raise money for the purpose of attaching a hall to Millsaps College for the benefit of the poor boys of our State has aroused us to action, and, as a result of our labors, we enclose two dollars and thirty cents. We are two little girls eleven and eight years old, and we desire our brother, Gaston, to have an interest in this hall and to be a pupil of this college some day. We think the hall should be called "Gilderoy," as the plan of building it emanated from his fertile brain and great big heart. We trust all the little folks will go to work in this glorious cause. We expect to continue to work. Your little friends,

FANNIE LOU AND IRENE WAX.

That is a good letter, and it stirs old memories. That Wax family is a good one. Many happy hours we have spent in that Christian home. These dear girls are "aroused to action," and they have acted nobly. Who will be the next to act? They want "their brother, Gaston, to have an interest in this hall and to be a pupil of Millsaps College some day." That is right. Have the hall ready for him. These girls suggest the name "Gilderoy" for that hall. No, no, this will not do. "Gilderoy" is not worthy of so great an honor. He has never been anybody nor done anything worth naming. The "Gilderoy" for whom he was named is a character celebrated in one of Campbell's poems. "The plan of building this hall did not emanate from his fertile brain." Indeed, his brain is not fertile, but, like the brain of most boys, it is poor soil, and needs fertilizer all the time. That is exactly what we are after at Millsaps College, fertilizing the brains of the boys of Mississippi, so they can produce something that will be worthy to live. I have to borrow fertilizer for my brain from those who have enough and to spare. I expect to sit at the feet of boys educated at Millsaps College and learn wisdom from them. Hurry up, children, and let's get this hall ready.

Your uncle, GILDEROY.

At Bay St. Louis.

We lectured on Wednesday night, April 18, at Bay St. Louis. We had quite a good attendance, and although the lecture was long, there was remarkably good attention from beginning to end. The object of the lecture was to raise funds for building a new church. This is a project on which the pastor, Rev. N. B. Harmon, has set his heart. We are sure he will succeed. He is one of the sort that do not know the meaning of the word "fail." The good women of the church have already built a very neat, comfortable parsonage. They raised the money by their own efforts, without resorting to fairs or other objectionable methods. When we say that they raised the money by their own efforts, we do not mean what is often meant by such a statement, that they raised it by circulating a subscription list. They raised it by doing needle work and selling it. A noble band of Christian workers they are.

Our church at Bay St. Louis is on rising ground. A new house of worship will be immensely advantageous to our cause. If there are Methodist people in Mississippi or Louisiana who are on the lookout for an opportunity to make a paying investment for the Lord, here is a chance. At this popular Summer resort Methodism ought by all means to have a larger and more expensive church than our congregation there are able to build. Bay St. Louis has a Winter population of, perhaps, thirty five hundred. In Summer the population reaches, perhaps, ten thousand. Yet our people there are worshiping in a church which does not at all represent Methodism.

On our trip we were glad indeed to have a few words with Rev. H. E. Partridge, presiding elder of the Seashore district, and Rev. T. W. Adams, of Moss Point. Bro. Adams has been assisting Bro. Selby in his meeting at Biloxi. He has his church at Moss Point closed at present for repairs and improvements. Several hundred dollars' worth of work will be put on the building. Bro. Partridge had just returned from a short trip to Monticello, Fla., his native town. He preached while there to a crowded house. He had a very pleasant visit among his relatives and old-time friends. He reports Pastor T. C. Bradford as winding up his fourth year in Monticello prosperously.

During our brief stay in Bay St. Louis we were domiciled with Capt. Toulme at the Crescent Hotel—a magnificent place to be. The accommodations are good, and the hotel stands immediately on the beach and commands one of the finest views on the whole gulf coast.

Counting a Quorum.

The country is to be congratulated upon the fact that Congress has at last adopted rules by which it can secure an official quorum whenever there is a quorum present. We never did take any stock in the denunciation of "Czar Reed" for his efforts to compel congressmen to do their duty. To be present in the House, and yet to refuse to answer to roll-call, and then to insist that there is no quorum because the requisite number have not answered to their names, always seemed to us both silly and wrong. Congressmen are paid to legislate for the country, and every member should be in his seat, should vote in accordance with his convictions, and should let the majority rule. This thing of obstructing the proceedings of Congress by the no quorum process at a time when the country demands immediate action seems to us little less than criminal. "Czar Reed's" party certainly has the laugh on the now dominant party.

Dispensary Law Annulled.

THE SUPREME COURT OF SOUTH CAROLINA DECLARES IT UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

Columbia, S. C., April 19.—The Tillman State Dispensary Liquor law has been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of South Carolina.

The decision was rendered by Chief Justice McIver, Justice McGowan, assenting. Justice Pope, the Tillman justice, dissents. The decision was rendered in a composite case composed of a case originating in Darlington, and appealed to the Supreme Court by the State authorities, and of several minor cases likewise appealed by the State. The ground on which the law is declared unconstitutional is that it creates a monopoly for the State. Justice McIver's decision declares the law unconstitutional in nearly every respect and practically holds that it can not be upheld on any vital point. The profit to the State feature is declared vicious,

The court holds that the State has a right to absolutely prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquor, but denies its right in the exercise of the police power to assume the conduct and control of the traffic in any manner. The State has no right to treat it in a different manner from any other lawful business, and that, as it would have no authority to debar any class of its citizens from following any other lawful business and devolve its conduct upon the State similarly, it has no such right with regard to the liquor business. The opinion covers every conceivable aspect of the case and is generally sweeping and condemnatory of the liquor law.

Associate Justice Pope, in an equally lengthy dissenting opinion, maintains the constitutionality of the Dispensary act based on the right to exercise the police power, and holds that all rights not reserved to the people may, in their interest, be expunged by the Legislature. He invites the particular attention of the judiciary to the consideration of the rights of the State.

Governor Tillman is known to be a man of many resources, and his opponents do not believe that he will yield and close the dispensaries.

The Supreme Court is composed of Chief Justice McIver and Associate Justice McGowan, who belong to the faction of the Democratic party opposed to the governor, and Associate Justice Pope, who filed the dissenting opinion, who is a member of the faction supporting the governor.

Justice McGowan's term expires in July of this year, when he will be succeeded by F. B. Gary, who is a member of the faction supporting the governor.

The first Dispensary law was passed in December, 1892, went into effect July 1, 1893, and was repealed in December, 1893, by a new Dispensary act, which went into effect in January, 1894. The cases in which the decision of the Supreme Court was rendered to-day were brought under the old law.

Tillman can continue the operation of the dispensaries, claiming that the new law has not been declared unconstitutional, though its principle is practically the same as that of the old law. This would necessitate a new suit. Before it could get up to the Supreme Court, there would be a change in the personnel of that tribunal and a different result might be reached. A motion for a rehearing would accomplish the same result, and then there is some talk about an appeal to the United States Supreme Court. In this connection it might be mentioned that the federal judge in this State held the Dispensary law constitutional in a case brought before him.

The general impression here is that Governor Tillman will call an extra session of the General Assembly to pass a new law, and then take it up to the Supreme Court, which, on July 1, will be Tillmanite in politics by the qualification of Justice E. B. Gray.—Picayune.

Remarkable Presentment by the Grand Jury.

[In order that our readers may know something of the beauties and felicities of saloon domination, we present the following from the Picayune, of the eighteenth.]

Grand juries recently have brought to light many striking facts of official disregard for law, but it is to be doubted if there has been anything more astounding than the presentment made by the Grand Jury yesterday in regard to the official failure to prosecute violations of the anti-gambling and Sunday laws.

The Grand Jury, having been instructed by the court to take cognizance of violations of the various statutes prohibiting crimes and misdemeanors, reported to the judge that there were on the records 14,425 cases of violation of the Sunday law; and of violation of the law against unauthorized lotteries, 916; and not one of these cases has ever been brought to trial. The report of the inquest concludes with the statement that "with due respect to your honorable court, we submit that the public mind is in no doubt that the several laws are being openly violated, but until we are encouraged by the trial of just one indictment in these particular cases, the Grand Jury will be slow to waste time which might be better employed than by adding to the pile of untried indictments already in the possession of the district attorney. The entire fraternity of law-breakers are banded together for self-protection, and, we fear, include some high in authority; but we hold ourselves in readiness to push further investigation as soon as the district attorney will try a single case of violation of either the Sunday, lottery or gambling laws."

This sworn statement by a high tribunal of investigation only confirms the opinion which the Picayune has often expressed, that, under existing conditions, no law can be executed against gamblers and liquor dealers. They hold, if not the whole, at least the balance, of political power in this city, and they are above any law they may choose to defy.

Millsaps College.

We are enjoying a most delightful revival at Millsaps College. Bro. J. A. Bowen, of Macon, Miss., in accordance with a promise made me at the last session of the North Mississippi Conference, is here and is rendering us splendid service. When I was a pastor I used to say that I would rather have Bowen to help me in a meeting than any man I ever saw, and I am of the same opinion still.

Everything is moving on well in our college work. The present session will close June 12. Rev. Dr. H. C. Morrison, our Missionary Secretary, will preach our annual sermon Sunday, June 10, and the Hon. W. H. Sims, of Washington, D. C., will deliver the annual address Tuesday, June 12.

The Preacher Ruling Men.

Eloquence has been justly defined as the art of ruling men's minds by public discourse. The orator is more than an interpreter; he is an antagonist; he wrestles with his audience and he wins his victory by bringing his hearers to think as he thinks, feel as he feels, and to act as he would have them act. The Christian preacher is a Christian orator. Anything falls short of the true idea of preaching that does not take it into account that the preacher is to win some victory over his congregation, that he is to rule their minds by his thought, by his spirit, his will blessed of God. Saul of Tarsus, upon the hill overlooking Damascus, was filled with the imperious desire of stamping out the Christians, and of conquering that city for his faith. When he became a disciple of Jesus, he approached every city whither he went to preach the gospel with a like ambition to conquer for Christ. He expected a contest, but his heart was set on winning a triumph for his Master. If modern preachers lack in one thing more than another, it is in their failure to regard sermons as battles, and in their willingness to be satisfied with something less than bringing the minds of those who hear them into captivity to Christ.

If we accept this as the true idea of preaching, the preacher must be a man of fixed personal conviction. No man can rule another's mind without knowing his own mind. It is no wonder that men who do not know what they believe fail as preachers. There is no reason why they should succeed. A few truths that a man can utter with the accent of conviction, that his own soul is burning to make other men see and acknowledge, will do more execution in a sermon than a whole system of theology that he has caught by hearsay, or in which he has merely a professional interest. Agnosticism robs preaching of its power. The wheels may buzz and whirr, but they strike no hour. A discourse does not rule men's minds unless the truth it expresses rules the speaker's soul.

With this conception of preaching the Christian minister should expect antagonism. If his hearers agree with him and think as he thinks and are acting as he would have them act, his sermon is needless. His business is to make men who are thinking wrongly think right, who are looking at things from a material point of view look at them from a spiritual point of view, who are selfish and world-loving, self-denying and God-loving. It is a hard thing to do, but that is his work. No man stands more in need of the unconquerable and conquering spirit than the preacher of the gospel. Everything is against him but the human conscience and the truth. The girded, vigilant, aggressive spirit that expects antagonism, but also expects victory, is the temper of the true preacher. It is no accident that the Apostle Paul in speaking of service for the gospel so often employs figures drawn from the soldier's equipment and struggle. "The world is against us, the times are unfavorable for the presentation of spiritual truth!" are the weak cries echoed in the newspapers and reviews. But if the servants of Christ are to wait until the world is for them and the times are favorable, they will never do much; of course, the world is against them and the times are unfavorable, but it is this hostile world and these skeptical times that men are to conquer for Christ.—Watchman.

We hear very encouraging reports concerning the pending local-option contest in Hinds county, Miss. It is thought by those who know the situation that the county will go dry by a very large majority.

NOTES.

A revival is in progress in Oxford, Miss.

Pastor Wynn has a meeting in progress at Parker Chapel, in this city.

Communications will not be needed in this office from now until the first of June.

One-eighth of the members of the General Conference are from the empire of Texas.

Bishop Galloway will deliver the commencement address at Albion College, Michigan, June 28.

Bishop Keener leaves this week for Louisville to attend the meeting of the Board of Church Extension. He will not return until after the General Conference.

The Georgia prohibitionists are making an effort to secure a straight-out prohibitory statute for the entire State. The campaign is being conducted on a non-partisan basis.

In accordance with a resolution passed by the District Conference, most of the preachers of the New Orleans district preached last Sunday on "Christian Education."

The New Orleans Preachers' Meeting will send a memorial to the General Conference, looking to a more equitable distribution of the funds raised for the support of superannuates.

A general strike has been ordered by the "United Mine Workers of America." As this organization has a membership of three hundred thousand, lively times may be expected in mining circles.

Bishop Galloway preached last Sabbath at Bardstown, Ky. After the meeting of the Board of Church Extension he will hold the Dyersburg District Conference before going to Memphis.

A former editor of the ADVOCATE required or requested that field notes should be written on postal cards. The object, of course, was to insure brevity. We wish to return to the postal-card system; and as inducement to the brethren to adopt it, we promise that all notes from the work written on postal-card shall have immediate attention. Longer ones will be published when we can make room for them, and that may be after a lapse of several weeks.

Bright's Disease of Kidneys.

ONE OF THE DISGUISED FORMS OF CHRONIC CATARRH.

Mr. J. Brake, Petrolea, Ont., writes: Four years ago I had a severe attack of Bright's disease which brought me so low my doctor said that nothing more could be done for me. When one of your lectures on the above disease was read to me I took Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin, and found it acted just as represented. In three months I was a well man, and have continued well ever since.

SYMPTOMS.—Dull pain in the back; scanty, high-colored urine, containing albumen and various sediments; nausea, and sometimes vomiting; puffiness of the face and feet; dropsy of the legs; shortness of breath and general weakness; pallor and dryness of the skin; chilly feelings, alternating with fever and sleeplessness.

TREATMENT.—A tablespoonful of Pe-ru-na should be taken before each meal, between meals, and at bedtime, and enough Man-a-lin at night to produce one natural action of the bowels each day. When the disease is of long standing heated Pe-ru-na should be applied to the back in addition to the above treatment, and the diet consist principally of milk and dry toast. Avoid liquors and tobacco. Send for free copy of Family Physician No. 2. Address The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio.

Woman's Work.

The district meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society, Meridian district, Mississippi Conference, convened at Enterprise, March 23, 1894.

The opening sermon was preached on Friday night by Rev. J. T. Nicholson, whose zeal and eloquence held the rapt attention of the large audience. The committee exercised wisdom in their choice of the minister for the occasion.

Saturday morning the society met in formal session. With Miss Sallie Smylie, district secretary, in the chair, aided by the prompt and efficient recording secretary, Miss Clara Black, the business was dispatched in a way to excite the warmest approbation of all present. In the afternoon the devotional exercises were conducted by Miss Lela McNemar, the young lady missionary who is being educated at the E. M. F. College. She won the hearts of the people by her modesty and dignity of manner. A discussion of Laredo Seminary followed. The fact of Miss Buntyn, of this district, being one of the teachers there, gave prominence to the subject. The interest manifested foretells great results to be accomplished in this field. In the evening a miscellaneous program was the order. The beautiful and heart-felt address of welcome read by Mrs. Evans was responded to by Miss Blanche Buntyn, of Meridian, in an impressive style. Mrs. Powe gave a reading which added much to the pleasure of the occasion. Miss Smylie's address to her co-laborers was replete with facts, words of encouragement and exhortation, which gave an impulse to yet higher and nobler works.

Sunday was a day never to be forgotten. The able and soul-stirring sermon by Rev. T. B. Holloman and the love-feast in the afternoon bore evidence of the presence of the Spirit in power. A Bible reading at night; recitations beautifully rendered by Miss Montgomery, of Daleville, and Miss Mabel Gulley, of Meridian; a strong and well-written paper on the outlook of missions by Miss Agnes Carlsman, of the E. M. F. College—and a collection—brought to a close one of the most pleasant experiences of our lives.

Too much praise can not be accorded Miss Smylie for her untiring energy in working up the missionary interest in Meridian district. What a potent factor is a quiet woman at the helm!

Revs. I. L. Peeples, B. F. Lewis, H. W. Van Hook, and Rev. Mr. Marshall cheered the ladies by their presence and assistance.

Mrs. Lillie Shipman, fraternal delegate from the North Mississippi Conference, brought a message of love from those who are sisters in the same great cause.

All of the delegates and visitors were unanimous in their opinion that this was one of the most successful and enjoyable Conferences ever held, and that no place has more cordial and hospitable people than dear, old Enterprise.

VISITOR.

Our Pianos and Organs.

The musical instruments which we are offering as premiums are manufactured by the Williams Piano and Organ Co., Centerville, Iowa. This is a large establishment which has branch offices in other cities. The descriptions we give of the instruments are taken from their catalogue. Our subscribers may write to them for catalogues and prices, if they choose. We will give them as good terms as they can get from the manufacturers themselves. Notice that if the requisite number of subscribers can not be procured, the instruments can still be had. Get as many subscribers as you can, and then write us for terms.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

Dr. M. G. Williams, late president of Athens Female College, a member of the North Alabama Conference, died a few days ago in Athens, Ala.—Alabama Advocate.

"I have never owned a dollar in my life that I would not be willing for the angels to see," said a rich man who loved his Master, and followed the Golden Rule in his business.

Col. J. W. Nicholson, president of the Louisiana A. and M. College, was a welcome caller a few days since at the ADVOCATE office. He was passing through the city en route to the Confederate Reunion at Birmingham.

Some time in January last, Col. Shoemaker, a Methodist and a philanthropist, died at Gate City, Va. He gave $5,000 to build an academy at Gate City, and $45,000 more—his entire fortune—as an endownment fund to educate poor boys and girls.—Holston Methodist.

Mrs. E. E. Wiley, of Emory, Va., passed through the city last week, returning from a very successful trip South in the interest of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society of our church. She organized about 30 societies, and revived many that were lifeless.—Holston Methodist.

The congregation of the First Methodist Church have granted their pastor, Rev. Dr. J. C. Morris, a leave of absence for several weeks. He will spend the time in Europe, and will be accompanied by his youngest daughter. Dr. Morris needs the vacation as a means of recuperation.—The Age-Herald.

The St. Louis Advocate has changed its form. It now appears as a sixteen-page paper, the size of the page being near that of the Nashville Advocate. A sheet of this size is more convenient to handle than a larger one, and for this reason is preferable. The quantity of reading matter is the same as before. We congratulate the publisher and editor on the improvement.

Bishop Wilson, in a letter to the Arkansas Methodist, approving of Summer normal schools for young preachers, says: "They will learn how to study—often quite as important as to know what to study. They will get a higher appreciation of the value of the course, and will be moved to a wider range of reading by the suggestions and incentives of their intercourse with other students, and from the counsels of the director of their work."

E. W. Cole, Nashville, Tenn., requests the papers of our church to copy the following notice: "We are authorized to say that delegates and visitors to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to convene in Memphis, Tenn., on May 3, 1894, will be charged only one fare for the round trip. That is, they will pay full fare from the place of starting to Memphis, and receive from the agent at the railroad at such place a return ticket from Memphis. This arrangement holds over all railroads east of the Mississippi river, and south of the Ohio and Potomac rivers."

Everybody should read "From the Ball Room to Hell," a wonderful book. Price, 25 cents. Order of Religious Book Co., Ltd., No. 9 Chartres St., New Orleans.

An Appeal to the Young People of Mississippi.

Dear Young Friends: Millsaps College needs a large hall for young men of limited means. We must build it. The hall is a necessity. Would it not be a handsome work for the young Mississippians to furnish the agent with money to build this hall? If we can get at the work right, we can do it. I want the young Methodists of Mississippi to send me five thousand dollars. Let us go to work in earnest. Let the young people from five to twenty-one years of age send me from fifty cents to one dollar each. Let every church and community be represented. The name and amount will appear in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. May our Father inspire your hearts, dear young friends, to help us build this hall! Let me hear at once from you. Your friend,

I. W. COOPER.

Jackson, Miss.

P. S.—Remember Major Millsaps duplicates every cent you send.

Masons and the Liquor Traffic.

We have received a number of replies to our recent query in regard to the action of the Mississippi Grand Lodge of Masons concerning the liquor traffic. Of these we select the following for publication:

MR. EDITOR: I see in ADVOCATE, of April 5, you are requested "to correct a statement made . . . to the effect that a liquor dealer can not be a Mason in the State of Mississippi," and declaration "that there are instances of a dealer's occupying high position in a masonic lodge in Mississippi." I transcribe rule adopted by the Grand Lodge of Mississippi, February, 1892, and now the law governing throughout the Grand Jurisdiction of Mississippi.

"Rule—It shall be an offense against Masonry for any Mason, not now so engaged, to hereafter engage in, or for any Mason now engaged in, to continue in the business of selling intoxicating liquors to be used as a beverage, after the first day of January next, and the penalty therefor shall be expulsion." (Vide Grand Lodge Proceedings, 1892, page 37.)

Very much valuable information, for all who desire to know the truth, found in the "published proceedings."

Yours truly, J. A. B. JONES.

Bolton, Miss.

This is official. Still we are informed that there are liquor dealers in Mississippi who occupy high official position as Masons.

Grenada Collegiate Institute.

The Board of Trustees of Grenada Collegiate Institute met, on April 17, to elect a president. Rev. T. J. Newell, who has so faithfully served in that capacity for the past twelve years, had declined to be re-elected.

All the members of the Board were present except Dr. J. W. Sharp and Mr. R. P. Lake. All the interests of the school were carefully and prayerfully considered.

After a free exchange of views, and full conference about all the interests involved, and the field to be cultivated, the Board unanimously elected Rev. Jno. W. Malone and Rev. W. M. McIntosh to the presidency. These brethren, jointly, assume all responsibility for the management of the school. Bro. Malone will have charge of the boarding department, and, assisted by expert teachers in each department of instruction, will have personal supervision of the entire school. Bro. McIntosh will be in the field working in the interests of the school.

Each of these brethren is specially qualified for the work he undertakes. They only ask the earnest co-operation of the preachers and members of the Methodist Church, especially in the North Mississippi Conference, to build a great school on the foundation which has been laid so broad and deep by Rev. T. J. Newell. Let our people at once rally to their assistance, for they are in every way worthy of confidence and support.

The girls in the boarding department will be under the immediate care of Mrs. Malone. This is sufficient guarantee for their comfort and safety. The building will be thoroughly overhauled, and we hope to have every room filled for the next term.

Important to Pastors in the Mississippi Conference.

DEAR BRETHREN: By reference to the report of the Sunday-school Board in the Minutes of our last Conference you find, "Programmes for Children's Day will be furnished only upon application to the secretary by the preacher in charge." We are prepared to furnish programmes free to the pastors who apply for them; but, by the above condition, I can not respond to the application of any but the preacher in charge. So, brethren, please take notice and send me your applications for Children's Day programmes at once.

Your servant in Christ,
H. M. ELLIS, Secretary.

Notice.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Columbus district, North Mississippi Conference, will meet in West Point, Miss., May 1, 1894, at nine A. M. Mrs. Dear, Conference president, will preside. It is hoped that all delegates will be present.

IN paint the best is the cheapest.—Don't be misled by trying what is said to be "just as good," but when you paint insist upon having a genuine brand of

Strictly Pure White Lead.

It costs no more per gallon than cheap paints, and lasts many times as long. Look out for the brands of White Lead offered you; any of the following are sure:

"Southern," "Red Seal," "Collier."

FOR COLORS.—National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors.

These colors are sold in one-pound cans, each can being sufficient to tint 25 pounds of Strictly Pure White Lead the desired shade; they are in no sense ready-mixed paints, but a combination of perfectly pure colors in the handiest form to tint Strictly Pure White Lead.

Macon, Miss.

The revival at Macon closed last Sunday. Bro. McIntosh left on Wednesday morning, but the meeting continued, Bro. Bowen being assisted by Revs. D. L. Cogdell, of Brooksville, and Geo. H. Thompson, of Landerdale. As a result the Episcopal Church will receive two accessions, the Presbyterian five, the Baptist six, and the Methodist thirty-three. In addition to this numerical increase in the churches, there is a large spiritual increase. Backsliders have been reclaimed, prayer meeting and Sunday-school are filled, family altars established, Bibles are more used and prayers multiplied.

Bro. McIntosh has the faculty of uniting Christians of all denominations in the common work of saving souls upon the broad basis of the risen Savior, where all can stand on equal terms and forget differences. When clustered around this common center Christians have no conflict, and harmonious accord prevails until they fly off on some tangent of immaterial theology. Bro. McIntosh preaches the necessity of conviction for sin, which he explains as simply a knowledge that one is living in sin; of repentance, of confession, of faith and acceptance, and of the witness of the Spirit, and he sends these truths home to the hearts of his hearers. But the great point in the success of his preaching consists in his faith in the power of prayer, and his assurance of having definite prayers answered, and he insists on his hearers having this same faith and importuning till the same assurance comes. Our community is left in a higher religious condition by his visit.

Once More, and Lastly.

We would kindly remind the pastors and Sunday-school superintendents of the North Mississippi Conference of the near approach of the time to observe Children's Day. Let us do all we can to make the children happy by giving them the benefit of the only day in the year in which they are given the first place in the service of the church. This can be done by having the service at a popular hour and giving publicity to the occasion, so as to secure a large attendance. The programme embracing sixteen pages, prepared by our Sunday-school editor, is a thing of beauty and should be seen by all of our children. We have it free of charge, for all who will use it as by law provided. Will those who have not yet done so, send me their orders at once for what they need, and let us have a general observance of the day.

Report the whole amount collected to Rev. O. L. Savage, treasurer, Indianola, Miss., or to myself, and we remit the ten per cent. to the General Committee. Those neglecting to thus report will be charged for the programmes used at the rate of sixty cents per hundred.

Our church in Melville, La., was wrecked on last Saturday, the fourteenth instant, by a cyclone.

This congregation has been noted for its liberality and charity towards others. They need help in rebuilding. Let Bros. J. M. Johnston and C. R. Godfrey, former pastors, who know them well, come up to the help of this people. They are already beginning to rebuild.

TEMPERANCE LESSON.
(Prov. xxiii, 29-35; I. Cor. viii, 1-13.)

Reliable statistics show that intemperance increases. Its increase is more rapid than that of our population. It requires much wisdom successfully to battle against it.

1. Intemperance is one of the greatest evils in the world.

(1) It causes a wicked wastage of money. Enormous sums of money spent for ardent spirits.

(2) It wrecks many happy homes. It blights the prospects of millions.

(3) It precipitates many into a premature grave.

2. It is a mistake to suppose that alcoholic stimulants add to man's physical strength.

(1) They simply stimulate existing physical resources; they do not add, but subtract from same.

(2) The stimulation increases temporarily the pulsation. A hurtful wear and tear. Are over-strung. Hence early decay. Extravagant use of our strength results in physical collapse.

3. Total abstinence should be practiced by all.

(1) Even temperate use of intoxicants elates and depresses in turn. Makes, hence, unfit for business. To succeed in business it requires cool heads—equanimity.

(2) There are some men so strangely constituted that the use of the smallest quantity of liquor deprives them of power of resisting intemperate imhibition.

(3) Call them weaklings, if you will; but they are found in large number. Abstain for their sakes. Away with liquor on their account.

4. The Bible inveighs emphatically against intemperance. I have place to quote only a few verses:

Eph. v, 8: "Be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess."

In our lesson: "Who hath sorrow?" etc.

Prov. xxiii, 21: "Drunkards . . . shall come to poverty."

I. Cor. vi, 10: "Drunkards shall not inherit the kingdom of God."

Chambers' Encyclopædia,

Complete in 30 Handy Volumes.
Over 12,000 Pages.

A reprint of the Edinburgh and London edition of Chambers' Encyclopædia, a library of universal knowledge for the people, with very large additions upon topics of special interest to American readers, giving American statistics of population down to and including the census of 1890.

Remember, this great Encyclopædia contains thousands upon thousands of articles, embracing all subjects within the limits of human knowledge; yet, in its more than 27,000 specially prepared articles, while giving pointed, practical, explicit and most interesting and instructive information both for the student and the general reader, it is free from ambiguous technicalities and comparatively void of the mass of scientific signs, symbols and foreign nomenclature which crowd the pages of most other cyclopedias prepared for scientific and professional use alone. The Philadelphia Press well says:

Do you ever want to post yourself easily and speedily, on some facts or matters belonging to the domain of Biography, Chemistry, Religion, Geography, Medicines, Health and Disease, Physical or Mental Recreation in Popular Games, etc.; Literature, Natural Philosophy, Astronomy, Agriculture, Mathematics, or any of the Arts and Sciences? If you do, avail yourself of this opportunity to secure a set of this great Encyclopædia.

GROWING OLD.

BY LUCY LARCOM.

Old—we are growing old:
Going on through a beautiful road,
Finding earth a more blessed abode;
Nobler work by our hands to be wrought,
Freer paths for our hope and our thought,
Because of the beauty the years unfold,
We are cheerfully growing old!

Old—we are growing old:
Going up where the sunshine is clear;
Watching grander horizons appear
Out of clouds that enveloped our youth,
Standing firm on the mountains of truth
Because of the glory the years unfold,
We are joyfully growing old.

Old—we are growing old:
Going into the gardens of rest
That glow through the gold of the west,
Where the rose and the amaranth blend,
And each path is the way to a friend;
Because of the peace that the years unfold,
We are thankfully growing old.

Old—are we growing old?
Life blooms as we travel on
Up the hills, into fresh, lovely dawn;
We are children who do but begin
The sweetness of life to win.
Because heaven is in us, to bud and unfold,
We are younger for growing old!

Keep Close to Your Children.

Blessed is that man or woman who never ceases to be a child! There is no better cure-all for physical ills; no cosmetic like it for wrinkles. For the young-old man or woman there are still what I call twinkles, love wrinkles, which laughter and good fellowship gather into corners of eyes and mouth.

We often see the child and his grandsire companions, but there is no reason why there should be a gap between, a long waiting for extremes to meet. Side by side mother and daughter, or father and son, or vice versa, may journey through life. The smooth pebble the child picked up from the bed of a brook is as worthy the attention of the father as the gold which in sweat of brow and strain of nerve he mines from the busy mart, and that childish hand holding the pebble may slacken the tension of nerve and wipe the sweat from the brow, while together they marvel over the bit of stone which the water, like a cunning workman, has made into a polished stone, no less a jewel, that man has not put upon it a market value. The true value of things is not always gauged by the man or woman. The child long ago found the philosopher's stone which turns the baser metals into gold. Alas, that man reverses the process and the true gold becomes the baser metal, and the wine of life the poison of death! The further we get from childhood, the greater distance between ourselves and God. It is quite common for us to speak of Jesus as a lover of children, but do we not forget that God had the father and mother heart? May I be permitted to say that childhood was in the heart of God from all eternity?

Suppose we were to enter a house, knowing nothing of the inmates, and should find in every room something dear to the hearts of children; in the parlor, pictures of children, flower fancies, heads of animals, and in a corner a child's toy; in the library, children's books, as "Grimm's Fairy Tales," "Alice in Wonderland," or "Timothy's Quest;" in the dining-room, on the sideboard, a silver cup, marked "D. A. R., from Papa," and a baby's bib folded in a napkin ring. Climbing the stairs we enter a nursery, to see in one corner a swinging basket cradle, and a double crib, with its two downy pillows, and, perhaps, tumbled spread; would we need to be told there were children in the house? Would we not be certain that a father or mother heart, probably both, had prepared all things, beautiful and needful, for the children? God's world is a heaven for children. Men and women may pick flaws and quarrel with the creation, forgetting or ignoring the blasphemy of which they are guilty, but the child finds perfection, satisfaction, in cloud-land, earth-land, the water ways with their creature inhabitants, and almost infinity of productions, mineral and vegetable. Could the mind of God have planned all these without the thought of the child, who most perfectly enters into the kingdom of God? No wonder Jesus, who knew the heart of his Father, said: "Of such is the kingdom of God." He did not say "of my kingdom," but "God's kingdom;" yet we may remember also his words, "I and my Father are one."

Are we teaching our children, are we remembering ourselves, the tenderness, the lovingness of God? Have I wandered from my subject—Keep close to the heart of your children? I think not.

Man of business, living in office or store until home is scarcely more than a memory, woman in society, with children turned to the arms of a nurse for love as well as care, student of theology, seeking evidence of a divine revelation—as if the Creator needed human hands to certify of the existence of a God, woman of affairs, which term covers a multitude of good things, as well as needless anxieties and worries, come home to the hearts of your children. It may be ere you are aware, that you may find an answer to the question of Job, "Canst thou by searching find out God?"

When mother and daughter, father and son, are ready to sit down together, learning of each other the things each one is best fitted to teach, reverently drawing nigh unto God, "The peace of God which passeth all understanding" will brood over, and find a nesting place in our hearts and homes.—Alice Hamilton Rich, in The Interior.

To the Boys.

Now, then, remember that you have to work. Whether you handle a pick or pen, a wheelbarrow or a set of books, digging ditches or editing a paper, ringing an auction bell or writing funny things, you must work. If you look around, you will see that the men who are most able to live the rest of their days without work are the men who work the hardest. Don't be afraid of killing yourself with work. It is beyond your power to do that. Men can not work so hard as that on the sunny side of thirty. They die sometimes, but it is because they quit work at six and don't get home until 2 A. M. It's the interval that kills. Work gives an appetite for meals; it lends solidity to your slumbers, it gives the appetite appreciation of a holiday. There are young men who do not work, but the world is not proud of them. It does not know even their names, it simply speaks of them as old-so-and-so's boys. Nobody likes them, nobody hates them, the great busy world doesn't even know that they are there. So find out what you want to be and do, take off your coat and make a dust in the world. The busier you are the less deviltry you will get into, the sweeter will be your sleep, the brighter and happier your holidays, and the better satisfied will the world be with you.—Humane Herald.

Our Girls.

Our girls do not realize how much the happiness of home depends on them. The mother has been called the better-half of her husband, and I think our girls can be called the better-half of mama in more senses than one. Do not be too dependent on your mother for the direction on your ideas. Study them out yourself. If you have plenty of time on your hands, do not loll around, and wander from room to room after mama, but read awhile to grandma who is too dull-eyed to read to herself. Anticipate mama's wishes, ease her cares. Try and rise up to some one of the requirements of home every day. Come out of yourself and try not only to be happy, but make others so. There is something very beautiful about the affection of brother and sister. You can be a co-worker with mother in directing the headstrong boy into right paths; not by speaking unkindly; even if you feel vexed restrain yourself, and try to be pleasant—if you can not, then keep still. Better to say nothing than to speak cross. Respect your parents before the younger children. Make mother your confidant. It is heresy to think a mother's prayer is ever lost—a father's might be, but a mother's never. Do not forget that she prays for you.—Selected.

THE CHILDREN'S ROOM.

How peaceful at night
The sleeping children lie.
Each gentle breath so light
Escaping like a sigh!
How tranquil seems the room, how fair
To one who softly enters there!

Whose hands are those, unseen,
That smooth each little head?
Whose locks are those that lean
Over each pillowed head?
Whose lips caress the boys and girls?
Whose fingers stroke the golden curls?

Whose are the yearning eyes,
And whose the trembling tear?
Whose heart is this that cries,
Beseeching God to hear?
Whose but the mother's, in whose face
Love shows its sweetest dwelling place?

Her hopes in beauty bloom,
And heaven sends down its light,
Which lingers in the room
Where mother says, "Good night."
Soft treading by the sleepers there,
Her very presence seems a prayer!

—Buffalo Commercial.

Unpleasantness at Home.

Our moods as well as our actions are very much the result of habit, and very often, as we know, our most offensive habits get the better of us. It would matter less if we alone were the sufferers, but when they mean disappointment and unhappiness to others, especially those who are nearest and dearest to us, it is time to step before the mirror of self-examination and behold ourselves in our true light. The reflection would, undoubtedly, make many new and unpleasant revelations, and we would be a little surprised, perhaps, to see ourselves shown forth as victims of the habit of unpleasantness. It is no easy matter to overcome bad habits, for as they are usually the outcome of carelessness, they are left to grow unheeded until they unconsciously become a part of ourselves. Bad habits, like weeds, need no cultivation; good habits, like flowers, need constant attention. It is very easy for one to fine fault at home with things which ordinary courtesy and ambition for the good opinion of others prevent one from noticing abroad. In society we display, without effort, grace of temper and speech which at home are often shown only with the greatest difficulty. We do not mean to place outsiders above our own cherished ones, observing toward them courtesies, or favoring them with kindness, that are neglected at home, but the restraint of the outer world and the freedom of the family world being so diametrically opposite have had wholly different effects. We may have allowed ourselves to be carried on by these influences until we have established the habits of unpleasantness at home and pleasantness abroad to such an extent that life seems like one gigantic hypocrisy. We would hesitate long before reproving a friend for his ill temper, while at home we would speak of it with a frankness more forcible than kind; and we would turn away from a dinner at our own table when, had it been served under other conditions, we would regard our host with an amiable smile and swallow it with a most facile compliment. Of course we do not mean such rudeness, but it comes as the unconscious result of habits that, with a little care, need never have existed. The little reproofs must necessarily come now and then, and often are we prompted to utter the plain, unvarnished truth; but we need not growl it out, or say it in any way unkindly. Differences of opinion there may be and must be in every household. It would be very monotonous if all the members of a family thought alike. Good-tempered discussion and the mutual agreement to differ hurts no one's feelings. It is the want of self-control, shown in snappish tones, curt replies and sulky looks, that spoils the peace of mind of those who are subjected to them. For a person to come to table and sit buried in gloom throughout the meal, not vouchsafing a word or smile, or contributing in any way to the pleasure of those assembled there, shows a selfishness which is apalling and inexcusable. Away from home he would make an effort to be agreeable, and it is not less necessary because he happens to be in the privacy of his own house. Whatever be the provocation, rudeness is never to be excused. No well-bred man or woman allows a hasty word to pass their lips, for it jars upon the modesty and refinement of their natures. In the home, as in society, he never forgets his courtesy, and never ignores the rights of those in whose happiness he has so large a share. He never allows himself to become the victim of the habit of unpleasantness.—Detroit Free Press.

Household Religion.

Surely this is the only kind worth mentioning. That is, the religion which is not felt in the household from day to day, the religion which confines itself to the church and to Sunday, or to a certain round of outward observances, must be spurious. It certainly will not pass muster as genuine Christianity.

The sort of piety on which Christ puts his stamp studies the comfort of all around. It is full of sympathy, brotherly kindness and friendly aid. It is considerate for others' feelings and scrupulous about others' rights. It carries a cheerful countenance, speaks pleasant words, and abounds in little deeds of love. It does not forget that happiness is made up mainly of trifles, being not a single magnificent gem, but a mosaic composed of a thousand pieces. And it resolves to enroll itself in the number of happiness-makers, burden-bearers, who scatter flowers, diffuse sunshine, and take all possible pains to give pleasure.

Of what vital importance is it to every household that it be a shrine of this religion! How otherwise can the children grow up good? Of what use is right instruction by the preacher one day in the week, if it be offset by bad example at home six days? What avails a formal lecture from the parents now and then, if it be not emphasized by a consistent life?

Blessed are the children of true Christian parents, day by day drinking in wholesome spiritual food and strengthening moral nutriment! Blessed are the parents of Christian children, sending forth into the future prolonged influences for good, permanently represented on the earth by intelligence and virtue long years after they themselves have ascended to heaven! How miserable the estate of those whose names must go down to posterity linked with creatures of wretchedness, vice and crime! Too late for repentance do such behold the legitimate outcome of the absence of household religion.

Some have we seen whose own parents had left in their hearts and lives a precious legacy of Christian faith and love divine. Yet they themselves were not pious, and so were making a break in the chain, and defrauding their children of that boon which should have passed on without diminution. Those children had no godly influences around them, and hence in the hour of temptation would have no sweet memories to hold them fast, and in the stress of the world's conflicts they would be almost sure to deteriorate. An impaired vitality of virtue would probably be passed on in turn to their children, and so the stock would degenerate. How sad!

Let every man who is a man, every woman who is a woman, reflect very seriously on these things, and in some moment of sacred silence answer honestly one or two questions: Will your children have as good a chance as you had, not merely in temporal, but in spiritual matters? Or will they reproach you some day, and say that they have been robbed of the best part of what should have been theirs? Are you doing by them as you would wish to be done by? They have a right to receive from you an example of positive piety. It will be worth to them more than lands and golds.

Household religion—something which shall brighten the eye, sweeten the voice, check the hasty word, alter the impatient tone, make the brow smoother, the heart happier, and the home a paradise! This is what we need. May it grow and prevail mightily throughout the land in this year of our Lord 1894!—Zion's Herald.

Some one says that gentleness is the best dress for a journey, and is never out of style at home. It is the best oil to prevent friction, the best salve to heal bruises, the best provender for a long journey, the best testimonial to a good character.—Herald and Presbyter.

Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

A Great Many Children—have been cured of scrofula and other skin diseases—as well as thousands of grown people, by taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Every disorder that can be reached through the blood, yields to its purifying qualities. Besides, it builds up wholesome flesh and strength; not merely fat like Cod liver oils. A scrofulous condition of the blood invites Catarrh, Bronchitis and Consumption. We're all exposed to the germs of consumption, grip, or malaria—yet only the weak ones suffer. When you're weak, tired out, and debilitated, or when pimples and blotches appear—heed the warning in time. The "Discovery" sets all the organs into healthy action—especially the liver, for that's the point of entrance for these germs, then if the blood is pure, they'll be thrown off. There's no risk. If it fails to benefit or cure in all cases of impure blood or inactive liver, your money is returned.

WARD—MAMIE ELIZABETH WARD (nee Shrock) was born June 3, 1859, and died Feb. 13, 1894. She was married to Mitchell Emmett Ward, in Shrock Chapel, Oct. 7, 1892.

She was a devoted and affectionate wife and an equally affectionate daughter. Since her mother's death, some years since, she has been the stay and comfort of an aged father and the pride of brothers and sisters. She also assumed the care and education of her little niece (Hallie Thomas), whom she loved with all the wealth of a mother's heart.

Her death is deeply deplored by all who knew her. She professed faith in Christ, and joined the Methodist Church at Shrock, several years ago, under the ministry of Rev. W. W. Williams. She was a Christian of the purest type. With her husband, she daily worshiped and honored God. She was loved and admired by all who knew her. For some time she had anticipated the coming of death, and talked freely of it to her husband, and tried to comfort him and prepare him for the great trial. She was ready and waiting. She has rejoined the sainted mother in the realms of endless bliss. May God comfort the bereaved husband and other loved ones! E. F. E.

ARMSTRONG—Sister V. S. ARMSTRONG was born Feb. 14, 1847, and died Feb. 22, 1894. She was a member of the Methodist Church, and in the same she proved a faithful and devoted Christian till death severed her relations to this life. She leaves seven children to mourn their loss. As a mother, Sister Armstrong was to her children a tender and loving shepherd. As a sympathizer to the distressed and lonely, she ever evinced the same by lending a helping hand. To the orphans in her community she was related to them as a mother, and in her some of the writer's own dear ones confided as a mother, and he, as her pastor, will ever preserve in memory's casket the kind welcomes and motherly kindness found under her roof.

To the weeping ones left behind we extend our prayers, and wish them all at last an unbroken whole in the land of unclouded day!

R. H. KIMBALL, P. C.

Alba, Texas.

HEMINGWAY—Little CORA HEMINGWAY, daughter of Bro. George L. and Sallie Hemingway, was born April 3, 1880, and died Nov. 27, 1893, after an illness of three weeks, which, resulting in a congestive chill, was the cause of her death. She was devoted and obedient to her parents, affectionate and kind to her brothers and sisters, and loved by all who knew her. She was a regular attendant on the Sunday-school unless prevented by sickness. She was baptized in infancy by Rev. J. H. McClain.

The writer found little Cora to be a true Christian during his pastorate of 1893, and the sweet memories of Bro. Hemingway's happy home will ever sweeten future life; but while in his home we shall never see little Cora again (blessed thought!), take consolation, little Mallie, Ida and Bailey, we shall meet on heaven's shore. R. H. KIMBALL, P. C.

Alba, Texas.

BARKSDALE—JESSE ERNEST BARKSDALE was born July 13, 1893; died March 20, 1894.

Little Ernest is gone. He did not stay long to gladden your hearts with his baby smiles; but, papa and mama, the little hands that twined themselves so lovingly about your necks a few days ago are now beckoning you toward the pearly gates of paradise; the dark eyes that looked so tenderly into your own are watching over you from angels' courts of heaven. Little Ernest was too bright and pure for this world, and he has crossed the great river into that better and happier land, there waiting and watching for loved ones. Wait yet a little, Ernest darling, we are all coming by and by. Soon we will meet thee at the beautiful gate, that swings ajar at Mercy's touch.

FLORENCE.

BRANING—The dark-winged angel continues to visit the homes of our people of the North Bend and Pine Grove communities. On Nov. 19, 1893, Bro. J. S. BRANING passed away to try the realities of an unknown world to us. Bro. Braning was born Feb. 3, 1861, and died Nov. 19, 1893. He was born and raised in Kemper county, Miss., not far from Hopewell Church. He had been a member of the M. E. Church, South, for several years. He said to the writer just before he died that he was not afraid of death, but was ready to go at God's command. On Nov. 20 we laid him away at Hopewell. He leaves a wife and three children to mourn their loss.

On Feb. 3, 1894, this angel of death again visited the same home and took away the infant babe, LOVINAVILIA. The little one was baptized last year by Bro. C. McDonald. Christ said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of Heaven."

May God bless that lonely home, and give Sister Braning grace sufficient to bear her deep afflictions! J. H. FOREMAN, P. C.

KNIGHT—Mrs. MARTHA J. KNIGHT (nee May) was born near Jackson, Tenn., July 21, 1841. When she was but three years old her parents moved to Yalobusha county, Miss., and settled near Water Valley. Here, at the age of eighteen, she joined the Methodist Church, South; but for a number of years was a member of the Wesley Chapel Church, Water Valley. In March, 1861, she married Henry D. Knight, who died in April, 1873, leaving her the mother of four children, two of whom survive her. In 1888 she moved to St. Landry parish, La., to live with her daughter, Mrs. J. C. Murray, at whose home, near Bayou Chicot, she died Feb. 21, 1894.

For some weeks she had seemed to have impressions at times that her race was nearly run; and while she was ever ready to go, yet she greatly desired to live to see her son who had been in Texas for some time, and would not return till May.

Sister Knight leaves many warm friends in this section whose unanimous testimony is that hers was a pure, spotless Christian character. May the grief stricken ones feel the influence of the Comforter, and be prepared to meet her again! JNO. B. KENT, P. C.

DAVIS—ANNA HULL DAVIS, daughter of Mr. A. H. and Mrs. M. H. Davis, of Rosedale, Miss., was born Oct. 16, 1892, and died Feb. 7, 1894. She was a bright, lovely little girl—a flower not full blown, though rare and radiant in its opening beauty. Plucked so early from its stem in the garden of this life, it now grows and blooms in the Eden above. Her father often remarked that she was too innocent and beautiful for this world—only fit for sunnier climes. His remarks proved too true.

She was a great joy to her fond parents, often entertaining them with her cute ways and playful sayings. Everything in the power of man was done to keep her a while longer in this world; but God knew best and took her to heaven. Into the home from whence she has gone Christ is come more abundantly. How hard would be the affliction if there were no Christ to comfort!

May the God of all grace comfort the bereaved parents, and keep them in the "hope of the glory to come," so that they may meet their darling in the bright world above!

A FRIEND.

FOULES—Died in Natchez, Miss., Jan. 15, 1894, RACHEL EVA FOULES. Her remains were buried in the country cemetery at Kingston, near her native home. She was a member of the M. E. Church, South, having joined during the ministry of Rev. C. W. Crisler at Kingston, three years ago.

Over a once happy home a cloud has fallen, and grieving hearts are confronted with a sad bereavement. She was so happy, so young, so cherished by friends and family, it seemed cruel in the dread destroyer to take her from the scene of happiness and usefulness. Full of hope and joy, the future lay bright and fair before her. She was popular and beloved for her sweetness of temper, cheerful nature and nobility of soul. In her home life her gentle, home-loving character was exhibited in all its beauty and affectionate kindness. So thoughtful, so considerate and unselfish was she, that her presence was like the smile of God in the household. To the grieving mother, sister and brothers is given the promise—"At eventide it shall be glorious light." A FRIEND.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

The day will come when men have grace
To know themselves, and sometimes take
An humble task, a lowly place,
And use it well for honor's sake.

The day will come when men shall know
That goodness only can be great,
That no man can be mean and low
Whose nobleness is his estate.

—Marianne Farningham.

I, A. C. Haffenger, do say consumption can be cured by Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. My mother, years ago, contracting a terrible cough soon became unable to attend to her household duties. Prominent physicians pronounced it incurable consumption. We knew of Dr. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and commenced giving it to her. Before two bottles had been taken an improvement was noticed, and by the time one dozen bottles had been consumed she was well, and has never been troubled since. We have recommended it to many and always have it in the house. For coughs, colds, croup, whooping-cough, asthma, bronchitis, it is without a rival. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

To reserve one's self only for great occasions—to wait for opportunities of doing good on a large scale—is not to copy our pattern. Life is made up of moments, so of trivial events, and evanescent scenes. We must seize the passing incident, or it is gone for ever. Individuals cross your path to whom you might do a kind office, or speak a kind word; if you do as your Master did, you will not despise the day of small things. An unexpected word of sympathy or counsel has penetrated many a heart, and made a life-long impression there.—Boardman.

Constitutional History of American Episcopal Methodism.

OCTAVO. 414 PAGES. Price, $1.50.

BY JNO. J. TIGERT, D. D.

Most Constitutional histories are dry reading, but this has interested me very much. I have been especially impressed by its vivid portrayals of signal events, its felicitous illustrations of the way in which the most important matters of ecclesiastical polity have been determined by the opinions and acts of individuals, and its omnipresent proofs of the Providential origin and development of Methodism on both sides of the Atlantic.—Bishop C. D. Foss, of the M. E. Church.

Few books have ever been issued from the presses of our Publishing House at Nashville equal in importance and value to this one. It fills a place occupied by none other. The scope of the work is full and comprehensive, and the subject is treated from beginning to end with rare ability. The publication of this work is timely. It ought to be read and studied by every intelligent preacher and layman of our Church. Particularly ought it to be mastered by every delegate to our General Conference.—Southern Christian Advocate.

From the care with which you have sifted statements, examined documents, and analyzed facts, I think you have produced a work which will reflect credit on your industry and ability, and entitle it to a place of a classic in Methodist literature, not to say ecclesiastical literature.—Bishop E. R. Hendrix.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the wedding of Dr. I. L. Leuchi, rabbi of Tonro Synagogue, was celebrated on April 22.

Small-pox has become so bad in Chicago that a house-to-house canvass has been ordered though the infected districts to find the hidden cases and isolate them.

The latest variety in the march of the industrial armies on Washington is the announcement that 800 Philadelphia workman, under command of a general of their own, arrived in Washington on April 20.

The Supreme Court of Louisiana, on April 23, decided the right of the Olympic Athletic Club to hold "glove contests" in its premises. The law forbids "prize fights," and permits "glove contests," without defining either.

The commissioners of Washington, D. C., have issued a manifesto to the different Coxey bands, warning them to desist in their purposes. It says it will do them no good to enter Washington. The laws of the district will be strictly enforced.

The wives of strikers attacked deputies at the Oliver plant, in Pennsylvania, on April 23. They charged the squad of men, using every missile and weapon except firearms. Numbers of women were felled with blows from maces and others were stabbed by bayonets.

Complaints are being received almost daily from sugar planters who have not been paid their bounty. The fact is, that the bounty division of the treasury department is about a month behind with the claims. That is, claims received a month ago have not been taken up.

A splendid monument is in preparation, to be paid for by the women of the South, as a memorial for the Confederate dead at Atlanta. It is to be a copy of the famous "Lion of Lucerne," wrought from white Georgia marble, resting on a pedestal of gray marble. It is to be 9 feet long.

The Commercial Cable Company is now engaged in laying another trans-Atlantic cable between Waterville, on the coast of Iceland, and Nova Scotia. The steamer Farraday started from London a few days ago with a part of the cable to begin laying it. The entire cable will be about 2,000 miles long.

The lawyers of the Senate are discussing the question of the constitutionality of the bill introduced by Mr. Hoar, and which has been reported back favorably for the suppression of lottery traffic through national and interstate commerce and the postal service. The bill prohibits lotteries within the jurisdiction of the United States, the carrying of lottery tickets, advertisements, etc., in the mails; the importation of the same from abroad.

There are strong indications of a desire among the Democrats of Congress for harmonious action on the Tariff bill. This is particularly noticeable in the House. The Democratic representatives now fully realize that their only hope of continuing in control of the House depends upon the passage of the Tariff bill, and the early adjournment of Congress—say by the end of June—so that members may have time to canvass their districts, and organize the Democratic vote for the Fall election.

The great coal strike, which has been pending for several months, was inaugurated on April 22. The strike will be confined to the bituminous coal regions of the United States. In this there are twenty-three districts organized, four being in Pennsylvania. The other districts are Washington, Wyoming, Indian Territory, Missouri, Kansas, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Ohio, Indiana, Colorado and Illinois. A Massillon (Ohio) special says that 3,000 mines in the United States will be abandoned. It is estimated that from 100 000 to 140 000 men have voluntarily quit work at the command of the Central Council of the miner's organization.

FOREIGN.

Two bombs exploded on April 22 just outside of the mayor's house in Liege, France. Nobody was hurt. Numerous arrests were made.

Greece has been badly shaken by earthquake shocks. Two hundred and twenty-seven persons are reported killed, and eight villages were almost wrecked.

A memorial to Tennyson is to be erected in the shape of a huge Iona cross. It will stand on the Isle of Wight and serve as a beacon, to replace the Nodes beacon. The spot was one of Tennyson's favorite walks.

During the past week the stringency in the money market in London vanished. Four months' loans were arranged at 1 per cent. discount. Rates for money also fell sharply and holders of three months' bills were so confident of a further decline that many of them refused to accept the present rate of 1 per cent.

A seizure of the personal effects of Admiral Saldanha da Gama was made recently by the government police. Among the papers found were documents, which the loyal papers print, showing complicity of the British and Portuguese officers with Da Gama to restore the monarchy, and expressing full sympathy with the rebels.

A dispatch from Berlin says that German colonial enthusiasts advocate the annexation of Samoa by Germany, but earnest men of calmer judgment earnestly advise the annexation of the islands by Great Britain or New Zealand, claiming that this will be the best guarantee of order and that it will probably save Germany both blood and treasure.

The English colony in Paris is excited over the action of the government in forcing Sir Edward Blount, who for thirty years had been chairman of the West Railway, to resign. The ground taken by the government was that Chairman Blount, by virtue of his position at the head of a great railway, had access to the plans of the government in the matter of mobilizing troops.

The Poisonous Acids

In the blood should be taken up and removed by the Liver and Kidneys, but these organs get out of order—fail to do their work—and the result is Rheumatism. There are a thousand remedies for the Liver and Kidneys, but there is only one cure for Rheumatism, and that is Dr. Drummond's Lightning Remedy. If you have the disease, send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and they will send to your express address two large bottles—enough for one month's treatment. Any one who is having an argument with the Rheumatism will feel fully repaid by the first dose. Agents Wanted.

Sam Jones Camp Ground.

The semi-annual meeting of the Sam Jones Camp Ground Association was held on camp ground, Tuesday, April 3, 1894. A large majority of the members of the association were present and an unusual number of visiting friends. The L. N. O. & T. R. R. officials kindly gave special favor by stopping trains at the camp ground during the day. The weather was propitious, and everything conspired to render the occasion one of memorable delight. According to established custom the ladies served in the hotel a bountiful and sumptuous dinner. The religious services were specially impressive, refreshing, and profitable. The annual sermon was by Rev. C. C. Miller, professor in that grand old institution, Centenary College. The divine presence and power characterized the services.

To prevent colliding with another camp ground association, who had magnanimously appropriated for their camp meeting our regular time—the full moon in August—we generously decided to try the dark nights in July this year, and then publish that hereafter we will hold to our original time—the first full moon in August—that all may take due notice thereof and govern themselves thereby.

Camp meeting begins this year Friday, July 27, and will continue ten days. By resolution a cordial invitation is given to all ministers friendly to the camp meeting. Special arrangements were made to secure important improvements for the comfort of all who attend.

Persons desiring information, or to select lots upon which to build, or to secure cottages, during the camp meeting, or for the Summer, or to secure rooms in hotel, address John F. Cressels, secretary, Gloster, Miss.

West Point, Miss.

Our people in West Point worshiped for the first time in the new church on the first Sunday in March. It was a glad day. All the churches joined on the joyful occasion. On Sunday, March 25, we began a protracted meeting. On Wednesday following Bro. W. M. McIntosh, of North Alabama Conference, took charge of the meeting, and conducted from two to three services a day for ten days. The Lord wrought much good through this earnest, consecrated brother. The preaching was plain, direct, searching, and the church was greatly benefited. Twelve persons joined on Sunday, April 1, and some the other churches; others still are to come in. Bro. Patton conducted the singing in this meeting.

FORGIVENESS.

BY WHITTIER.

My heart was heavy, for its trust had been Abused, its kindness answered with foul wrong.
So, turning gloomily from my fellow-men,
One Summer Sabbath day, I strolled among
The green mounds of the village burial-place,
Where, pondering how all human love and hate
Find one sad level, and how soon or late
Wronged and wrong-doer, each with meekened face
And cold hands folded over a still heart,
Pass the green threshold of our common grave,
Whither all footsteps tend, whence none depart—
Awed for myself, and pitying my race,
Our common sorrow, like a mighty wave,
Swept all my pride away, and, trembling, I forgave. —Exchange.

Prohibition in Atlanta.

The whisky men are trying to re-establish the sale of whisky in Jackson, Miss. The fight is on, and Bishop Galloway, with a strong force, is pushing the battle to the gates. A friend of the cause sends us a copy of the Jackson Evening News, of April 14, in which there is an editorial headed, "Prohibition a Failure." The editorial is made up of an array of statements about the failure of prohibition in various cities. Among them is this concerning Atlanta: "Taxes in Atlanta, Ga., increased forty per cent. in the first year of local option, and, in addition, the city had to sell $90,000 worth of stock to pay current expenses."

The brother who sends the paper asks us to give the facts concerning prohibition in Atlanta, which we are glad to do, not only for the cause in Jackson, but for the cause at home and everywhere.

If the other statements in the Jackson Evening News have no more truth in them than this about Atlanta, they may all go in a pile with the hundreds of other falsehoods that are doing service in the devil's cause. In the first place, we have lived in Atlanta for ten years, including the time of prohibition, which was a little more than a year from the time it went into operation, the year 1886. All these ten years we have paid taxes, and the same rate has obtained all the time. An officer in the city tax office informed us yesterday that the rate had been 1½ per cent. for fifteen years, or more. We know, too, that during the year of prohibition the city prospered in every line. Numbers of retail and wholesale merchants informed us that their trade had never been so good, and cash sales were far in excess of any they had ever known. The morals of the city, also, in spite of the "jug trains," were far above anything before or since. There was less crime of every sort. This would have been better still if the sale had been prohibited in the State at large.

As to the sale of property to meet expenses, Judge Hillyer, who was mayor during the time of prohibition, said to us yesterday that there was not a word of truth in the statement. On the other hand, at the close of that year there was in the treasury, clear of all expenses or liabilities, the sum of $225,155, the largest amount that had ever been to the city's credit. In his report, which is before us, he stated to the new council as he retired: "No new council ever began an administration with its treasury in as full and satisfactory condition." If that statement has ever been challenged, neither he nor this writer has ever heard of it. This, too, was after a year of large expenditures in public improvements. For instance, $125,570 for street paving, $39,934 for sidewalks, $22,139 for sewers, over $25,000 for public school buildings, $30,000 in retiring old bonds, and other large amounts in permanent investments, besides negotiating bonds to the amount of $168,000 on the old debt at lower rate of interest, which, if carried out as begun, would save the city $50,000 interest. The ex-mayor informs us that there was $50,000 worth of stock sold and put in the Georgia School of Technology, which had just been located here, and which the city had promised a large amount of help. It was simply taken from one place and put in a better place. This is, perhaps, the semblance of truth that gave wings to the above false statement.

But more than this. While at the end of 1886, with a population of 65 000 and a tax income of only $688,592, there was in the treasury the net amount of $225,155, yet at the close of 1893, after more than six years of whisky rule, with a population of 85,000 and a tax income of $1,947,777, and over two millions the year before, there was in the treasury only $253,237. An increase in population of only 20,000, and yet the expenditures were nearly three times what they were under the prohibition administration. How does that look for the excellency of a long license rule?

Again, at the close of 1886, after only a short period of prohibition sway, the retiring mayor said in his report: "The very high state to which you have brought the finances of the city readily suggests a marked reduction in the rate of taxation." He hoped that the new council would see its way to reduce the taxes, and in that happy event he wanted it remembered that the council of 1886 laid the foundation to that end and had the structure well under way. But, alas! for all; the whisky power assumed control the next year, and we have heard nothing more about reducing the taxes, notwithstanding the immense increase in the income of the city.

The real effects of prohibition are truly represented in the following sentences from Mayor Hillyer's report as he was about to retire. He said: "In this high presence I here bring the testimony down to date, that the city collectively was never in better condition than she is to-day, and that our people, as individuals, have very greatly prospered, both materially and morally, since prohibition was adopted; that their progress and improvement moves with an accelerated pace as time goes on, and the end of the year just closed found our people more advanced therein than ever before. I assert confidently that Atlanta has prospered more than any city in the State, and I think it highly probable that she has, during the last two years, advanced and increased more in houses built, in population, and in the general elements of prosperity, than any five of the next largest cities in Georgia that hold on to the bar rooms, put together. Is there any other city where they have bar rooms that has a surplus of over $25,000 in the treasury, on a clean balance sheet, at the end of the year, and can sell 4½ per cent. bonds at par?"

These are facts, and they accord with reason. No amount of testimony can make a rational man believe that money spent for whisky, destroying manhood, happiness and home life, can help the prosperity of any city or country.—Wesleyan Advocate.

Coxey's Army.

The newspapers, and mankind in general, have been for some time making merry over the daily marchings of Coxey's army of the unemployed. We are of the opinion that this is not a matter to be laughed about, and there are wiser men than ourselves who take the same view. We present below the views of Gov. Lewelling, of Kansas. Gov. Lewelling's utterances we clip from the Times-Democrat.

GOV. LEWELLING GIVES HIS VIEWS OF THE COXEY MOVEMENT.

Wichita, Kas., April 22.—Gov. Lewelling, of Kansas, has written for the Associated Press the following statement of his views of the Coxey movement, designed also for his official public expression on the subject:

"The Coxey movement is a spontaneous uprising of the people. It is more than a petition; it is an earnest and vigorous protest against the injustice and tyranny of the age. The demonetization of silver has been the last straw upon the backs of an overburdened and long-suffering people, and they have taken this method to protest and to assert their manhood and independence. The depth of this movement is not comprehended by the politicians of the old dispensations. It is awe-inspiring, and, believing as I do in divine interposition in the affairs of men, I can not fail to see an inspiration beyond mere enthusiasm. This body of men is not a mere aggregation of tramps. Some of the best blood and bone is enlisted, and the wonderful discipline, the patient suffering, the steadfastness of purpose, all go to show that this ghost of the 'hunger demon' will not down at the bidding of plutocracy.

"The followers of Peter the Hermit were a rabble of men, women and children. Here we see a vast army of untrained men, all under conscious and willing discipline. It is the marvel of the times, and foreshadows a change in the politics of the government of this nation. And what is more significant, the spirit of the times will demand fair play and just treatment of these men.

"The person or party that does them violence in this, their right of petition, will go down before a wave of public indignation which has never been paralleled.

"Here in Kansas the people should hold public meetings and petition Congress to afford the industrials food and shelter, and give a patient ear to their demands. If this is really a government of the people, shall Congress not at least give ear to such a mighty voice? If these men are an army of tramps and vagabonds, they are none the less representative in character; and if the government crucible has forced the people into pauperism and vagabondage, still the people shall rule, and thus the voice of vagabondage, representing the majority, must and shall be heard."

Children Attending Church.

BY GERTRUDE L. VANDERBILT.

The Rev. Dr. Strong, in The New Era, speaking of regular attendance at church, says: "Ideas of duty are not so strict now as formerly, and men, therefore, more readily yield to inclination. The present generation of young people have had a training very different from that which their grandparents, or even their parents, received. In most families the rod, like Aaron's rod, has budded and brought forth almonds and sugar plums of all sorts. Children are hired and coaxed instead of being commanded and required, and accordingly grow up to consult inclination rather than obligation. Attending church is not now commonly considered a sacred duty. People go if they feel like it; and for a great variety of reasons most people do not feel like it."

All who have had experience in church and Sunday-school work can testify to the truth of this. Children are not taught that to attend services of the sanctuary is a duty; to be present in the Sunday-school and to have the lessons thoroughly learned a privilege. On the contrary, this is left optional, and whether the child is present or absent often depends upon the presence or absence of some other child, or teacher, on some excursion, or entertainment—in short, upon anything other than a sense of duty.

"Shall you go to-day?" asks some member of the family.

Do the parents answer? No, the child decides. "I don't want to go. It is too warm." Or, "It is too cold." "Anne isn't going to-day, so I won't go." "My teacher won't be there to-day. She is sick."

The matter rests entirely upon the decision of the child, and is dismissed from the mind of the parent as if it were a question of going out to play.

Under such circumstances can we wonder that the child does not form the habit of attending church regularly—this being a matter of apparently so little moment!

The consequences involved in this negligence on the part of the parents are serious in the extreme. Whereas, formerly, parents and children filled their pew in the house of God, now many seats are empty, and instead of learning their duty from the lips of the minister, the children are reading at home, or gossiping with the children of their neighbors equally negligent. This is a fertile source of that Sabbath desecration which is becoming, alas! so general. We are drifting toward the continental Sunday; amusements fill up the time, and instead of setting aside these hours to learn our duty to God, they are, more than all the rest of the week, devoted to pleasure-seeking.

Many who tell you that they need rest on the Sabbath day stultify themselves by filling the hours with such activity that they are more exhausted at the close of the day than at the close of any other in the seven. It is not seldom that laboring men are unfitted for their work on Monday by their Sunday pleasures. And yet they will tell you that they need the day for rest! If the children were early taught to keep the Sabbath day holy; if it was taken as a matter of course that they should attend church on that day, the habit thus early formed would hold on through later years, and that which was done through habit would become later not only a duty, but a pleasure.

We sometimes hear it said that parents who have required too strong an observance of the Sabbath have made the children dread the coming of the day. There may be instances of undue severity on the part of parents, but they are rare. For the few children who have grown up in godly families with dislike to the requirements made upon them and the restrictions upon their pleasures for that day, there remain a vast majority who keep the Sabbath and reverence the sanctuary as their parents do, while the Sabbath breakers are recruited from the families whose inattention to the commands of the Decalogue has left their children to follow their own inclination as to church attendance.

If parents were asked if they wish to have their children brought up to obey the Ten Commandments, they would most emphatically assert that they expected their little ones to obey the laws of God. It would be almost in the way of an insult to ask a mother if she would be willing to have her child swear, steal, or kill! But she deliberately takes her choice which of the Commandments she shall obey, when she forbids them to steal, is horrified at the thought of a murderer, and yet entirely ignores the words of God, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

If parents would place their children under influences in the house of God, where they could be taught on the Sabbath day their duty to God and man, would not obedience to the rest of the law more naturally follow? As well expect the children to become wise and learned in secular matters without being sent to school as to expect them to become wise unto salvation without instruction in the law of God.

Instruction at home, in the church, in the Sunday-school, should be combined. None of these sources should be neglected, for we can not surround the children with too many barriers against the temptation with which everywhere they are beset.

We can not help raising a warning voice against that negligence and inattention of parents which seem to be so greatly on the increase, as we say to every father and to every mother: See that your children go regularly to church. Whenever it is possible, go yourself, and take them with you.

If you can not go yourself, at least see that the children go, and on their return home ask them what the minister said. Then when the sower goes forth to sow the good seed, some of it may lodge in the fresh soil of the child's heart and spring up unto everlasting life.—Christian Intelligencer.

David Dudley Field.

The Hon. David Dudley Field died at No. 2 Grammercy Park, New York, April 13. He had arrived from Italy only Wednesday before.

His father was for many years settled as the pastor of the Congregational Church in Haddam, Conn., and there David Dudley was born, Feb. 13, 1805. He was the eldest son of this famous family. At the age of sixteen he entered the Williams College, and four years later he began the study of law. In 1828, three years later, he was admitted to the bar in New York City, and there he soon made his way to the front of his profession. He never left the place he early gained.

David Dudley Field was one of the few lawyers who have devoted great talents and enormous labor to the reforming of the law itself and the simplification of the methods of the courts. He was soon impressed by his own experience with the necessity of improvement in the way of transacting legal business. He found the old rules and forms which were patterned after the English model very slow, cumbersome and expensive. Accordingly he set to work, with something of the same enthusiasm and the same indomitable perseverance which characterized his brother's struggles in the laying of the first Atlantic cable, to bring about a radical change for the better. To that task he gave much of the best part of his life and his highest powers, which were prodigious.

In 1839 he published his first essay on the improvement of court procedure, and he continued to press the need of this reform upon the people of his State until, in 1847, he was appointed by an act of the New York Legislature as one of a commission to devise ways of reforming the methods of practice in that commonwealth. The work of the commission occupied two years, and the result was the drawing up of two codes, one civil and the other criminal. The civil code devised by this commission, and known as the Field code, was adopted, in great part, by the New York Legislature, and the improvement was so great and apparent that it has since been followed by more than half of the States. The Field code is the base of the legal reforms embodied in the Judicature acts of the British Parliament, and it has changed the practice of the courts in India and other British colonies.

In 1857 the great lawyer was placed at the head of another commission created by the New York Legislature for the purpose of codifying the whole body of the law. This was an enormous task, but in 1865 the commission reported a civil code, a criminal code, and a political code.

In 1867 Mr. Field brought before the British Association for Social Science a proposition to frame an international code. This led to the preparation by the American lawyer of a complete work on international law, though he called it, modestly, if not accurately, "Outlines of an International Code." One of the most striking features of the code was the proposition to settle disputes by arbitration. This work has attracted wide attention. It was translated and published in France and Italy.

In 1861 he was a member of the Peace Conference at Washington, and in 1877 he was a representative in Congress. In 1890 he presided at the great Peace Conference in London. The famous jurist published many papers on questions of the day, from time to time, and he was the author of several books devoted to legal subjects. To the last he was active, alert, and public-spirited; a wonderful old scholar and reformer whom no country could well afford to lose.—Central Advocate.

A Wrong Practice.

There is a common practice of disparaging religion by making plausible statements which may be literally true, but which are adapted to suggest questionable things not expressed. We have heard people try to justify their neglect of the public services of the church by saying, "I can get more good from reading the Bible quietly at home than I can from listening to dry theological sermons and long prayers." This may be true in the case of the person who makes this statement, and yet the excuse may be a weak pretext for questionable conduct. Why should the church service be described by disparaging terms, which may be unjust, and the thing contrasted with it by commendatory eulogy? Are we to assume that the people who faithfully attend the religious services of the church are less interested in the study of the Bible than those who neglect the house of God? If it is a duty to "not forsake the assembling of ourselves together" for united worship, we are not absolved from this duty by doing something else. The preaching of the gospel and public worship are not things to be substituted for other duties, but divinely appointed means of grace in which we may receive inspiration for the duties of life. Even when the words of disparagement may be limited to formalists or hypocrites, the tendency of the whole is generally to disparage the church and its work. Setting one duty in rivalry to another, for the sake of disparaging one and exalting the other, is all wrong.

Sayings that are smart and plausible may be unjust and unedifying. A recent writer says, "There is more real religion in baking a loaf of sweet bread than in going to a church meeting and letting the bread get sour." To this a contemporary pertinently replies, "A very plausible remark, a glittering sentiment, but a ton of such superficial philosophy would probably not add an ounce to anybody's saintliness." Why is the letting of the bread get sour attributed to the one who attends church, and the baking of the sweet loaf credited to the one who is supposed to neglect going to a church meeting? Is not the woman who is faithful in the performance of her Christian duties as likely to bake the sweet loaf as the one who is indifferent to the well-being of others? Those who place some religious duty in unfavorable contrast with something they desire to exalt, should remember the words of Scripture, "These ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone."

In the same way, those who have some new theory to propose denounce those who cling to creeds and doctrines received from the past in a way that, while it literally condemns only the narrow and creed-bound, makes the impression that doctrinal beliefs are a matter of very secondary importance. To be the slave of human dogmas is a bad thing; to be indifferent to the importance of truth, and unduly ready to adopt new theories, is no better. We mention these simply as illustrations of this adroit and questionable way of seeking to gain acceptance for views that, if plainly presented, would be questioned and rejected. It is easier to meet a direct charge than to deal with something that is only insinuated, and leaves open a door of retreat for the accuser.

It is all right to urge the church to more self-denying work; but nothing is gained for the cause of humanity by caricaturing and disparaging the various Christian agencies that are laboring to relieve the bodily and spiritual wants of the world, in order to magnify the need for some new fad. These forces arrayed on the side of reform and purity may be imperfect, but they should be strengthened and improved rather than assailed with sneers of depreciation. Disparagement of the good that others are doing is a very cheap way of winning popularity from those who are seeking some pretext to excuse their own religious indifference. Everything said against Christian churches and Christian people gives comfort to the irreligious by making them feel that religion is a vain thing, and that though they "make no profession," they are as good as those who do.—Exchange.

Rothschild's Power.

The accession of Lord Rosebery to the premiership of the British Empire increases the prestige of the famous banking-house of Rothschild. Lord Rosebery has been identified with the latter ever since his marriage with Miss Hannah Rothschild. She bequeathed to him her vast fortune when she died; but it remains in the hands of the Rothschild firm. Not a dinner party does he give but that one of the Rothschilds is present; and his political power and social prestige are increased a hundredfold by the knowledge that he has at his back the inexhaustible resources of the Rothschilds, who control the finances of nearly every Continental country. At Paris they have one of their co-religionists and adherents, M. Raynal, who is minister of the interior and possessed of the most extensive executive powers in France. In Italy it is a member of their race again, Sig. Sonnino, who is a minister of the treasury. At Vienna and at Pesth their word is law at the ministry of finance. At Brussels, King Leopold does nothing without consulting M. Lambert, the son-in-law and representative of Baron Alphonse Rothschild, while in Portugal and Spain the treasury is bankrupt, and there is no Jew at the head of affairs. —Jewish Times.

An interesting trial of a kind rarely known in this country was begun on April 9 in Omaha, Neb. It was that of the Roman Catholic Bishop, Bonacum, of Lincoln, on a great number and variety of charges, comprising "Maladministration, tyranny, oppression, insubordination, inciting strife, slander and libel, arbitrary exercise and abuse of power, violation of diocesan statutes, misappropriation, falsehood, speculation, undue influence, unjust favoritism, scandal, gambling, and incitation to perjury." Over one hundred priests and nuns and laymen were present to testify at the trial, but the trial did not take place on time, for Archbishop Hennessy, after hearing the charges, dismissed them, and refused to proceed with the case. The priests who made the charges against their Bishop have issued an address justifying themselves. They say: "If the priests could not substantiate their charges, they were guilty of calumny, and should be punished, and for this they stood ready, fearlessly and undaunted. He has assailed and outraged the priests, nuns and laity in this diocese, and his abuse of power will and must not be passed over until satisfaction is made in full." It is understood that an appeal will be made to the papal delegate.—St. Louis Advocate.

"A LITTLE TALK WITH JESUS."

A little talk with Jesus—how it smoothes the rugged road!
How it seems to help me onward when I faint beneath the load!
When my heart is crushed with sorrow, and my eyes with tears are dim,
There's naught can give comfort like a little talk with him.

I tell him I am weary, and I fain would be at rest;
That I am daily, hourly longing for a home upon his breast;
And he answers me so sweetly, in tones of tenderest love,
"I am coming soon to take thee to thy happy home above."

And this is what I'm wanting—his lovely face to see;
And (I'm not afraid to say it) I know he's wanting me.
He gave his life a ransom to make me all his own,
And he can't forget his promise to me, his purchased one.

I know the way is dreary to yonder far-off clime,
But a little talk with Jesus will while away the time;
And yet the more I know him, and all his grace explore,
It only sets me longing to know him more and more.

So I'll wait a little longer, till his appointed time,
And glory in the knowledge that such a hope is mine;
Then in my Father's dwelling, where "many mansions be,"
I'll sweetly talk with Jesus, and he shall talk with me. —Anonymous.

Brookhaven District.

The Preachers' Institute of the Brookhaven district was formally organized, on April 13, by the adoption of a Constitution and the election of a secretary. The Constitution recognizes the presiding elder of the Brookhaven district as president, and Rev. M. L. Burton, of McComb City, was unanimously elected secretary.

The times of meeting were set for April and October of each year. Its membership is to consist of all the traveling and local preachers of the district and such laymen as shall desire to obtain the benefits of the institute. Its object is to discuss the doctrines and polity of the M. E. Church, South, and afford a better opportunity for cultivating brotherly love.

A trial of the institute was made April 12 and 13. "The Importance of Doctrinal Preaching" was the first topic. It was agreed that the great doctrines of our church ought to be preached not only in every sermon, but that whole sermons should be given to each doctrine, and that "A preacher can not become a hobbyist as long as he preaches all our doctrines."

Bro. Norsworthy gave us a most excellent paper on "The Administration of Discipline." His points were so well made that every person present endorsed them. The object of discipline is to save the soul of the offender. Violations of law, whether by rich or poor, young or old, are not to be winked at; but a kind, gentle following of the course prescribed in the Discipline is to be pursued. Few trials will be necessary where the preacher is faithful. The subject of withdrawals in connection with discipline was discussed at this point. It seems to be the sentiment of the institute that in scandalous cases the quiet withdrawal of the guilty party or parties is to be preferred to a church trial. Bro. H. P. Lewis was detained at home, but sent an article on this subject which breathed at once a spirit of loyalty to God and the church, and a spirit of brotherly kindness to the offender.

After all had spoken, it was clearly seen that we, as a body, were in perfect agreement. The administration of discipline would be uniform if we only understood one another better. There is no preacher in the Mississippi Conference to-day who would retain, on the church-roll, the name of a brother which stands at the same time on a whisky petition. In other equally open violations of law it ought to be possible for us to pursue the same course.

A paper on "Pastoral Visiting" was read by Rev. T. L. Mellen. It takes health, common sense and religion to make a good pastor. In his own way the author developed this thought to the edification of his hearers. The benefit of the work to the pastor and to the people, as well as the question, "What constitutes a pastoral visit?" received a thorough ventilation.

The most absorbing topic was, "What Is It to Keep the Sabbath, and Do We Thus Observe It?" The opening paper by Rev. W. T. Griffin was one of unusual merit, and went to the bottom of the question, "What is it to keep the Sabbath." The Sabbath is older than Moses, and ranks in dignity and authority with the other commandments delivered on Sinai. One-seventh of our time is God's. We can not use any part of that time for our own purposes. It was designed as a day of rest, a day of communion with God. Its authority has been vindicated from the beginning of history unto the present day. Punishment for its violation is certain. No matter what others may do, our business is to do right and set a good example by obeying God. The paper of Rev. M. L. Burton answered the question, "Do We Thus Keep It?" It has never been the privilege of this scribe to hear a clearer or more manly sifting of the whole question. This district is sorely tempted to break this commandment. McComb City, with its hundreds of railroad employees; Brookhaven, the end of a freight division; all the country from Jackson to Osyka busily engaged in trucking, this subject is to us of vast importance.

For twenty years the laboring classes of America have been calling on the church to give them a day of rest, and for answer our railroads, street cars and public conveyances are given more to do on the Sabbath than any other day of the seven. Tired of waiting, these men have covenanted together not to vote for any man who will not pledge himself to vote for a Sabbath for all men. When these men get their Sabbath, as get it they will, what influence will the church of God exercise over them? Never before have we heard such a deliberate, mathematical answer to the assertion, 'Trains run anyhow." It was shown by undeniable proofs that trains are not run anyhow, but are run for revenue. Sunday travel, mail, newspapers, and all the other common violations of the command, were discussed; yet for lack of time it was decided to carry the question over to the next institute.

The preaching was spiritual, the praying seemed to bring earth and heaven very near together, and every man went down to his work strengthened in the Lord.

JOHN W. CHAMBERS.

Miss Lusita Roldan.

I think it was in the latter part of 1879 when Lusita Roldan was placed by my husband in charge of the girls' school connected with our mission in the City of Mexico. This school was mainly supported by the Woman's Missionary Societies of the various churches of our denomination in New Orleans. She had come to us with the highest recommendations from members of the Church of Jesus, in whose mission school I think she had been both as a pupil and teacher. We found her to be all that had been said of her; refined and dignified in manner, and possessed of a mind and character singularly strong and well developed for one of her age. She seemed at that time to be about eighteen years old, with a pleasant face lighted up by the dark and expressive eyes so often found in Mexican women. The school was then held in the room adjoining the chapel of San Andres, and had an average attendance of about thirty girls, ranging from six to sixteen. They were the daughters of the members and preachers of our church, together with a lot of little waifs gathered in from the lowly homes of the very poor in that portion of the city. Such a school is a trying one at best; but Lusita patiently and faithfully labored with them in lessons suited to their capacities, in books, music, and needle-work of various kinds. On Sunday mornings she took part in the exercises in the Sunday-school and regular church services, lending her voice, which was sweet and well trained, to aid us in our service of song.

In the Spring of 1880 Miss Charlotte Halloran, the representative of the New Orleans societies, arrived in Mexico, and immediately entered the school-room, taking charge of the little ones, and, as she laughingly said, "in teaching them to read, she taught herself to spell in Spanish." She left to Lusita the heavier teaching, until she had time to master the Spanish language. During this period, when Lusita was gradually passing from the position of principal to that of assistant, I do not remember to have ever heard of the slightest friction, or any complaint on either side. A strong attachment grew up between these two devoted young women, and harmony and love prevailed in all their work with each other.

After four years' continued and enthusiastic school work in Mexico, Miss Halloran returned to the United States, and some changes were made in the school; but in a short time it was found necessary to place it in the same hands and on the same footing, under Lusita's direction, as it had been four years before. Larger and more suitable rooms had been secured in a comfortable house on the same street, on the corner of the same block as the church, and here, with a steady prosperity and a hallowed influence, the school continued in its labor of love for many years.

During two of these years, 1885 and 1886 (and also a part of 1884), the gifted Miss Callie Halloran, the sister of our first missionary teacher, was induced to devote half her time to the direction of the school, retiring only when failing health warned her that her strength was not equal to the task. As in the former case, a warm friendship grew up between her and Lusita, and I have often heard her express her admiration for the noble girl who labored at her side.

During all these years I had the privilege and pleasure of attending many of the private and public sessions of this school; have even taught in it for a few days, when one or the other of its teachers was sick, and I know what I say when I affirm that it has been a blessing to our church and to the class of people among whom its labors were so abundant. I have seen girls who entered its walls, ragged, dirty, uncouth and illiterate, come out from under the training of its teachers, lovely, refined, intelligent Christian young ladies; some of them becoming teachers, others becoming the worthy wives and fit companions of some of the best preachers in our own and other denominations.

All honor to the noble young women who consecrated their lives to such a Christ-like life! Two of them, Miss Callie Halloran and Lusita, have "fallen on sleep," but "their works do follow them," and their memory will never fade, I am sure, in the hearts of those who knew and loved them in the bounds of the Central Mexican Mission Conference.

DELIA M. PATTERSON.

Missionary Board.

MR. EDITOR: Dr. West's reply to what he is pleased to call my "criticism of the action of the Missionary Board" is brief and in good spirit. He seems to think I have misunderstood "the object of the Board" in the distribution of the domestic mission fund. I think, however, that I know and appreciate the object. I see no reason why those "strong men" appointed to those favored missions should continue to draw three hundred dollars from the domestic mission fund every year after their works have developed into self-sustaining works. Why continue to appropriate $300 to these "strong men" at the expense of their weaker brethren after their works are able to pay, and do pay, $200, or more, above the average salary of the preachers of their Conference? I do not object to the policy of discriminating in favor of those places that promise largest and speediest results, but I do protest against continuing these large appropriations for the accommodation of the strong men when their works afford them a comfortable support. Let these strong men make an exhibit of their strength in liberality to their weaker brethren instead of clamoring for large appropriations, and their claims to strength may pass unchallenged. My contention is that no charge is entitled to an appropriation that pays its preacher $500, and furnishes him a house, rent free. If these strong brethren can not live on that, let them retire, or go where they can do better. I plead for simple, strict justice—that is all. D. G. W. ELLIS.

An Appeal.

Loesburg, the parish seat of Cameron parish, is situated on the east bank of the Calcasieu river, about one and a half miles from the mouth. The mouth of this river is now being jetied by the government for deep water; more than one hundred and fifty thousand dollars having already been appropriated for the purpose; and while we wait for an additional appropriation of some eighty thousand dollars to pass the House, the public are anxiously awaiting the results. We now have a semi-weekly mail packet from here to Lake Charles, and with deep water, which we are almost sure of, a railroad and an influx of population, we will have a general boom.

The contemplated road (the Kansas City, Watkins and Gulf railroad) has already been surveyed and is only awaiting results at the jetties. The present population, inside of a radius of one mile, is perhaps less than one hundred inhabitants. Of this we have here a membership of thirty-five, with a much greater following.

The Catholics have a strong hold on the surrounding country and are now building a church in town. The only Protestant denomination holding service regularly here is our church. We have no church-building, but, through the courtesies of citizens here, we have the use of the court-house. While we expect to build at an early date, yet we can only hope to erect a small building, if we are shut up to our own resources. We have just closed a week's meeting, which was the outcome of our first quarterly meeting.

The presiding elder appointed a committee to raise funds and purchase a building site at once. The committee was composed of T. E. Gee (clerk of courts), Mrs. Mamie Suttles (Sunday-school superintendent) and myself. While we are using every effort to insure success, yet we have decided, through the church papers, to lay our enterprise before the public and solicit their aid.

This is a much-needed work, a place where the money thus invested will bring in sure returns, and a membership that will appreciate any favors thus extended to the cause they love so well. Should anyone in reading this appeal decide to help us, they can make their remittances payable to either of the above-named persons, or they can remit to me.

The Simplicity of Faith.

Faith works by love, and where our love is not simple, our faith is likely to follow in the same groove. Faber has said what many have proved to be true:

"If our love were but more simple,
We should take him at his word;
And our lives would be all sunshine
In the sweetness of our Lord."

Peter Bohler once said, "Our mode of believing in the Savior is so easy to Englishmen, that they can not reconcile themselves to it; if it were a little more artful, they would much sooner find their way into it." The same trouble remains. The simplicity of faith is staggering to great minds, and often to little minds as well. We do not come to our heavenly Father with artless simplicity, like children to their parents. Children live by faith. While they are entirely dependent for home and food, and clothing and protection, yet witness the perfect confidence they repose in their parents' ability to supply every need, they know not what it is to doubt, and consequently have no anxiety. They are really "careful for nothing." Ought we, as Christians, to be less confident? We should come "like little children," and with the same simple-hearted confidence. We should be free from that anxiety which unbelief induces and save our lives, our health, our food and raiment, our joys and sorrows, in the keeping of our great Provider.

If God removes a friend, or takes from us earthly treasures, or leads us into fiery trials, we should not complain of our hardships, chafe under our losses, and think ourselves more unfortunate or less favored than others. Our Father may mean all for our great good. But our little faith fails to trust him out of our sight. He takes away the present objects of sense that he may give us richer and better things to take their place.

"Pining souls, come nearer Jesus,
And, oh, come not doubting thus,
But with faith that trusts more bravely
His huge tenderness for us."

Work and Pray.

Some persons misuse prayer by asking this and that from God without using the means which he has ordained for bringing about that for which they pray. Though, perhaps, they would not do such a thing wilfully, they are really tempting God. God certainly intends us ordinarily to use the means within our reach, and it is on that use that his blessing comes, and it is on that that it may be sought. There was a girl at school who was rewarded for repeating her lessons well. When she was asked how she accomplished this, she said that she always prayed that she might do so. Her school-fellow said: "Do you? Then I will pray, too." But, alas! next morning she could not repeat a single word, whereupon she angrily taxed her school-fellow with having deceived her. "Perhaps," said her school-fellow, "you took no pains to learn it." "Learn it! learn it!" answered she. "I did not learn it at all. I thought I had no occasion to learn it when I prayed that I might say it." God is not the patron of idleness. He can work, no doubt, without means, and in many instances has done so; but in all circumstances of ordinary life he requires us to use the means which he puts into our hands. Jesus took the five barley loaves and two small fishes which were at hand, and blessed them, and then and there came the grand result. A blessing on the means when there are means—a blessing without the means when there are no means—this is what we may look for in prayer to God.—The Quiver.

The worshiper may expect spiritual enjoyment, but if that fail him, he may hope for some salutary lesson; or if he miss that, he may cultivate patience; or if that be not accomplished, there may be some reward awaiting him by and by; or if he hope not for that, there is at least a gain in being found in the company of church-goers. A man whose purposes and aims are all subordinate to the will of God, can find a hundred motives instead of one for serving God and keeping to the path of duty.—Teacher's Journal.

Do not wait for to-morrow to speak a word for Christ, let it come to-day. Speak to the one next to you. Pray for strength and courage and the right word to say. Do not let the opportunity pass. To-day's opportunities never come again. Look out for now. No matter whether we reach the results we wish or not, let us do the work. To-day we have; to-morrow we may never know. God needs to-day Christian workers.—Union Gospel News.

The number of young men who are able to pay for a good education, but who are contenting themselves with merely a business course, is alarming. Unless parents guard the interests of their boys at this point, the next generation of business men will be a set of thick-headed ignoramuses—the easy prey of every quack in the world of thought.—Texas Advocate.

Prayer for Preachers.

A faithful brother once remarked: "Whenever I go to the house of God praying for the preacher, I always get a good sermon."

There is much in this preparation of the heart. The sermons, doubtless, were mainly prepared before the prayers were offered. Some other hearers slept under the same sermons, while others criticised them severely. What was the reason that to Brother A they were a feast of fat things, while they did not keep Brother Bawake, and Brother C thought them weak or unsound, and Brother D said, "It is time we had a new minister"? The whole secret of the matter was in Brother A's coming to the house of God praying for the preacher. He came seeking and desiring a blessing, while the others did not.

The gospel is always relished by the spiritually-minded; but human hearts, like the shallow ground of the parable, are not always ready for its healthful reception.

How many professing Christians habitually think of the watchmen on Zion's walls, and pray for special grace that they may speak a word in season, and that it may fall into soil prepared for its reception?

I am not a preacher, but I can easily see how much advantage a preacher must derive from the prayers of his people, and from their devout attention to his public labors.

Let the people and the preacher go up to the house of God praying for the life-giving power to be imparted to all the exercises. So praying, we shall find much to learn, much to enjoy, and much to put our affections in a lively exercise, from any one whom God in his providence shall place over us.—National Baptist.

He Seeks the Lost.

Let us not forget that God's way for us may not be our way; and that when we have lost our own way, we may have been providentially led into the right ways of the Lord. Many a good man has found it so, his defeat leading him straight on to victory, perhaps through unpleasant and painful experience, yet by the only paths which have victory at the end of them. The defeated, good man needs to look to himself, to see how defeat has helped him. If it has merely made him wary and cautious, it has helped him. If it has disciplined his courage, and made him more thoughtful and trustful, it has done him good. After a crushing defeat, a great king said, "All is lost save honor." So after the greatest of defeats, a good man may say, "All is lost save faith," and feels as the king felt, that he keeps the best and most precious of his possessions. Unhappily, most of us need to be whipped at least once, and some of us many times, to fit us for successful warfare; for all fighting comes more or less under the apostle's rule, "The weapons of our warfare are not carnal." Even in an Indian the soul does the best fighting. So God's way for us may lead through loss and defeat to train us for gain and conquest.—Western Christian Advocate.

Tallsheek, La.

MR. EDITOR: We appreciated your presence and preaching among us. Can't you come again? We will try every time to give you a large and attentive congregation.

We rejoice to report our charge, under our much-beloved pastor (D. C. Rawls), in a growing condition. Through his influence and hard work we are blessed with an excellent school at the camp ground. Thank God for such a man!

We can not help from loving Millsaps College and its faculty for giving us the teacher we have. Can Dr. Murrah tell which one of the boys it is?

Sunday, April 22, was a day of grace to us. The Holy Ghost fell on the preacher and the people as we were being instructed from Psalm cxvi, 7, the subject being soul-rest.

Many of our people are quitting the use of coffee and tobacco. We are waging an aggressive war against every evil.

We hope to have many Christians from the city to spend the Summer in our community.

Our great holiness camp meeting will embrace the fourth and fifth Sundays in September, and, Mr. Editor, we expect you with us.

Yours in Christ,

OTTO STRATMAN.

Who Supports the Saloon Keeper?

At a labor meeting held in Chicago recently, Bishop Fallows said: "There are 6,000 saloons in Chicago, whose annual income is about $12,000,000 at the lowest estimation, and of this at least $8,000,000 represents the profits of the saloon keepers." Those $8,000,000 profits came largely out of the patronage of laboring men, who should have kept it for their own families, instead of robbing their families to enrich the saloon keeper, who is always last to render aid in hard times.—Evangelical Messenger.

Working for a Soul.

Not for souls. But for a soul. Only one. One at a time. Not by wholesale, but individually. Not indefinite souls in Africa or New Zealand, but one soul in your own family, in your own circle, in your own community. Work for a soul. Dr. Cuyler tells of a warm-hearted lawyer in his church who made up his mind to work for the conversion of a certain infidel in the congregation. He went to work deliberately. He was patient and persistent. He did not lack faith or wisdom. He was kind and gentle. His yearning after the soul of his friend brought a rare degree of Christ-likeness to his own life. After a while the infidel said to him in a half jest, "Mr. J——, you would better give me up as a hard case, and try somebody else." But the soul-hungry lawyer did not give up his friend. He gave himself all the more to his self-appointed work, and he did not cease his praying and working until his friend was soundly converted to God.

O, worker in the cause of the unsaved, pick out your one soul! Then devote yourself wholly to your task. Do not be diverted from your royal purpose. Let that one soul be constantly in your thoughts, in your prayers, in your plans. And it may be that sooner than you think, for God will grant you your heart's desire, One soul. Not a score. Only one. Pray for one. Plead for one. Work for one. Live for one.—The Epworth Herald.

Esteem Your Pastor.

When tempted to think lightly of your pastor, think of how much you are indebted to him for starting good thoughts, for inciting you to noble resolutions, for directing you into right channels, for helping you in every good work. He moves and sways you in ways you little imagine. No one rightly disposed can sit under the preaching of a minister Sabbath after Sabbath, and come under his influence week after week, without being more or less affected by what he says and does. His counsels, his warnings, his instructions, his prayers and his examples are more or less helpful and inspiring; and one must, in his thoughtful moods, trace to him much of the good that he does, of the resistance of the evil that he makes, of the stimulation which he enjoys, of the spiritual quickening which he receives, and of the better living he manifests from time to time. His faithful ministry is indispensable to individual and church life and development. It is foolish to talk against it, as it is possessed by you Sabbath after Sabbath. It may not be all that it ought to be and might be, but it is the best you have, and would be better if everyone encouraged and sustained it as he might and should do. Talk it up, not down, and note the increased benefit which you derive from it.—Exchange.

Hear what Washington said in his memorable Farewell Address:

"Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness, these firmest props of the duties of men and citizens. The mere politician, equally with the pious man, ought to respect and cherish them. A volume could not trace all their connections with private and public felicity. Let it simply be asked, Where is security for prosperity, for reputation, for life, if the sense of religious obligation desert the oaths which are the instruments of investigation in courts of justice? And let us, with caution, indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion. Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure, both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principles. It is substantially true that virtue, or morality, is a necessary spring of popular government. The rule, indeed, extends with more or less force to every species of free government. Who, that is a sincere friend to it, can look with indifference upon attempts to shake the foundation of the fabric?."

A Winsome Religion.

Is your religion winsome? Does it charm and attract? Does it show itself in a pleasant face, a cheerful smile, gentle tones, courteous manners? Is it kindly and thoughtful for the comfort of others, willing to serve, slow to push personal claims, quick to sympathize and help? Or is it sour and hard, grim and frowning, dominated by petty gossip and jealousies, self-asserting and domineering—driving away more than it draws? Look into this matter, sister! Carefully consider this question, brother! See whether or not you are properly representing Christ, O Christian!—Selected.

Here Is Your Chance.

During the next sixty days we make the following offer:

For $2.50 we will send the ADVOCATE one year and a copy of Christian Womanhood. The price of the ADVOCATE is $2; the price of the book, $1. This book has had an extensive sale, the sixth thousand being now on the market. This offer applies to renewals as well as new subscriptions, provided the renewal extends the subscription to January, '95.

The following notices, selected from a vast number that have appeared in the church papers, will give some idea of the character of the work:

The best thesaurus of facts concerning womanhood with which we are acquainted.—Dr. C. F. Deems.

We hope it will be read by every man and woman in the church.—Florida Advocate.

We hope it will be extensively circulated and carefully read.—NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Heartily recommended.—Dr. John E. Edwards.

This volume is the result of patient investigation and thoughtful study of the whole question treated. In the formulation of the case and in analyzing the testimony a vigorous, well-poised, legal mind is brought to bear. Dr. Black, moreover, establishes the points of his discussion as a skillful general establishes his lines in the face of an alert enemy. As he begins, so he closes, leaving the impression that a master in Israel has written bravely and tellingly of Christian womanhood, maintaining his position at every turn. The book is needed, and will long be in popular demand.—Sunday-School Magazine.

Don't miss this opportunity.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

POTATO FRITTERS.—Grate four large potatoes, add salt and two well-beaten eggs into which two tablespoonfuls of flour have been stirred until smooth; fry brown in boiling lard.—Housekeeper.

CHOCOLATE CARAMELS.—One cup of chocolate, one cup each of milk, molasses, and sugar, butter the size of an egg. Boil till it drops hard. Pour into a buttered pan, and, before it is cool, mark off in squares.

MINCED SPINACH.—Wash spinach carefully and boil until tender. Drain, and rub through a colander or chop fine. Then put in frying pan a good lump of butter, the spinach, and salt and pepper to taste. When hot, beat in three spoonfuls of cream. Garnish with sliced, hard-boiled egg.—Ex.

RICE WAFFLES.—Separate the whites and yolks of two eggs, and beat light. Sift a pint or more of flour in a bowl, add salt to taste, two teaspoonfuls of yeast powder, enough milk to make a good batter, and then put in the half-cupful of cold rice, the yolks, and lastly the whites well beaten. Bake in hot waffle irons.—Exchange.

STRAWBERRY SAUCE.—Half a teacupful of butter, one and a half teacupfuls of sugar, and one pint of strawberries mashed until juicy. Canned berries may be used instead of fresh ones. Beat the butter and sugar to a cream, then stir in the berries and the well-beaten white of an egg. Chill, and serve with steamed or boiled puddings.

ASPARAGUS SOUP.—Boil one quart of asparagus, cut in inch lengths, in one quart of water until tender; rub through a colander and return to the water in which it was boiled. Heat one pint milk, stir into it one tablespoonful butter rubbed with one of flour, and cook a few moments. Season and pour into asparagus. Let it get boiling hot, pour into tureen over toasted bread cut into dice. Serve at once.—Selected.

VANILLA SOUFFLE PUDDINGS.—Put half a pint of milk over the fire in a double boiler; moisten two tablespoonfuls of flour and one of cornstarch in a little cold milk; add it to the boiling milk, and stir until it thickens; add quickly the well-beaten yolks of four eggs, take from the fire, and add carefully the whites of four eggs beaten to a stiff froth. Have custard cups well greased, fill them two-thirds full with this mixture, stand them in a baking-pan partly filled with hot water, and bake in a quick oven until nice and brown, about fifteen minutes.—Selected.

HYGIENE.

Milk Diet.

A diet composed of milk, either alone or associated with bread and a few other farinaceous articles, has been recommended by physicians in certain cases from very early times; indeed, some say that it is as old as medicine itself. According to good authorities, however, it has never been so highly esteemed as at the present day, and has produced such excellent effects in diseases of the heart, of the kidneys, and of the digestive organs, that it would be resorted to still more frequently but for certain popular prejudices concerning it.

Patients themselves, as a general thing, have no unsurmountable objection to living on milk; it is their friends and attendants who are opposed to its exclusive use, on the mistaken ground that this will lead to starvation—in the case of adults, that is, for it is admitted to be very suitable for children. When it is urged that milk is the chief of animal aliments, that it is a complete food in itself, uniting in due proportions all the nutritive principles required by each of the organs, and that nothing is more digestible, they regard these arguments as unsound, and are still convinced that no other diet, for grown persons at least, can replace that to which they are accustomed, of bread, meat, and vegetables.

If we admit the physiological axiom laid down by Bouchardat—that it is not what is eaten, but what is digested, that affords nourishment—then it can easily be shown that, when the system has become accustomed to it, milk taken in prescribed quantities is actually more nutritious than the mixed diet.

All other foods must undergo a complicated form of digestion and assimilation, which render their nutritive value somewhat unstable.

In the case of milk, the digestive process is greatly simplified. When this food reaches the stomach, a selection of its directly nutritive principles immediately begins; the albuminoids and butter solidify and coagulate, while the sugar, remaining dissolved in the whey, passes into the bowels and may there be at once absorbed, unchanged, to be ultimately employed as respiratory aliment. This absorption involves no waste of nutritive substance. Meanwhile, the albuminoids are peptonized and absorbed, also, it may be said, without leaving any residuum. The same is true of the butter, and even to a greater degree, since it is the most digestible of all the fatty bodies. Yet it is owing to this constituent that some patients, whose pancreatic digestion is impaired, can not tolerate a diet of milk unless it has been skimmed. But when it is well borne, the amount of intestinal debris which is left after its digestion is trifling in amount, and even foreign, in some degree, to its very nature. This lately ascertained fact corroborates what has been shown by the previous figures, namely, that a few liters of milk afford more nourishment than the mixed army ration.—Repertoire de Pharmacie.

How to Get Thin.

The Vegetarian says: "It is very foolish for persons to live on lean beef and water to reduce obesity, because this is merely starvation; and though they will certainly reduce their obesity by this method, they will also reduce their strength and bring down their constitution. A simple diet of brown bread and fruits will reduce obesity far better than any nostrum, and the good of this diet is that it will invigorate the body and keep up the strength. Of course, the diet should be accompanied with proper exercise—walking is the most suitable for fat people, because in it the whole body is exercised, and not one set of muscles at the expense of another. When the dishes are not unduly elaborate, people do not eat too much; when the diet is plain and simple they will take what they want. Rich and elaborate cookery causes persons to eat more than is good for them, and bring an undue obesity and many other disorders. Of course all fat people tell you they are small eaters, but whatever they do eat, they eat more than is necessary to keep them in health and strength, and the extra is packed on as fat that they do not want. Persons should not try to reduce themselves to emaciation; they should have sufficient fat on their bodies to round off their angles and prevent their bones staring people in the face."

Danger in Perfumery.

Women who are fond of indulging in strong perfumes should remember that they are decidedly injurious to the sense of smell. By their frequent use the secretory glands of the nose and throat are overtaxed and weakened. One day a person notices that the hearing is less acute than usual, and the sense of smell seems defective. This is, of course, put down to a cold, and but little is thought of it. After a time the entire head becomes affected, and there are throat and lung complications which are likely to end in chronic, if not fatal illness. Smelling salts are a prolific cause of deafness. All strong and pungent odors, particularly those which act upon the secretory processes, should be avoided as far as possible.

AGRICULTURE.

BY REV. J. W. MCNEIL.

Strawberries.

There is, perhaps, no fruit known with a greater difference in varieties than the strawberry. Not only are they different as to color, flavor, firmness, but as to adaptation to suit different localities. Some suited to one and some to another, yet it is astonishing so few of the kinds will do well in the same locality. After a test of fifty varieties, very few have been found suited to our wants. It must be understood we are speaking as to market purposes, with long transportation. What does well in the North and West does not seem to suit the South, and vice versa. This seems to be true even in different parts of the same State.

Again, the different soils, we have discovered, do not suit the different kinds. One character of soil seems to meet the wants of one variety, while it will not another. It is true, a medium soil between the poorest and best, if properly fertilized, is what is desired to make highly colored, fine and well-flavored fruit, all of which are desirable for market purposes. It would be well for everyone who may see a new berry highly recommended, whether in his own latitude or another, to go slow as to the extent in increasing his acreage in it. An instance: There was no berry more highly spoken of than the Jessie when it first made its appearance, but it is one of the poorest berries we have ever tested as to our locality. This many not be true at another place or State. This hint ought to be of profit to anyone who may desire to engage in raising strawberries.

To go back to the character of the soil best for the strawberry, there is a great difference in varieties at this point. While the remark must be taken in a general sense as to medium soil for the strawberry, it is not true of every variety. For instance, the Wilson Albany Seedling has succeeded best for us on the poorest soil we have—so poor that it would not produce ordinary weeds. This must be remembered, however, to be clay land; sandy soil has never done well for us with any kind of strawberry.

Again, some kinds of berries are very vigorous growers—great runners. Soil of a medium character is especially adapted to this kind, if not fertilized with anything too highly nitrogenous.

Brevities.

It is said no man of business will continue the use of an article which involves a constant loss. It would show good farming sense to save the tobacco bill and lost hours.

Intensive farming, improved implements and small farms save labor, save money, save time. Farmers, use them.

The farmer to become independent must raise less cotton and make more hog and hominy.

Sowing Peas in Corn.

1. Does it injure corn while laying it by to sow it in peas?

2. What is the best pea. I mean on good, rich low lands.—J. B. P., Wakefield, N. C.

ANSWER.—If peas are not sown in corn, when the latter is laid by, grass and weeds will spring up, and the latter will do the corn about as much injury as the peas would. Any growth must do some harm by robbing the corn of food—the peas as little as any. The peas make some compensation by yielding a valuable crop; the weeds and grass make none, except in supplying humus, and the peas do this also, in quite as large quantity, and of decidedly better quality. Upon the whole the advantages are in favor of sowing peas.

If corn is laid by early, hardy variety that stands the weather well and makes much vine is to be preferred like the "clay." If the laying by is late, an early maturing variety like the Whippoorwill is preferable.—Southern Cultivator.

That Tired Feeling

The great benefit which people overcome by That Tired Feeling derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla proves that this medicine "makes the weak strong." J. B. Emerton, a well known merchant of Auburn, Me., says: "About 5 years ago I began to suffer with very severe pain in my Stomach, gradually growing worse. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, being convinced that I was troubled with Dyspepsia and Liver and Kidney troubles. I improved at once and am very much better and feel more like working.

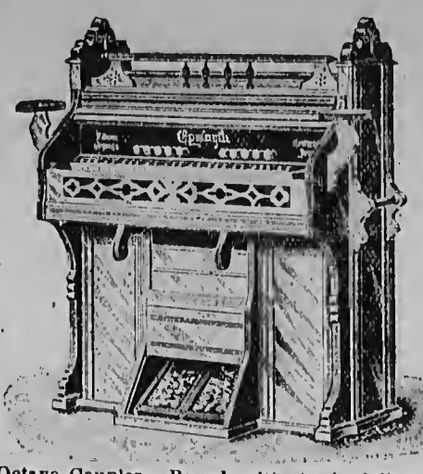
ORGANS AS PREMIUMS.

We have made arrangements to offer a rare bargain in the way of organs as premiums to our subscribers. The organs which we handle are the Epworth Organs. These have not heretofore had much sale in Mississippi and Louisiana, though they have had an immense sale throughout the North and West and also in some of the Southern States. Do you want a small organ for your church? If so, read the description given below of Style No. 102, and see how it would suit you.

STYLE 102. THE EPWORTH CHAPEL ORGAN.
HEIGHT, 51 IN.; WIDTH, 23 IN.; LENGTH, 48 IN.



Best Low-Priced Chapel Organ.

Walnut case; Hard Wood Panels; Finished Back; Lamp Stands; Handsome Fret Work; Full Length Music Desk; Engraved Ornaments; Hand Rubbed; Oil Finish; Pedals covered with Brussels Carpet; Metal Guards on Pedals.

This is the Organ for Churches and Sunday-schools, where a First-Class Action is Desired.

In a good, plain case, the quality of action and tone being the same as in the higher priced styles.

Style 102, 12 Stops.

EPWORTH CHAPEL—Five Octaves, containing four sets of Reeds of two and one-half Octaves each. STOPS—Principal; Dulcet; Diapason; Diapason Forte; Vox Angelica; Principal Forte; Cremona; Melodia; Echo Horn; Celeste. Metal Octave Coupler. Boxed, with stool, delivered on board cars at factory.

The catalogue price of this is $87. We will give it as a premium for one hundred subscribers. Send us the cash $200, for the subscribers, and you get the organ free. If you can't get one hundred persons to subscribe personally, perhaps you have well-to-do members of your church who will pay for several poorer members, thereby bestowing a blessing upon them by giving them a religious paper and at the same time helping to procure an organ for your church. If you don't exactly like Style 102, then read the description of Style 302.

IMPROVED STYLE 302 "SPECIAL." EPWORTH CHAPEL ORGAN.

Boxed, with good Stool and Book, on board cars at factory.

If this instrument is your choice, send us one hundred and fifteen new names, with the cash $230, and you will get it free. If you can't get the requisite number of names, get as many as you can, and then write us for terms. No doubt you can make satisfactory arrangements. Of course, this offer applies to individuals as well as to churches. What we want is the subscriptions, let who will get the organ.

These instruments have had a great run among Methodist people in the North. More than a thousand preachers have purchased Epworth Organs. We offer special bargains to the clergy.

If you have any inclination to accept any one of these offers, don't delay. Now is the time. Address

A Year's Subscription to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for $1 25

For the next sixty days we will take subscriptions at the rate of $1 25 in combination with the Memphis Commercial. That is, send us $2.25, and we will send you the ADVOCATE for one year and the Memphis Commercial (weekly) for one year. As the sub cription price of the Weekly Commercial is $1, this is putting the ADVOCATE at $1 25. This is a chance you ought not to miss. The Memphis Commercial is a live, wide-awake, progressive newspaper, which will keep you posted as to what is going on in the world. This offer applies to old subscribers as well as new, provided they will pay their subscriptions one year in advance, up to June, '95. Send $2 25, and you will receive both papers at once.

Children of Mississippi

Here is another pair of good letters. The work is growing every day. That hall will be built, and the children of Mississippi will have a big hand in it. Send on the money as fast as you can. We must have that hall by September. It is greatly needed. We are suffering for it. Many poor boys are not in college because it is not there. At once and all together, and let us make a long pull and a strong pull, and do this work and be done with it. Your uncle will not write any more till after the General Conference. Then he hopes to have great things to report from the children of this State. Here are the letters:

Barlow, Copiah Co., Miss., April 18, 1894.
Rev. I. W. Cooper:

Dear Brother: Enclosed you will find one dollar for college hall paid by two little folks, Orville Early Shelton and Lucy Ira Baldwin, fifty cents each. The first-named is related to the sainted Bishop John Early. The other is our little granddaughter. I have suggested to the teachers in our Sunday-schools to appoint an agent from each class to collect for the hall. I think you will hear from some of them before long. Success to you. God bless you and yours.

Your brother,
IRA B ROBERTSON.

Yes, yes, these Sunday-schools are a great power for good along many lines of work.

Magnolia, Miss., April 19, 1894.
Rev. I. W. Cooper:

Dear Brother: Enclosed find check for twelve dollars and fifty cents for Millsaps College from the Magnolia Sunday-school. We held our first public meeting Sunday and had a very nice exercise and an address by Bro. Boone. Have adopted the little wooden collection barrels, and I am assured that we will be able to raise fifty dollars for the college this year. Your friend,
J. H. CAPERS.

Hurrah for Magnolia! That is no small bud, but a full-grown flower, large, open and wonderfully fragrant. Every Sunday-school in Mississippi ought to be moved to action by the fragrance of that Magnolia blossom. What Sunday-school will bloom next? Your uncle,
GILDEROY.

Don't fail to read our offer of the ADVOCATE for $1 25.

The General Conference.

THE LENGTH OF THE SESSION.

The question is often asked, "How long will the General Conference be in session?" It is, of course, impossible to answer the question in a definite way. We think, however, that there is no necessity for a long session. We see no reason why all the work that is needed to be done should not be gotten through with in about two weeks. The General Conference, like other large bodies, sometimes wastes a good deal of time. At Richmond, in 1886, nearly three days were consumed in adopting rules of order. We hope no time will be consumed in that way by the present General Conference. We see no reason why the rules of the last General Conference should not be adopted during the first morning session. True, if this should be done, some members would miss an opportunity to air their knowledge of parliamentary law; but we do not doubt that the church could survive this for four years at least.

NEW BISHOPS.

Are any new Bishops needed? We think not. On the affirmative side of this question only one argument of any plausibility has been advanced, viz., the possibility of a decrease in the working force of the Episcopacy during the next quadrennium. It is urged by some that our senior Bishop is likely to become superannuated, and that Bishop Granbery's health is precarious. So far as Bishop Keener is concerned, he is apparently as vigorous as he has been at any time within the last decade. We think it very probable that he will go through the next quadrennium doing his full quota of work. Bishop Granbery's health is said to be considerably improved, so that he is now effective. Suppose, however, that one or two of the Bishops should fail within a year or two, what of it? We do not believe that even in that case the church would suffer for lack of episcopal supervision. Eight Bishops, without being overworked, could hold all the Annual Conferences and do a great deal of work besides. This is our creed, and will continue to be until some one points out a flaw in it.

THE ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The suggestion that all General Conference officers shall be elected by the several Boards ought not to be entertained for a moment. This would be a good thing for the shrewd, wire-pulling place seeker, as it would afford him a superb opportunity for the practice of his art, but for the church it would be a step in the wrong direction. The General Conference will throttle this movement in its infancy.

LOCAL PREACHERS

It is an unquestioned fact that local preachers, as a class, are far less efficient and influential than formerly. Whether it is possible to restore the local preacher to his former relative status in the church is a question more easily asked than answered. It will be generally admitted, however, that something ought to be done looking in this direction. Several measures of this sort might be adopted. One we particularly favor, viz., the transfer of the responsibility of the local preacher from the Quarterly Conference to the District Conference. We will not here enter into details, but we believe that by the adoption of this measure the local preacher might be made a much more potent factor in our church life than he now is.

Glove Contests.

The Supreme Court of Louisiana has decided that "glove contests" are not prize fights. Sullivan and his gang can now come to Louisiana and give exhibitions of their strength and brutality whenever it suits them.

We have no fault to find with the action of the Supreme Court. The presumption is that they have given a proper interpretation of the law. One thing, however, is certain, viz., that the law ought to be amended. Shall Louisiana become a dumping ground for brutalities that are tolerated nowhere else? Shall her name become a "proverb, a by-word and a reproach" among the States of this great nation? Shall she alone of all the great sisterhood of States educate her brave sons and her fair daughters in the direction of crime by placing before them public exhibitions of brutality far more demoralizing than the bull fights of dark-age Spain?

We are not prepared to believe this. That same righteous, patriotic, sentiment which extirpated the Louisiana Lottery will still more expeditiously expel the barbarous prize fight. Let the facts be placed before the people. Let the press be true to its trust. Let it wield its almost immeasurable power over the human heart in stirring up the people against this disgraceful iniquity. Let the pulpit arouse the public conscience. Let every good citizen do "whatsoever his hands find to do" to put an end to this public infamy. Let every good woman make the most of her God-given influence over her husband and her sons in the same direction. Let it be clearly understood that no man need apply for legislative honors who favors the perpetuation of this relic of mediæval barbarism. Citizens of Louisiana, the eyes of the nation—yea, of the civilized world—are upon you. Lovers of morality and good order everywhere have a right to expect that you will be true to the instincts of the age—that you will no longer allow your State to be regarded as belonging to a low order of civilization. Let the cry go forth from one end of the State to the other, "Down with the prize fight!"

Obituaries.

[The following from the Alabama Advocate fits our case as thoroughly as if we had written it. We commend it to the consideration of our readers.]

We are forced again to appeal to our friends to be as brief in writing obituaries as possible. This is a very delicate matter, and we regret to be forced to mention it again. It is not one obituary in ten that we do not have to cut down, and that, too, to a considerable extent. This we dislike very much to do, but we are forced to it. In many instances our friends complain and write us unkind letters. We are very sorry, but can not help it. If we were to publish all the obituaries that come to us just as they are written, they would fill, from week to week, most of the reading space of the Advocate. Even after boiling down as freely as we have done, since Conference we have had from two to five columns a week.

Again: We are criticised because we publish long obituaries of some persons and short ones of others. In reply to this we have this to say: It is a rule with the Advocate to allow only two hundred words for each obituary. All over that number are charged for at one cent a word. Some persons who are able to pay for excess send the money with which to pay for the excess. This admits a long obituary.

Then, it is true, there are exceptions to this rule. To ministers and their wives there is no limit, except the editor's prerogative. There are a few other favored ones. These are active and distinguished workers in the church—missionaries and others, such, for instance, as Sister Allday. Then in cases eminent for piety and zeal—benefactors and others, who at death are indigent. But in all cases the editor reserves his right to exercise his notions of propriety, and to cut out what he deems unnecessary and irrelevant.

Then we beg all the living to have mercy on the editor and the patrons of the paper, and be as brief and concise as possible. It is not necessary to state the exact age of the dead to the day, unless he has lived a century or more. It is of no interest to the general reader whether the deceased married more than four times, nor whether he was the father of ten or fifteen children. In the case of infants, just state that the little one has gone to heaven. Do not, by any means, give expression to the eloquence of your sorrow in half a dozen verses of original poetry. Let it be distinctly understood that we will publish no original poetry except from those whom we may ask to write.

Now, in writing the above, we have done it in the tenderest sympathy and regard for the feelings of our bereaved friends. We know the depth of their sorrow, and how natural it is to speak the praises of our sainted dead. We desire to know, in a brief way, how our good people die. Tell it in as few, simple words as possible, and we will be glad to send the sweet, sad message abroad over the land, that it may do good and glorify God.

The Minimum Christian.

The minimum Christian! And who is he? The Christian who is going to heaven at the cheapest and easiest rate possible. The Christian who purposes to get all out of the world that he can, and not meet the worldling's doom. The Christian who aims to have as little religion as he can without being destitute of it altogether.

The minimum Christian generally goes to church on Sunday morning, unless he is too tired with his week-day labors, and has lain in bed too late to get ready for the service; in that case he attends in the evening, unless it is likely to rain, or is too warm or too cold, or he feels too sleepy, or has a headache. He listens respectfully to the minister, and joins in prayer and praise. He applies the truth often to his neighbors, rarely to himself. If there is a lecture in the week, he goes, if quite convenient, but rarely attends the prayer-meeting, as the latter is apt to be uninteresting. He feels it his duty to be present on communion Sabbath, and has family prayer at least once a day, unless business presses upon him too urgently.

The minimum Christian is friendly to all good works; he wishes them well, but it is not in his power to do much for them. He thinks it a good thing for laymen to take part in the prayer meeting of the church, but he has no gift for public prayers or for making addresses—unless the subject be business or politics—and he must leave it to others. He is friendly to home and foreign missions, and gives his "mite," but he thinks there are too many appeals; still he gives, or he will lose his reputation.

The minimum Christian is not clear on some points relating to Christian conduct. The circus and dancing, the theatre and card-playing, give him considerable trouble. He can not see the harm in this or that or the other popular amusement. He says there is nothing in the Bible directly against it. He does not see but that a man may be a Christian and go to the theatre or to the ball-room. He knows several people who do go, and members of the church, too. Why should not he?

In short, the minimum Christian knows he can not serve God and mammon; he would if he could, and he will come just as near doing so as he can, for he thinks it not best to be "righteous overmuch." He will give to himself and the world all that he may, and to God and his cause as little as he dare, and yet not lose his soul. He stands so close to the dividing line between the people of God and the people of the world that it is hard to say on which side of it he actually is.

Ah, my brother, are you making this attempt? Beware, lest you find at last, in trying to get to heaven with as little religion as possible, that you have missed it altogether; lest, without gaining the whole world, you have lost your own soul. Would it not be wiser and better and happier to make sure of heaven by being a maximum, rather than a minimum Christian?—Rev. John W. Dalles.

Unseen Goodness.

There is more good in most people than we are accustomed to give them credit for. Very many conceal their best feelings, having a sort of shame about them. Or perhaps no occasion offers wherein they can be appropriately disclosed. We do not generally know how much good-will is felt toward us until we come into severe trouble, and that may not be until we die. Men are prevented by a thousand things from understanding the excellences of their neighbors. But God sees them all. And no doubt much that passes for evil in the sight of men is good to him.

We should certainly make an effort, both for our own sakes and for others', to obviate this evil. We should have a keener eye for excellences, and should not be so reluctant to speak about them. Men and women need encouragement. Why should it be so grudgingly bestowed, or so generally withheld? Is it a lurking jealousy, a contemptible envy, an idea that we lower ourselves by raising others, which shuts our mouths? Or is it only a foolish diffidence, and a thoughtlessness concerning what will give pleasure? Whatever it be, it is not good. Let us speak more words of approval and love, and so make this earth a sunnier place to live in.

There is noble doing and enduring all about us, mostly hid away from common view. Few of the truest heroes ever find a chronicler to make them famous. They do not know that they have done anything of special worth. But they have been, nevertheless, fighting a right good fight, giving up their comfort and strength to others with no thought of any special merit or reward. There will come a grand surprise to such souls by and by. To them, amazed and unaware of what they have wrought, the Christ will say: "Well done; ye have ministered to me." It is every way fitting that we do what we can to anticipate these judgments of the last day and get the crowns on the right heads even now.—Zion's Herald.

The Advocate for Twenty-Five Cents.

We will send the ADVOCATE from now until the first of August for twenty-five cents. This period embraces the session of the General Conference. The ADVOCATE will contain reports of the proceedings of the General Conference. All Methodist people ought to keep posted in regard to the action of the General Conference. Let all our subscribers make this offer known and constitute themselves agents for the paper. Let it be remembered that the cash must accompany each name. We will do no book-keeping for anybody on this proposition. This offer is made only to new subscribers.

Advertising Rates.

One insertion, $1 per inch.
Two insertions, $1.50 per inch.
Four insertions, $2.40 per inch.
Twelve insertions, $6.60 per inch.
Twenty-six insertions, $13 per inch.
On less space than a half-inch twenty per cent. additional will be charged.

The Serving Spirit.

When God has nothing more for a Christian to do on earth, he will call him home. Unless a Christian is glad to serve at any time, and in any way he can, he may well question his adoption. Our blessed Lord "went about doing good." That is your mission. There is a place for you in the church, where you ought to be a power for good, and work for you to do out in the vineyard. Have you found your place? What is it? Are you doing your work? What is it? Looking at it in one light, a year is short; in another, it is long; opportunities of service are many and great. The true spirit of service always leads one to ask when he can be useful, and how helpful in the line of counsel, comfort and encouragement; to ask whose home can be brightened, whose heart made glad, and whose life inspired with holy purpose.

Christian, the church has claim upon you! You can aid your pastor in his arduous and sometimes thankless toils. You can invite and bring to the house of God. You can look up the neglected. You can welcome the stranger. You can care for uncared-for children. You can tenderly warn the indifferent, encourage the desponding, strengthen the weak, and establish the wavering.

Possibly you have been pressed with care all this year, and thus unable to serve as you could wish. The question is, How much have you gained in the real spirit of service? When you can serve, do you find more pleasure in it? Are you growing quick to respond to the divine summons? God counts and measures our purposes, rather than our accomplishings. His eye is on the heart. What has been your gain of honest thorough-going desire to be useful? This is a good time for taking inventory of spiritual stock in trade. The past can not be changed; but from the past inspiration should be gathered for future work. How much of gain in knowledge, patience, steadiness, giving and serving, this last year? What about next year?—J. E. Twitchell, D. D.

NOTES.

Bro. J. H. Keller, one of the patriarchs of New Orleans Methodism, has given a lot worth $9,000 to the Y. M. C. A. of the city, to be used as a site for a Y. M. C. A. building. It is one of the conditions of the gift that work on the building shall commence within one year from this time. At the same public meeting at which this offer was made quite a handsome sum was raised for the building, several persons contributing $1,000 each, and several others $500 each. We think it safe to say that the building will be erected. Bro. Keller is entitled to the thanks of all friends of the Y. M. C. A., not only for his gift, but also for the manner of it. He has given in a way that will stimulate others to give. What a boon wealth is to a man who has the grace to use it right!

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

Goes regularly to Hot Springs for GOUT, RHEUMATIC GOUT, RHEUMATISM.—How this Water is valued there in BRIGHT'S DISEASE OF THE KIDNEYS and STONE OF THE BLADDER.

Dr. Algernon S. Garnet,
Surgeon (retired) U. S. Navy, Resident Physician, Hot Springs, Ark., says:
"My experience in the use of
BUFFALO LITHIA WATER
is limited to the treatment of Gout, Rheumatism and that hybrid disease, "Rheumatic Gout" (so-called), which is in contradistinction to the Rheumatoid Arthritis of Garrod. I have had excellent results from this Water in these affections, both in my own person and in the treatment of patients for whom I have prescribed it. Of course the remedial agent is its contained Alkalies and their solvent properties. Hence it is a prophylactic as well as a remedy in Nephritic Colic and forming Calculi, when due to a redundancy of Lithic Acid."

Dr. Wm. B. Towles,
Professor of Anatomy and Materia Medica in the Medical Department of the University of Virginia, former Resident Physician, Hot Springs, Va., says:
"I feel no hesitancy whatever in saying that in Gout, Rheumatic Gout, Rheumatism, Stone in the Bladder, and in all Diseases of Uric Acid Diathesis, I know of no remedy at all comparable to
BUFFALO LITHIA WATER
Its effects are marked in causing a disappearance of Albumen from the urine. In a single case of Bright's Disease of the kidneys I witnessed decided beneficial results from its use, and from its action in this case I should have great confidence in it as a remedy in certain stages of this disease."

The late Dr. Wm. F. Carrington,
Resident Physician, Hot Springs, Ark., Surgeon (retired) U. S. Navy, says:
BUFFALO LITHIA WATER
has signally demonstrated its remedial power in Gout, Rheumatic Gout, Rheumatism, Uric Acid, Gravel and other maladies dependent upon the Uric Acid Diathesis. It not only eliminates from the blood the deleterious agent before it crystallizes, but dissolves it in the form of Calculi, at least to a size that renders its passage along its ureters and urethra comparatively easy. Send twenty cases No. 2."

Dr. T. B. Buchanan,
Resident Physician, Hot Springs, Arkansas, says: "Send me five cases of
BUFFALO LITHIA WATER
I have made use of this Water for Gout in my own person and prescribed it for patients similarly suffering, with the most decided beneficial results. I take great pleasure in advising Gouty patients to these Springs.

This water is for sale by druggists generally, or in cases of one dozen half gallon bottles, Sold Only at the Springs. Descriptive pamphlets sent to any address.

Appeal to the Young People of Mississippi.

Dear Young Friends: Millsaps College needs a large hall for young men of limited means. We must build it. The hall is a necessity. Would it not be a handsome work for the young Missionary-plans to furnish the agent with money to build this hall? If we can get at the work right, we can do it. I want the young Methodists of Mississippi to send me five thousand dollars. Let us go to work in earnest. Let the young people from five to twenty-one years of age send me from fifty cents to one dollar each. Let every church and community be represented. The name and amount will appear in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. May our Father inspire your hearts, and your young friends, to help us build this hall! Let me hear at once from you. Your friend,

Jackson, Miss. I. W. COOPER.

P. S.—Remember Major Millsaps duplicates every cent you send.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

Dr. Charles Foster Smith, of Vanderbilt, has accepted the chair of Greek in the University of Wisconsin.

Rev. J. C. Brown, of the North Mississippi Conference, has become assistant editor of the Memphis Advocate.

It is announced that Talmage will lecture at Meridian, Miss., on the seventeenth, for the benefit of the First Baptist Church of that city.

We regret exceedingly to learn of the death of Mrs. Mary C. Murrah, mother of Dr. W. B. Murrah, president of Millsaps College. She died on Sunday last, and was buried on Monday at Columbus, Miss.

Rev. W. J. Ferguson, of the Mississippi Conference, was married on the twenty-fifth ultimo to Miss Blanch Vinson, of Scooba, Miss. We welcome our brother into the honorable fraternity, and wish him and his fair bride a happy voyage across the sea of life.

Preachers' Meeting, Corinth District.

The Preachers' Meeting of Corinth district met at Guntown, Miss., April 10-12, 1894. Eleven of the pastors of the district were present and a few of the local preachers.

We were blessed with the presence of our former and much-beloved presiding elder, Rev. W. S. Lagrone, of the Aberdeen district. Although six of the pastors were absent, the meeting was a success. Every part seemed perfect in every respect.

By the kindness of Bro. Buck and his good people we were furnished with good homes and large audiences.

The program prepared by our most excellent presiding elder, Rev. T. W. Lewis, embraced subjects of great interest and importance; such as, "The Relation of Children to the Atonement," "The Itinerant Wheel in Methodism," "The Preparation and Delivery of Sermons," and "How to Promote a Revival." Each subject was discussed at length, and with great profit to ourselves and the audience.

The preaching was done by Rev. W. J. Burt, on "Regeneration;" Rev. H. R. Tucker, on "Infant Baptism," and L. A. McKnown, on "Faith."

The last service was a love-feast conducted by Rev. J. M. Bradley, and was a glorious success. Holiness seemed to pervade every heart and there were shouts of joy.

Amid shouts and praises we adjourned to meet next Fall at Rienzi.

Greatest on Earth.

James M. Brooks, Washington Ave., St. Louis, Mo., makes affidavit that he suffered from Rheumatism for years, until persuaded to try Drummond's Lightning Remedy, and that by its use he has been fully restored. He says the remedy is the greatest on earth. This is high praise, but fully warranted by other miraculous cures. If you want to be cured, send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and they will send to your address two large bottles of their remedy. This treatment lasts one month, and will cure any ordinary case. Agents Wanted.

Our Pianos and Organs.

The musical instruments which we are offering as premiums are manufactured by the Williams Piano and Organ Co., Centerville, Iowa. This is a large establishment which has branch offices in other cities. The descriptions we give of the instruments are taken from their catalogue. Our subscribers may write to them for catalogues and prices, if they choose. We will give them as good terms as they can get from the manufacturers themselves. Notice that if the requisite number of subscribers can not be procured, the instruments can still be had. Get as many subscribers as you can, and then write us for terms.

Nesbit, Miss.

The second Sunday in May the M. E. Church, South, at this place will be dedicated by Bishop C. B. Galloway. We hereby extend a cordial invitation to all former pastors to attend and take part in the services. The second Quarterly Conference for the charge will meet on Saturday before second Sunday in May. Are You Getting Deaf?

THE FOLLOWING EXPLAINS WHY, AND SHOWS THE REMEDY.

Mr. W. D. Stokes, Baton Rouge, La., writes: "I had chronic catarrh very badly, noise in the ears, and nearly deaf. I used your Pe-ru-na according to directions, and am now well; can hear the tick of a watch ten feet. Your Pe-ru-na is a wonderful medicine."

Catarrhal deafness is always due to catarrh of the throat passing up through the eustachian tubes to the middle ear. The catarrh in rare cases originates in and remains confined to the middle ear. The symptoms are: Roaring, cracking, buzzing in ears, with gradually increasing difficulty in hearing. If not cured, the hearing will be entirely destroyed. When the case has not already gone too far before the treatment is begun, Pe-ru-na will cure every case. It is only after the catarrh has destroyed portions of the middle ear that Pe-ru-na fails to cure. All such cases should write to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, for further advice.

A book on la grippe, coughs, colds, catarrh, etc., will be sent free to any address by The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company of Columbus, Ohio.

Woman's Work.

The P. and H. M. Society of the Winona district, North Mississippi Conference, convened in the Methodist Church, Indianola, 3 o'clock P. M., April 7, 1894.

After devotional exercises conducted by Mrs. Bessie Lipscomb, the session was formally opened by Mrs. Williams, of Winona, assisted by Mrs. Thayer, of Greenwood. Reports from each auxiliary showed a decided interest in this part of the Master's vineyard. Some of our officers being absent, they sent in written reports, urging us to more earnestness and zeal in the future than has been manifested in the past.

An evening session conducted by Mrs. Thayer resulted in the organization of a good society in Indianola.

The entire meeting was full of interest and enthusiasm.

JOSEPH'S LAST DAYS.

(Gen. l, 11 26; Jos. xxiv, 32.)

Joseph did not despair in life's calamities, nor was he disgustingly puffed up when on the sunny heights of prosperity.

1. Joseph's end was drawing nigh.

(1) A review of his life was matter of gratification to him. Life well spent. His name without tarnish.

(2) Though long since dead, he still speaketh.

(3) Soon our life will terminate. Live piously, and the end will be well.

2. Their father having died, Joseph's brethren feared that they would now suffer the penalty of their crime. Joseph would now retaliate.

(1) It is indeed true: "Conscience makes cowards of us all."

(2) Joseph dispels their fear by stating that he was to them in the peace of God. This may be paraphrased: "Fear not me, for I fear God."

(3) We, too, have no reason to fear a person who truly fears God. When Ananias was afraid to go to Saul, the former persecutor, the Lord simply declared: "Behold, he prayeth."

3. Joseph was a firm believer in divine providence.

(1) Though his brethren had designed to destroy him, God had overruled all for good.

(2) Cowper's couplet apropos:

"The bud may have a bitter taste,
But sweet will be the flower."

(3) God writes straightly on crooked lines. "All things work together for good to them that love God."

4. Before death God granted Joseph prophetic visions.

(1) The progeny of his brethren would be visited by sore afflictions.

(2) In due time liberation would come.

(3) They would occupy the promised land. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

SIX SOUVENIR TEA SPOONS, after dinner coffee size, HEAVY COIN SILVER PLATED, with GOLD PLATED BOWLS, each spoon representing a different building of the World's Fair. The handles are finely chased, showing Columbus, and dates 1492-1893 and working "World's Fair City." They are genuine works of art, making one of the finest souvenir collections ever produced. Sold during the Fair for $9 00; we now offer the balance of this stock at ONLY 99c. Sent in elegant plush line case properly packed and express prepaid to any address. Send Postal Note, or Currency. Money cheerfully refunded if goods are not as represented. LEONARD BROS. CO., Sole Agents, Dept. A80, 20 Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

What the "CHRISTIAN AT WORK" of New York, has to say in their issue of March 22, 1894:

"These spoons have been submitted to us, and we are sure that those who send for them will be exceedingly gratified to receive such dainty and useful souvenirs of the World's Fair as these spoons are. The Leonard Manufacturing Company will act promptly and without question return the money sent in payment if the spoons fail to give satisfaction. We do not believe, however, that they will ever be called upon to do so."

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

"ON THE BEACH."

The twenty-third annual camp meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 11, next, and continue for eight days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates will be obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the camp meeting to begin their journey on July 4, and remain on the grounds until the end of August. Tickets on sale from July 4 to 21. All trains to stop at camp ground station from July 11 to 25, inclusive.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations, before the rush, at the opening of the camp meeting, should address communications to J. H. Campman, chairman Tent and Lodging Committee, 84 Baronne St., New Orleans, La. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to Capt. A. C. Danner, chairman, Mobile, Ala.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations, free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half-rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding-tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Lodging Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution toward defraying the expense of the camp meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous and in the interest of the salvation of souls.

HOME CIRCLE.

DEAR MOTHER LONG AGO.

Oh I see her tender face,
Hazel eyes with wondrous shine,
Ivory neck and scarf of lace,
Pretty, girlish mother mine.
Drooping waves of glossy hair,
Dimpled arms and slippered feet,
Sitting in her rocking chair—
O, she was both fair and sweet!

But she left me one dark night—
Left me, never to return—
Taking from my life the light
For which I must always yearn,
Till we meet at last above,
Where she waits to welcome me
With the same unchanging love,
Reunited we will be.

A Plea in Behalf of the Children.

BY ADRIAN ALBOMA.

One morning while enjoying my usual exercise in the fresh air, I passed a simple little cottage with a green lawn and trees in front. I observed the well-kept yard and the neatness all about the place, and I thought, some one must have been inspired by love to have fashioned such a home as this. As I walked along I saw a child's swing, a little Summer house, and a croquet ground, all giving proof to me that there had been thoughtfulness and labor expended for the enjoyment of the inmates of the little cottage. Listening, I heard voices, a man's rough voice in a high key, saying:

"John, why were your chores not properly attended to last night?"

"Papa, I did"—began the boy.

"Not a word about I did; if you did, I should not be asking you about it now," sharply retorted the father.

"Papa, you won't let me"—

"There is no let in the case. You didn't do your work, and you do nothing but whine and grumble if you are asked to do anything. Now, Booby, what are you crying about?"

O, what a tone in which to speak to one's own son, neither commanding respect nor affection. Perhaps the lad had been wayward and careless, perhaps disobedient, but, I thought, Can anyone be stung into obedience? As the lad turned away, I heard him mutter: "I wish I was dead anyway. He won't let me tell him anything when I try to!" Immediately the words came into my mind, "Parents, provoke not your children to wrath!" As the child moved on towards me I saw that he was about twelve years old, slightly built, with quick, nervous movements which led me to judge he had a sensitive disposition. As I looked more closely at his flushed face, and tearful eyes, I knew there was a chord in his nature which should be touched gently and lightly, and made to give forth sweetest music. But, alas! poor boy! God pity us parents and forgive us our blindness!

O the sympathy that went out from my full heart toward both father and son! The father was missing much of the most precious fragrance that ever emanated from God's garden of flowers, when he allows the destroying winds of impatience and nervous irritability to rudely crush the plant ere it blooms into beauty and loveliness. I can not believe that the same heart that planned outward pleasures and provides food for the growth of the body would willingly let the little heart and mind entrusted to his care be stunted and starved for lack of being understood, appreciated, encouraged, loved, and sympathized with!

Parents, let me say to you, you have a deep and grave responsibility. Do you study the disposition of your child? Do you endeavor to secure his friendship as well as his obedience? What more lovely than to see a child come confidingly to a parent's side, receive a reassuring smile, and then tell its joys or sorrows to that loving heart. How much of temptation and sin is avoided by being yourselves the most intimate friends of your children.

Enter then into their amusements. Teach them to be happier when you are in their midst. Hide your own cares and troubles, and make your children happy. You will be repaid with interest and your burdens will be made lighter by casting them on the Lord, who careth for you, and you will be giving sunshine to those around you.

Many parents wearied with the day's toil, say to their children, "Go and play, I am tired and want rest." Tired! of course you are. But you will be more tired when your arms long to clasp the wayward child to your heart, and you begin to realize that you have driven him to seek companions elsewhere, who are living in pleasures which lead down, down, into eternal darkness and the ruin of both mind and body. Take that little sensitive child to your heart, give him unselfish love, gentle words, and encouragements. If he needs discipline and correction, give it in all firmness and quietness, by taking him into a room by himself, so that his fault may not be exposed to strangers and thus tend to lessen his self-respect. Do not correct in anger, nor raise your voice above its common tone. Ask God to control you before you try to control your child. You will then gain the respect of your little ones, which is as essential to good government as is their love.

Who of us, if the dear Jesus were here, would dare to speak harshly in his presence to our little ones? Dear parents, let us ask the Father to make us more thoughtful; to give us more wisdom, that we may not slight the most precious trust that he has committed to our charge.

Let us not forget that in this busy, work-day world of ours we are given the grand, high and holy work of preparing souls for heaven, and gems for the Savior's crown.

"Have we been true to the trust he left us?
Do we seek to do our best?
If in our hearts there is naught condemns us,
We shall have a glorious rest."

The Art of Conversation.

Conversation is a thing which does not receive the amount of cultivation it deserves. It is in reality one of the fine arts, and susceptible of almost unlimited improvement. Yet comparatively few give it much attention. Surely this is a great mistake. Conversation is an accomplishment containing within itself manifold powers of usefulness as well as enjoyment. It avails as nothing else can for the calling out of one's feelings, the development of one's thoughts, the impartation of precision to one's ideas, and the impressing upon the memory what one has read. The more we talk about things, the more we become interested in them, and the more we interest others in their behalf. He who has learned how to handle his tongue with skill by the fireside or in the social circle, is able to impart much pleasure at little cost, and sometimes will do great good almost unawares.

Conversation has been called the art of talking agreeably about trifles, inasmuch as in general society serious discussion on matters in regard to which opinions clash is considered out of place. There is truth in this, and yet surely none but the empty-headed would be perfectly satisfied to spend an evening on nothing but trifles. Happy they who have the tact to make of trifles an easy introduction to more weighty things that shall tend to the improvement of both head and heart! A good conversationalist is to be heartily congratulated, and so is the company that is favored with his presence. That so few are fitted to receive this title is partly the fault of those who are charged with the education of the young. Let parents and teachers look to it.—Zion's Herald.

Strong drink is not only the devil's way into a man, but a man's way to the devil.—Adam Clark, D. D.

HOW TO DO IT.

The fields are all white,
And the reapers are few;
We children are willing,
But what can we do
To work for our Lord in his harvest?

Our hands are so small,
And our words are so weak,
We can not teach others.
How then shall we seek
To work for our Lord in the harvest?

We'll work by our prayers,
By the pennies we bring,
By small self-denials—
The least little thing
May work for our Lord in his harvest.

Until by and by
As the years pass at length,
We too may be reapers,
And go forth in strength
To work for our Lord in his harvest.

—Children's Record.

The Grace of Self-Control.

One of our great writers dwells upon the supreme importance to the heart of the gift of self-control; is not this virtue specially to be desired when our dealings are with the young, who so readily imitate our failings? A fit of passion is severely punished in a child, which is deemed quite excusable in the guardian or teacher: whereas, it might be expected that, with developed reason, and with a character professedly Christian, the "angry blow and hasty word" would be almost impossible. Think what a heritage is left to the child who, even when necessarily reproved or punished, sees a calm, tender demeanor; think what is being written upon the young heart that becomes accustomed to irritability and impatience! Sometimes, by force of heredity and natural character, such are our besetting temptations; the more reason, then, that we should specially ask for strength to resist them. "And make mother's temper good, too," was whispered by a little fellow, dismissed in wrath to pray for pardon for a fit of naughtiness. What a sermon for a listening mother! Sunday-school teachers should be ever on their guard against displays of passion; we call the children together to learn of Christ, and though an offender may sometimes need sharp and prompt reproval, no Sunday-school should witness the flush of anger, the heat of ill-temper, upon the teacher's face. Being in positions of power as concerns children, let us be patient and merciful. We are sorry to remember occasions on which in the Sunday-school we have seen a child's head slapped and a boy's ears soundly boxed. This may have produced quiet, but resented, wrath, and fierce anger awoke in the heart of the child. Better a thousand times a chattering word on the young lip than such secret feelings in the little heart. Personally, we have found that to withdraw a child on that occasion from the benefit of the lesson and to send him out, is a quiet, but powerful form of punishment; it impresses him and impresses the others with a sense that their association with the school is a privilege to be rightly used by them. But, believing the box-on-the-ear form of correction to be often due to want of thought rather than heart, we feel constrained to beseech all teachers to bear in mind that in the eyes of our scholars we are setting forth the spirit of Christ; let us not misrepresent his patience.—Selected.

Education of Girls.

Thus, the education of a girl resolves itself to a simple basis after all. Woman's progress may, in the minds of some, have seemed to make it more complex, and confusion can enter into the question if a mother allows herself to listen to the proclaimers of so-called "advanced ideas." We will be led into the mistake of cultivating the mind at the expense of the heart, if we allow ourselves to be so led. But the error is a cruel one—painfully so to the girl who is led, unknowingly, into it. But if we permit our common sense to rule, the problem solves itself. We do not want our daughters to be encyclopædias, but true, womanly women. The first we can buy; the latter we can not. Let us look first after the physical development of our girls, teaching them that good health outweighs all things. Let them understand the human mechanism, hiding nothing. Let them know what God requires of a woman, and why it is essential that she shall be as perfect in health, and as well-developed in body as possible. Teach, by example as well as by precept, the value of outdoor exercise. Then begin mental development, giving her the benefit of the largest educational advantages within your powers, insisting, however, that her studies shall be those likely to be of greatest usefulness in after life. Let her study not up to her fullest capacity, but just a little this side of it. A margin of unspent power is a tremendous force to a woman. Then, if our schools and colleges shall continue to neglect the teaching of household economics, keep your daughter close to you at home for a year at least, or longer if necessary. With her mind free from mental studies, teach her the rudiments of the home, hiding not the kitchen utensils as you show her the dainty china. Make of her an all-round good home-builder and housekeeper, holding up ever before her the one great truth that a woman is always most satisfactory to herself when she is a woman, and most beautiful to others when she is womanly.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Greedy Bottle.

A poor, under-sized boy named Tim, sitting by a bottle, and looking in said, "I wonder if there can be a pair of shoes in it." His mother had mended his clothes, but said his shoes were so bad he must go barefoot. Then he took a brick and broke the bottle, but there were no shoes in it, and he was frightened, for it was his father's bottle. Tim sat down again, and sobbed so hard that he did not hear a step beside him until a voice said:

"Well! what's all this?" He sprang up in great alarm; it was his father.

"Who broke my bottle?" he said.

"I did," said Tim, catching his breath, half in terror and half between his sobs.

"Why did you?" Tim looked up.

The voice did not sound as he had expected. The truth was, his father had been touched at the sight of the forlorn figure, so very small and so sorrowful, which had bent over the broken bottle.

"Why," he said, "I was looking for a pair of new shoes; I want a pair of new shoes awful bad—all the other chaps wear shoes."

"How came you to think you'd find shoes in a bottle?" the father asked.

"Why, mother said so. I asked her for some new shoes, and she said they had gone in the black bottle, and that lots of other things had gone into it, too—coats and hats, and bread and meat and things; and I thought if I broke it I'd find 'em all, and there ain't a thing in it! I'm real sorry I broke your bottle, father. I'll never do it again."

"No, I guess you won't," he said, laying a hand on the rough little head as he went away, leaving Tim overcome with astonishment that his father had not been angry with him. Two days after he handed Tim a parcel, telling him to open it.

"New shoes! New shoes!" he shouted.

"O father, did you get a new bottle? And were they in it?"

"No, my boy, there isn't going to be a new bottle. Your mother was right—the things all went into the bottle, but you see getting them out is no easy matter; so, God helping me, I am going to keep them out after this."—Arkansas Methodist.

Bad Books.

Never, under any circumstances, read a bad book; and never spend a serious hour in reading a second-rate book. No words can overstate the mischief of bad reading.

A bad book will often haunt a man his whole life long. It is often remembered when much that is better is forgotten; it intrudes itself at the most solemn moments, and contaminates the best feelings and emotions. Reading trashy, second-rate books is a grievous waste of time, also.

In the first place, there are a great many more first-rate books than ever you can master; and, in the second place, you can not read an inferior book without giving up an opportunity of reading a good one.

Books, remember, are friends; books affect character; and you can as little neglect your duty in respect of this as you can safely neglect any other moral duty that is cast upon you.—Coleridge.

God has not had much to do with the revival that winds up with a church entertainment to pay expenses.

CURES OTHERS

For Severe, Lingering Coughs, Weak Lungs, Bleeding from Lungs, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, in its early stages, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a sovereign remedy. It not only cures the cough but also builds up the strength and flesh of those reduced below a healthy standard by "Wasting Diseases." Will not make fat folks more corpulent.

MR. WILEY.

B. F. WILEY, of Box Elder, Converse Co., Wyo., writes: "I had bronchitis for twenty years and over, and I could not work without coughing so hard as to take all my strength away. I took five bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and give you my word and honor that I can do any work that there is to do on my 'ranch' without coughing. I have not taken any of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' for a year."

HOLLIDAY.—Mr. ISAAC NEWTON HOLLIDAY was born in Wilkes county, Ga., Dec. 20, 1824 and died at his home in Sharon, Miss., Oct. 1, 1893, in the sixty-ninth year of his age.

In early life he came to Mississippi and was engaged in agricultural pursuits, being for many years considered one of the most successful farmers in Madison county. When a young man he joined the Baptist Church, but later in life became a member of the Methodist Church, in which he was a trustee and steward for many years, always taking an active part in all church and benevolent enterprises. He was a zealous and acceptable Free Mason, being treasurer of his lodge for several years previous to his death. He was also a member of the Knights of Honor. His love of country was strong, manifested in his faithfulness as a soldier during our last war. He served in Company E, of the Eighteenth Mississippi Cavalry, was courier for Gen. Loring, and took part in all the battles from Resaca to Atlanta, and at Nashville and at Franklin, Tenn.

The painful and protracted suffering through which he passed just previous to his death exhibited his patience and fortitude, and seemed, as some who saw him in his affliction said, to ripen his spirit for the better land. His conversation with his family as he approached the end was well calculated to impress them with a profound sense of the realities of eternity. When death came he was resigned and willing to go. He leaves a wife and several children and a number of grandchildren who feel deeply the loss of his presence.

He was an enterprising and useful citizen, and will be much missed in the community in which he lived. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

BURDINE—Bro. ALBERT THEOPHILUS BURDINE departed this life March 11, 1894. He was born at Prattsville, Ala., May 31, 1837. During his childhood his parents moved to Batesville, Miss.; thence to Germantown, Tenn., and thence to near Corinth, Miss., where he volunteered for the war in 1861, and continued in service until the war closed. Soon afterwards he moved with his parents near Water Valley, where on Oct. 25, 1869, he was married to Miss Sudie Cooper, sister of Rev. I. W. Cooper, of the Mississippi Conference.

He moved to Brookhaven in 1876. During the pastorate of Rev. W. B. Lewis, at this place in 1880, he was converted, and he and his wife joined the M. E. Church, South. In 1886 he moved to Stonewall station, where his earthly career closed. In 1893 he was taken with consumption, which soon terminated his life.

The writer of this, his pastor, visited him often during his illness and talked and prayed with him. He expressed himself as having no fear of death, though he regretted to leave his loved ones. He leaves a wife and five children and an infirm mother. He was buried at Enterprise. May God comfort the bereaved ones!

ISAAC L. PEEBLES.

BIRDSONG—SARAH ELIZABETH RAVARS FIELDING was born in Greensville county, Va., Dec. 29, 1811, and died in Yalobusha county, Miss., Feb 18, 1894, aged eighty-two years one month and twenty-one days. She was married to Mr. Birdsong, with whom she lived until his death, which occurred several years since. She was a consistent member of the church for seventy-one years, joining the church at the age of eleven years.

She moved from Greensville county, Va., to Panola county, Miss., in the Fall of 1858; and from there to Yalobusha county, Miss., in the Fall of 1876. She has since lived with her youngest son, Mr. E. T. Birdsong, ever since the war. She was the mother of nine children, four of whom lived to be grown. Two are still living. For the last four years she has slowly, but truly, been answering the call of her Savior. She was a devout Christian. She was greatly beloved by her many friends and acquaintances, who will miss her from their community. ODA B.

SHELL—EFFIE MAY, infant daughter of William and Agatha Shell, was born in Natchitoches parish, La., Feb. 14, 1892; died of membranous croup on Jan. 12, 1894; was baptized by Rev. S. S. Holladay.

Little Effie May leaves a fragrance in the parents' memory that will sweeten their thoughts and hopes of heaven.

S. H. WHATLEY.

LUKE—N. H. LUKE died at his home in Yazoo City, Miss., March 12, 1894, where he had lived many years. He was a prominent member of the Methodist Church, serving as steward and trustee.

Though a man of quiet disposition and reserved deportment, he was a Christian of decided convictions, always openly on the side of right. He was an intelligent Christian, always ready to give a reason for his Christian hope. He was conversant with the great teachings of the Bible, and an efficient, ready teacher of the truths of Christianity.

He loved the church, and was jealous for its integrity, consecrated to its service, devoted to its prosperity, and joyful in all its triumphs. He was a man of decided influence, giving light to those in darkness, and by his whole life pointing the way to eternal life.

He lived his threescore years and ten a life of honor and usefulness, and died peaceably and triumphantly. His memory is honored and revered by the world; his life and labors are held in remembrance by the church, and his name and godly example are fondly cherished by many who most sensibly feel his loss.

R. J. JONES.

KELLY—HARBERT J. KELLY, son of Rev. J. J. and Lillian Kelly, was born Dec. 23, 1892, and departed this life March 31, 1894, aged one year three months and eight days.

Herbert was a bright little boy, and his fond parents were very anxious that he should be spared to them until he should grow to manhood, that he should lead a life of usefulness in the church of God on earth; but our kind heavenly Father, who doeth all things well, has ordered it otherwise, and has taken the darling boy to himself, to live with the angels in heaven. Of this fact we are sure, for Christ, our Savior, said, "Of such is the kingdom of Heaven."

Parents, weep not for little Herbert. He is singing on the other shore, and while he can not come back to you, you can go to him. May the Lord enable you both to meekly submit to the will of him who hath said, "My grace shall be sufficient for thee." J. O. BENNETT.

CALHOUN—DANIEL ALEXANDER CALHOUN was born Feb. 22, 1833, in Clark county, Ala., and died Jan. 27, 1894, near Williamsburg, Covington county, Miss.

Bro. Calhoun joined the Methodist Church in the early years of his manhood, and continued in its community until the day of his death, when he was translated to the church triumphant. He left a most estimable family behind—a wife and six children, one grown son who occupies a prominent place in the church, a worthy son of a worthy sire. The name of Calhoun in Covington county is a synonym for goodness and uprightness wherever known.

God bless the bereaved family! May he be a husband to the widow and a father to the orphan, and bring them at last to reunite in happier bonds where parting is no more, and where the weary are at rest! His pastor,

A. C. BURT.

GERMANY—Mrs. FRANCES GERMANY (nee Dyson) was born in Wilkinson county, Miss., Dec. 11, 1831; died March 26, 1894, in St. Helena parish, La., at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. A. Harvin.

She joined the Methodist Church at Midway, Wilkinson county, at the age of sixteen years. She was a good wife, a faithful mother and a constant Christian. All who knew her loved her. She asked her children to meet her in heaven. She leaves a daughter and five sons. Dear children, mourn not for your sainted mother. She has gone to meet her loved ones in heaven. Your loss is her gain.

May God bless the dear children, and when called to leave this world they will be ready to meet their mother in heaven, where parting is no more. A FRIEND.

GRIFFIN—Little SUSAN TINKER, infant daughter of Rev. C. C. Griffin and his good wife, Mrs. Eadie Griffin, departed this life Feb. 2, 1891, aged one year and three months.

Thus one of the sweet buds of earth God has plucked for the skies. She was indeed a joy to the home in which God let her live for a little while. Her sunny smile and happy baby ways, so loving and trusting, have left a void in that home. We will see her no more till we meet her in "the fair and happy land;" but her memory will remain to us as lingers the fragrance around the bush after the rose is plucked. K. S. ENOCHS.

COTTEN—Mrs. FLORENCE COTTEN (nee Daniels) was born Aug. 25, 1866, and departed this life Feb. 26, 1894. She was a consistent Christian and gave full evidence of a Savior's love. She was confined to her bed ever since Dec. 20, and was always so patient in her suffering. She remarked, "It is the Lord's will." She was attended during her illness by a large number of friends. To the sister and children we would say: "Your present sorrow seems hard to bear; yet when we think of the testimonies she gave, we know she is with the blest and anxiously 'waiting and watching' for you. She has joined her husband and other loved ones in the mansion in the skies." S. J. T.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures nightsweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

He delays his help that he may try our faith and quicken our prayers. The boat may be covered with waves, and he sleeps on, but he will wake before it sinks. He sleeps, but he never over-sleeps, and there are no too-lates with him.—Alexander Maclaren, D. D.

Asthma can't be cured? Oh! yes it can. Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar will do it. I know it because it gave me relief. Every winter I was troubled with asthma, especially if the weather was damp, suffering severely. I took about six bottles of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and am completely cured. It is the remedy for asthma. CHAS. HEINES, 500½ Chippewa Street, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar is a sure and speedy cure for coughs, colds, catarrh, bronchitis and consumption, and gives immediate relief in cases of croup and whooping-cough. Try it. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

PIANOS AS PREMIUMS.

READ THE DESCRIPTION BELOW OF STYLE 10.

The list price of this instrument is $330. We will furnish this elegant instrument as a premium for new subscribers. If this offer interests you, write us for terms. You may be surprised at the terms we can give you.

STYLE 10.

Seven and one-third Octaves: Chaste Design; Overstrung Scale; Heavy Iron Frame; 3 Strings; Carved Trusses; Improved Sounding Board; Perfect Repeating Action and Sliding Music Desk. Height, 4 feet 4½ inches; length, 5 feet 2 inches; depth, 2 feet 4½ inches.

In offering this piano to the public our object is to provide for the existing demand for an instrument which, although taking up but a small amount of room, possesses the same quality of tone, the same high grade of action, work and material found in our larger pianos, at the same time a plainly but thoroughly well-finished exterior, enabling us to offer it at a price within the reach of everyone who wishes to secure a perfect piano for a small amount of money. This style is a favorite with ministers, as it takes less room and is more easily moved than the larger instruments.

Made in Rosewood, Ebony, Walnut or Mahogany finish.

Boxed with good Plush Stool, Embroidered Cover and Instruction Book. Every instrument warranted for five years.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Coxey's clan arrived in Washington on April 29. The aggregation which marched from Massillon, Ohio, reached their promised land and went into camp.

Secretary Morton thinks that tuberculosis is spreading to a serious degree among the cattle of the West, and wants an appropriation of $100,000 to use in fighting it.

The St. Charles Hotel, in this city, was burned on Saturday night and Sunday morning. About four people lost their lives. The total loss will amount to about half a million dollars.

The Board of Trade sent invitations to the various exchanges asking their co-operation in making the meeting of the South and West Grain Congress, to take place in this city on June 12, a success.

The Peoria chief of police has declared against the slot machines, which abound in that city. He says that they are gambling devices, and that every one found around after May 1 will be confiscated.

The handsome amount of nearly $16,000 raised for the building of the Young Men's Christian Association, in this city, at the public meeting held at Odd Fellows' Hall on Friday evening, together with the magnificent site on St. Charles street, donated by Mr. J. H. Keller, make up a fine beginning for a grand beneficent enterprise.

The State Fair Grounds, in Baton Rouge, were sold at sheriff's sale, and were bought in by the Bank of Baton Rouge for the sum of $10,000. The bank purchased merely to secure a mortgage held on the property, and offers to sell for the amount of its bid to any association of persons who may desire to continue the enterprise.

It is now pretty generally understood that the sugar schedule of the Wilson bill is to be changed from the specific duties reported by the Senate Finance Committee to an ad valorem duty of 40 per cent. with an additional 1-8 cent on sugar above No. 6 Dutch standard in color, and a further additional 1-10 cent on sugars from countries paying an export bounty.

The pressure behind the Tariff bill gains strength daily. The tariff managers are employed hourly in clearing the way for the passage of the bill through the Senate. The President and the whole administration are urging early action. The conservative Senators, which term includes those who have been in opposition to the bill, have almost to a man been reconciled by the concessions made to them.

At the end of the first week of the great coal miners' strike but one mine is in operation in the districts east of the Alleghanies. That mine, which is in the Phillipsburg region, near Osceola, employs but 100 men. Threats are made that if they do not quit work they will be visited by delegations from other mines and be compelled to do so. The supply of coal is fast becoming exhausted. The miners claim that the strike can last but a few days longer.

The chief of police of Washington has said that the Coxey army can parade down Pennsylvania avenue, so long as its component parts conduct themselves in an ordinary manner. That is one of the rights of an organization, he says, and the police do not intend to interfere. They can march to the Capitol grounds. Many people have arrived in Washington who will join the army, and have set out to meet them. All of them claim to be workingmen.

FOREIGN.

At a fire in Shanghai, China, 500 houses were burned.

Forty-five new cases of cholera are reported at Lisbon, Portugal.

The Czarowitz spent a few hours in Berlin, on Tuesday, as a guest of Emperor William.

Emperor William has informed the officials of the foreign office that Germany's interests in the Samoan islands will not be abandoned under any circumstances.

The Baptists' Union of England has decided that it will send no greeting to the United States; that it will adopt a protest against the wrongs done to the negroes here.

Switzerland has represented to the Swiss minister at Washington that it has been decided in the arbitration between Chili and America to award $240,564, instead of the $9,000,000 demanded.

Lord Rosebery's policy is finally assuming the semblance of definite shape. The premier's speech at the meeting of the Liberal Club, last week, forewarns his party and the country that the new course of the government will be vastly different from that of Gladstone. Lord Rosebery's avowed attitude toward Home Rule, which he has never departed from, is to settle the Irish question without regard to the Irish vote.

Do Not put off taking Spring medicine, but take Hood's Sarsaparilla now. It will purify your blood, strengthen your nerves and give you a good appetite.

Hood's Pills are hand made, and perfect in proportion and appearance. 25c. per box.

The Confederate Veteran Congress at Birmingham, Ala., has completed its work and adjourned. While much of the business done was in the regular routine of the association, several measures consummated were of general interest. General Gordon was unanimously re-elected to the chief executive office of the organization. The veteran headquarters have been permanently fixed at New Orleans. A considerable amount of money has been raised for the Confederate monument at Chicago.

In Roumania a pier collapsed on April 30, and threw about 1,200 people into the water. Many of them were drowned.

Don't fail to read our offer of the ADVOCATE for $1 25.

Count Up

the number of times you have to rub a garment to get it clean; multiply it by the number of garments washed in a year. Then you can see just how many back-breaking rubs Pearline will save you, annually. You don't do the washing yourself? That doesn't make any difference. You need Pearline just the same. Every one of these tiresome rubs is wear and tear on the things that are washed. They suffer, even if you don't. Hundreds of millions of packages of Pearline have been consumed. Think of the number of useless and harmful rubs that have been saved to the women of America.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled; if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 364 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. H. Evans: "We had a good meeting at Boykin's Church. A house packed. The Spirit of God came down in power. Hearts made to rejoice. Twenty-odd came up for prayers. Oh, for the Holy Ghost to attend the Word when preached! Pray for us! God bless you and the ADVOCATE."

Rev. H. Armstrong: "Have just closed a series of meetings in Franklin, La., all of the preaching being done by C. R. Montgomery (the cow-boy preacher). Six received, no doubt, the worst beating it ever had here before. Gambling, whisky drinking, whisky selling, and the hall-room were denounced unsparingly. There were a number of bright conversions, and eleven accessions to the church."

Rev. Thos. J. Newell, Paris, Tenn.: "The Rev. A. Dendall, of the North Mississippi Conference, will preach the commencement sermon for Grenada Collegiate Institute, Sunday, June 3, and Rev. Dr. Julien C. Brown, assistant editor of the Memphis Advocate, will deliver the annual address, June 6. I have been most kindly received in my new field of labor. This seems to be a fine people."

Rev. Wm. G. Evans, West Monroe, La., April 25, 1894: "Our second Quarterly Conference was held on last Saturday, and showed the work to be in a healthy condition. Parsonage improvements amounting to $83 have been made, giving us three good outhouses. I have been paid very well considering the hard times. Have some on the collections. Have received three new members, making nine since Conference. Congregations good."

Rev. R. S. Woodward, Meridian, Miss., April 28: "Our meeting at 'Central Church' moved off grandly. It is now the seventh day, and there have been about fifty conversions and reclamations. From sixty to one hundred have asked for prayers for several nights. The church is in splendid working order. Bro. McIntosh is an earnest preacher, and lives much in communion with God. Dr. Price and Bro. Patton, with our home choir, are furnishing splendid music from 'Perennial Songs.'"

Rev. E. H. Rook: "The Chapel Hill circuit is moving on harmoniously and the outlook is good for a revival this year. We have five churches and four Sunday-schools, and will soon have the fifth. We have a circuit Sunday-school Convention which meets twice a year. In this convention all the officers and teachers and Sunday-school workers meet together and compare methods and discuss subjects relative to Sunday-school interest. Our next meeting is at Gore Springs on Saturday before the third Sunday in August. Pray for us."

Rev. A. D. Miller, Oak Ridge, Miss.: "The first quarterly Conference for Warren circuit, Vicksburg district, Mississippi Conference, has come and is now numbered with the things of the past. The weather was unfavorable; but we had a very interesting quarterly meeting. Our new presiding elder, Bro. Weems, was at his post, and did excellent work, making a fine impression. He preached three sermons, good for the use of edifying. The stewards made liberal provisions for the pastor and made a good showing the first quarter. May God bless them."

Rev. Sam'l S. Bogan, P. C., Cane River circuit: "You humble writer is one who finds much pleasure as well as profit in reading the letters from the work. It makes my heart rejoice to hear of the prosperity of Zion. The work on Cane River circuit is advancing. The Lord has added seven to the church. Since our return in January we have baptized one infant, and joined one couple in holy wedlock. The Lord has richly blessed us in many ways. He has given us the love and favor of this good people, and I believe if there is a preacher and people who truly love one another, it can be found on 'Cane River circuit.' We are talking up foreign missions, and hope to take full collections. Shall the gospel be sent by this generation to the one thousand millions of our race who have never heard the name of Jesus? Let us ask ourselves this question, as well as put it to the people to whom we minister; and may God open up a way by which the whole world may be saved before the close of the nineteenth century. God bless the ADVOCATE."

Rev. H. P. Lewis, Summit, Miss.: "Hard times, scarcity of money, is the cry nearly everywhere in this country. Yet people look and dress well. Congregations good, considerable interest in church matters manifested, Sunday-schools doing well; finances pretty well up, and, all things considered, we are moving on very well. Our new presiding elder is making a fine impression. Our local preachers, six in all, are behaving themselves nicely, and all helping the pastor. God bless them! I was called to Holmesville last Tuesday (April 10) to preach Sister Martha Quin's funeral. She was the widow of Col. P. C. Quin, who died several years ago. A good woman gone to rest. I received her and her husband into the church twenty years ago."

Rev. S. H. Whatley, Pleasant Hill, La.: "We country preachers might give quarterly field notes of value if our orthology was good? Every appointment has been filled save one, notwithstanding the storms of snow and rain. We have an average of seventy-five souls at every service. Prayer meetings are seasons of 'refreshing;' often acclaims of joy are heard, especially, at Marthaville. We have six Sunday-schools, wisely conducted, well attended. Have 'cleared the deck' on foreign missions. Received seven adults, baptized three infants, and have had a delightful visit to the parsonage of the women of Pleasant Hill, 'bringing their spices with them,' which cheers the pastor."

Rev. Ben P. Jaco, P. C., Abbeville circuit: "We have neither been frozen by the Winter, bitten by the late frost, nor greatly disturbed by high winds; but have maintained active and useful vitality. We have just passed our second Quarterly Conference, which was a very delightful one to all. We take courage and bravely enter upon the next quarter. Prompt attention has brought in one-fourth of our Conference collections in cash. Abbeville is enthusiastic over church-building, and we hope to be ready to receive the District Conference into a new church. Bro. Black, you must come up. We are looking forward to the Conference with pleasure and prayer. May we have a great outpouring of the Holy Spirit!"

VOL. 41.—NO. 19. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, MAY 10, 1894. WHOLE NO. 1968.

Rev. W. C. BLACK, D. D., Editor and Publisher. } PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH SOUTH. { ENTERED AT THE POST-OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

Address of the Bishops.

METHODISM FOR FOUR YEARS REVIEWED AT GREAT LENGTH.

Beloved Brethren: We greet you in the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord, and thank God for the abundant tokens of his favor amid which you are assembled. At no time, not even in the most sacred devotions, nor in direct evangelical labors, have you greater need and right to claim the promise, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world," than now, when you have convened to take counsel together, and to make rules and regulations for the furtherance of his kingdom. Allow us to remind you that the chief qualification for the high duties which have been imposed upon you by the voice of the church is singleness of eye to the glory of God, that you be full of faith and the Holy Ghost, and, therefore, full of the wisdom—first pure, then peaceable—which descends from above. Most fervently do we beseech the Father, in the name of his Son, for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, that, both by the spirit which you shall manifest, and by the measures which you shall adopt, great good may come to the church, to the praise of the riches of divine grace.

THE CHURCH AT PEACE.

The brotherly love and harmony which prevail throughout our connection demand grateful acknowledgment. We have been remarkably free from strife and factions. There has been as near an approach to unity of doctrine, and also in approval of our general policy, as can be expected in a membership distributed over so wide an area, and numbering largely over a million. We are not split into parties, with rallying cries, either of men or of measures, but all mind and speak the same thing. We confidently look to this body, as well in your deliberations as in your actions, to illustrate and foster this happy condition. Honest and searching investigation into the status and work of the church is important, in order to correct abuses, supply defects, and increase efficiency in all her departments. Differences of opinion will be developed. Boldness, zeal and persistence in urging what you believe to be for the glory of God deserve commendation, not censure. But ever bear in mind the apostolic rule, "Endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."

QUADRENNIAL GROWTH.

In reviewing the progress of our church during the past four years we must depend largely on the statistical tables of the General Minutes. The great pains which are now taken to secure complete and accurate reports warrant reliance on their approximate correctness. Without them we should be compelled to substitute guesswork and vague impressions for attested facts. The numerical increase of the church is a most interesting and momentous item. It measures, more than any other figures can, both the fruits of our past labors and the forces now at command to carry forward the work. What can equal the interest and significance of numbers when they are the numbers of saved souls? The increase is God's blessing in response to the longings, prayers and toils of his servants. Hunger for converts can not be satisfied while any remain out of Christ. If our accessions were the spoiling of other folds, there might be small cause for rejoicing; but we raise the shout of praise and triumph over those whom God has delivered from the power of darkness, and transplanted into the kingdom of his dear Son. We are not unmindful that men may be admitted into the church and retained on her rolls, who have neither part nor lot in Christian experience, and are only a hindrance and reproach. But the returns made by our preachers must be accepted as, at least, prima facie proof of genuine growth, and ground for thanksgiving and encouragement. Consider the humiliation, grief and fear under which we should be bowed if the tables showed, not a gain, but a loss. Our present strength is 5,487 traveling preachers, of whom 4,882 are on the effective list, an increase of 625; 6,513 local preachers, an increase of 167,491. Total number of preachers and members, 1,345,000, an increase of 168,197; or, taking account of the recently published statistics of the Baltimore Conference, the total membership is 1,347,347, and the quadrennial increase 170,197.

THE NEED OF DISCIPLINE.

The proportion of our members who walk in the fear of the Lord and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost, and the measure in which they enjoy spiritual life, can not be tabulated. We do not spot either our preachers or our societies of intentional toleration of flagrant offenders. Doubtless some are remiss in finding out and putting away such wicked persons, and, in consequence, the cause of Christ is scandalized and the corrupting leaven spreads. Or a far wider extent less gross offenses are allowed to multiply indefinitely, perhaps without personal admonition, or, at least, without disciplinary action. Yet, there goes on continually a large amount of private labor by pastors and faithful laymen, with long-suffering tears, and tact taught by love, for the prevention or correction of these evils, which only God knows, but which the great day will declare. As the result of this patient, painstaking, Christ-like oversight of the flock, many tempted brethren are restrained from wrong, many erring brethren are restored, and others, guilty of faults which, until aggravated by continuance, call for reproof and warning, but not for trial, withdraw from the church whose rules they will not consent to keep. The shepherd who lets them go without having exhausted all resources of faithful and loving care to save them, has a fearful account to render to his Lord. He may sin by lack of courage or by lack of tenderness. To lower our standard would be disloyal and cowardly surrender to the world; to deal harshly and precipitately with weak and unwary brethren would show want of the gentleness and meekness of Christ. Only at his feet can we learn the wisdom to avoid both errors. Much good may be accomplished by particular instruction from the pulpit on the evil of worldly amusements, Sabbath desecration, wine drinking, gambling of all kinds, and games which are used in gambling; fraud, misuse of trust funds, and other forms of sin which commend themselves by various disguises and specious pleas. But the chief remedy is to attack sin in the heart, promote fervent, experimental piety, and engage believers in all good works. Genuine revivals kill worldliness.

SLUGGARDS SHOULD BE KEPT OUT OF THE PULPIT.

How to secure the greatest efficiency of our itinerant system is a vital problem. Few Conferences now suffer from scarcity of laborers. The large numbers annually recommended for admission afford opportunity for more careful selection. Reluctance is felt to locate, without their consent, well-meaning brethren whose inefficiency or unacceptability is due to defect of faculty or of energy, and the difficulty increases with their length of service. The probation of, at least, two years before reception into full connection is an indispensable means of testing and sifting. But the door should be guarded against the entrance of unsuitable candidates, though it be on trial. With full Conferences and many applicants, it will be to the advantage of them and of the church to delay admitting those of doubtful adaptation to the work, until, by prosecuting their studies and exercising their gifts in the local relation, they shall have developed and proved their fitness to begin the itinerant ministry. The general diffusion of education in our day will justify committees on the four years' course of study in more rigid examinations, and in requiring a higher grade of proficiency. An important duty of presiding elders is to stimulate and advise under-graduates in their studies. It is no time to relax the Wesleyan rule, 'Contract a taste for reading by use, or return to your former employment.' Sluggards should be kept out of the pulpit and pastorate.

MODERN EVANGELISTS.

Modern evangelism, by its rapid development, draws to itself more and more the thought and, we may say, the solicitude of the church. Methodism has ever sought to combine order with progress and responsibility with power. Our form of discipline defines the mode of appointment, duties and amenability of all our officers. Local preachers are required to aid the preacher in charge of the circuit, station or mission to which they belong in supplying the people with the ministry of the Word. Traveling preachers are assigned by authority their fields and kinds of service. The Quarterly, Annual or General Conference inquires into and passes upon the life and official labors of every preacher. Provision is made for carrying the gospel to new and destitute places. During the four years $521,071.43 was raised for domestic missions. Evangelists do not undertake this missionary work! They visit chiefly the centers of population, where Christ is regularly preached, and Sunday-schools and all the means of grace are established. Their assumed function is to vitalize the ministry and church, and to reach the unbelieving and indifferent masses. The signal success of a few evangelists of burning zeal, effective speech and skill in leadership, has given great popular favor and impulse to this movement. In 1886 the General Conference was memorialized by two Annual Conferences to make provision for the appointment of evangelists, but did not grant the request. In 1890 a memorial signed by several brethren asked for some plan of responsible evangelism. The Committee on Itinerancy reported adversely, but the General Conference adjourned without taking action. Sporadic cases of revivalists who swept over the country like mighty flames have never been wanting in our history. But now we are confronted with a new condition. Evangelists are numbered by scores and hundreds, and multiply fast. They belong to various denominations. Some of them are ordained, others unordained and even unlicensed to preach or exhort. All act without appointment or supervision in this special work. Their visits are no longer rare, but periodical, or frequent. Though unauthorized and unregulated by the law of any church, it is a widespread movement, which affects to be supplementary to the pastorate. Many communities are restless unless they have weeks of evangelic meetings yearly, or once in two years. Pastors who refuse to enter into such an arrangement are subjected to sharp criticism. A notion spreads that in order to a wide and mighty awakening evangelists must be employed; that they are the only class on whom we can rely to rebuke sin fearlessly and to attract the unconverted. This state of things evidently tends to disparage and weaken the regular ministry. Unchecked, it may sink them into mere officers of garrisons, to look after the walls, stores and daily drill, until the arrival of evangelists to inspire courage and enthusiasm, and to plan and lead an active campaign. In our judgment the General Conference acted wisely in refusing to graft in our system the office of evangelist. The only step that could be taken in this direction, consistently with our general economy, would be to authorize the Bishop, when requested by an Annual Conference, to appoint to evangelistic work, within its bounds, for the year, one or more of its members, with a view to utilize on a wider scale their extraordinary gifts as revivalists. Such legislation would not, however, of itself restrain irresponsible evangelists, whether of our own or other communions, and would produce, we fear, more discontent and friction than benefit. We do not want an order of pastors to keep up a routine, and a higher, freer, and bolder order of prophets to bring down fire from heaven. The Holy Spirit moves and qualifies the same men to call sinners to repentance, and to lead believers on unto perfection. Our early itinerants were noted for aggressive zeal and wisdom to win souls. To seek and save the lost was their mission. Salvation was their one theme; their texts were alarms and invitations; they spoke plainly, boldly, and pointedly; they explained and reasoned, but also exhorted; rebuke, warning, expostulation and entreaty always closed the sermon, and often constituted its bulk; they urged immediate and open confession of sin and acceptance of Christ; they expected the power from on high, and it came. It is well to inquire whether we are losing the unction and the fire, and, if so, into the causes and the cure. We gladly hear witness to the fidelity of the great body of our pastors and teachers, and to the seal which God has set upon their ministry. The large and steady growth of the church is the evidence and reward of their labors. Nevertheless, our past success is the occasion of temptations and dangers. The large proportion of professed Christians in his congregation tempts the shepherd to content himself with feeding the flock, and to neglect the sheep that are astray and perishing. Rejoicing in the prosperity of his Sunday-school, he may turn over to that agency his own responsibility for the salvation of the young. As a result of the multiplication of stations and small circuits, he preaches often to the same people, and may seek variety at the expense of stressing the essential truths of the gospel. The safeguard against such evils is not to transfer the work of soul-starving to a distinct office, but to teach our people a wholesome appreciation of the responsibility and value of the pastorate, and to urge our itinerants to stir up the gift that is in them and make full proof of their ministry. The efficiency of the regular army is more important than any guerilla warfare, however brilliant.

METHODISM AND HOLINESS.

The privilege of believers to attain unto the state of entire sanctification, or perfect love, and to abide therein, is a well-known teaching of Methodism. Witnesses of this experience have never been wanting in our church, though few in comparison with the whole membership. Among them have been men and women of beautiful consistency and seraphic ardor, jewels of the church. Let the doctrine still be proclaimed, and the experience still be testified. But there has sprung up among us a party with holiness as a watchword. They have holiness associations, holiness meetings, holiness preachers, holiness evangelists, and holiness property. Religious experience is represented as if it consists of only two steps—the first step out of condemnation into peace, and the next step into Christian perfection. The effect is to disparage the new birth and all stages of spiritual growth, from the blade to the full corn in the ear, if there be not professed perfect holiness. Such scriptural terms as "saints," "sanctified," "pure in heart," "holy," "dead to sin," "filled with the Spirit," and "made meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light," are restricted to the few who have reached the height of perfect purity in love, and improperly denied to the body of believers; and not only to those who are new or weak in the faith, but also to mature Christians who, by walking with God in blessed fellowship, and by patient continuance in well-doing, ever increasing in the knowledge of God, and being fruitful in every good work, adorn the doctrine of God, our Savior, in all things, and are pillars in the church. We do not question the sincerity and zeal of these brethren; we desire the church to profit by their earnest preaching and godly example; but we deplore their teaching and methods in so far as they claim a monopoly of the experience, practice and advocacy of holiness, and separate themselves from the body of ministers and disciples.

To teach, practice and promote holiness of heart and life, after the standard of God's law and the example of Christ, is the work of the church. Those to whom is committed the care of souls should not suffer their flock to rest in a name to live without the life, in a form of godliness without the power, in outward morality and religious training without the renewing of the Holy Ghost. Not less earnestly should they be warned against mistaking excited moods and loud professions for pure and undefiled religion. Sin, in all its manifold forms and degrees, must be rebuked, and the beauty and joy of holiness and the rich provisions and promises of the gospel must be set forth, that preachers and people "may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that they might be filled with all the fullness of God."

The responsibility of appointing and directing religious services belongs to the preacher in charge. To hold meetings in his circuit, station or mission without his consent and against his remonstrance, would be an unwarranted obtrusion, and tend to confusion and strife. It may be well in the section of the Discipline on 'preachers in charge" to add an express enactment against such interference, whether by local or itinerant preachers.

PREACHERS AND COLLECTIONS.

We hear complaint that preachers are overburdened and distracted from their spiritual work by the duty of raising funds for various causes. Our traveling preachers may be greatly assisted by laymen in getting and collecting subscriptions, but can not be released from direct responsibility in this matter. They are the leaders of the churches, and should see that they abound, as in other graces, so in the grace of giving. Loyalty in meeting the assessments is a proper auxiliary motive, but the people need to be instructed and interested in the great work of extending Christ's kingdom. Love to our Lord and to the ransomed of his blood, and appreciation of the important movements which deserve and demand generous contributions, are the true and perennial springs of Christian benevolence.

THE WORK OF MISSIONS.

The last General Conference expressed its convictions on the work of foreign fields by a series of resolutions, two of which we quote: "That we believe the time has come when, in the providence of God and in the history of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, we must go forward in the work God has evidently given us to do, or suffer irreparable loss. That as the demands of our mission work, as now organized, necessitates an appropriation of, at least, $267,000, the entire assessment upon the Conference this year be not less than $350,000." The Board of Missions at once made the increased assessment, and advanced the appropriations to $325,000, so as to provide for the extension of the work. As a result of this bold policy, there has been an addition of twenty missionaries and fifteen native preachers. Best of all, there is a net gain of over 50 per cent. in members. When the Board met in 1891, there appeared a falling off in collections and a debt of $118,000. With poignant sorrow the Board cut down the appropriations, and determined thereafter to keep absolute appropriations within the limit of the regular collections of the preceding year. The collections on assessments have in no other year reached those of 1889-90. The total collections for the four years, however, exceed those of the former quadrennium by $284,164.41.

Although this debt had been reduced a year ago by $70,000, on account of small collections the present year, due, no doubt, to the general financial stringency in the country, it now amounts to $102,000.

Let us press the claims of the mission cause on the heart and conscience of our people, and induce them to so contribute that the giving shall be both a sign and means of grace.

SUCCESS IN CHINA.

With gratitude and joy we call your attention to the fruit which, after years of patient waiting, is now being gathered in China. At the session of the Conference, last October, there was reported 736 members and probationers, a gain of 311 in one year. Subsequent letters tell us that the work of conversion still goes on. The laborers are greatly encouraged.

The advance is along all lines, the number of Sunday-school and week-day scholars and of medicinal patients, the amounts raised for self-support, the training of native helpers, aggressive evangelical movements, and manifold signs of the larger outpouring of the Holy Spirit. The church should be powerfully moved to re-enforce the little band who are called to minister to a province of 20,000,000, easily accessible, homogeneous in character, and speaking one vernacular.

FORWARD MOVEMENT IN JAPAN.

The Japan Mission has been added to the sisterhood of Annual Conferences. The membership has more than doubled during the quadrennium; including probationers, it was 593 last July. There has been some arrest in the progress of the work, however, during the past two years. This is due to the development of an anti-foreign national party, and to the galvanizing of Buddhism into aggressive activity. Our native members have grown in grace and in the knowledge of Christ, in attachment to our church, and in zeal and in good works. They have built churches, supported workers, and given liberally to all claims. The mission sustained heavy loss in the death of J. W. Lambuth, who labored thirty-two years in China and six years in Japan. The last message of this devoted and successful missionary to the church he dearly loved deserves to be repeated to the General Conference: "I fall at my post; send more men."

LARGE GAINS IN BRAZIL.

The relative increase in Brazil has been large. The Conference in July last reported 249 adult baptisms during the year, and 944 members, a net gain in four years of 585. The Sunday-school scholars have nearly doubled in the same period. The recent civil strife did not embarrass the work, except at Rio de Janeiro, and not seriously there.

HOPEFUL PROGRESS IN MEXICO.

We have now three Mexican Conferences, the Northwest Mexican having been set off from the Mexican Border by authority given four years ago. At their sessions last autumn they reported 4,863 members, an increase of one-third in the quadrennium. Mexico, bound to the United States by many ties, immediately joining our own home Conferences, and containing more members of our church than all other foreign missions together, is worthy of our special care. Young preachers who have facilities for studying the Spanish language, should prepare themselves to respond to a call for service in that field.

OUR SISTERS.

The Woman's Missionary Society, during the sixteen years of its existence, has proved itself a most valuable agency in widely disseminating information, arousing interest, and sending forth consecrated and competent workers in behalf of foreign missions. Its property in mission fields is valued at $220,000. It has thirty-seven missionaries, 103 teachers and helpers, fifty-two schools, 2,793 pupils and women under instruction, seven Bible women, one hospital and two medical missionaries. In the sixteen years since its organization, it has collected $791,913. The good women are doing genuine missionary work, without cost to the General Board or diminishing its resources. We commend the holy fervor and judicious administration of our sisters. This is a distinct, but not independent organization. Its constitution connects it by three links with our general economy. "The missionaries, teachers, physicians and Bible readers employed by the Woman's Board shall be subject to the appointing power of the Bishop having charge of the mission field in which they labor." "The secretaries of the Board of Missions shall be honorary members of the Woman's Board." "The operations of the Woman's Board shall be conducted in connection with the Board of Missions and subject to its advice and approval." This last provision has not yet been carried into full effect. We believe it important for the harmonious and efficient management of our whole missionary work that the Woman's Board soon after its annual sessions, should send to the General Board a full account of its operations and plans, to be considered, and, so far as necessary, to be acted upon, and that a sufficient summary should be published as a part of the annual report of the General Board, in order to present to the church a complete statement of what we are doing for missions. The preacher in charge of a circuit or station in a foreign land is happy if he has a helper in a woman's school. It builds up his congregations and Sunday-schools and furnishes a corps of intelligent and willing workers in the church. How deeply it concerns him that the spirit, teaching and methods of the school shall be scriptural and Methodistic! He is the spiritual adviser and guide. The pastorate and school should work together in mutual sympathy and confidence. Every school should send reports to the District and Annual Conferences within whose bounds it is located. By these means there will be a due correlation of forces, each supporting the other, and all working to a common end.

THE SCARRITT SCHOOL.

The Woman's Board, under authority given by the General Conference, has established the Scarritt Bible and Training-school at Kansas City, Mo., for the education of missionaries and other Christian workers. The gift of the ground and of $25,000 toward the building fund, by the late Rev. Nathan Scarritt, D. D., gave such impetus to the work, and the Woman's Society was so energetic in prosecuting it, that a building suitable to the purpose was erected at the cost of $50,000, and is adequately equipped and furnished, and the present endowment amounts to $50,000. The institution has been in successful operation for the last two years, and promises to meet the ends sought—namely, "practical instruction in the study of the Bible and drill in methods of teaching it, the study of the history of missions and of the different mission fields, and practical training in missionary work, industrial schools, and nursing, which may both fit and test the missionary candidates before entering on their work."

THE WEST.

Our Western work has felt severely the reduction in missionary appropriations. Enlargement was planned, and promised success, but became impracticable in view of the small amounts which the Board of Missions could allow to assist in the support of the itinerant ministry. The burden which weighs on the preachers is not so much their scanty pay and the privations to which they are subjected, as the impossibility of occupying new and inviting fields where our church ought to be established. We ought to perform our part in evangelizing the rapidly developing West. More laborers are needed there, but we can not send them without larger help from the General Board. Despite these difficulties, there has been a fair average of growth.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

The Sunday-school department keeps step with the growth of the church. The sum total of teachers and scholars, 860,962, is a gain of 76,587. We have reason to believe that there has been improvement in methods of work. Conversions among the scholars have been more numerous than ever before. The Sunday-school was not the sole human factor in this glorious result; but it was a very important factor. It wields a mighty influence in bringing childhood and youth to a saving knowledge of the truth, and in training them to be intelligent, stable and useful Christians. Two extremes should be avoided. One is to underrate the rural school in a sparse population, with a short roll, without maps, blackboard, library and organ, but possessing the essential conditions of real, though not showy success, in the coming together of susceptible children and godly teachers to worship God in prayer and praise, and to study the Holy Scripture. The opposite error is to lack the enthusiastic and progressive spirit, which, holding fast the simplicity of one grand spiritual purpose, and of faith in the spirit of God as the means, avails itself of all wholesome aids, such as commodious rooms, good singing, weekly meetings of teachers to study the lessons, and an ample supply of the best religious literature. About 15,000 children are under regular religious instruction in the Sunday-schools connected with our foreign missions, and the number steadily increases. Out of the Sunday-school aid fund $3,000 has been appropriated to this end in the last three years. The schools in Mexico are furnished with a catechism and Sunday-school papers in Spanish; the schools in Brazil with a catechism and the International Lessons in Portuguese. There seems to be a consensus of opinion that 90 per cent. of the collections on Children's Day is more than should be retained by the Annual Conferences for the aid of needy Sunday-schools within their bounds. A modification of the law on this point would probably promote a wider observance of the day and larger contributions, and enable the Sunday-school Committee to help on a more liberal scale Sunday-school work in mission lands. The Sunday-schools which have been organized into missionary societies, auxiliary to the Board of Missions, as the Discipline requires where it is practicable, are rendering valuable aid; but we regret that so many scholars have neglected this duty, which is not superseded by the existence of Juvenile Missionary Societies.

THE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

The Sunday-school Committee, in obedience to the order of the last General Conference, has caused to be organized young people's leagues for "the promotion of piety and loyalty to our church history, and their encouragement in works of grace and charity," under the title, 'The Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." There had previously been formed in a number of our pastoral charges an organization in many points similar, known as the Christian Endeavor Society, and this fact has interfered to some degree with the establishment of Epworth Leagues. Apathy, ultra conservatism and timidity in introducing a new measure are the chief hindrances. We trust that a due regard to the wisdom and authority of the church, as expressed in the action of her only law-making body, will overcome all obstacles, and that the demonstrated usefulness of the measure will create a unanimous sentiment in its favor. Our preachers and leading laymen should take hold and push it forward with the enterprise and perseverance which command success. At the latest accounts 993 Leagues had been formed, with an average of forty members to a League. What additional legislation may be necessary to secure the best results from this institution will doubtless employ your careful consideration. We offer no particular suggestions, but only urge the importance of keeping all our methods of culture and activity close to the heart and under the eye of the church. This is meant in the interest, not of sectarianism, but of the unity of the body of Christ. The mutual dependence and interaction of all the organs and members, in order to the compacting and increase of the whole body, must be maintained. There must not be suffered a disruption of the union and fellowship of saints and a fragmentary religious life by converting the Sunday-school into the children's church, the Epworth League into the young people's church, and a variety of moral and benevolent societies into the institutional church. All departments must acknowledge the fostering care and guiding hand of the complete church, and cultivate delight in all her services and devotion to all her interests.

I NEED THEE, LORD.

BY MRS. M. A. MAITLAND.

I need thee, Lord, I am so blind
That oft my way I scarce can find;
For, trusting in my feeble sight,
I miss thy hand; Lord, be my light!

I need thee, Lord, I am so weak
To do thy will, when thou dost speak;
For I forget the breadth and length
Of thy dear arms; Lord, be my strength!

I need thee, Lord, I am so vain,
More eager oft men's praise to gain,
Than have my actions and my way
Approved of thee; Lord, be my stay!

I need thee, Lord, I am so poor,
And earthly bonds are insecure,
My empty hands freed from their thrall,
I stretch to thee; Lord, be my all!

I need thee, Lord, for I am nought
Save what thy grace in me hath wrought;
Unworthy, on that grace I fall
For light, and strength, and stay, and all!

Questions for Self-Examination.

MR. EDITOR: I send you a very old manuscript, written by a lady about forty years since. She has been dead about two years. On the manuscript is written, "By A. Green, D. D." This may mean A. L. P. Green. You may know and you may have seen these questions. I do not recollect to have ever seen them in print. I think they are worthy of publication in the ADVOCATE, as I think they apply to everyone who is trying to be a Christian. They may prove of benefit and comfort to some, a reproof to others.

Very respectfully yours,

A. J. BROWN.

Newton, Miss.

1. Have you seen yourself to be, by nature and practice, a lost and helpless sinner? Have you not only seen the sinfulness of particular acts of transgression, but also that your heart is the seat and fountain of sin? That in you, naturally, there is no good thing? Has a view of this led you to despair of help from yourself? To see that you must be altogether indebted to Christ for salvation, and to the gracious aid of the Holy Spirit for strength and ability to perform any duty?

2. On what has your hope of acceptance with God been founded? On your reformation? On your prayers? On your tears? On your good works and religious observances? Or has it been on Christ alone as your all in all? Has Christ ever appeared very precious to you? Do you mourn that he does not appear more so? Have you sometimes felt great freedom to commit your soul to him? In doing this (if you have done it), has it been not only to be delivered from the punishment due to your sins, but also from the power of pollution, dominion, and existence of sin in your soul?

3. As far as you know yourself, do you hate and desire to be delivered from sin, without any exception of a favorite lust? Do you pray much to be delivered from sin? Do you watch against it, and against temptation to it? Have you so repented of it as to have your soul set against it?

4. Have you counted the cost of following Christ, or of being truly religious? That it will cut you off from vain amusements, from the indulgence of your lusts, and from a sinful conformity to the world? That it may expose you to ridicule and contempt, and possibly to more serious persecutions? In the view of all these things, are you willing to take up the cross and to follow Christ, wheresoever he shall lead you? Is it your solemn purpose, in reliance on his grace and aid, to cleave to him and to his cause and people to the end of life?

5. Do you love holiness? Do you earnestly desire to be more and more conformed to God and to his holy law? To bear more and more the likeness of your Redeemer? Do you seek and sometimes find communion with your God and Savior?

6. Are you resolved, in God's strength, to endeavor, conscientiously, to perform your whole duty to God, to your neighbor, and to yourself?

7. Do you make conscience of secret prayer daily? Do you not sometimes feel a backwardness to this duty? Do you, at other times, feel a great delight in it? Have you a set time and place and order of exercises for performing this duty?

8. Do you daily read a portion of the Holy Scriptures in a devout manner? Do you love to read the Bible? Do you ever perceive a sweetness in the truths of Holy Scriptures? Do you find them adapted to your necessities, and see at times a wonderful beauty, excellence and glory in God's Word? Do you make it the man of your counsel, and endeavor to have both your heart and life conformed to its doctrines and requisitions?

9. Have you ever attempted to covenant with God? To give yourself away to him, solemnly and irrevocably, hoping acceptance through Christ alone, and taking God in Christ as the covenant, and satisfying portion of your soul?

10. Does the glory of God ever appear to you as the fairest, greatest, and best of objects?

11. Do you feel a love to mankind, such as you did not feel before you became religious? Have you a great desire that the souls of men should be saved by being brought to a genuine faith and trust in the Redeemer? Do you love God's people with a peculiar attachment because they bear their Savior's image, and because they love and pursue the object and delight in the exercises which are most pleasing and delightful to yourself?

12. Do you feel it to be very important to adorn religion by a holy, exemplary, amiable, and blameless walk and conversation? Do you fear to bring a reproach upon the cause of Christ? Does this appear to you extremely dreadful? Are you afraid of backsliding to a state of carelessness and indifference to religion?

13. Do you desire and endeavor to grow in grace and in the knowledge of Christ, your Savior, more and more? Are you willing to sit at his feet, as a little child, and submit your reason and understanding implicitly to his teaching, imploring his Spirit to guide you into all necessary truth, to save you from all fatal errors, to enable you to receive the truth in the love of it, and to transform you, more and more, into a likeness of himself?

Complicating Machinery.

Simplicity is a fundamental rule in mechanism, and simplicity is nowhere more essential than in church polity and organization. Of course, the Preachers' Meeting of the New Orleans district canvassed the matter, touching which they memorialize the General Conference, and saw through the practical working of their plans. It is possible, too, if I could find the hole they went into, I might come out at the same place. As it is, nothing but confusion and trouble and expense appears clear to my mind.

1. We have more "organs" now than we are taking care of, and every church paper is an "Epworth organ." Why another?

2. There are already more "connectional officers" than our Annual Conferences have time to listen to, and we have no such "surplus" as to require opening of avenues of expenditure.

3. "General Conferences of Epworth Leagues" would be no more than "General Conferences" of a few preachers, or the funds of the Leagues would all be absorbed in paying expenses of delegates.

4. The same is true of "Annual Conferences of Epworth Leagues," with this added: We do not pay our expenses in anything we have, as a church; and the more items of "deficit," the larger the aggregation.

5. The "legislation" already passed might go into the Discipline in a separate chapter; but why add any more to it?

6. "The order of business for the Quarterly Conference" already requires a "written report," and the League is a local organization for local work, with which the Annual Conference has, and should have, nothing to do.

7. Some preachers would fail, even if this were the law and could be enforced, because in some communities the thing is impossible.

8. There is already provided a "two-years' course of study," continued through an indefinite period. What would these "diplomas" be worth, given, as would often be the case, by a "Board of Control," not a member of which could diagram "John's kite string"?

If our machinery must do other kinds of work than is now being done, let us so modify it as to adapt it to this additional work. If we complicate it more than it is, we will be forced to establish a "school of engineering" for our preachers who have to operate this machinery, else we will soon find our ponderous machinery inoperative for want of competent engineers. That preacher who runs all the organizations now provided for in our law does well and does much.

J. A. PARKER.

General Conference in May.

MR. EDITOR: It is not often I trouble the editor or reader with my thoughts in the ADVOCATE; but I am inclined to write a few lines on a subject, as I think, of importance to our church, and I know I subject myself to some criticism in attempting to lay out work for the General Conference; but as I am a Methodist, and love my church, I will venture to suggest the following change in our law: We elect one clerical delegate for every thirty-six members of an Annual Conference, and an equal number of lay delegates. Now, instead of one delegate for every thirty-six members, would it not be better to bring us down to the minimum, one for every sixty? As it is now, under our regulations for entertaining the General Conference, it takes an assessment of about $2,700 every four years. This is a very good sum to be raised from the church that does not go for church purposes, but into other channels. Allowing one delegate for every sixty members of the Annual Conference would cut down the delegation nearly one-half, so it would not take this large sum of money to meet the demands of the General Conference. Besides, many towns and cities would be able and willing to entertain free the delegates that come. Again, I have been in many deliberative bodies, and find that where the body is not overcrowded with members, they transact business with more care and painstaking, and deliberate more satisfactorily for all concerned. In short, a small body will do business more systematically and carefully than a large body will. Therefore, 150 delegates will do better than 350. Now, I contend that 4 delegates—2 clerical and 2 laymen—will represent the Annual Conference as well as 10.

I know the objection urged to this reduction is, that every Conference can not be represented on the General Conference committees. This is not at all necessary. Why not the Conference appoint committees of 7 or 9, to whom matters are to be referred? I am convinced that this reduction would be a financial interest to the church, and not hurt anywhere else, only it might lessen some of our chances for election; but I don't know that the church would be hurt by such a catastrophe even as that. Let us have the reduction, and save this surplus of money for the other enterprises of the church.

Kentucky Epworth Leagues.

MR. EDITOR: The attention of Kentucky Epworth Leaguers is being called to an article appearing in a recent issue of your paper reading about as follows: "In Kentucky the Leagues of our church and of the Methodist Episcopal Church held a Union State Convention. Result: A general falling out and bitter recrimination."

As this is an entirely erroneous statement, and is most unjust to Kentucky Methodism, and particularly to the Epworth Leagues of Kentucky, we hope you will publish this card in your next issue, so that, so far as is now possible, the impression made upon your readers by the above article may be corrected. I make this request not only as a Kentucky Epworth Leaguer, but as a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and president of the Kentucky State Cabinet of Epworth Leagues. The conditions are just the reverse of those mentioned in the above article, so far as the Leaguers are concerned. Both churches were about equally represented in the Conference. There was unanimity of spirit and of purpose. There was not in the Conference, nor has there been since between the Leaguers, a breath of difference. There was a fusion of hearts, as hundreds can testify, and the union of hearts is, since the Conference, growing closer and closer. One or two individuals have sought, since the Conference, to parley somewhat in one of our church papers regarding the import and future of this movement. Certainly this does not justify the article appearing in your paper. That your readers may get a correct understanding of the case, I trust you will find space for this letter and the enclosed general letter now going to the Leaguers in the State.

Hoping you will do Kentucky Methodism the justice of correcting the error, I am, Yours fraternally,

CHAS. C. STOLL.

Missionary Education.

Our missionary collections fairly represent our interest in missions. It certainly does not speak well for the depth of that interest that the collections for this cause, from a great denomination, amount to about twenty-five cents per capita. Numerous devices are resorted to in order to stimulate interest and swell the collections up to this meager result. Church pride is sometimes used as a motive, and many men contribute, not because they feel any true interest in the great cause of saving the lost, but that their church may keep up its name and standing. Eloquent and thrilling appeals often stir up a momentary enthusiasm, which serves to increase present contributions. And yet, in spite of these special efforts and special motives, the collections stay at a beggarly figure, considering our ability and the greatness of the cause. With these facts before us, it may well be questioned whether our efforts in this line have been wisely directed. For surely, if the church has not forgotten the death of her Lord, or lost completely the presence of his Spirit, she can be awakened to a deep and genuine interest in missionary work and enterprise.

I believe this can be done by a persistent campaign of missionary education. The only solid and healthy state of missionary sentiment will be brought about by means of a thorough and general knowledge of the facts and doctrines which bear on the subject. What is being done? What is the present need of each individual mission field? What is the doctrine of Christ about giving and giving unselfishly? Have the answers to these questions been so defined and emphasized that they are real to the conscience of the church? The church press ought to be a constant teacher on these subjects. Every pastor ought to learn these things for himself and teach them to his people in sermon, Sunday-school and prayer meeting. Missionary prayer meetings ought to be everywhere held, and so conducted as to instruct the people. Not the least work of the Woman's Missionary Society is its educational effect. The careful pastor can not fail to have observed that besides the money raised and the reflex action on the home work, this society does a valuable work in educating the church up to its missionary duty. By all such means may the church become alive to her duty, and ready for the work; but this preparation will not be the work of a day.

Preachers' Institute.

If I mistake not, the District Conference provided for in our Discipline grew out of the Preachers' Meeting, and the Preachers' Meeting originated in the active brain of the Rev. Wm. B. Hines, then a presiding elder, now a superannuated member of the Mississippi Conference. The District Conference was designed to be as free and untrammelled as possible, but in many places it has got to running in a groove, and the verbal reports of pastors and laymen from the various charges represented have become monotonous and tiresome to listen to. It is a useful Conference, and, as matters now stand, indispensable in our economy; but, as generally conducted, it fails to meet the needs of the Preachers' Meeting as originally designed. Hence these meetings are being revived in various places under various names and regulations.

The preachers of the Vicksburg district, Mississippi Conference, were called together by the presiding elder at Port Gibson, April 17 and 18. Rev. Dr. Weems, the presiding elder, was elected president of the meeting, and Rev. J. D. Crymes was chosen secretary. It was agreed to call the meeting the Preachers' Institute of the Vicksburg district; to meet twice a year, in the Spring and in the Fall, and to give three days to each meeting. The Fall meeting this year is to be at McNair, Sept. 11-13. A committee was appointed to prepare a program for the next meeting, to select subjects and assign them, etc., whose report was adopted and ordered to be sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

The presiding elder, with the assistance of some of the preachers of the district, had arranged a program for this meeting, which was well conceived and faithfully carried out. Several well-prepared papers were read, and the subjects of these papers were freely discussed. The clearness of thought, the facility of expression, and the Christian spirit that were manifest in these discussions were truly refreshing. It was, I think, the unanimous verdict of all who attended the meeting that it was one of the best of the kind they had ever enjoyed.

How to Make Friends with Poverty.

BY REV. F. M. GRACE.

Not long ago a young friend whom we had helped through college came out of his way in one of his extended commercial journeys just to see his old teacher and the places around the college. His name is Henry, and he is now a prosperous entrepeneur on a large salary—twice as large as his teacher had ever received in life. Henry rode in a fine turn-out, and all his rig was in keeping with the large and prosperous business of which he is now the trusted manager. It afforded him pleasure to tell, no less than it did his old friends to hear, how the Lord had prospered him and made his pathway glow with the gems of early found and complete success. But he seemed to be troubled to find his old teacher living in comparative poverty and discomfort. His room was in one of the dormitories, and he was living like the boys, with little furniture and on plain fare. When Henry looked around and seemed to resent this, his old teacher told him how to make friends with poverty. "Poverty," he said, "has been described as an ugly beast, something like a wolf at the door; but it depends upon how you receive him whether he will hunt you or not. Almost every beast has been tamed and made subservient to man. Now, in exceedingly hard seasons this wolf will leave his native wilds and come to your door. You must recognize his presence and try to make friends with him. Throw him a crust and show him that you recognize his presence, and after a while he will become attached to you, and will quit his snarling and begin to wag his tail. You can then begin to handle him and make an obedient servant of him. In my present situation, the wolf never leaves me, but stands guard at my door and keeps off many more dangerous foes. Thus it is that we make friends with Poverty." Henry smiled doubtfully and went on his way.

Ministerial Aid Fund.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me to call the attention of subscribers to our Ministerial Aid Fund to the fact that the sessions of our colleges are drawing to a close, and that we need funds to meet the board of our beneficiaries. All who can possibly do so will help us greatly by making payments upon notes—and we will not refuse other contributions.

I want to heartily endorse the plan of erecting a hall on Millsaps campus with a view of reducing board. It will not only help us to educate the young ministers, but will aid others to procure an education.

The Educational Association and Boards of both of the Mississippi Conferences could do no better than concentrate on this project.

Perfected.

Many years before Michael Angelo had made for himself a name, when but a boy, he walked slowly through the streets of a small city of Italy bending and swaying beneath the weight of a huge block of marble he carried in his arms. He stopped to rest again and again, letting the block slip to the ground while he rubbed his aching arms. When nearly home, an old man approaching him, cried:

"Hey, Michael! where are you carrying that huge stone? Of what use will it be to you?"

The boy glanced quickly toward the speaker and smiled. Laying the block of marble down, he stepped, and passing his hand carefully back and forth on its rough surface, said gravely:

"Signor, there is an angel in this stone, and I mean to find him and help him out."

"An angel in the stone, Michael?" echoed the old man in surprise.

"Yes, signor, there's an angel in that stone," he repeated, with a bright glance up in his questioner's face; and, lifting his burden, he passed on.

For many days after the boy was busy with mallet and chisel, chipping and hammering, rounding and smoothing, and chipping until the vague outline of a figure grew from the shapeless stone.

Day by day the chipping with mallet and chisel went on, and the irregular outlines of the figure settled into grace and beauty. Gradually, as it neared completion, sensibility and intelligence shone in the marble features. At last the angel was finished in all its beautiful proportions, and the boy, throwing aside his tools, stood with clasped hands before it in an ecstasy of delight. The manhood of this boy genius is well known to the most of you.

It is not Angelo's skill that I would dwell upon; it is what God can make out of man, taking him in his crude state, with all the deformities, infirmities, and hideousness of sin, and transforming him, in heart here and in body hereafter, until, a perfected spirit, he shall be fully fitted to dwell with his Maker.

But God will not reform man without his consent and co-operation. There is much endurance required in the process. The chipping and chiseling and shaping under God's touch and discipline means affliction, persecution and tribulation. If we tire of the suffering and take ourselves out of his hand, we shall be left by the wayside, worthless and utterly unfit for a place in the palace of the King.—Domestic Journal.

Growth.

We are not to be always mere babes in Christ, but go from milk to meat, keeping what is child-like, putting away what is childish. We are to grow into manly intelligence and independence, capacity and consistency, steadfastness and stability. We must not linger among rudiments, be always under tutors, be narrow in knowledge and love, hesitate and vacillate, and turn back to weak and beggarly elements.

These are childish things which the man of God puts away in virtue. This Christian manliness means freedom from littleness, selfishness, and implies the courage, capacity, magnanimity of a manly nature, inspired by faith in God. "To virtue, knowledge." Why? Because only the man is fit to get and to use knowledge. Educators say that only the manly mind is competent to grapple with the higher forms of truth. Sir William Jones, in his "Andrometer," gave the first twenty years to mere growth of body and mind, preparatory to ten years to be spent in severe study.

How often parents err in being impatient of the slow advance of their children toward true learning! They look for signs of knowledge acquired rather than the power to acquire. They overrate mere attainments and underrate mental growth. Education means discipline—not a dead mass of accumulations, but power to work with the brain; and so manhood comes before knowledge, for only the man wields well the Titanic hammer.

The intellectual truth illustrates the spiritual. Knowledge is power only when a muscular manhood wields the weapon. Faith precedes knowledge in the divine order, because only the child-like spirit is fitted to know the truth. Without child-like humility and docility we run the risk of proud self-confidence, intellectual absorption, idolatry of reason. Without faith in God we can recognize neither the starting point nor the goal of all knowledge, and are in danger of calling falsehood truth and crowning folly with wisdom's diadem.

So does manhood precede knowledge, for in order to use knowledge effectively there is needed a manliness of stature, a maturity of judgment. In that strange transition period from the intuitive to the rational, from the time when the child accepts everything upon others' testimony to that when he demands a reason for his faith, many a soul has suffered wreck; but when the child of God has grown to manly stature and strength, experience enables him to say: "I know whom I have believed." He may drive before the wind of independent inquiry out upon the ocean of truth. There is a needle that points to a celestial pole, and a firm hand on the helm. He knows his true direction, and will steer clear of danger.

To the child of God, grown to manly stature in Christ, knowledge is more than an acquisition—an attribute of soul. It becomes a faculty of insight into divine things. He sees not with reflected or refracted ray, but with the ray direct. The blindness of the natural man is gone, and his eyes are open to behold wondrous things in the works and word and character of God. To him is revealed a true knowledge of self, and of the woes and wants of humanity. Above all, it takes a ripe manhood in piety to study the science of divine mensuration and know the breadth and length and depth and height of the love of Christ.—A. T. Pierson, D. D.

Gossips.

"Take heed what ye hear."

A discreet man sifts carefully what he hears and reads before he accepts it or repeats it.

More and more we realize that current sayings are largely unreliable. We can not safely depend upon more than one-half we read, or one-fourth we hear. The air is often full of hints and intimations and rumors and surmises of evil, but, thank God, the great bulk of them are unfounded. Men and women are not half as bad as the tongue of scandal says they are. It is singular how readily good people will lend their ears to damaging reports about their neighbors, and more ready often to accept it, than its opposite. A confirmed gossip is an unmitigated nuisance, the terror and grief of many country towns.

Half the trouble in the church and outside the church comes from their mischief-making, but even out of this evil it is possible to extract some good.

We deprecate the power which a mosquito has to annoy a man, or which a gossip has to harm those morally above them and bespatter them with the slime of their own uncleanness. But harmful as the tongue of gossip is this benefit sometimes results.

It frequently deters from other evil. Men shrink and cringe from "what folks will say" of them from the lash of the scourging that the tongue of gossip gives.

It is a mighty leverage for holding wicked men from lives of sin. When prayers and tears and pleadings fail to keep a man or woman clean, the sharp cutting lash of public criticism will do it. Men shrink from being placed upon the rack of this inquisition, from being dragged through the public streets by the tongue of scandal. Thus this common evil may be productive of some good.

Reputation may be effected by these mischief makers, but they can not touch the character.

Reputation is only what people think of us, but character is what we really are, and what God thinks of us. Truth will always vindicate itself at last. The mud of false report will, like common mud, brush off as soon as dry, and a noble life will shine right on despite it.—Country Church.

Barrel of Brains.

The minister's "barrel" is a mysterious receptacle which the congregation is not allowed to see—only to hear. An old deacon spoke very highly of his pastor's sermon one morning and added:

"May I ask which end of the barrel that come out on? Your barrel is like the widder's in Scripter; it never seems to give out."

"I am glad that my sermon suited you," replied the genial dominie, "for I got part of that at your house, part came from neighbor B'——s, and part from poor Mrs. C——, in whose room I spent an hour, and one hint I got came from your boy Frank who rode by my house on 'old gray,' without any saddle or bridle. I picked up some of the best things in that discourse during an afternoon spent in pastoral visiting."

We think that dominie didn't buy any barrel.—Country Church.

WANTED!

A Teacher for three months, to teach English, Mathematics and Music.

MRS. M. J. THOMASON,
Charleville, La.

Here Is Your Chance.

During the next sixty days we make the following offer:

For $2.50 we will send the ADVOCATE one year and a copy of Christian Womanhood. The price of the ADVOCATE is $2; the price of the book, $1. This book has had an extensive sale, the sixth thousand being now on the market. This offer applies to renewals as well as new subscriptions, provided the renewal extends the subscription to January, '95.

The following notices, selected from a vast number that have appeared in the church papers, will give some idea of the character of the work:

The best thesaurus of facts concerning womanhood with which we are acquainted.—Dr. C. F. Deems.

We hope it will be read by every man and woman in the church.—Florida Advocate.

We hope it will be extensively circulated and carefully read.—NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Heartily recommended.—Dr. John E. Edwards.

This volume is the result of patient investigation and thoughtful study of the whole question treated. In the formulation of the case and in analyzing the testimony a vigorous, well-poised, legal mind is brought to bear. Dr. Black, moreover, establishes the points of his discussion as a skillful general establishes his lines in the face of an alert enemy. As he begins, so he closes, leaving the impression that a master in Israel has written bravely and tellingly of Christian womanhood, maintaining his position at every turn. The book is needed, and will long be in popular demand.—Sunday-School Magazine.

Don't miss this opportunity.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

EGG OMELET.—Allow a cup of milk to three eggs. Beat the whites and yelks separately, stir into the milk, add a little salt. Pour into a buttered frying pan, cover tightly, and cook very slowly on the top of the stove till done. This makes a very delicate dish, suitable for dyspeptics as well as eupeptics.—Exchange.

EGG SAUCE.—Boil three eggs hard, chop them fine, rub a tablespoonful of flour into three tablespoonfuls of butter; stir into this the chopped egg, and pour over it nearly a pint of the water the fish was boiled in; add a cup of thin cream or rich milk, boil up once, season with white pepper and salt, and pour over the fish.—Woman's Work.

ALMOND CAKE.—Five eggs, leaving out the whites of two, one cup of butter, two of sugar, three and a half of flour, one of sweet milk, two small teaspoonfuls baking powder. Bake in layers. For filling: one cup of sugar, one cup of sour cream beaten well, half pound blanched almonds pounded, mix all with the whites of the two eggs well beaten.—Exchange.

SALLY LUNN.—Beat two eggs, put in a pint of milk, a cake of yeast (about a tablespoonful) dissolved in a cup of water, add to this nearly two pints of flour, stir it in, then put in a tablespoonful of melted butter, and salt to the taste; into the eggs put a teaspoonful of brown sugar, beat all to a thick batter, and set to rise at night; in the morning, if too thin, add a little flour; place in a cool oven to rise, and bake quickly—split and butter while hot.—Woman's Work.

TEA ROLLS.—Into two quarts of sifted flour rub a tablespoonful of butter, make a hole in the middle of the flour, and pour in a pint of boiled milk lukewarm, a half cup of yeast, a half cup of sugar, and a little salt. Let this stand over night. In the morning mix all together and knead thoroughly. Put back in the pan; press the knuckles into the dough till they reach the bottom of the pan. When the dough has risen to a full oval it is ready to mold into rolls. Cut out with a biscuit cutter, put in a buttered baking pan three quarters of an inch apart, let stand in a warm place till light, and then bake about fifteen minutes.—Housekeeper.

AGRICULTURE.

BY REV. J. W. MCNEIL.

The Strawberry.

There are a great many varieties of the strawberry. The question has been made, Where did they come from? how did they originate? Before answering this question it would be well to know there are two classes of plants—those termed the perfect and imperfect. The perfect are bisexual, has stamens, and the plants are called staminates. These have the power of self-pollenizing, or self-production, while the imperfect has only pistils, and the plants are called pistillates. They do not pollenize only in an imperfect form; hence in order to make good fruit must be planted in close proximity with a staminate variety.

Now, it is a fact when the two—staminate and pistillate—are planted near each other, and the seed of the pistillate are planted, the result is a new variety or varieties often very different from either of the parent berries.

To illustrate: Many years we handled nothing except the Wilson Albany Seedling; had no other variety on my farm, had never had. There were numerous plants on my farm of the native wild strawberry, which we noticed usually were pistillates. There originated a new plant in close proximity to the plants of the two mentioned. This new variety is now known as the McNiel berry—a pistilate, in some respects a very superior berry.

Mr. F. M. Brown, a neighbor of mine, put plants of the Hoffman and McNiel berry near each other, away from all other plants. He got as a result a very superior berry now known as the Lena, which is a very strong staminate, and different in general appearance from either of its parents. Thus we see the origin of new varieties, the cross between the staminate and pistillate, which fill the place of male and female in the plant creation.

Now, as to the best varieties, this depends upon for what they are wanted home or distant markets. As we have said before we have tried, at least, fifty of the different kinds, and for our use the number is now less than half a dozen. Among the best, it is observable for our latitude or climate, are all Southern seedlings. At one time we thought the Wilson unsurpassed; that has proven itself among us a failure. The Hoffman and Cloud Seedlings now stand as our leading and most profitable varieties. The Lena is now coming to the front, and if it continues its character as now among us, it will supersede the Hoffman as a staminate variety. It is prolific, firm and well flavored.

The McNiel berry stands with our State Experimental Station, in some respects, among the best. It has with us only one objection: it is a little late; but as a family berry it is unsurpassed. It is large, firm, well-flavored, and its aroma not equalled by any berry we have ever known. The varieties mentioned are suitable for most Southern farms, both for market and home purposes.

All Interests Interlinked.

At the meeting of the State Agricultural Society, in Savannah, Hon. P. W. Meldrim, in welcoming the society to that city, said with great force and beauty:

"A spirit has gone abroad, as unfounded in reason as it is pernicious in influence, which seeks to array agriculture against commerce, which seeks to array agriculture against manufactures, against finance, against transportation, against science and against art. That the members of every class should unite for the promotion of that welfare of the class is wise and laudable, but to unite for the injury of members of other classes is unwise and reprehensible. The best citizen is the man who, without reference to the class to which he as an individual belongs, sustains the measure which most conserves the interests of the State.

"Where all classes of a State unite for the public good, the greatest good to the State is the result. Without manufactures the farmer would not clear the forests, nor clothe himself and his wife and child in comfort, and would only sustain the barest existence.

"Without finance he would have no medium of exchange. Without commerce, agriculture's handmaiden, for the results of the labor of the one land into the laps of those of other lands, there could be no civilization.

"Without science to investigate and without art to apply he would reap only a harvest of barren regret. Without transportation he would have no market. It is fortunate for Georgia that this society exists. Devoted to your calling, conservative and patriotic for more than four and a half decades, you have upheld the honor and the dignity of the State. Guided by a sense of justice, your actions directed with wisdom and tempered with moderation, you have earned the respect of all classes. All classes regard you as the great conservative force, the best preservative of the equilibrium of the State. The mother of Georgia, fair Savannah, welcomes you, her children, to her heart and homes."—Southern Cultivator, 1891.

HYGIENE.

Line upon Line.

A recent English writer, author of the Riddles of the Sphinx, says: "The length of life will soon, on an average, extend over two generations; that is, men may reasonably expect to see their grandchildren grown up, and it is evident that population will be fully maintained if one-fifth to one-sixth of the women in society provide for its continuance; that is, the services of four out of every five might be dispensed with from this point of view."

This result has been brought about by the diffusion of knowledge as to the laws of life and health. There is scarce a paper or magazine that has not in it, somewhere, at some time, a discussion of domestic science, cookery, household economics—a flavor, so to speak, of "pots and kettles." A distinguished American poetess, now dead, twenty-five years ago refused to write for a very successful weekly journal because it had a column devoted to "pots and kettles." This objection would at the present time keep her out of almost all weekly journals and a large number of magazines.

But in spite of the multiplication of cooking schools, of writers in every department of domestic science, of preaching and exhortation without cessation, diminution, or end, we still, multitudes of us, continue to "dig our graves with our teeth." There are plenty of people who don't know, for example, that tea and coffee that stand on the grounds become active poisons. You will see in some kitchens the teapot or coffeepot on the stove all day long, and the beverage made in the morning lasts till night. Of course, the appetite for food is slight, and your coffee toper lives principally on coffee, and can not be comfortable without it.

Pork continues to be in many families a staple article of diet, increasing the prevalence of scrofula, tape-worm, and humors of various sorts. "How can the animal which was cursed under the law be blessed under the gospel?"

The broiling-iron and the baking and stewing pan have succeeded to and displaced the frying-pan in the best regulated kitchens; but in far too many kitchens everything, almost, is fried in the "products of the hog," and served swimming in his fat.

"My first children," said the mother of a large family, "I was always dosing with chalk mixture, or paregoric, or castor oil, or something else. But these last four hardly know the taste of medicine. Suitable food, plenty of sleep, regular hours, and proper clothing keep them in excellent health. Instead of paregoric and chalk mixture, I give them boiled milk and toast; instead of castor oil, plenty of fruit, figs, raisins, and apples; as the younger ones are out only during the middle of the day in Winter, they rarely have croup; a heavy woolen shawl pinned around their necks at the slightest indication of croup or cold on the lungs, and staying in bed, wards off trouble in that direction; and so they are rarely in need of any dosing."

But as in spite of all the preaching in the thousands of pulpits in our land the need of preaching still exists, so in spite of all the preaching of the gospel of hygiene the need of constant admonition and instruction still exists, and "line upon line" is still imperatively needed.—New York Advocate.

Fatigue the Danger Line.

The line of danger to health is the line of fatigue. When a person has gone to the very limit of his strength, he has made himself the possible prey of any disease to which he may be exposed. Tired out with his business, a man becomes chilled in the five-minute wait for the street-car, and goes home with material for a cold. If a woman uses her strength too closely in going to committee meetings, in club work, or in the hundred and one ways that the women of to-day find their efforts directed outside the home, she comes too near the line of exhaustion for safety. The fatigue of a shopping tour and the bad air to which one is exposed in the crowded stores is a combination fruitful of illness. Work, take exercise; but, if within your control, slacken the speed and lighten the burden as you find yourself getting too tired to speak pleasantly or to think clearly, especially when the nerves and digestion protest against such a condition. Grip and influenza colds find easy victims in run-down, tired-out men and women, most of whom are in such circumstances that they could avoid such a liability to illness. Those who must overwork unavoidedly, or who can not get two or three meals a day, must run the risks to which their deplorable condition exposes them.—Health.

Large as a Dollar

Were the scrofula sores on my poor little boy. They were especially severe on his legs, back of his ears and on his head. His hair was so matted that combing was sometimes impossible. His legs were so bad that sometimes he could not sit down, and when he tried to walk his legs would crack open and the blood start. Physicians did not cure. I decided to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla. In two weeks the sores began to heal up; the scales came off and all over his body new and healthy flesh and skin formed. When he had taken two bottles of

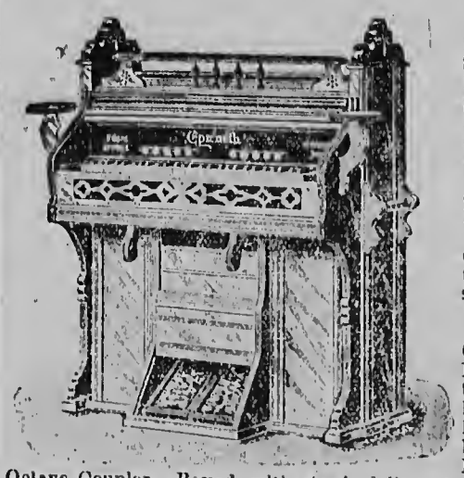
ORGANS AS PREMIUMS.

We have made arrangements to offer a rare bargain in the way of organs as premiums to our subscribers. The organs which we handle are the Epworth Organs. These have not heretofore had much sale in Mississippi and Louisiana, though they have had an immense sale throughout the North and West and also in some of the Southern States. Do you want a small organ for your church? If so, read the description given below of Style No 102, and see how it would suit you.

STYLE 102. THE EPWORTH CHAPEL ORGAN.

HEIGHT, 51 IN.; WIDTH, 23 IN.; LENGTH, 48 IN.



Best Low-Priced Chapel Organ.

Walnut case; Hard Wood Panels; Finished Back; Lamp Stands; Handsome Fret Work; Full Length Music Desk; Engraved Ornaments; Hand Rubbed; Oil Finish; Pedals covered with Brussels Carpet; Metal Guards on Pedals.

This is the Organ for Churches and Sunday-schools, where a First-Class Action is Desired.

In a good, plain case, the quality of action and tone being the same as in the higher priced styles.

Style 102. 12 Stops.

EPWORTH CHAPEL—Five Octaves, containing four sets of Reeds of two and one-half Octaves each. STOPS—Principal; Dulcet Diapason; Diapason Forte; Vox Angelica; Principal Forte; Cremona; Melodia; Echo Horn; Celeste. Metal Octave Coupler. Boxed, with stool, delivered on board cars at factory.

The catalogue price of this is $87. We will give it as a premium for one hundred subscribers. Send us the cash $200, for the subscribers, and you get the organ free. If you can't get one hundred persons to subscribe personally, perhaps you have well-to-do members of your church who will pay for several poorer members, thereby bestowing a blessing upon them by giving them a religious paper and at the same time helping to procure an organ for your church. If you don't exactly like Style 102, then read the description of Style 302.

TWELFTH GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The twelfth General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, convened in the city of Memphis, Tenn., in the First Methodist Church, at 9 o'clock A. M., Thursday, May 3, 1894.

All the Bishops and more than three-fourths of the members were present at the opening of the session.

Precisely at the appointed time Bishop Keener called the large audience to order and read Hymn No. 221, which was sung with the spirit and the understanding. Bishop R. K. Hargrove then led the Conference in prayer. The first Scripture lesson, Psalm lxxii, was read by Bishop A. W. Wilson, and the second lesson, II. Corinthians iv, by Bishop E. R. Hendrix. The second hymn, No. 206, was read by Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald, and the Conference was again led in prayer by Dr. Anderson Hunter, of Arkansas.

Bishop Keener called the Conference to order and requested Rev. W. P. Harrison, secretary of the last session, to call the roll, which he did.

It was highly gratifying to find such a large proportion of the delegations present at the first roll call.

Rev. W. P. Harrison, D. D, was nominated and elected secretary for this session. Rev. J. J. Tigort, D. D., was, on nomination of D.. Harrison, elected first assistant, and several other assistants were nominated and elected.

A motion to adopt the rules of the last session without reading provoked quite a spiey discussion, and, finally, the rules were read and amended in the item concerning the number of the Standing Committees, and the mode of their organization was adopted.

On motion, the Conference resolved to meet at 4:30 o'clock this evening to form the committees and to select the seats of the several delegations.

The Quadrennial Address of the Bishops was then read by Bishop Granbery, by whom the address was written. The address was long, able, weighty, and covered the whole ground of the work of the church for the four years past, and it outlined some of the needs of the work for four years to come. We hope every member of the Methodist Church will read carefully this utterance by our chief pastors.

It was then ordered that a special committee be appointed to distribute the several parts of this address to the appropriate Standing Committees.

After sundry announcements the first session of the General Conference adjourned with the benediction by Bishop J. C. Keener.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Conference was opened at 4 P. M. with religious exercises conducted by Rev. J. O. Branch.

A Special Committee of Nine was ordered on the Bible Cause and on the Sabbath. A Special Committee of Five on Introduction and Fraternal Correspondence.

The presiding elder of the Memphis district and the pastors of our churches in the city were constituted a Committee on Public Worship.

The list of the Conferences was called, and the names of those assigned on the several Standing Committees were read.

Rev. R. H. Mahon, presiding elder of the Memphis district, then appeared, and, on behalf of the churches and citizens of Memphis, he extended a most cordial welcome to the Bishops and members of the General Conference. This address was couched in eloquent words and abounded in choice bits of history connected with Memphis. On behalf of his colleagues and the General Conference, Bishop Keener delivered a beautiful and touching response.

The chairmen of the several delegations appointed a committee to assign the delegations to seats in the Conference room.

The Conference adjourned with benediction by Bishop A. G. Haygood.

SECOND DAY.

Conference convened at the appointed hour, 9 A. M., and the religious exercises were conducted by Dr. E. A. Yeats, of North Carolina. Bishop Keener in the chair.

The list of absent members was called, and some who were absent yesterday appeared and took their seats.

The Minutes of yesterday's session read, corrected and approved.

The secretary read the Minutes, "The twenty-seventh session of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the twelfth session since the division in 1844."

This reading provoked quite a spirited discussion. The Conference finally made the journal read, "Twelfth session of the M. E. Church, South, and the twenty-seventh session since the beginning of our history." Some controversy arose between the secretaries as to whether this is the twenty-sixth or twenty-seventh session of the General Conference—one counting the Christmas Conference of 1784, and the other declining to count that among the General Conferences. This matter is worthy of investigation. The Minutes of the afternoon session read and approved.

Bishop A. W. Wilson then took the chair. The regular order of business was called.

Board of Church Extension, Sunday-school Board, the Epworth League, and the American Bible Society presented communications which were referred to the appropriate committees.

The special committee on seating the delegations reported that the allotments had been made. The North Georgia, Arkansas and the Louisville and other delegations asked for more room. This question provoked an extended and spicy discussion.

The roll of Conferences was called for appeals, memorials and petitions. On motion it was ordered that all appeals, memorials and petitions be indorsed by caption, so that they could be announced and referred to the proper committee without being read.

The Conference adjourned with benediction by Bishop Wilson.

THIRD DAY.

Conference convened at the appointed hour, and was opened with religious exercises by Rev. Horace Bishop. Bishop A. W. Wilson in the chair.

The Minutes of yesterday's session read, corrected and approved. Bishop J. C. Granbery took the chair.

A report was made as to the permanent organization of the several Standing Committees.

The Conferences were then called for memorials, appeals and resolutions to be referred to committees.

A proposition to amend or improve the Rules of Order produced a lively debate and some degree of disorder. This was referred to a special Committee of Five.

So far the work of the General Conference has been preliminary and routine, and somewhat tedious and uninteresting to others than members of the body.

FOURTH DAY.

Morning session was opened with religious services conducted by Dr. T. H. B. Anderson, of California. Bishop J. C. Granbery in the chair.

The Minutes of Saturday's session read and approved.

Bishop Hargrove took the chair.

A communication from the British Wesleyan Church was read and referred to Committee on Fraternal Correspondence.

The report of the commission appointed by the last General Conference to prepare a chapter on Administration of Discipline was made the order of the day for Wednesday immediately after the regular call.

After sundry announcements, the Conference adjourned for the day.

The Methodist Conference.

The General Conference of the Southern Methodist Church, now sitting in Memphis, has very important work before it. The Methodist Church has always been known for its militant spirit. Its preachers are not much given to controversialism on mere points of creed. They take a very particular and direct interest in every-day affairs. They are prone to look for texts in the stones and running brooks. They show in a marked degree that spirit of soldiership that becomes the follower of the cross. They are brave, hard-working, uncomplaining men, who prefer to stand between the plow handles and to break the fallow ground of the wilderness. The Methodist preacher is at his best when a pioneer, extending the range of the gospel. He likes to have his feet on the ground rather than to ride upon the clouds. He likes to seize the gospel ax and make a clearing, that two blades of grass may grow where only one grew before. All Methodists are enthusiastic. They make sunshine. Their churches are filled with an atmosphere that seems electrically charged with religious enterprise. Its members have always a good deal of work on hand—work that relates to the material as well as the spiritual welfare of mankind. The members believe in the brotherhood of man. It is the loving kindness of Jesus Christ they strive to present. But in the defense and in the propagation of their faith, they are staunch, resolute and fearless. They know how to wield and when to wield the sword of the spirit. The Methodists are wonderful church builders. Their bells may be heard ringing in the out-of-the-way places of the earth. They take pleasure in giving when the purposes of the church are to be furthered. One strong feature of the Methodist organization lies in the ability of the Bishops to concentrate the forces of the church upon a particular object. They are able to do this, because the members have been made to experience a sense of personal interest and responsibility. Therefore, when your Methodist undertakes to spread the gospel he spreads it. He always has his armor at hand and holds himself in readiness to go out and do battle. With a hymn book upon his tongue he achieves prodigies of valor for his Master. He does not hesitate to take his religion into the marts of trade, or the arena of politics. He is a Methodist on Monday morning as well as on Sunday morning. His Methodism makes him a stronger man in all the affairs of life. It is a panoply that he wears all the time. It fits him and it does not embarrass him. He wears it unconsciously, almost. It is his habit. It is refreshing to look upon the chief representatives of this mighty church, as they sit conferring as to what is best to be done to advance its interest. And another thought occurs. These devoted men are all Americans to the core. They form a strong pillar of the State. They are not to be swayed from fealty to American institutions. They not only have their gospel, but they have their country. Many of these men now so soberly clad have carried muskets in desperate charges across bloody fields, or have stood amid shot and shell giving consolation to the dying or binding up the torn limbs of the wounded. The country is very safe so long as the Methodist Church exists to develop American citizens of the best type.—Appeal-Avalanche.

The Advocate for Twenty-Five Cents.

We will send the ADVOCATE from now until the first of August for twenty-five cents. This period embraces the session of the General Conference. The ADVOCATE will contain reports of the proceedings of the General Conference. All Methodist people ought to keep posted in regard to the action of the General Conference. Let all our subscribers make this offer known and constitute themselves agents for the paper. Let it be remembered that the cash must accompany each name. We will do no book-keeping for anybody on this proposition. This offer is made only to new subscribers.

OUR PUBLISHING INTERESTS.

The Publishing House has increased its volume of sales, number of publications and circulation of periodicals; has caused to be translated and has published religious books for the use of our Spanish-speaking missions, and has paid out of its profits $70,000 to the Conference fund. It is in sound financial condition, and well equipped for its work. In accordance with the action of the last General Conference, the book agents have published the Pacific Methodist Advocate to the very great advantage of our work on the Pacific coast. The Christian Advocate and Quarterly Review deserve a larger patronage than they receive. The large sales of Sunday-school periodicals justify a liberal appropriation of money to raise them to the highest attainable excellence.

In accordance with the system of colportage ordered by the last General Conference, many of the Annual Conferences have appointed general colporters, and entered on the task of diffusing more widely our literature. Time and experience are requisite to carry the plan into successful operation, and to show how it should be modified so as to be more efficient. The whole question should be carefully considered by the General Conference, and such action taken as will make the system thoroughly effective if retained.

CHURCH EXTENSION.

The last General Conference so changed the Constitution of the Board of Church Extension as to require two corresponding secretaries. The assistant secretary, after a year's faithful service, resigned his office to resume regular pastoral labors. The burden of duties, though too heavy for one man, has been well borne by the chief secretary, with occasional help during two years, and the constant and undivided service of a competent layman during the last year. The receipts of the four years on assessments are $244,565.86. Total, including specials and loan funds, $304,834.85. The unnecessary multiplication of connectional offices should be avoided, not only on account of their expense, but also lest it make an excessive draft on the men best furnished and fitted for the pastorate. This general caution must not be construed as derogatory to our plan of church extension. We prize it as among the foremost agencies in importance and effectiveness for extending the work of Christ. All our Annual Conferences and some of our foreign fields have shared the benefit of this enterprise, and it is preparing to do much greater things. A number of strong Conferences have not yet done anything toward establishing loan funds, but, we trust, will move more vigorously along this line during the next quadrennium. It is worthy of remark that in the last four years the value of our churches has increased 22 per cent., and our parsonages 27 per cent. The Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society, with a small membership and scanty resources, has accomplished great good.

OUR INSTITUTIONS OF LEARNING.

The unification of our literary institutions in a system under the supervision of a Board of Education for the whole connection was recommended by the Committee on Education in 1886 and 1890, and strongly advocated. The reports were laid on the table and no final action was taken. The desirability of such a measure seemed to be admitted, but there was a financial difficulty in the way. Some members opposed the educational assessment which the plan of four years ago required. Others objected because a fund was annually raised in their Conferences for the benefit of their own colleges, one-fourth of which would be diverted to the expenses of the Board and of other schools. We trust that this whole subject will receive your patient consideration, and that your wisdom may devise a plan which will promote the great end in view without detriment to any interests. An advance in our educational work is a pressing need. We have many schools of various grades, and they are well distributed throughout our territory. Local interests sometimes tempt to their excessive multiplication, dividing the patronage and resources of every kind almost, if not quite, to the point of starvation. What we need is to enlarge the course and means of instruction. It would be unwise and unjust to depreciate the services which our colleges have rendered us, notwithstanding the embarassment of deep poverty. Able and learned professors on meager salaries have cheerfully performed extra duties to save the expense of employing a full corps of teachers, and have rivaled in devotion to the church our laborious and poorly supported traveling preachers. They have sent forth young men trained in intellect, studious in taste and habit, and grounded in mathematical, classical and philosophical knowledge; young women also well taught and accomplished, and admirably qualified for the duties assigned them by Providence.

The moral and religious influence of these institutions has been sound, positive and powerful; a revival each session, with every mark of genuineness and depth, has been the rule; the students have been confirmed in a pure faith and in love to the church. These facts, while gratefully acknowledged, should not blind us to their beggarly condition in respect to endowment. They need a larger teaching force. Division of labor is indispensable to completeness and thoroughness of work. The marvelous development of natural science adds emphasis to the demand. Ample libraries for reference, apparatus for experiment, and laboratories for practical study, are a necessity. Sure, prompt and liberal payment must help to draw and hold faculties of the highest ability against the attractions of State institutions. These things can not be accomplished without large endowments. Vanderbilt University has the largest endowment, $900,000; Emory College, $200,000; four other colleges have each $100,000 or upward. One of these, Millsaps College, at Jackson, Miss., and also the Women's College, at Lynchburg, Va., under the same trustees and of the same grade of scholarship as Randolph-Macon College, with an endowment of nearly $100,000, deserves particular mention, because they were opened during the quadrennium. It is high time to awake on this matter of endowment. Our men of wealth have a grand opportunity and responsibility. Millionaires among us are very rare. But we have a number of members with fortunes ranging from $100,000 to nearly a million. They ought to be proportionally rich in good works. Some of them are; they have come nobly in the help of the Lord in this exigency. The majority content themselves with paying their share of the regular assessments on their churches, although it is a mere pittance in comparison with their income; they help our needy institutions neither by gifts while they live nor legacies at their death. We have hoped to see the day when their thought and conscience would arouse to the sin of selfish hoarding and selfish use of riches, and to the obligation and blessedness of sanctifying their estates and business to the cause of Christ and humanity. We will pray, but can not hope, for this happy change. The self-denial of the poor and generosity of men of moderate means, supplemented by larger donations from the few who are both able and willing to give, must secure to our struggling colleges long life and sufficient resources.

VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY.

Vanderbilt University, from its connectional importance, deserves special mention. It is pressing upward the standard of education. The department of dentistry, pharmacy, medicine, law and theology have added each a year to the course of study, with only a slight check to patronage, while the number of students in the academic and post-graduate courses steadily increases. The university has taken high rank. To do this it was projected on a scale to consume all its annual resources. If it is to advance with the growing demands of the age, and to be a factor in its progress, the present endowment is manifestly inadequate. Others have generously laid for it a broad foundation. The church must now by liberal use of its money build on this foundation. The endowment of scholarships, fellowships, chairs and departments appeals to our broad-minded men of means. We dare not shut our eyes to the fact that several of the institutions in this country far surpass us in material resources. The venerable chancellor, Landon C. Garland, LL.D, bending under the weight of more than four-score years, has resigned the burden of administration which he bore from the beginning of the enterprise with great ability. The Board of Trust has been fortunate in finding among the faculty a worthy successor in the vigor of young manhood, James H. Kirkland, Ph.D., the recently installed chancellor. His administration opened auspiciously. It would be a becoming act in the church to endow the chancellorship in honor of Bishop McTyeire.

We continue to recognize the peculiar claims of the Colored Methodist Church in our sympathy and aid. Our brethren of this church commend themselves to our confidence and approval by their modest, prudent and Christian conduct, and we are persuaded that they are doing a good work, in which they should be encouraged and assisted by their white brethren. They have gratefully received what has been contributed to their Paine and Lane Institutes for the training of teachers and ministers, and, though not large in amount, it has proved a timely and valuable service. We hope that the General Conference may devise some plan by which more efficient aid can be afforded in maintaining these important training-schools. Their need is still urgent, and we trust will call forth a cheerful and bountiful response. What is of more moment to us, as patriots and as servants of Christ, than the moral and religious enlightenment and elevation of the millions of negroes in this country? We should count it a duty and privilege to co-operate, as far as in us lies, with their own churches, especially with the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, toward this great end.

THE BARNES HOSPITAL.

The late Robert A. Barnes, a successful merchant and honorable citizen of St. Louis, Mo., who had previously endowed two chairs in our Central College and given $27,000 to the St. Louis Methodist Orphans' Home, bequeathed property worth, if we add the interest since accumulated, $1,100,000, "for the purpose of erecting and maintaining a hospital for sick and injured persons, without distinction of creed, under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." The will named Richard M. Scrugge, Samuel M. Kennard and Smith P. Galt as trustees, and vested the power of filling vacancies in the Board of Trustees in the college of Bishops of our church. His mother was a Methodist, but he was not himself of our communion. The controlling reason which he gave for selecting our church as the administrator of his charity deserves to be mentioned, not in any boastful spirit, but as an incitement to the faithful discharge of our responsibility: "A person ought to invest his money for doing good as he invests it in his business, where it will bring the largest returns. While the Methodist Church is one of the largest Protestant denominations, it is one of the poorest financially; yet it does more work among the poor than any of the others, so I think my fortune will do most good with it." We trust that it will be conducted judiciously and energetically for the noble purpose in the mind of the founder, and we commend his example of wise munificence to the imitation of other men of wealth.

THE BISHOPS ABLE TO DO THE WORK.

By the blessing of God we have been able to preside at all the sessions of the Annual Conferences in the United States and Mexico, and in many District Conferences. China and Japan were visited by Bishop Wilson in 1890, and by Bishop Key in 1892. Brazil was visited by Bishop Granbery in 1890, and by Bishop Wilson in 1892. With our present number, if any of us be providentially disabled for work, his colleagues can supply the lack of service without serious inconvenience.

THE ECUMENICAL CONFERENCE.

Our church was represented by sixty-four delegates in the second Ecumenical Conference, which sat in Washington, D. C., October 7-20 1891. We appointed the delegates as authorized by the General Conference, and selected, mainly, brethren who had not been members of the former Ecumenical nor of the Centennial Conference. The occasion was impressive. Many able papers were read, and many eloquent addresses were delivered. They were given extensive circulation by the secular and religious press, and have since been published in a volume. The substantial agreement of all branches of Methodism the world over was illustrated; the comparison of different practical measures for effecting the common object was instructive and stimulating; the religious and social communion quickened piety and brotherly love, and now emphasis was given to the adoring exclamation which has broken forth at successive stages of the Wesleyan movement, "What hath God wrought!" It was recommended that a third Ecumenical Conference be held in the year 1901, subject to the approval and direction of all the several bodies of Methodism. We deem it appropriate to usher in the next century by such a demonstration, the wisdom of holding these meetings so often as once in ten years.

THE CHURCH AND POLITICS.

It is not amiss to repeat what has often been declared—that our church is strictly a religious and in no wise a political body. Our sole business is to preach and serve the kingdom of God. There are many questions, economical, social, and in part ethical, of burning interest in this day, which our pulpits and churches may be tempted to substitute for the simple gospel. Men claiming to head advanced thinkers and wide-awake philanthropists may sneer at us as unpracticable dreamers and devotees of shadows and abstractions, because we give ourselves wholly to things spiritual and eternal. But Christ is the rock, and only those who build on him build safely. The more closely we keep ourselves to the one work of testifying to all men repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, the better shall we promote the highest good of our country and race. As a church, we are not related by affiliation or antagonism to any political party. As a citizen, every man should carry his judgment and conscience into politics and all other spheres of life.

FIFTY YEARS OF HISTORY.

To-day we recall the last General Conference of the undivided Methodist Episcopal Church, which sat in the city of New York, fifty years ago. Under the plan of separation then adopted, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was organized. We desire to record our gratitude to God for his good hand upon us, by which we have been led and prospered during the half century of our separate history. We humbly and penitently confess that we have come far short of doing our whole duty and improving fully our great opportunity; but we thank God, and take courage, in review of the good work, which by his providence and grace, we have been enabled to accomplish in conserving and spreading scriptural holiness through these lands. "Hitherto the Lord has helped us." "The best of all is, God is with us." We do not speak in vainglory or in detraction from others. From the heart we pray: "Grace be with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity." We hail them as brethren and companions in the kingdom and patience of Christ. A special tie binds us to the Wesleyan families in our own and other countries. With warm, fraternal regard, we note the growth and prosperity of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which has a common history with us from the beginning of Methodism on this continent down to 1841, and rejoice in the grand work they are doing in the name of Christ. The two churches have each its own genius, its own distinctive spirit, views and methods, whose development, without injurious strife and obstruction, demands as a condition the preservation of its denominational integrity and independence. Our many points of agreement furnish a basis and motive for cordial co-operation with them in any judicious measures to reduce whatever friction and waste of resources result from the relations now existing between us.

May the blessings of the great Head of the church crown our labors more abundantly from this time than ever in the past!

An Appeal to the Young People of Mississippi.

Dear Young Friends: Millsaps College needs a large hall for young men of limited means. We must build it. The hall is a necessity. Would it not be a handsome work for the young Mississippians to furnish the agent with money to build this hall? If we can get at the work right, we can do it. I want the young Methodists of Mississippi to send me five thousand dollars. Let us go to work in earnest. Let the young people from five to twenty-one years of age send me from fifty cents to one dollar each. Let every church and community be represented. The name and amount will appear in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. May our Father inspire your hearts, dear young friends, to help us build this hall! Let me hear at once from you. Your friend,

Jackson, Miss. I. W. COOPER.

P. S.—Remember Major Millsaps duplicates every cent you send.

FROM THE WORK.

W. C. H.: "We closed a two-weeks' meeting last night. Results: Three accessions, quite a number of renewals, and a very gracious work in the church."

Rev. M. H. Moore, Brookhaven, Miss., May 2: "We have just had a glorious revival in our church here. Rev. N. M. Clark, of the Mississippi Conference, assisted us. Besides the church being very much revived, nineteen were added to our number on profession of faith and nine by letter. We think it very important that spirituality be at high tide here, as the young ladies attending this college will be affected largely by their spiritual environments. Pray for us."

Rev. R. H. Barr, P. C., Trenton circuit: "I came to my appointment on Jan. 22. I had to rent a house until I could build a parsonage. We began work about the first of February, and completed it April 14, at a cost of $200. This makes two parsonages that I have built in four years. We are now comfortably domiciled. I have a very desirable work. The people are very kind to us. I have six appointments, and five Sunday-schools doing good work. I think the circuit is on the upgrade, spiritually. Success to the ADVOCATE! May it live long to spread Methodism over the world!"

Rev. Robt. Selby, Biloxi, Miss.: "Bro. Adams promised a report of our meeting at its conclusion, which report falls to my pen to make. I send it in lest I forget it. There was manifest throughout the meeting on the part of the women and some of the men of the congregation an unceasing interest which, I assure you, was greatly appreciated by me, and which will be a source of strength to me throughout the year. God bless the women who labored with us in the gospel! The work done was as substantial as I ever saw; no sensation or unwise schemes used to get people to express a desire to be saved. The gospel was boldly and lovingly preached, and as the appeals from its divinely given authority were made we could see upon the interested countenances of men that the Spirit was attending the truth to the hearts and consciences of men. One of the most gratifying and substantial results of the meeting is that the young people asked that their afternoon prayer meeting be continued. This means a good deal for the advancement of our Lord's kingdom. We received eight into the church, six on profession of faith, one renewal and one by certificate. Bro. Adams preached to the edification of the Christian and the regeneration of the sinner with strong effect. Bro. Mitchel is a great help to the pastor, and the constant attention and work he gave to the meeting was an inspiration to all of us. God bless and prosper him in spiritual and temporal affairs. His morning Bible-readings were strengthening to the congregation. I will add that two workmen are progressing on the improvement of the church-building, and in a short while we will have a pretty church."

Rev. V. V. Boone, P. C., Magnolia, Miss.: "My work has been enlarged since Conference by the addition of one church, and four other preaching places, with Rev. J. T. Abney as junior preacher. Bro. Abney was changed from the Lebanon circuit, to which he was appointed at Conference, and seems to be the very man we need in this new field. He reports a church organized at Whitestown, with forty-odd members to date. Bro. Norsworthy has delighted and profited our people by his two quarterly visits. As a preacher, we would call him the St. James of to-day. Strong, clear and fearless, he emphasizes the practical side of religion, but always to the edification of the spiritually minded. This is our third year with this good people, who are very kind to us, and mindful of our wants. The necessity is upon us of building a better church in the town of Magnolia. The Ladies' Aid Society have purchased four of the most eligible lots in the town, at a cost of $600, and have presented them to the church with proper deed. We expect to sell the property now in use, and use the proceeds in the erection of a new church on these lots. This society, heretofore local, has learned that the broader their field of operation the more they can do; so they have joined the Parsonage and Home Mission Society. Bro. Cooper made his first visit to Magnolia as agent of Millsaps College, not long since. He raised about $90, and enlisted the Sunday-school in the work of building the new boarding hall. Last Sunday they had their first public exercise. It was a very pleasant and profitable occasion, and a grand success for the beginning. He provided the children with little contribution barrels, in which they saved their nickles and dimes. One little girl earned most of hers ($1 50) by helping 'Auntie' make the beds. This was the largest amount. They are going to repeat these exercises quarterly, and are expecting a visit from 'Gilderoy.' They will send Bro. Cooper $12 50, the result of this first meeting. They expect to raise $50 this year."

Rev. C. W. Perkins, Tyro, Miss., April 13: "The parsonage of this work is located at Tyro, which is 20 miles from Sardis, 20 from Coldwater, 20 from Oxford, and 20 from Holly Springs. I preach in four counties: Tate, Panola, Lafayette, and Marshall. I have only eight appointments that I fill regularly. Two of these are schoolhouse arrangements for nights in the week. Now, as to my work, I want to tell you a secret. I felt that as I could only preach once a month to the same congregation, that I might backslide; so I thought a few days' meeting somewhere on the work was needed in my case, but I did not want to say protracted meeting to the farmers at this time of year, from fear that the people might not call me back next year; so I worked this stratagem: I announced at Mt. Vernon, Sunday, that if they would come back Monday and bring a knob, we would have two services; so Monday I preached on the subject of preparation (example, Nehemiah; text, Neh. I, 4, and II, 7), and stated that I, as their pastor, needed like preparation for the journey of this year that lay out before me, and they, as farmers, needed it. Well, the Lord came down and gave us such a glorious service that I told them that we would meet again the next day. The people then began to suspect my object, and said it was out of season to have a protracted meeting this time of year. They had never heard of such a thing in the country. I told them then from that fact we might know that we were on the right road, for the Book said that we must be instant out of season as well as in season, and that anybody could be instant in season. Well, we continued the meeting four days, the result being four additions and seven children baptized. We have had two conversions since at another place. I would recommend a few days' meeting to all the preachers, for I was revived myself. Once a year for revivals, I think, makes it too long between meals. The people here are supplying us with the necessaries of life. We have a good people on this work—social, plain, accommodating, but sadly lacking in spirituality, and then there are so many within the bounds of this work who are not converted. I ask the prayers of every Christian, that God may use me this year as he has never done before in bringing souls to Christ and in strengthening the Christians. We are making preparation for Children's Day services all over the work. I send enclosed one subscription to the ADVOCATE. I am working for the ADVOCATE. I hope to be able to send down a good list soon, for I must say it is a better paper than it has been since I have been reading it."

MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

(A Suggestion to Preachers.)

I gave Dr. I. W. Cooper a cordial invitation to attend Brandon station in behalf of Millsaps College. Not that there was much revenue in sight to the college (the contrary being true), but, as a member of the Mississippi Conference, I was under the most sacred obligation to have the interests of Millsaps represented before my people. What was the result? Why, a collection of $157, and in addition a resolution by our Epworth League that each member will raise one dollar for the college during this year. Also greater sympathy for and enthusiasm over Millsaps College, which will cause some of our boys later on to be among its students. Besides the powerful gospel sermons of Dr. Cooper were uplifting and stimulating, causing us to have nobler views of life, and inspiring us to do more for God and humanity. The visit did Millsaps College good, it did Brandon good. Hence the suggestion, viz.: Write a letter of inquiry to Dr. Cooper, and find out when it will be convenient for him to be with you. Let no brother in Mississippi fail to do this soon. Having written to him, and settled upon the time, then have the people from far and near to come out and hear. Should you think that your people will give very little to the college, then they need his visit most, and, by all means, urge upon his coming to your work as soon as possible. As for the collection give yourself not one second's uneasiness either before or after his coming; he attends to that part himself.

Never before in the history of Mississippi, Methodism has such an opportunity been offered for furthering the cause of Christ as Millsaps College gives to us preachers. If we do our duty towards this institution, not many generations shall pass before it will have changed the moral tone of the entire State. W. J. ROBERTS.

Brandon, Miss.

Robert Paine Mitchell Home.

To the Preachers and Members of the Methodist Church in the Winona district, North Mississippi Conference:

Immediately upon my return from our recent District Conference I presented the cause of "Robert Paine Mitchell Home" to our church here, and requested that a contribution be brought to a service to be held the fifth Sunday in April. Yesterday, after a strong and deeply spiritual sermon by Dr. I. W. Cooper, the baskets were passed, and the result is that we have fifty dollars for our enterprise. We shall expect each charge in the district to do as well, except Winona and Greenwood, who will give one hundred dollars each. Let the preachers present this cause to their people without delay.

I shall be very much obliged to each preacher if he will at once send me the names and postoffice of all his official members, and also of any other persons who will be likely to respond to a personal appeal for a small contribution for this fund.

Dr. Cooper's visit was greatly enjoyed by our people. His two sermons were "in demonstration of the Spirit and power." J. R. BINGHAM.

Dr. Shepard will have exclusive control of the business among white people, for whom the company have a splendid outfit.

Greatest on Earth.

James M. Brooks, Washington Ave., St. Louis, Mo., makes affidavit that he suffered from Rheumatism for years, until persuaded to try Drummond's Lightning Remedy, and that by its use he has been fully restored. He says the remedy is the greatest on earth. This is high praise, but fully warranted by other miraculous cures. If you want to be cured, send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and they will send to your address two large bottles of their remedy. This treatment lasts one month, and will cure any ordinary case. Agents Wanted.

MY TRUNDLE-BED.

As I rummaged through the attic listening to the falling rain,
As it pattered on the shingles and against the window-pane,
Creeping o'er the chest and boxes, which with dust were thickly spread,
Saw I in the farthest corner, what was once my trundle-bed.
So I drew it from the recess, where it had remained so long:
Hearing all the while the music of my mother's voice in song,
As she sang in sweetest accents what I since have often read,
"Hush, my dear, lie still and slumber, holy angels guard thy bed."

As I listen, recollections that I thought had been forgot,
Came with all the gush of memory rushing thronging through the spot;
And I wandered back to childhood, to those merry days of yore,
When I knelt beside my mother, by this bed upon the floor,
Then, it was, with hands so gently placed upon my infant head,
That she taught my lips to utter carefully the words she said;
Never have they been forgotten, deep are they in mem'ry graven,
"Hallowed be thy name, O Father! Father, thou who art in heaven."

This she taught me, then she told me of its import great and deep,
After which I learned to utter, "Now I lay me down to sleep;"
Then it was with hands uplifted, and in accents soft and mild,
That my mother asked our Father, "Father, do thou bless my child."
Years have passed, and that dear mother long has moldered 'neath the sod,
And I trust she sleeps in Jesus in the love and peace of God.
But that scene at Summer twilight never has from mem'ry fled,
And it comes in all its freshness, when I see my trundle-bed.

Do You Pray in Your Family?

BY MR. J. F. M'KENZIE.

Much has been written, and still more has been spoken from the sacred desk, upon this subject. But has it had the desired effect? Do all Christian families call upon the name of the Lord daily?

The question now is, why? Why do they not daily call upon the name of the Lord in their families? Shall the answer be, "It is not a divinely appointed duty"? We think not.

But, if we have no express precept on the subject, we have many examples in favor of it. Can we suppose that Abraham, who was so careful to instruct his household in the way of the Lord, neglected this duty? David prayed with and for his household, for it is said that "he returned to bless his family." No doubt he received many of the divine inspirations that made him "the sweet singer of Israel," at the family altar. Certainly Joshua must have prayed in his house; for how otherwise could he have fulfilled his resolution, "As for me and my house we will serve the Lord"? Now I would ask everyone who is the head of a family, when you adopted the resolution, "As for me and my house we will serve the Lord," did you not feel it your duty to pray with and for your family? Can there be Christian religion in a house without prayer? Is it not inconsistent to say, "I and my family will serve God, but we will have no family altar nor offering?" Is not prayer an essential part of the service of God?

Answer these questions honestly and candidly for yourself, and I think you will see that you can not serve God acceptably, and neglect praying in your family. Do you omit it for fear of being guilty of will-worship, or through a dread that it might in some way offend God? Ask the man who holds family prayer, if it ever distressed his conscience to hold family prayer.

Then ask yourself if it ever distressed your conscience to not have it, and mark the contrast.

The man who daily holds family prayer is your neighbor, and will give a candid answer. Have you not seen the fruits of it in his family? Does he not merit the confidence and trust of all with whom he comes in contact? Does his family not hold a high standing in the Church, the State, and society in general? Why is this? It is because God is worshipped in that family. "If God be for us, who can be against us?"

It is admitted, I believe, to be the will of God to pray to him socially. The Lord's Prayer was given for daily and for social use. The disciples were directed to use it when they came together for prayer. Is God to be worshipped socially, and not to be worshipped in the first, most permanent, and most interesting form of society, that form of society which God instituted himself—the family? The Lord's Prayer is for daily as well as social use. "Give us this day our daily bread," is one of its petitions. It simply asks sustenance for "to-day," and not for "to-morrow." Then if from this we conclude that it should be daily, where, but in the family, the society that is most permanent and abiding, can it be done with propriety? The common blessings, shared by the family, call for daily thanksgiving. The daily wants of the family call for daily supplication. Is it not fit that the families, retiring to sleep at night, should commit themselves to divine keeping; and on rising in the morning unite in praising God for having been their protector? We can not comply with the apostle's exhortation to pray "everywhere" unless we pray in the family, as well as under other circumstances.

Is anyone in doubt whether the practice or omission of family prayer will be the more pleasing subject of retrospect from the dying bed or the eternal world? Parents should not forget that presently will come the long-deferred and greatly dreaded season of taking the last leave of those whom their decease is to make orphans.

O! then, what a sweet thought it will be to enter the dying meditation, that they have been in the habit of daily bowing down with their children in prayer, and commending them to the care and grace of their heavenly Father, and that they may now indulge in the confident hope that he will infinitely more than supply the paternal place which they are to leave vacant.

I think all admit the duty of family prayer. I judge so, from the trouble many are at to find an excuse. The usual excuse is inability. They say they have not the gift. What gift? All have the power of calling together their families, night and morning, and have the ability to read a portion of the Scripture to them. Then, can they not kneel down and make known to God their common desires and needs, and give thanks for what they have received? It possibly will be a little difficult at first; but the beginning of almost every good habit is difficult. If you can not frame a prayer of your own, use some form of prayer. There are many forms suitable for all occasions.

We would not recommend the use of forms of prayer, except as a guide, for the tendency in using them is to use the words simply and not to express the sincere desires of the heart. What if you fail once, or twice, or even twenty times, do not become discouraged at that. Demosthenes tried many times before he became an orator. Besides, how do those who presume on their inability to conduct family prayer, know how much assistance they might receive from God if they would make a faithful and earnest effort?

If anyone shall condescend to read this, who does not pray in his family, I advise him to begin immediately. He knows he will never be sorry for it if he does, but he is not so sure he will not be sorry for it if he does not. Then begin at once, and do not delay. I think it was Jay who said, "A house without prayer is like a house without a roof—it has no protection."—Ex.

There can be no doubt that excessive novel reading has an effect upon the moral and religious life analogous to that of excessive drinking. It weakens the moral fiber, makes the will irresolute, destroys self-restraint, renders impossible many of the nobler virtues.—R. W. Dale.

MOTHER IS RESTING.

BY MAY M. STEEL.

The long rough road is ended,
Her weary feet have pressed;
How rough to her weak footsteps,
Perhaps we never guessed;
But—with the weary journey,
She'll be no more distressed.
The face we bend and softly kiss,
Bears no impress but that of bliss.

We know that many pages
Within the book of years
She has perused with anguish,
Amid her falling tears,
That partings, change and doubting,
Have caused her many fears;
Forgotten now, each pang of woe,
No grief again her soul will know.

We gaze at her dear features,
Within the casket bound,
And think that she is dwelling,
Where changeless peace is found,
That there no painful partings
Her loving heart will wound;
And, weeping for her, "Loved and gone,"
We gather strength to walk along—

Along the way before us,
Whither—we do not know,
It may be strewn with blessings,
And pleasures we may know,
Or thickly set with dangers,
May bring us naught but woe.
Yet—o'er life's pathway she has come,
At last, unto her heavenly home.
—Good Housekeeping.

A Heart-Hungry Mother.

A venerable clergyman of Virginia said lately: Men of my profession see much of the tragic side of life. Beside a death-bed the secret passions, the hidden evil, as well as the good of human nature, are often dragged to the light. I have seen men die in battle, children and young wives in their husband's arms, but no death ever seemed so pathetic to me as that of an old woman, a member of my church. I knew her first as a young girl—beautiful, gay, full of spirit and vigor. She married and had four children; her husband died and left her penniless. She taught school, she painted, she sewed; she hardly gave herself time to eat or sleep. Every thought was for her children—to educate them, to give them the same chance which their father would have done. She succeeded; she sent the boys to college and the girls to school.

When they came home, pretty, refined girls and strong young men, abreast with all the new ideas and tastes of their time, she was a worn-out commonplace old woman. They had their own pursuits and companions; she lingered among them for two or three years, and then died of some sudden failure of the brain. The shock woke them to a consciousness of the truth. They hung over her, as she lay unconscious, in an agony of grief. The oldest son, as he held her in his arms, cried:

"You have been a good mother to us!"

Her face colored again, her eyes kindled into a smile, and she whispered: "You never said so before, John." Then the light died out, and she was gone.

How many men and women sacrifice their own hopes and ambitions, their life itself to their children, who receive it as a matter of course, and begrudge a caress, a word of gratitude, in payment for all that has been given them!

Boys, when you come back from college, don't consider that your only relation to your father is to "get as much money as the governor will stand." Look at his gray hair, his uncertain step, his dim eyes, and remember in whose service he has grown old. You can never pay him the debt you owe, but at least acknowledge it before it is too late.—Issue.

The True Prosperity.

It is an unquestioned fact, susceptible of proof to persons who are capable of thinking rationally, that the basis of all prosperity is the agricultural interests of the country. Upon the farmer we are dependent for the very things which all our business operations have for their primary object, viz., bread and meat. Let the farmer suspend his operations, and he and the balance of the world will die. Nothing is plainer than this; and yet it is strange that even the farmer, who holds the life of creation in his hands, seems perfectly oblivious of his power.

There is no greater grumbler than the farmer; and it is not because he does not occupy a position infinitely superior to men of all other avocations, but because he does not appreciate the fact. He is allured and blinded by the fictitious lives of those who occupy the professions, or those engaged in trade, who handle large sums of money, but have no solid foundation for their prosperity, and who are subject to all the capriciousness of finance and the humors of stock gamblers.

During the late months of depression in trade, when the merchant was sitting idly behind his counter, his bills becoming due, and nothing with which to pay; the mechanic thrown out of employment, not knowing where his next meal was to come from; manufactories shut down and the operatives tramping the country in search of bread to keep life in their bodies—who then was the independent man? Obviously, the farmer. He may not handle as much money, or he may not dress foppishly, or he may not be able to "cut a swell," like his fellow-citizen in the city; but his corn-crib is full, his smoke house groans with its weight of meat, his bins are full of feed for his stock, his wood-pile reaches towards the sky, and when the cold blasts come, he has nothing to do but to make himself comfortable under his own vine and fig-tree, while the man in the city whom he envies is struggling against the adversities of a cruel and heartless world. The farmer may have no money, but he has those things which represent money, and are very much better. He is undoubtedly the man who, in a financial crisis, stands away above his fellow-mortals and can view with comparative indifference its fateful results.

Now, the wonder is that the tiller of the soil, who should be a thinking man, should fail to see these things in their true light. As an evidence that they do not, they so often depreciate their honorable calling as to refuse to train their sons to it. This is why so many country boys rush to the towns and cities and take little clerkships at starvation wages and hard work, thus depleting the number of agriculturists to make questionable gentlemen of them.—Charlottesville Progress.

Good Words for Boys.

Be gentle, boys. It is high praise to have it said of you, "He is as gentle as a woman to his mother." It is out of fashion to think if you ignore mother and make a little sister cry whenever she comes near you that people will think that you belong to the upper stratum of society. Remember that, as a rule, gentle boys make gentle men (gentlemen).

Be manly, boys. A frank, straight-forward manner always gains friends. If you have committed a fault, step forward and confess it. Concealed faults are always found out sooner or later. Never do anything which afterward may cause a blush of shame to come to your face.

Be courteous, boys. It is just as easy to acquire a genteel, courteous manner as an ungracious, don't-care style, and it will help you materially if you have to make your own way through life. Other things being equal, the boy who knows the use of "I beg your pardon," and "I thank you," will be chosen for a position, three to one, in preference to a boy to whom such sentences are strangers.

Be prompt, boys. It is far better to be ahead than behind time. Business men do not like tardiness. They realize that time is valuable. Five minutes every morning amount to half an hour at the end of the week. Many things can be done in half an hour. Besides, disastrous results often follow lack of punctuality.

Be thorough, boys. Black the heels as well as the toes of your shoes, and be sure that both shine. Pull out the roots of the weeds in the flower-beds. Don't break them off and leave them to spring up again when the first shower comes. Understand your lesson. Don't think that all that is necessary is to get through a recitation and receive a good mark.—Exchange.

Mother's Influence.

Not long before the death of John Quincy Adams a gentleman said to him, "I have found out who made you." "What do you mean?" he asked. "I have been reading the published letters of your mother." The old man's eyes flashed brightly, he rose and said in his peculiar way, "Yes, sir, all that is good in me I owe to my mother." This mother wrote to him when he was twelve years of age, "I would rather see you laid in your grave than grow up a profane and graceless boy."—Sermon Illustrator.

CURES OTHERS

MRS. SCOTT.

M. W. SCOTT, ESQ., of the U. S. Marshall's Office, Atlanta, Ga., writes: "For many years my wife has been a constant sufferer from indigestion, sick headache, nervous prostration and all other complaints that the female sex is heir to, and, after trying many remedies and doctors with but little or no relief, I persuaded her to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery.' She was so out of heart she returned the answer that it would be like all the rest—of no good; but on my account, she said she would try it, so I got one bottle each, and before she had used half of a bottle she felt that it was benefiting her, and she has continued to improve ever since, and now thinks it the most wonderful remedy on earth for her sex, and recommends it to all suffering females. She has not been so well in ten years.

I write this without any solicitation and with a free, good will, so that you may let all who may suffer know what it has done for her." Sold by medicine dealers everywhere.

OBITUARIES.

We publish obituaries of 600 words free of charge; for all over this, one cent per word must be sent. If you want the notice to appear in its order, comply with this rule. Count the words and send one cent for each word over 600. Poetry excluded from this column.

ELLIS—Bro. G. R. Ellis, of the Mississippi Conference, writes me: "My dear mother passed away from earth to heaven on the ninth instant, and our hearts are sad; but our trust is in him who doeth all things well. I want to get you to write her obituary, as I know of no one so well prepared to write it as yourself, being a life-long friend as you are. You know more about her than anyone else, and the sore trials she had to bear in rearing a large family of children. I trust, dear brother, that you will not think that I indulge in egotism when I say that a woman with the gifts that my mother was endowed with, and whose Christian character was of such a high order, deserves something more than a mere passing notice in the obituary columns. She was a poetess of high type. She has left a book of poems in manuscript, which, if published, would grace any library in the land."

She was born in Charleston, S. C., April 4, 1813. She was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at fourteen years of age, under the pastorate of her uncle, Bishop Wm. Capers; was married at the age of nineteen, and was the mother of ten children—four boys and six girls—of whom seven are living. She endeavored to "train up her children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." Sister Ellis was a sister of Rev. Thomas Capers, of the old Alabama Conference, who was at one time stationed in Mobile. She was educated in the schools of Charleston, S. C., with Bishop Wightman.

Her pathway through life was a rough and thorny one, but she bore it all with remarkable patience and Christian resignation, and the last ten years of her life wore years of much bodily suffering, which she bore without a murmur. She said many times before she received the fall which hastened her death that the end was not far off; but there was no fear. "I know," she again said, "that the same kind hand that has led me along the rugged way will not forsake me in the dying hour." To Bro. J. H. Huiland, of the North Mississippi Conference, as she neared the river, pointing upward with her trembling hand, she exclaimed: "I am all right up yonder." Not long before she stepped over the stream she composed her dying verse:

"My languishing head is at rest,
My sighing and weeping are o'er,
My quiet, immovable breast
Is heaved by afflictions no more."

She requested if he planed upon her bosom, where it now lies with a beautiful bouquet of white flowers, emblematical of her own pure life, to be transplanted in the paradise of God.

I first knew this precious saint in 1845, near Mobile, Ala. She visited our home in Mobile. I was then a youth. I learned to love and admire her sweet Christian character—so patient, so meek, so full of faith—all of which impressed my young heart and so influenced my young Christian life that her memory is precious to me. I will tell her of it when I meet her in that shining home. Years have intervened since I last looked up into her placid face radiant with the smile of heaven, but memory still does its pleasant work. Rest, dear saint, till we meet again.

GEO. BANCROFT.

FORD—Dr. JAS. B. FORD was born in Greenville district, S. C., Feb. 2, 1835; died at his home, in Clay county, Miss., Jan. 18, 1894.

When a small boy Dr. Ford moved with his parents to Tippah county, where he grew to manhood and entered upon the practice of medicine. At the close of the war he settled in what was then the southeastern portion of Chickasaw county, and resumed the practice of his profession. On Jan. 28, 1867, he was happily married to Miss Margaretto C. Shell, in whom he found a fitting companion in all the relations of life, and in Summer of same year joined the M. E. Church, South, in which he lived constantly until, in response to the Master's summons, his soul departed as peacefully and as quietly as the dying day. Earth has lost one of its purest, noblest and best men.

It would be hard to find or even conceive a more unselfish Christian life. Modest in the extreme, but firm and unwavering in his moral and religious principles. He had no superior as a citizen, was a model of honesty. Gentle, kind in disposition, with a heart that encompassed humanity. An ample store of good advice for all who asked it, but never forced upon anyone. He loved the church with a devotion characteristic of only the true Christian. In his many years' service as steward he was always tender and considerate, but prompt and attentive to the duties of his office, setting an example of liberality worthy of imitation.

As a physician he ranked among the best in the country. No man could enjoy a higher degree of respect or receive greater love than was bestowed upon him by his patients.

He leaves a devoted wife, two accomplished daughters, an exemplary son, many relatives and a host of friends to mourn their loss. But their loss is his eternal gain. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord!" During his last illness he gave many attestations of his perfect resignation to the will of God. The star of his hope grew brighter and brighter as he neared the shore. He trusted fully the promises of his Redeemer, and was not only ready, but frequently expressed himself as being anxious to cease from suffering and be at rest.

Quietly and peacefully we laid him to rest, and the many present attested their deep sense of the loss they had sustained. It was a common expression proceeding from bleeding hearts, "We will never find one to fill his place." No one misses him more than his pastor, W. W. MITCHELL.

POSTELL—Had loving watchfulness and tenderest care been potent to stay the hand of death, ELIJAH C. POSTELL would not be so sadly missed in that home now so desolate by his absence. He had lived in Madison county for many years, but had only resided in Canton for the past five years.

He was a native of Lancaster county, S. C., and had attained his seventieth year. He was innately a gentleman. Refined, intelligent, gallant, generous, always respectful to the aged and infirm, always sympathetic with the unfortunate, affable and kind to his friends and neighbors, polite and courteous to ladies, and especially fond of children, it is not strange that he is so much lamented.

He was converted to the religion of John Wesley in his eighteenth year, and was a Methodist in principle and lived up to his privileges in peace and war. He served in the Mexican and Confederate Wars. He was wounded in the former, and also received a wound at the battle of Chickamauga, which maimed him for life. Notwithstanding his many misfortunes Capt. Postell was always cheerful and hopeful, with that genial disposition that he never lost.

He was a worker in the church, and often led in the class or prayer meeting. The good people of Soule Chapel were for a long time honored by his superintendence of their Sabbath-school.

His death was sudden and entirely unexpected, as he seemed to have quite recovered from his last sickness, and on the morning of Feb. 12 expressed himself as feeling unusually well. At 12 o'clock that night he had an attack of apoplexy, losing all consciousness, and died at four o'clock on the morning of Feb. 13, 1894. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord!" His work is finished, his body consigned to mother earth, while his immortal soul rests with the saints of all ages in the paradise of God. Good bye to the loving husband, father and friend; good-bye till we meet above, where there is no death. AMICUS.

BROWN—Mr. LAURENCE BROWN, of Jackson, La., peacefully passed away on Wednesday morning, March 28, 1894, aged thirty-seven years. He suffered intensely for several weeks, but bore it patiently to the end. He leaves a devoted wife, three children and one brother to mourn their irreparable loss. Some time before he left us he realised that death had set his seal upon him, and had become reconciled to God's will. "The casket breaks, the jewel still remains."

Oh, think to what a blissful land we have consigned our loved one! It is hard to give up our loved one, but we fully realize "the Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord!" Our loved one has only been transplanted into the beautiful realm above, there to await our coming. Weep not, fond wife and loving children and brother, for your angel only occupies a higher department of God's holy church. God bless the bereaved ones, and finally bring them altogether an unbroken family in heaven!

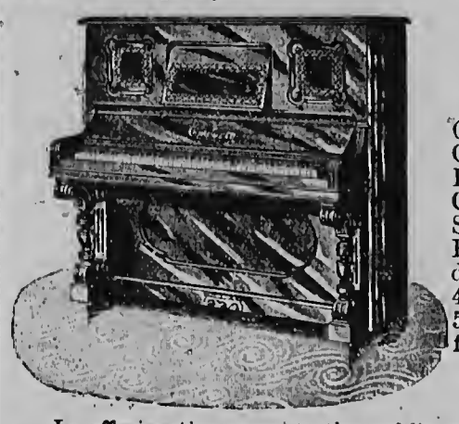
PIANOS AS PREMIUMS.

READ THE DESCRIPTION BELOW OF STYLE 10.

The list price of this instrument is $330. We will furnish this elegant instrument as a premium for new subscribers. If this offer interests you, write us for terms. You may be surprised at the terms we can give you.



STYLE 10.

Seven and one-third Octaves: Chaste Design; Overstrung Scale; Heavy Iron Frame; 3 Strings; Carved Trusses; Improved Sounding Board; Perfect Repeating Action and Sliding Music Desk. Height, 4 feet 4½ inches; length, 5 feet 2 inches; depth, 2 feet 4½ inches.

In offering this piano to the public our object is to provide for the existing demand for an instrument which, although taking up but a small amount of room, possesses the same quality of tone, the same high grade of action, work and material found in our larger pianos, at the same time a plainly but thoroughly well-finished exterior, enabling us to offer it at a price within the reach of everyone who wishes to secure a perfect piano for a small amount of money. This style is a favorite with ministers, as it takes less room and is more easily moved than the larger instruments.

Made in Rosewood, Ebony, Walnut or Mahogany finish.

Boxed with good Plush Stool, Embroidered Cover and Instruction Book. Every instrument warranted for five years.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

"ON THE BEACH."

The twenty-third annual camp meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 11, next, and continue for eight days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates will be obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the camp meeting to begin their journey on July 4, and remain on the grounds until the end of August. Tickets on sale from July 4 to 21. All trains to stop at camp ground station from July 11 to 25, inclusive.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations, before the rush, at the opening of the camp meeting, should address communications to J. H. Campman, chairman Tent and Lodging Committee, 84 Baronne St., New Orleans, La. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to Capt. A. C. Danner, chairman, Mobile, Ala.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations, free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half-rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding-tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Lodging Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution toward defraying the expense of the camp meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous and in the interest of the salvation of souls.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

On May 5 President Cleveland sent the name of Hon. Frank A. Daniels to the Senate for the postmastership of New Orleans.

Chairman Hatch, of the House Committee on Agriculture, has finished his report on the Anti-Option bill agreed on by the committee, and will report it to the House probably early this week.

At a meeting held in Chicago the other day it was decided that the stockholders of the World's Fair should have a dividend of 10 per cent. The treasurer reported that he had a cash balance in hand of $1,450,000.

Founder's Day was celebrated in the public schools in New Orleans on May 4. The pupils were thus taught to revere the memory of John McDonough, whose munificence enabled the erection of thirty institutions of education.

The Constitutional Commission met in Baton Rouge, La., on May 5. The suffrage article was amended with an educational clause, also providing for the ownership of real or personal property to the amount of two hundred dollars.

Gen. J. S. Coxey and his lieutenants, Carl Browne and Christopher Columbus Jones, were attractions in the district police court, in Washington, on May 4, where there were arraigned for violation of the Capital grounds act on May 1.

Women led strikers on to bloodshed in the Connellsville coke region in Pennsylvania, on May 4. Five men and two women on the miners' side were shot, while two deputies in charge of the place attacked were badly beaten.

The mine operators in Alabama will make a united effort during the coming week to break the strike by putting to work at the reduced wage scale every man who can possibly be found that will work. These men will be protected by a strong force of deputy sheriffs.

William Cramp & Sons, the great ship-building firm of Philadelphia, want to build some of the proposed new ships for the British navy. A letter has been sent by them to the British admiralty, saying that as Congress seems disinclined to do anything more in the way of adding to the navy of the United States, the firm is at liberty to seek work from other nations.

A bill has been presented to the Ohio Legislature for the discouragement of lynching bees. It provides that the relatives of a person who has been lynched may recover $15,000, and that in case the lynching has resulted in personal injury less than death the victim may recover $10,000. All the persons found guilty of participating in a lynching shall be sent to the penitentiary for not less than three years.

On May 7, at midnight, a mob numbering from 200 to 500 men marched into the mining town of Horse Creek, thirty miles west of Birmingham, Ala., and began an indiscriminate shooting, alarming the sleeping citizens, who, upon waking, dared not venture from their houses. The mob went to Price's mines and putting dynamite under the boilers, engines and machinery, blew them up. They then wrecked the man-way in their mines and committed havoc generally, firing into the company's buildings. Gov. Jones has called on the State militia to hold itself in readiness.

The Red river is encroaching rapidly upon Fulton, Ark., and the rising waters now threaten to flood the entire place. The water has reached the business portion of the town, and is running under the postoffice and many mercantile houses. Some manufacturing establishments in the north have been compelled to stop operation on account of the water interfering with the engines. North of the city the Iron Mountain Road is under ten inches of water for 600 or 800 yards. The tank in front of the city is fast caving in. Much loss of stock must necessarily occur, and the growing crops will be a total loss.

FOREIGN.

Prime Minister Crispi made an important speech in the Italian Chamber of Deputies on May 4. He said, among other things, that the Triple Alliance was defensive, but not offensive. He made a sensational plea for a continued war footing, which prevailed.

A large fire occured in Dublin, Ireland, on May 4. The loss was $1,000,000.

An official notice has been issued in Rome, saying that, owing to the economic situation in the United States, Italians must not go to America at present.

Salvador has declared a press censorship and all reports are colored to suit the government, unless they are sent out of the country secretly. The rebels are gaining ground. They number now about 2,000 well-armed men, and are likely to be immediately re-enforced from Honduras.

The reduction of the government's majority in the House of Commons on nearly every important division must be accepted from any but most of the extreme partisan point of view as an omen of an early dissolution, and few persons are to be found who regard the situation in any other light.

Tired, Weak, Nervous,

Means impure blood, and overwork, or too much strain on brain and body. The only way to cure is to feed the nerves on pure blood. Thousands of people certify that the best blood purifier, the best nerve tonic and strength builder is Hood's Sarsaparilla. What it has done for others it will also do for you—Hood's Cures.

The strong point about Hood's Sarsaparilla is that they are permanent, because they start from the solid foundation of purified, vitalized and enriched blood.

The Bimetallist Congress continues its labors at London, and the interest in the proceedings has increased so greatly that the meeting is now the most important of current international events. The proceedings have been naturally watched with great interest in this country, where the future of silver is such a burning issue.

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Roxie Circuit.

We are having good meetings at all our churches when we have weather favorable for public gatherings. The last two appointments at Roxie were seasons of refreshment from the presence of God. Last Sunday we held an "all-day's" meeting. The people brought their dinners with them and spent the day with each other at church. At the close of the morning sermon we held a consecration service, pledging ourselves to increased activity in the service of our Lord, and praying for the baptism of his Holy Spirit. After which we raised in subscription and cash all the collections ordered by the Annual Conference apportioned to this church. When we had dined we held our Church Conference. We revised the register, adopted the "Renaldo system" of church finance, appointed a committee on church repairs and authorized the purchase of a church register and record for the church. We have a great power in the Church Conference for good when held regularly and the books properly kept.

Union Gospel Mission.

Last night, at 7.30 P. M., the Union Gospel Mission celebrated its fourth anniversary with appropriate ceremonies. The audience was addressed by Mr. Fred Gardner and Mr. H. Jones, after which Superintendent E. A. Vail read his annual report, which was most gratifying and satisfactory. It showed, among other things, that the total receipts for the year were $242 59 and expenditures $248.39, leaving a debt of $5.80. Forty-eight visits were made to the police jail, 121 services held in the Mission. Total attendance, 2,070. Number of open-air meetings held, 28. Total attendance, 2,955. Requests for prayer, 31; number of conversions, 45; visits made to the sick, 20; money given to the sick and needy, $47.70; number of pieces of clothing distributed, 150; number of pairs of shoes distributed, 10; number of religious tracts distributed, 7,626; number of religious papers distributed, 1,116; number of copies of the Word of God distributed, 867; number of lodgings given to the needy, 78; number of cottage meetings held, 8; number of religious books distributed, 46; number of children attending Sunday-school, 50.

After a delightful programme, which was due to Mrs. M. B. Hillyard, was carried out, refreshments were served to all that were present.

Messrs. E. A. Vail and H. Bieu wish to return their sincere thanks to the editors of the daily and evening papers, also to all kind friends, for their kindness toward the Mission.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE CALL OF MOSES.

(Ex. iii, 1-10; Heb. xi, 23-27.)

The miraculous preservation of Moses in infancy was prophetic of his epochal career. See

1. The strange vision on Horeb.

(1) The attention of the meditative shepherd, Moses, is directed to a burning bush. Whence the fire? What can it mean?

(2) He discovers the reason why the bush is not consumed, notwithstanding the fire. God was in the bush.

(3) The Lord informs the bewildered observer that his presence had sanctified the present abode. Drawing nigh, he first should take off his shoes.

2. This vision is an emblematic portraiture of the church of Christ.

(1) A bush, not a tree. Comparatively, the church will ever be "a little flock."

(2) Not consumed. Though the heathen rage, the gates of hell threatening discomfiture, the church can smile at Satan's rage. Christ walketh among the seven golden candlesticks.

(3) The church is a holy place. Here the Master's honor dwelleth. Alas! that it should be so frequently desecrated by semi-worldly amusements.

3. God assures that he was perfectly familiar with the afflictions of the Israelites. Had seen their tears, heard their groans.

(1) God knows our sorrow, what crosses weigh down our souls. Is aware of our tearful vigils, of the direful lacerations of our hearts.

(2) He sympathizes with us. Men may be hard-hearted, unconcerned. May not "weep with them that weep." But the Lord says: "Be of good cheer."

4. God called Moses to deliver his people.

(1) His antecedents had properly educated him for this important mission.

(2) When God calls men to the ministry of the gospel, he considers their intellectual and educational qualification no less than the spiritual fitness.

What Causes Pimples?

Clogging of the pores or mouths of the sebaceous glands with sebum or oily matter.

Nature will not allow the clogging of the pores to continue long, hence, inflammation, pain, swelling and redness.

What Cures Pimples?

The only reliable cure, when not due to a constitutional humor, is CUTICURA SOAP.

It dissolves sebaceous or oily matter, reduces inflammation, soothes and heals irritated and roughened surfaces, and restores the skin to its original purity.

Besides being the most effective skin purifying and beautifying soap, it is the purest, sweetest, and most delicate of toilet soaps.

WE COME.

BY H. C. P.

We come at early morn to sing
To thee, O Lord, our grateful hymn,
And kneel around the mercy-seat,
With humble prayer thy face to seek.

Again at eventide we come,
And raise to thee our even-song;
O thou, the Way, the Truth, the Light,
Be with us through the coming night.

O may the teaching of this day
Assist us on our heavenward way,
Inspire us with a brighter hope,
And holier thoughts to raise us up.

O lipless to the contrite sigh,
And let the tempted feel thee nigh,
The mourner cheer, the sinner bless
With pardon, peace, and holiness.

Now let our lifted hands arise,
Like ancient evening sacrifice;
And in thy golden censer bear,
O Priest Divine, our evening prayer!

FRATERNAL ADDRESS.

The General Conference met May 11, eight P. M., and after devotional exercises Bishop Keener introduced Rev. John F. Goucher, who spoke as follows:

Mr. President, Brother Methodists: My colleague and I have the distinguished pleasure of presenting to you, and through you to the Methodist Church, South, the fraternal greetings of the Methodist Episcopal Church. At the opening of the church we represent, with hearts in sympathy with the service, we assure you that the Methodist Episcopal Church rejoices in your prosperity, believes in your future, and prays for your continued success and enrichment.

The spirit must of necessity exist in every branch of the Christian church and every organization which reads the Bible, obeys Christ, and labors the advancement of his kingdom. While the genuine spirit of fraternity is inclusive, co-operative, and yearns for fellowship, it is capable of various degrees of intensity.

These are neither capricious nor irrational, but explicable and consequential. Chief among the factors which determine their strength are the oneness of inheritance, obligation and purpose.

Whatever might be the relations of the Methodist Episcopal Church with every other company of God's children, the deepest sympathy and sweetest fellowship should exist between brother Methodists, for, much as we have united in common with others, that, and much more also, we have in common with each other. We can not be grateful of those choice and chosen men through whose ministries God wrought, and we were differentiated from the rest of the world; neither can we forget the opposition which encountered, nor the persecutions which purified, the spirit of Methodism. It is a strength to cherish and emulate the spirit. It has wrought among, attracting and transforming them, as Methodism has in the world to-day fifty thousand men who believe they have been personally called of God, and have been set apart by the Church to the office and work of the ministry. She has one hundred thousand local preachers, seven million communicants, who were gathered instantly out of the world from the naturally inert majority, personally elected, examined and admitted to membership, and about thirty million adherents. The sun, in his unresting journey, always shines upon assembled congregations, and to the ear their endless praise ascends.

The growth and influence of Methodism has been marvelous and unprecedented. The population of the United States from 1800 to 1890 increased somewhat more than eleven-fold. Methodist communicants during the same time increased more than seventy-nine fold—that is, Methodism multiplied her communicants seven times more rapidly in the United States than the population increased.

In 1800 there was in the United States one Methodist communicant for every 85.5 of the entire population, and one Protestant communicant for every 7.1 of the population. In 1890 there was one Methodist communicant for every 13.3 of the population—that is, the proportion of Methodist communicants to the whole population in 1890 was more than one-ninth larger than the proportion of all the Protestant communicants in 1800. Including her adherents, Methodism has made a larger numerical gain in the United States during the first ninety years of this century than all Christianity made in the Roman Empire, and all the world besides, during the first 500 years of the Christian era. One-fourth of the entire population of this country are adherents of Methodism. This gives but a suggestion of her achievements and responsibilities as a force in our national life and in human development. She may not be ignored or disparaged by historian or philosopher, by economist or statesman.

An acorn may be carried without hardening you with its weight. You can crush it into inert matter with but little effort; you may toss it away as a useless thing, yet there are locked up in it the potentialities of 10,000 forests. Plant it where it will have limited root space, give it poor soil, stint its supply of moisture and sunshine, and it may show evidences of life and grow after a fashion for an hundred years; but stunted, deformed and sterile, it will have but little value except as a curiosity.

But take an acorn like the other in every particular, cast it into a strong, deep soil, with the cool, enduring rocks beneath; let the rains of heaven fall upon it, let the generous sunshine have free access to it, let the Summer zephyrs play within its shadows; with spread limbs let it wrestle with the recklessly rushing Winter winds, and it will sink to surer anchorage its active roots, lift with grace and dignity its sturdy trunk, and elaborate its tenacious, compact fibre for a thousand years. Meanwhile it will have developed, stored and transmitted life-force sufficient to cover a continent with forests.

So with a great truth. It may be regarded indifferently, or so hampered and limited that it will accomplish very little through a series of centuries; but let it become thoroughly rooted in a strong, human life; let it occupy and dominate that life fully, and there is no gauging its power. The truth, or doctrine, of "justification by faith" waited fifteen centuries for conditions adapted to its proper embodiment. Then it took rootage in a sensitive, truth-loving, enthusiastic, industrious, consecrated and courageous soul. Thus incarnated, it became the gospel, and Luther became the apostle of individualism, bringing the revelation and inspiration of personal freedom to redeemed humanity.

This truth, thus embodied, was the greatest dynamic force that had taken hold of humanity for more than a thousand years. It had its announcement when the principle of the old Roman civilization, "the good of the few at the expense of the many," was enthroned. Man as man had no value. The infinite worth of a human soul was not dreamed of. "Popes and princes treated the people as cattle in the market." "An iron band compelled all men, great and small, rich and poor, bond and free, to wear the badge of his power." Its direct and natural result was persecution, war, bloodshed, anarchy, for it resisted to the death all ecclesiastical, political and scholastic assumptions. But it developed a strength of conscious conviction that personal freedom is an inherent right, which wore out the Inquisition and survived the Bastile.

A few years sufficed to demonstrate that the personality whose influence would reach into succeeding centuries as a recognizable force was not the "Defender of the Faith," nor the "Christian King," nor the "Apostolic Emperor," nor the pretender to the "Chair of St. Peter," nor all of these joined together in an alliance holy or unholy, but the burly Monk of Wittemburg, the Apostle of Individualism.

The gospel for which he stood was the disintegrating force which broke up the conglomerated mass of humanity, compacted by centuries of oppression and coercion, by greed and kingcraft, and segregated the individual, emphasizing his personal freedom as primary and superior to all usurped or organized authority. It awakened and liberated Christendom from Papal tyranny and dissipated the illusion of the divine right of kings. It has changed the boundaries and rewritten the histories of all the nations of Europe, but it was powerless to protect Germany from Rationalism, France from Infidelity, England from Deism or the human heart from selfishness and excess.

In less than two-score years the movement which Luther's life had launched demonstrated the lack of cohesion, and while the gospel of Individualism has wrought mightily and works to-day, it is but the partial statement of a larger truth.

Two centuries later another person is seen in process of preparation for a more comprehensive ministry. A man, slight of stature, of singularly compact and intense organism, of exact and varied culture, punctilious of proprieties, with marvelous powers of insight and foresight, of generalization and organization, was confronted by the greatest and most inclusive truth, viz.: The Witness of the Spirit.

When this doctrine, or truth, was clearly perceived by this man and was incarnated in him, it became the gospel, and John Wesley became the Apostle of Solidarity.

The Witness of the Spirit is more than Assurance. It is the personal revelation of God to man of that which none but God knows and which he alone can make known, viz.: Man's condition as a sinner, a penitent, a saint; of his justification, his regeneration, his sanctification for work and for work. Of his adoption by the Father, of his fellowship with the Son, that he pleases God and that he is one with God in purpose, desire, effort and inheritance. All this is included in the doctrine of the Witness of the Spirit. Methodism is its organized exponent, and it is her vital and distinguishing doctrine.

When this found utterance unbelief was entrenched in Church and State, in the power of the few and the despair of the many. Methodism proclaimed that "life is a divine trust, committed to souls dear to God, equal among themselves and each the germ of an immortality." It recognized

"The mortal
Through a crown's disguise," and came to men little above the beasts that perish and brought alike to regard themselves akin to humanity. "It sought to unite the humblest and the highest, to merge all minds into one family, and that the family of God." It appropriated the assurance, "All things are yours, and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's."

This solidarity of men and God is the supreme thought of the eternities and the justification of existence. There is nothing more complete than this oneness. It is not of relation only, but of nature and of consciousness also. There is nothing more varied than its applications. There is nothing greater or more inclusive than its realization. It is the force which is reconstructing humanity—reorganizing the world—recasting all creeds. It is the true and eternal basis of fraternity.

1. This spirit of solidarity, the vital spirit of Methodism is reconstructing humanity. An immediate effect of the living and preaching of Wesley, and the other Methodists, was to unify the individual soul with God in persistent effort to realize salvation, and to secure the salvation of others. "The reasoned and passionate philosophy of the times had no power to solace sorrow, to relieve labor, to comfort the poor, to inspire or quicken despondent souls." "Wesley made all his members reformers and philanthropists." "He began ceaseless war upon all evil, and a perpetual struggle to raise up all men." He set all those who agreed with him upon practicing the most systematic living, requiring them "to do no harm, to avoid evil of every kind, and also to do good of every possible sort, and, as far as possible, to all men, to their bodies, to their souls, and especially to them that are of the household of faith." He added to the "Apostles' Creed" the practical confession, "I believe in the solidarity of humanity." This is an inclusive and vital force reconstructing humanity in the unity of the Spirit about God, the center and end of all life.

2. It is reorganizing the world. "Religion effects people even more potentially than it does individuals. It works most freely and faithfully through the social organism."

In the middle of the last century the condition of the world was threatening in the extreme. In America the French had entrenched themselves in Forts Ticonderoga, Niagara and Du Quesne. They had extended their empire without a break from the St. Lawrence to Louisiana, and had excluded the English colonies from all access to the West. Du Preix was apparently carrying to successful issue his plans to add India to the domain of France. In Europe intrigues were going on which resulted in the league between France, Austria, Russia, Hungary and Saxony, the purpose of which was to humble Prussia, extinguish the independence of England, destroy Protestantism, exalt France to be the dominant power of the world and entomb humanity in the superstition, sensualism and ignorance of Roman Catholicism.

England had an almost imbecile king, a venal ministry, an empty treasury; the government was divided and the people were discouraged, when William Pitt, who but a few years before was a cornet of horse, was selected for Secretary of State. He was free from the corruptions of the court, hated and feared by the king, resisted by the cabinet, but approved by the people as necessary to the state. He had faith in the people and was true to them. His hour of power was the high noon of England's opportunity. He believed that by sending an army to Germany he could conquer America, and he determined to stand by Frederick the Great. He protected his flank on the Elbe, and poured subsidy after subsidy into Prussia's exhausted treasury till the victory of Rossbach made possible the construction of the German Empire out of nearly three hundred of the political fragments which were classed as independent powers.

Through his comprehensive policy and the daring, skill and victory of Wolfe at Quebec, the dream of a French Empire in America was destroyed, and this great continent saved from the blight of a Latin civilization and preempted for Protestantism.

Through the contage and dash of Clive, at Plassey, the Indian peninsula, from Ceylon to the Himalayas, was added to the domain of England. The genius of Pitt, working for and with the English people, in three eventful years created Great Britain, made possible the Empire of Germany, and laid the foundations of the United States.

This revolution meant evolution. Henceforth Protestantism was to be the world force. The power, the commerce, the manufactories, the science, the learning, the destiny of the world, are in the keeping of these three nations. They are doing for the promulgation of Christianity that which Rome, Greece and Israel did for its introduction. By treaties they are holding the world still, and securing the right of way for the teaching and the teachers of Christianity.

The English is the one consecrated language, the only one of earth's tongues which never has been used by an idolatrous people in the worship of false gods. The German and English languages were fixed in their forms by the translation of the Bible into them, and they will suggest its teachings until their last root and norm have been destroyed.

Mr. Lecky, in the Intellectual Development of Europe, says of the Wesleyan movement:

"Although the career of the elder Pitt, and the splendid victories by land and sea that were won during his ministry, form unquestionably the most dazzling episodes in the reign of George II., they must yield, I think, in real importance to that religious revolution which shortly before had begun in England by the preaching of the Wesleys and Whitefield."

In his History of the English People, when discussing the causes of these mighty results, Green says:

"A new moral consciousness as we have seen in the movement of the Wesleys was diffusing itself through England, and behind this moral consciousness came a general advance in the national intelligence, which could not fail to tell vigorously in politics." "The Methodists themselves were the least result from the Methodist revival." "Its action upon the church broke the lethargy of the clergy, a new philanthropy reformed our prisons, infused clemency into our penal laws, abolished the slave trade, and gave the first impulse to popular education."

Solidarity first deals with the soul, but this soul and its environment is society, and so it has a broader thinking of humanity whose members are nations.

The individualism of Luther and the solidarity of Wesley, centrifugal and centripetal forces determining the moral orbit of human movement are disintegrating all systems of oppression, recognizing the peoples and tribes of earth about the Lord of lords for whom and through whom are all things, and restoring man to his forfeited dominion.

3. The application of this principle of solidarity is bringing all churches to the definite purpose of developing and extending holiness. It is determining their methods of teaching, relating their creeds and their theologies. Methodism is and always has been evangelistic. The millions of Methodism have come to her individually from personal conviction, through conversion, while the many preachers and laymen she has passed with her maternal blessing into other churches have gone largely for convenience without serious modification of belief, and have been a mighty propaganda of solidarity.

This intense spirit which considered itself related to every other, accepted opportunity as the call to responsibility. It sought to communicate its ministry of relief to every discovered need in the most direct way, and so devised, appropriated or adjusted for its purposes agencies simple, but comprehensive. These Methodist methods, direct and efficient, are used with increased approval by aggressive Christianity all over the world.

Among these is the dissemination of religious literature by means of tracts, cheap publications and periodicals. In Mr. Wesley's plan for popular education in the home and church may be seen the prototype of the Chautauqua idea and of the University Extension movement. A catalogue of his splendid publications, printed about 1756, not including his frequent magazine articles, contains not less than one hundred and eighty-five articles in prose and verse; in English, Latin, Greek, Hebrew, Spanish and German, on grammar, logic, history, medicine, music, theology and philosophy, two-thirds of which were sold for less than one shilling, and more than one-fourth at a penny a piece. His efforts and influence were to simplify religion and every part of learning. To all his preachers he said, "See that every society is supplied with books. Some of them ought to be in every home." He started the Arminian Magazine to continue and expand this work. The Methodist Book Concern of New York was organized in 1789, far in advance of any other church publishing house in this country, and American Methodism has issued more than one-half of all the religious literature published by the denominational press of the United States.

By the organization of lay preachers and helpers, and the itinerant system, by the provision for systematic visitation of prisons, hospitals and the poor, by stated meetings for Christian conference, inquiry and experience, Methodism introduced ready means of applying Christian ministries to the relief of personal need, which are rendering blessed service and widening in their application.

In the influences and achievements which I have indicated, and in many others, in the spirit and methods of Methodism, in her opportunities and responsibilities, Methodists have a oneness of inheritance, obligation and purpose which should bind them together indissolubly.

It is a matter of regret, and yet it was not altogether unnatural, that in the assertion of their individuality the various branches of Methodism should place undue emphasis upon their differentiating characteristics. In the excitement of the new conditions there was doubtless undue zeal to make the personality felt in many places. Methodism in her spirit is inclusive, not inclusive of everything, but of all of a kind; not of all methods, but of those best adapted to secure her clearly defined ends. Her self-assertion and enthusiasm have betrayed her sometimes into adopting false methods, and even to accept the maxims and methods of the world. At times she has so far forgotten herself as to engage in sharp competition with herself. The result of competition is the difference instead of the sum of the forces engaged. It is the spirit of war, destructive in tendency, wasteful in result and satanic in origin.

The age in which we live more than any preceding one, emphasizes the divine principle of utility. This manifests itself in specialization as to work, economy of material and time, and excellence of product. Trusts, syndicates and division of industries are seeking to prevent the waste of competition. The perfecting of machinery is to economize power, save material and cheapen product. The churches have been slow to adopt these business principles, notwithstanding Mr. Wesley incorporated them in the policy of Methodism. His instructions were, "Go to those that want you most and preach most where there is most fruit." Our Lord made usefulness the test of true discipleship. "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit, so shall ye be my disciples."

The divinely appointed means to utility is co-operation. Its value was indicated to Moses in the promise that "five of you shall chase an hundred, and an hundred of you shall put ten thousand to flight." It necessity was shown by the Master when he said: "He that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad." "All things work together for good to them who are the called according to his purpose." "We are members one of another." Not which, but what, is matter for legitimate concern. The past decade has been richer in evidence of Christian co-operation and unity than any preceding one. It is always fit resting to study the points at which life begins to develop for itself a material organism. So, also, the working of the divine principle of co-operation as it is manifesting its constructive energy in the midst of our Methodism is worthy of careful consideration.

In the foreign Methodist missions, where the awful blight of sin and the sharply defined lines separating between the Christian and his surroundings give emphasis to the essentials and produce hunger for fellowship, the missionary of the cross learns to regard every man who calls Jesus Lord as his ally, not as his foe.

The generous, warm-hearted young people who are organizing in Epworth Leagues all through our churches to study Methodist doctrines, history and polity that they may become intelligent Methodists, develop habits of Christian benevolence and realize righteousness, find so much to admire and emulate that they gladly occupy themselves with the apostle's exhortation, "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honorable, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things."

In the amplifications of provisions for thorough education, Methodism is blessing her youth with varied and advanced opportunities, teaching them to discriminate between principles and accidents, thus simplifying relations and strengthening affinities.

You may not determine the general course of a river by the direction of its stream at any one point. "The Father of Waters" flows at some time inward every point of the compass. His current has eddies where it whirls round and round, but it always comes out on the farther side, and he ceases not his onward movement until his wealth of waters mingles with those in the gulf of the Sunny South.

There may be times, as there have been in the past, when men more sincere than wise, or men whose prime motives are not the glory of the loving Christ, may use intense forms of speech, or even be bitterly denunciatory in characterizing or caricaturing conditions and events. "Some have not the knowledge of God," but their influence is growing less and less in the councils of the church.

It is a blessed fact that the movement of Methodism evidences the diminution of antagonism and the development of a spirit of fraternity. The Cape May Commission ended certain controversies. The first Ecumenical Conference illustrated the possibility of fraternity. The Centennial Conference emphasized the desirability of fraternity. The second Ecumenical Conference recommended closer fraternity. The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1888 appointed a "Commission on Inter-ecclesiastical Relations," and made it their duty "to hold themselves ready to enter into brotherly conference with all or any Christian bodies seeking the restoration of the organic unity of the church, or the increase of Christian and church fraternity." This commission reported at the close of the quadrennium, and the General Conference of 1892 reappointed the commission.

The St. Louis Love Feast, and other less conspicuous but similar occasions, demonstrate that the soul of Methodism, the spirit of solidarity, is modifying, readjusting, compacting and organizing its agencies for greater efficiency in the bonds of peace.

Whereunto shall this grow? I have no prophetic gift and do not know. Some are ready to say to organic union. I am not so certain of that, neither am I ready to deny it as a possible outcome. "Whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder."

Grave problems suggest themselves to the thoughtful, which theoretically seems impossible of solution. Developments may simplify them, and grace where it abounds is a great solvent. But Methodism need not concern herself about the form or forms of her organized manifestations in the future. Her spirit of solidarity, if not unduly hampered, will continue to develop the organism which will interpret her most logically and efficiently in her changing environment. Whether this shall be in one body or more than one, is of but small moment to us.

Present Methodism has to do with the responsibilities of the present, and certainly it is not unreasonable or unchristian to assert that between her various branches there should be, and must right speedily, a comity of relations. In the grant which Jehovah made to Joshua, when assigning Canaan to Israel, he said: "Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon, that have I given unto you." This did not mean territorial exclusion, even to the idolaters devoted to destruction, unless Israel should occupy the land. It announced that God's grant of possession waited upon occupancy. This might be a state working basis in the present, and, in the language of Bishop Galloway, "Let us erect no rival altars." Is it too much to hope that where such exist, Christian forbearance and mutual concessions will gradually adjust supply to need?

The spirit of Christ is consolidating, not disintegrating: conservative, not destructive of righteousness. All over this land among the churches of Christ there is great waste of energy through antagonism. Among the thirteen branches of Methodism there are at some points hardship, suffering and smallness of results for which God is not responsible, as against which the true spirit of Methodism provides tests. There are unoccupied places where Satan holds carnival in the absence of vital Christianity, which Methodism in some of her branches is debarred from entering because of lack of means; her squandered resources. A richer baptism; Diana the true spirit of solidarity, seeking the greatest utility by co-operation with God, would obliterate this and hasten the coming of his kingdom.

A Pan-American Methodist Conference, large enough to be representative, but small enough to be deliberative; advisory, but without legislative functions, meeting at stated times, might be helpful in securing a comity of relations. I submit this simply as a personal suggestion.

The great achievements to which I have referred were not wrought by the Methodists, but by the truth and spirit which have worked in and through and beyond Methodism. If we fail to embody that spirit and to stand as the exponent of these great forces, Ichabod will be written upon our walls and our inheritance will pass to others who will receive and cherish the light of life.

Our dangers are in pride of attainment and the passive acceptance of truth for the selfish aim of present enjoyment. There can be no ease in Zion. There can be no failure to obedience. Our mission is ministry. Our commission is companionship with God. Our justification is achievement. Our largest enrichment is in the helpfulness we bring to others. It was only a startled Pagan who cried, "What must I do to be saved?" It was only an awakened Israelite who asked, "What will thou have me to do?" It was our Lord and example who said, "I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do."

Praying this record of our Master may be the verdict recorded on high of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of all Methodists, of all churches, of every one who bears the name Christ, I wish you a hearty God-speed.

FAITH.

Just to follow every day
Where God leads;
Just to scatter all the way
Sunny deeds;
Just to go, nor question why
Shadows fall;
Ever looking to the sky
Through them all.

Just to live through every day
Pure and right;
Keeping from the heart alway
Cares that blight;
Just to stand with purpose strong
When I'm tried;
Learning thus my every all
To confide.

Just to listen to God's voice
From within;
Just to carry straight to him
All my sin;
Just to hope, when all seems ill,
For the best;
All in faith and patience then
Calmly rest.

Memories of Rev. William Winans, D. D.

AT HOME.

MR EDITOR: In your issue of Feb. 22, 1894, the first thing I came upon was, "Memories of Rev. William Winans, D. D., as a Preacher and Theologian, by Rev. S. W. Speer, D. D." This carried me back in memory across a good long space of years. In 1853 I was upon the Wilkinson circuit. The home of Dr. Winans was within the bounds of the charge. Once a month I preached at Midway, the church where he and his family worshipped. He was then, as he had been for years, a superannuated preacher. He preached but seldom. I did not hear him often enough to form a just estimate of him as a preacher from personal knowledge. I visited him, and spent days together at his house. I was flattered at the readiness with which he would, in a kind, fatherly way, lay down his books to counsel me. I sometimes read him one of my manuscripts. He would listen with well-practiced patience to the end, then point out the wrong construction of a sentence, a redundancy, or an ambiguous expression. This was done in such a way that I really felt flattered with the thought that he esteemed my manuscript of sufficient merit to be improved by his suggestions. Every young preacher who would accept his advice got it freely and kindly. One young man who preceded me there by some years made great complaint to the old Doctor about his inability to furnish matter for the cultivated people of the congregations of the charge. After many suggestions made to him from time to time, one day the Doctor laid before the young man some skeletons of his own, saying, "Take those, and see what you can make of them." The young man tried them, and as he said to me afterwards: "I felt that I had a giant's armor on. I could not lift the point of the sword to swing it from the ground."

This year, 1853, was the year he was writing his series of discourses on fundamental religious subjects. The discourses were called for by a vote of the Mississippi Conference. I can not now remember how many of those sermons I heard him read to his family when I was present. I caught myself wondering if I could ever measure up to such deliverances. His manner, his voice, with its emphasis, and his gestures and look, could never enter into any other man's pulpit efforts, nor could they be produced on the printed page. I am sure his discourses have never had the circulation they merit. The very reading needs his voice and emphasis to give the matter the full sense he meant it to have. He had his hours for reading and literary work. Then he required of himself an amount of manual labor. This he deemed necessary to his health and the more active exercise of his mind. To have some definite object in view, he planned the making of a pond in a lot near his house. This was in course of construction before I ever visited him. I had seen him so regularly, with spade or shovel, go off in the direction of the pond, that one day I was constrained to go and see it. I was struck with the considerable embankment he had made, and [illegible] up. For an old man engaged in literary work, and with no necessary havoc or such labor, it was prodigious. His attention to children, and his manner with them, were loving. His little children confided in him implicitly, telling him their little joys and sorrows, their troubles. His pet cat he talked to as much as he would to a person, and fed it with his own hands. It always waited on the floor beside him at the table during meal times. It was remarkable how the cat would leave the house and wander in the fields, making its living as best it could, when he was absent from home. On one occasion, when the Doctor was absent for several weeks at General Conference, the cat retired to this self-exile, and would not be lured home by any attractions offered by members of the family. On his return home he was informed of his pet having run wild, but next morning at breakfast there sat Tom in his accustomed place on the floor beside his master, waiting to be fed from his hand.

I saw him in his last sickness. A trouble from which he had long suffered was near its culmination. He knew his end on earth was near, and talked of death and the future as subjects familiar to his mind. His expression, "I have unshaken confidence in Almighty God," was made in a way peculiar to himself. Later on I saw him when his mind was clouded. His incoherencies made me feel awful at the thought of such a giant intellect becoming a wreck. I joined two other preachers going before the corpse to its grave in the neatly kept family graveyard, where the dust of the sage now quietly sleeps, waiting the great call of the mighty trump of God.

Camden Circuit.

MR. EDITOR: Do you know Elwin Fugate Edgar, of the Camden circuit, Mississippi Conference? His name is Elwin, and not Edward, as you always print it, and as it is written in his credentials. Well, Edgar is a good fellow; genial, cordial, high-toned, and spiritual. He has plenty of both grace and grit. The Camden circuit is as big as all out-of-doors—a pastoral charge of magnificent distances, where Bro. Edgar can exercise his "spreadability" to his heart's content. Edgar spreads, and don't you forget it. His circuit lies in three counties, and takes in a part of the territory of two Annual Conferences. Easter, Bro. Edgar's circuit horse, is a fine animal, fat as a butter ball, as black, sleek and glossy as a crow; a fine roadster, and one of the best-trained buggy horses I ever saw. Edgar loves Easter, and Easter loves Edgar. There is a beautiful affection between these two animals. I noticed that although Edgar's horse was so fat, his wife and child were a little thin. The moral of this lies on the surface.

Bro. Edgar took me in his buggy for a turn through his diocese. We touched five counties and two Conferences. The counties were Holmes, Yazoo, Attala, Madison, and Leake. Bro. Edgar has the happy faculty of making a long road short, and a rough way smooth. He is good company. He wanted me to go with him to a big supper at Thomastown, in Leake county. Here they are trying to build a new church. It is needed. It will be built. Edgar has the grip of a vise when he takes hold of anything. The supper, a very fine one, was a success. They took in eighty-odd dollars. This will be added to what they already have on hand. Thomastown is an old place. It looks like it might have been founded in the days of Thomas Didymus, when the Thomases first began.

There are some choice people in that section—the Lacys, Carneses, Shorts, and others. Here I met a Bro. Bigob, not the first one I ever met, by long odds, but the first that seemed proud of the name, and took no offense when called a Bigob.

Edgar told me Thomastown was famous for turkeys, and that they gave him turkey to eat every time he went up there. When we struck the edge of the town I saw a turkey running for dear life down the hill, as if Edgar were after him. The turkeys take to the woods when Bro. Edgar goes into that section. They know who is coming.

I saw Artesian Springs, Cameron, Camden, Kirkwood, Thomastown, and the site where Gov. McBullie's mansion used to stand.

I spoke, of course I did.

Yours, GILDEROY.

Miss Louisa Roldan.

From the "Evangelista Mexicano," organ of the M. E. Church, South, we translate the following:

"For fifteen years Miss Roldan lent her valuable services to our church as a teacher, fulfilling her duty intelligently and with marked fidelity. Not only did she impart her knowledge to the scholars under her care whom she tenderly loved, but also always took genuine interest in the welfare of their souls, and endeavored by her example and words to lead them to the Lord Jesus. To our school in the capital, to the children in the congregation and to the whole church, the death of Miss Roldan is an irreparable loss, but our loss has been her gain."

Sr. B. G. Reyes, presiding elder of the Guadalajara district, says: "The news of the death of Miss Roldan has filled us with consternation, for we did not suppose that the Creator would take from us, at so early an age, one who was so useful to society."

It would be impossible for us not to lament the irreparable loss of so worthy, noble and good a person. We can but weep when we consider that we shall never again meet this faithful friend who encouraged us so often in our difficulties; this model teacher, who sacrificed herself for the good of the numerous pupils, who, like ourselves, mourn her loss; this benefactress and support of her aged father, whom we have seen in the houses of the poor, as well as in those of the rich, ministering to them in their sickness.

From "El Faro," organ of the Presbyterian Church in Mexico, we take the following:

"Miss Roldan was, without any doubt, a Christian, distinguished for her modesty, constancy and fidelity in the service of the divine Master, to whose work she dedicated herself until her death. This esteemed sister read an essay last year in our first National Sunday-school Convention, which was much applauded by many of the delegates to that honorable body, who will truly lament her unexpected death. We have been informed that up to the last moment that she had the use of her reason, she requested that her pupils read to her from the Holy Scriptures. These same pupils made a deep lamentation over the grave of Miss Roldan. Never have we seen such a large number of children so deeply moved on such an occasion, and it was because she had won their love, even of the youngest. We have not a doubt that this sister now lives in the presence of her Savior."

"El Abogado Christiano Ilustrado," organ of the M. E. Church of this city, says:

"'El Abogado Christiano Ilustrado,' and with it all the Evangelical Protestants resident in this metropolis, are in mourning. The intelligent, the virtuous, the highly appreciated Miss Louisa E. Roldan, principal of the girls' college that the M. E. Church, South, sustains in this capital, died on the third instant. Miss Roldan was more than the principal of Balderas College. She was the mother of all the children that she taught there. With them she shared her daily bread; and never did she see any need among her children that she did not remedy. She was always active in all beneficent efforts in favor of the church, and owing to this religious zeal men, women and children received a true idea of what the holy religion of the Crucified is in essence. Death surprised her in the bloom of life, when she could have done much more still in favor of the evangelical cause, and particularly in favor of the young, whom she loved with all the wealth of her noble soul. In this sad misfortune, let us be consoled by the certainty that all persons who scatter seed and do good deeds and make the principles of virtue a reality in their conduct, in spite of the incredulity and gross positivism that surround us, never die; they belong to that number whose names are written in the Lamb's book of life. Miss Roldan was an angel of good, and the angels, as is well known, do not remain long on earth; soon they return to their true home, heaven."

I have known Miss Roldan since 1887. She was a young lady whose integrity in all her affairs, whose purity, sincerity and deep piety no one doubted. She was a model Christian when I first met her, but, in the hands of the blessed Master, she constantly grew in grace and became more heavenly in spirit. Particularly was this noticed during the last year. She accumulated new spiritual energy, entered into a fuller light, and realized more and more the riches in Christ Jesus, her influence becoming conspicuously a transforming power in the souls of her pupils and friends. We have often had in our schools, as they have had in many others in this city, children who seldom eat more than one meal, or, at most, two a day. For such Miss Roldan always had an abundance of food in her dinner basket. Every noon she spread this food on a low table, of suitable height for the little ones, and, after asking God's blessing, she and they, often five or six in number, would humbly, but happily, join as one family in the repast. When any of her scholars were sick she saw that they had medicine and proper attendance. If her salary gave out, she would beg means from me and others, who gladly contributed for such an object.

She was one of the leading spirits in the Woman's Missionary Society, and directed the Children's Society, and was always ready and willing to prepare and drill the children for special services. She was generally the leader in all efforts in favor of the church. When we consider how much she gave to the needy and her liberal contributions to the church, we can see how small a portion of her salary was spent on herself. But it was her pleasure to sacrifice for the advancement of God's kingdom and the welfare of the Lord's people. During the last year of her life she led more children to Christ than during any previous year. Only a few weeks before she died she was rejoiced to bring several of her schoolgirls to be received into the churches.

She was well known among many of the old foreign Christian residents of this city, and her death is mourned by them as well as by the native churches. The loss to our school and church in this city has been very great. The Lord seems to be taking of late many of our first and oldest workers to himself. Men and women who have been in the heat of the battle, true and tried soldiers, have been called to rest from their labors and to receive their reward.

We have been deprived of Miss Roldan's personal presence, yet she lives among us in many souls who will cherish her blessed memory until they meet her among the redeemed.

City Church Extension Society.

The first Annual Meeting of the New Orleans City Church Extension Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was held in the Carondelet Street Church, Tuesday evening, May 1. Rev. J. M. Henry, recording secretary, being absent, Rev. Lyman F. Jackson was elected pro tem.

Dr. C. W. Carter, president, called the meeting to order, and Dr. W. C. Black, editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, conducted the opening devotional exercises. The first address was by Dr. Carter on "The Work of the City Church Extension Society," in which he stated that the great increase of urban population not only made city evangelization necessary as a means of self-preservation, but afforded a providential opening for the evangelization of the country and of the world.

The report of Mr. Jno. B. Parker, corresponding secretary, was read by Rev. F. N. Parker, which showed that previous to this meeting 32 members had been enrolled and $29 collected on yearly dues.

Bishop J. C. Keener, not being able to be present, owing to a meeting of the college of Bishops, preceding the General Conference, had written a letter which was read by Rev. F. N. Parker, giving a ringing endorsement of the society, and a hopeful view of the accomplishment of the aims of the society.

The next topic on the program was "The History and the Prophecy of City Evangelization," which was presented in a rousing, hope- and faith-inspiring address by Rev. W. H. La Prade. He believed that with an enthusiastic support of the society, it would, within a comparatively short time, build, or secure, churches and chapels wherever needed in the city to meet the present lack and the demands of its growth.

Rev. F. N. Parker spoke briefly, but in point and with fire, on the "Adaptation of Methodism to the Changing Conditions of City Life and Mission Work."

The Nominating Committee, through Rev. J. B. A. Ahrens, D. D., reported the following-named brethren for election as Board of Directors for the ensuing year: Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D., president; Rev. W. H. La Prade, D. D., vice-president; Rev. J. M. Henry, recording secretary; Mr. Jno. B. Parker, corresponding secretary; Mr. E. P. Mackie, treasurer; Rev. J. T. Sawyer, D. D., Rev. T. K. Faunt LeRoy, Rev. F. N. Parker, and Messrs. J. R. Westerfield, F. W. Heroy, J. R. Hoffman, J. W. Blackman, Jr., R. H. Hafkesbring, P. A. C. Voss, W. B. Thomson, Dr. J. W. Adams and J. F. Miller, members. These brethren were elected.

On appointment of the president, Rev. R. H. Wynn and Bros. E. P. Mackie and W. B. Thomson were appointed to distribute blank applications for membership in the society, and they reported 24 new members, making 56 at the present time. This will doubtless be increased to include a really representative number of the members of the various congregations of the city.

Let Us Have an Orphans' Home.

At the seventy-ninth session of the Mississippi Conference, held in Natchez, in December, 1892, a committee was appointed to inquire into the possibility of founding an Orphans' Home in the bounds of the Mississippi Conference. The committee appointed organized at once. At the last session of the Conference the committee reported but "little progress made," but requested a continuation of the same committee, or the appointment of a new one. The old one was continued, and this closed the history of the movement. The subject has not been much agitated yet, and the members of the committee have not been able to do much active work without neglecting their charges.

We have had Millsaps College in hand for some time, and felt that we could not safely undertake too much.

Now, my brethren, can we neglect this matter any longer? We have been engaged with the college and the missionary debt. This we ought to have done, and not left the other undone. Or, if we have neglected our orphans, let us atone for the omission at once by giving them food, clothing and a shelter. I know that the Methodists of the Mississippi Conference will give to this cause, if the matter is properly presented to them.

I find that such an enterprise is contemplated by some of the brethren of the North Mississippi Conference. If the undertaking is too much for one Conference, let us have a joint piece of property. And after the college pressure is relieved, and the missionary debt is paid, each Conference can have its home, if it wants one.

Since the North Mississippi Conference meets before ours, will not some of the brethren up there engineer the appointment of a committee from that Conference to act with a like committee from our Conference for the establishment of such a home? Unless some brother will promise to do this, I think I will accept Dr. Wier's invitation to attend his District Conference in the interest of his enterprise, and to secure there a memorial to the Annual Conference on this question.

There is in Lauderdale county, in one mile of the Lauderdale Sulphur Springs, a piece of property that was once used for an Orphans' Home. This property is in a quarter of a mile of the Mobile and Ohio railroad, and a mile from Lauderdale station, the junction of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad with the Mobile and Ohio road. The house is of brick, three stories high and has twenty-eight rooms. A farm of more than three hundred acres of valuable land belongs to the house. The house could not be built for less than $12,000 or $15,000. About $500 will put the house in good condition. This property could now be bought for less than one-fifth of the original cost of the house. The titles are good. This is the bargain of a lifetime. It is near the dividing line of the two Conferences, and is in the eastern part of the State. Brethren, let us hear from you. Cordially yours,

GEO. H. THOMPSON.

Lauderdale, Miss.

"Blessed Are the Peacemakers."

A good man, eminent and beloved as a teacher of the young, says that many years ago he adopted the following for one of the rules of his life as a teacher: "I will be blind when I might see, deaf when I might hear, and dumb when I might speak. I will put out all the fires I can, and never kindle any." Associated almost constantly with young people, earnestly desiring not only to instruct them, but also to help them to become noble, unselfish, peace-loving, and peacemaking men and women, experience had taught him it was one of the best rules for him to follow.

Would not his rule be a good one for anybody, old or young, to adopt who aims to be a peacemaker? Is there anything un-Christlike in it? "I will be blind when I might see." That does not mean that our eyes should be closed to anything we ought to see, not even to evil when we ought to see it. "Deaf when I might hear." That does not mean that our ears should be stopped when language is used in our hearing of which a Christian should be prompt to manifest disapproval. "Dumb when I might speak." Nor does that mean that our tongues should be tied when our eyes have seen or our ears have heard that which no Christian could see or hear without rebuking it. "Put out all the fires I can, and never kindle any." That would show Christ's spirit. To do that would make one a peacemaker. If a quarrel is beginning, or a misunderstanding, or an estrangement, that fire may often be quenched by the peacemaker, and thus Christ's work be done. But it is easy to fan the fire to fiercer flame, and thus devil's work be done. The teacher's rule is a text on which any of us can think out a long and a good sermon.

Once in my boyhood I was playing around the workshop of a builder who was largely interested in a water-power mill on the river near us. The machinery of the mill was out of order and needed repairs. This builder had secured two men, millwrights, from another town to do the repairing. They were at their employment in his workshop, within my sight and hearing, and from some cause had got into a loud and bitter controversy. They were very angry with each other. Their employer was a neighbor and friend of ours, a Christian man. He was soon drawn to the spot by their loud voices. It was near the close of the day, and the sun shone in at the windows from the west. He drew near to the excited and angry disputants, and in a kindly, calm and gentle voice, but so distinct that I heard every word, said, "My friends, let not the sun go down upon your wrath." The altercation ceased in a moment. There was a brief silence, and then one of the men replied in a subdued voice, "The sun shall not go down upon my wrath."

The man who might have fanned the flame had put the fire out. It was more than fifty years ago, but it made an ineffaceable impression upon my young heart.

Our old neighbor and friend long since went to that other world, where peacemakers are welcomed, and where, like the pure in heart, they see God.—Exchange.

Knowing the Time.

We, as Christians, believe that human history, however confused it may appear at times, is a well-ordered movement guided by Him whom God has made head over all things to his church. We believe in progress, but only in that which is secured by the leadership of Jesus Christ. All else is vain, and ends in ruin. Enough is made manifest, if men would see it, to convince the most skeptical that the great purposes of God in Christ are surely and rapidly nearing their fulfillment. With her faith strengthened by events of the past centuries, the whole church can take the apostle's testimony, and say, "Now is our salvation nearer than when we believed." In the midst of all the shaking and commotions of the present, there is nothing that should disturb the confidence of the believer as to the final results, but, on the contrary, many things that should confirm his faith and excite his hope to most joyful expectations. In our own days great and glorious prophecies are finding their fulfillment, and the changes that are occurring in society and among the nations are like heralds proclaiming still more wonderful triumphs for Christ to be close at hand.

The century in which we are living, the last decade of which we have entered, surpasses all of the Christian centuries which have preceded it in the number and magnitude of its agencies and forces which work in the interests of the kingdom of Christ. It has witnessed the overthrow of kingdoms that were hostile to the gospel, the emancipation of millions of beings from slavery and servitude, the breaking down of spiritual and ecclesiastic despotisms, the opening of the whole world to the preaching of the gospel, and the organization and growth of the greatest missionary societies that have ever wrought for the evangelization of men. In short, in no century in all the past has the face of the whole world been so radically changed as in this nineteenth century, nor has the changing process ceased. The indications are that still greater changes are close at hand, involving every department of society. The movement of affairs is constantly accelerating in speed. It is true there is danger in this, but it is not ours to regulate the speed with which the movement of human history is carried on. The only thing we can do is, as much as in us lies, to make all these intense activities minister to the kingdom of Christ. Never before were the opportunities for Christian service so inviting and so glorious.

Let us pray that a fresh baptism of the Holy Spirit may descend, and that church will enter the twentieth century "looking forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners." Yes, it is high time to wake out of sleep, to throw off the torpor which the world brings to us, and to consider the demands and possibilities of the hour in which we live. It is high time, if we would have any share in the coming triumph, to address ourselves with diligence and quickened devotion to the work the Lord has left us to do.

—The Rev. S. J. Niccolls, D. D.

Monotheism in Babylonia Five Thousand Years Ago.

At an important gathering convened in April by the Victoria Institute, London, England, Mr. T. G. Pinches of the Oriental Department of the British Museum, described some results of the researches made by him among the Babylonian tablets now under examination at the British Museum. He first reviewed the attributes of the thirteen gods in the Babylonian Pantheon, each of which claimed to be Aa or Ya the gods: he quoted tablets of about 650 B. C., in which the king used the word god as a monotheist would, and then went back to the third millennium B. C., where he found tablets using the same expression in the same sense. Further light was thrown on the reason for this by other important inscriptions, and the author stated that of late the evidence had accumulated which forced him now to regard the Babylonian Pantheon as really one god. An interesting discussion took place in which it was pointed out that, as in the earliest Egyptian, so now in the earliest Babylonian records, there was evidence of a Primitive Monotheism; the speakers were the Rev. Dr. Lowe, Mr. Rassam, Mr. Howard, and Mr. Mengedoht, who cited the evidence afforded by the Louvre tablets. Among those sending communications were Sir H. Howorth, Bart., M. P., Major Conder, R. E., D. C. L., Canon Girdlestone and others. It is known that, through its members abroad, the Institute is gathering further evidence on this subject, and intends to publish the whole of the information in the Journal issued to its members and associates.

Prejudice.

Prejudice is one of the worst obstacles to the soul's progress—a handicap upon the runner in the race of life. Probably no person is free from prejudice. On the mind or heart it rests like a dead weight, yet too undefined to be perceived as a thing to be resolutely cast off. With some persons prejudices are treated as though there were merit in them. One person takes a dislike to another of whom he knows little—perhaps has never seen. No reason can be given for this attitude, but rather than give up the prejudice he submits to it, and so destroys a good influence that that person might have over him. Nor does it stop here. The prejudice is aired and advertised until the good influence that that same person might have over others is destroyed. It is difficult to rid ourselves of a prejudice, even when we want to, but to cling to and value it, to fold it in our arms and pet it and show it off as one of our prized possessions, is a thing fit proceeding for an honest man.—Sunday-School Times.

Rose Tobacco Cure

A CHEAP QUICK, PLEASANT and ABSOLUTE CURE for the Tobacco Habit in all forms. Ask your druggist or write to ROSE DRUG CO., 21st St., Birmingham, Ala.

Here Is Your Chance.

During the next sixty days we make the following offer:

For $2.50 we will send the ADVOCATE one year and a copy of Christian Womanhood. The price of the ADVOCATE is $2; the price of the book, $1. This book has had an extensive sale, the sixth thousand being now on the market. This offer applies to renewals as well as new subscriptions, provided the renewal extends the subscription to January, '95.

The following notices, selected from a vast number that have appeared in the church papers, will give some idea of the character of the work:

The best thesaurus of facts concerning womanhood with which we are acquainted.—Dr. C. F. Deems.

We hope it will be read by every man and woman in the church.—Florida Advocate.

We hope it will be extensively circulated and carefully read.—NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Heartily recommended.—Dr. John F. Edwards.

This volume is the result of patient investigation and thoughtful study of the whole question treated. In the formulation of the case and in analyzing the testimony a vigorous, well-trained, legal mind is brought to bear. Dr. Black, moreover, establishes the points of his discussion as a skillful general establishes his lines in the face of an alert enemy. As he begins, so he closes, leaving the impression that a master in Israel has written bravely and tellingly of Christian womanhood, maintaining his position at every turn. The book is needed, and will long be in popular demand.—Sunday-School Magazine.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

ITALIAN CREAM.—Sweeten a pint of cream and add the beaten yolks of four eggs, heat in a double boiler till it thickens, but avoid curdling. In the meantime dissolve two tablespoonfuls of gelatin in cold water, add the juice of one lemon, and when the cream is nearly cold, stir in the gelatin and lemon, whip well and put in individual custard-cups. Serve cold.

APPLE FLOAT.—Three large baked or boiled apples, one cupful of sugar, one lemon. Scrape out the pulp of the apple, and stir in the sugar and juice of the lemon. When quite cold, stir in the beaten white of an egg, and beat all together until it forms a beautiful white mass. Sift grated cocoanut over the top, and serve with a sauce of boiled custard and sweetened cream.

CELERY SALAD.—Chop 3 bunches of celery fine, with a small head of cabbage. Take a teaspoonful of vinegar, the yolks of 2 eggs, a tablespoonful of butter, one teaspoonful each of mustard and salt, one tablespoonful of sugar, and a pinch of cayenne. Mix these ingredients till smooth, heat until it begins to thicken, stir until partly cool, then add 2 tablespoonfuls of sweet cream. Pour it over the salad and set before taking it to the table. If thicker than desirable, add more vinegar.—Exchange.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE.—With a quart of flour, a teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a pint of milk, and butter the size of a small teacup rubbed into the flour, make a paste, and line with it three pie-plates. Mash the berries with a wooden pestle, mix with them sugar sufficient to sweeten them. When the crust is done, split each piece in two with a hot knife, spread over them a thin layer of butter and a thick layer of berries, pile the pieces one upon another, and it is ready for the table. Cut in pie-pieces, and pour cream over. If cream is used in making the crust, the butter can be omitted in making it.

BAKED SHAD.—Make a nice stuffing of bread-crumbs, heat it with butter in a frying-pan, put it into the fish, and sew up neatly. Lay in a baking-pan with butter, hot water and salt; put water in the pan to the depth of half an inch. Baste the fish often and well, adding hot water as the water in the pan wastes. Cook three-quarters of an hour, then dredge with flour, and let the flour brown. Baste carefully and dredge again. Brown the second time. When a knitting needle pierces the fish readily it is done. About an hour will be required for the baking. Remove the fish to a plate, thicken the gravy with flour and butter, and strain over the fish.—Selected.

HYGIENE.

The Need of Sleep.

It is difficult for one who has had no occasion to familiarize himself with the subject to appreciate the consequences which attend depriving the body of the necessary amount of sleep. The symptoms which follow such a deprivation afford a striking example of the intimate relation of every part of the body to every other part.

It may be that the sufferer has been placed in circumstances under which sleep, owing to the demands made upon his time by other matters, is practically prohibited; or perhaps he has nerved himself to perform a certain task in a specified time, and does not obey the dictates of nature. In either event the result is the same. The unhappy victim suddenly finds that he does not feel the need of sleep. He may at first be inclined to congratulate himself, but this period of excitation does not last long, for, try as he may, he can not bring back sleep to his now worn-out body.

From this point the trouble rapidly increases. Especially is the fact demonstrated that the need of sleep is felt by the entire system. It is true that the nervous symptoms predominate, and that, if the condition of the patient is not ameliorated, the case soon becomes one of nervous prostration. But every organ of the body suffers equally with the brain. The stomach is upset, the appetite impaired—and emaciation and debility follow.

The treatment of a person suffering from lack of sleep is unfortunately much compromised by the efforts of the patient himself. Under the impression that an opiate is required, he begins the systematic administration of some sleep-producing powder. Nothing could be more pernicious, as is seen when, after having tried in turn every remedy, the sufferer finally finds it next to impossible to obtain any rest except by such unnatural means.

Healthful sleep is needed, and this is to be obtained only by careful and prolonged treatment under the guidance of a skilled medical adviser.

Opiates should seldom be administered by the patient himself, and never with the object of directly producing sleep.—Youth's Companion.

Cheerfulness in Motion.

"If I am harried or wearied by care or work," said a man who works with his brains, "I can always find rest in motion. I just stop work, and get out and walk. As I walk the weight is lifted, and finally it is gone altogether; and in place of that tired feeling comes tranquillity, succeeded by elation. It was a pleasing discovery to make, that I could walk out of depression into buoyancy. At first, when the exercise was new to me, I needed to go but a little distance to accomplish this happy result, and so clearly defined was the change that I could locate almost exactly the spot where my burdens disappeared and I found myself in the pleasant company of my hopeful, kindly friend, Cheerfulness. I still seek Cheerfulness by that road, and I find him unfailingly; but I have to go farther and farther to meet him, for, like any other stimulant, the walk must be taken in constantly increasing doses in order to produce the same results. At first a brisk walk of a quarter of a mile brought me to the boundary line; now I find it about a mile and a quarter away. It may be that I will have to seek cheerfulness nearer home as a permanent atmosphere, for it is obvious that if I must go greater and greater distances to meet the personified Cheerfulness, he might one day be practically beyond reach."—New York Sun.

Dangerous Opium.

It is perhaps true that such drugs as opium, cocaine, and other nervines, were designed by God to be a blessing to the human family. Rightly used, for the temporary relief of excruciating pain, they are a great blessing. But just as men have abused nearly all of God's gifts, however good, so they have abused to a terrible extent the remedies that make one insensible to pain. The extent to which opium and cocaine are being used is enormous, and the depths of the ruin into which they plunge the user, is inexpressible. Not only is the physical man wrecked, but the mind is weakened and the spiritual nature debauched. The long-continued use of any opiate seems to weaken and ultimately destroy the moral sense. So great is the craving for the drug when once the habit is firmly fixed, that the victim will resort to stealing, lying, or almost any crime to get the coveted article. The benumbed mind, and the deadened conscience, seem utterly oblivious to moral questions that once aroused condemnation.

It is time for physicians, preachers, and the press—secular and religious—to open a tirade on the evil of opiates when misused, that will educate the public mind and fill people with horror at the thought. Let the law forbid joints for smoking opium, and if necessary forbid the sale of such drugs except upon physicians' prescriptions.

AGRICULTURE.

BY REV. J. W. MCNEIL.

Strawberries.

It will be remembered when we speak of the best varieties we have reference to our own locality and for our own purposes, that for distant markets. Among the many we have tried as we have said before, the Cloud and Hoffman Seedlings have given us the best satisfaction; yet these are not altogether what we most desire, a firmer berry than either could be preferable. There are firmer berries than either; these have not proven satisfactory, not sufficiently prolific, the plants weak, and not of sufficient vigor to supply themselves with runners enough to make a good average crop, hence had to be abandoned. The Cloud and Hoffman Seedlings are good croppers, the Cloud having especially a strong plant. It must not be adjudged because the kinds which have given us the best satisfaction will do so everywhere else. The true plan for anyone desiring to grow berries for market is to test the kinds and learn what will suit best in his own locality. It does not take a great quantity to make the experiment. The preparation of the soil and the time to plant strawberries are the next points to be considered.

In order that the land may be best prepared, it is well the year previous to put it in peas. After the pea crop is gathered, to give it frequent plowings to destroy all foreign plants to which strawberry farms are most liable. The land is prepared very much as for cotton; only it is best to plow and replow and harrow well before putting out the plants. We never now fertilize when we plant, this being left to the time when cultivating. The rows should be from four to four and a half in width. As for the distance of the plants in drill this depends upon the kind used. The Wilson, since it is not a vigorous runner, should be put not more than a foot apart. The Cloud and Hoffman Seedlings will bear the distance of three feet apart, if properly attended to after they begin to run, the vines being trained upon the rows. If the price of plants are equal in the above varieties, it will be seen by the above difference mentioned, that it would cost three times as much to put out one acre of the Wilson as it would the other kinds. It should be known in putting out the Cloud and Hoffman Seedings that the Cloud is a pistillate, the Hoffman a staminate. That to those who do not know it, the Cloud will not produce berries only in an imperfect form unless fertilized by a staminate variety. Perhaps we would be better understood if we should use the word pollenized with a staminate variety. The way this is done: Some put out every fourth row in Hoffman, the other three in Cloud. This has not been, with our experience, best for all seasons. Every third row should be Hoffman or some other staminate variety, the other two Cloud. It is highly probable now with its present character among us, the Lena, or Brewer berry, as some call it, will in the future take the place of the Hoffman as a pollenizer. In our next we will give our methods of cultivation.

Buttermilk for Poultry.

Milk in all forms may be profitably fed to poultry, and we have many times spoken of the economy of feeding skimmed milk to laying hens. On a farm where dairying is carried on it will be found that buttermilk also may be fed to the fowls and pay better than by disposing of it in almost any other way. It will decidedly increase the egg production of the flock, and after a few days it will be found that the fowls will look eagerly for the appearance of the dish the buttermilk is usually brought in. When buttermilk is fed no water need be given, and the slightly saline qualities of the buttermilk will be advantageous to the fowls. Buttermilk is richer than skimmed milk, and is, of course, better for the laying hens in moderate quantities, while for fattening purposes it can be fed constantly with the best results. The farmer who has plenty of buttermilk will find that it pays better to give it to his fowls than to any other stock on the farm. The buttermilk that would grow a pig will grow enough poultry to buy all the pork an ordinary family needs. When it comes to a choice between giving it to the pig or the poultry, give it to the poultry every time.—American Poultry Yard.

Style 102, 12 Stops.

EPWORTH CHAPEL—Five Octaves, containing four sets of Reeds of two and one-half Octaves each. STOPS—Principal; Dulcet Diapason; Diapason Forte; Vox Angelica; Principal Forte; Cremona; Melodia; Echo Horn; Celeste. Metal Octave Coupler. Boxed, with stool, delivered on board cars at factory.

The catalogue price of this is $87. We will give it as a premium for one hundred subscribers. Send us the cash $200, for the subscribers, and you get the organ free. If you can't get one hundred persons to subscribe personally, perhaps you have well-to-do members of your church who will pay for several poorer members, thereby bestowing a blessing upon them by giving them a religious paper and at the same time helping to procure an organ for your church. If you don't exactly like Style 102, then read the description of Style 302.

TWELFTH GENERAL CONFERENCE.

FIFTH DAY.

The Conference was opened with religious exercises by Rev. J. W. Hinton, of Georgia. Bishop Hargrove in the chair. The Minutes of yesterday's session read, corrected and adopted.

Bishop W. W. Duncan then took the chair. Bishop C. B. Galloway then presented his report as fraternal messenger to the Wesleyan Methodist Church of England.

Dr. R. N. Sled then presented his report as fraternal delegate to the General Conference of the Methodist Church of Canada.

Rev. Dr. Goucher, the fraternal delegate of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was introduced to the Conference and given a seat on the rostrum.

Several of the Standing Committees made reports.

The Committee on Sunday-schools made a brief report, which went to the calendar. There was also a minority report, the reception of which produced an extended discussion. The minority report was placed on the calendar, and thereby hangs a story to be told during the session.

The Committee on Boundaries recommended that that part of the State of Louisiana now in the Mississippi Conference be included in the Louisiana Conference.

Dr. A. S. Hunt, one of the secretaries of the American Bible Society, was introduced to the Conference.

The call for memorials and resolutions to be referred to committees was taken up, and the list of Conferences called.

Rev. Dr. Sutherland, of Canada, was introduced.

A motion was made to suspend the rules to consider the report of the Committee on Missions. The rules were suspended.

A slight verbal change was made in one article of the constitution of the Board of Missions. The name of the Woman's Missionary Society was changed to the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

Some small changes were made to the Rules of Order adopted by the Conference, but the consideration of these stirred much discussion and brought out the everlasting difficulty of having absolutely perfect rules of order.

Adjourned with benediction by the Bishop.

SIXTH DAY.

Conference opened with prayer by Dr. Brooks, of North Carolina. Bishop W. W. Duncan in the chair. Minutes of yesterday's session read and approved.

Dr. Brooks, of North Carolina, in an eloquent speech, presented Bishop Galloway a gavel made of the wood of the house in North Carolina in which was held the first Conference in that State. Bishop Galloway accepted the gavel in a fitting and eloquent speech.

The reports of committees were called for, and a number were presented and passed to the calendar.

The report of the Sunday-school Committee in regard to the preparation and publication of a catechism brought about quite a lively and spicy discussion. It was agreed to continue our efforts to get a new catechism suited to small children.

The report of the commission appointed by the last General Conference to revise Chapters vii and viii of the Discipline, made the order of the day for to-day, was taken up. This was read by sections and amended.

SEVENTH DAY.

Conference opened with religious exercises by Dr. T. S. Wade. Bishop Galloway in the chair. Minutes of yesterday's session read, corrected and approved.

Bishop E. R. Hendrix took the chair.

Reports from committees were called for, and the Committee on Revisals made a number of reports, some for concurrence and others for non-concurrence. These reports are too long to appear in a family paper.

The Committee on Publishing Interests made two brief reports.

The Committee on Education reported a new chapter for the Discipline, constituting a Board of Education for the Southern Methodist Church.

The Committees on Church Extension and Boundaries made reports.

The Committee on Introductions reported that the fraternal delegates of the M. E. Church would be formally received by the Conference at 8 P. M. to-day.

The noble benefaction of Mr. Barnes for the founding of a hospital in St. Louis, to be under the auspices of our church, opens up a field for a noble work by our Methodism.

The roll of Conferences was called for appeals, memorials, petitions and resolutions to be referred to the committees.

The report of the commission of last General Conference on Chapters vii and viii of the Discipline was referred to a special committee consisting of seven members.

A report from the Committees on Publishing Interests in regard to the publication and circulation of our church papers brought out a large amount of discussion. The importance of supporting and sustaining our connectional and Conference organs ought to be manifest to al our people. If we do not support our own papers, other people will not sustain them for us. The leaven of liberty and of liberality—of what is called free trade—is, in some quarters, destroying our distinctive denominationalism and the spirit of connectionalism. As Methodists, we should stand for Methodism and for all the connectional enterprises of our church.

The report of the Committee on Boundaries recommended that all that part of Louisiana now in the Mississippi Conference be turned over to the Louisiana Conference. This report was adopted.

After other general business the Conference adjourned with the benediction.

EIGHTH DAY.

The Conference opened with religious exercises conducted by Dr. J. H. Carlisle, of South Carolina. Bishop Hendrix in the chair. The Minutes of the last session read and approved.

Bishop J. S. Key then took the chair. A call for reports from Standing and Special Committees was then called for, and a number of reports were made and entered upon the calendar.

The roll of Conferences was then called for memorials, appeals, petitions and resolutions, and quite a number were handed in and referred.

A report of the Committee on Boundaries recommending the partition of one of the Texas Conferences provoked a spirited discussion.

The Committee on Temperance made a strong, clear, clean-cut deliverance on this great question, and this report, pending, brought out some of the best speeches made up to this date.

The Conference adjourned with this question pending.

NINTH DAY.

Conference was opened at 9 o'clock A. M. with religious services by Dr. E. Y. Yeats, of North Carolina. Bishop J. S. Key in the chair. Minutes of yesterday's session read and approved.

Bishop A. G. Haygood then took the chair and announced the death of Bishop Keener's daughter last night, and called the Conference to prayer. After prayer the Conference united in singing two stanzas of that grand old hymn beginning with the words, "When through the deep waters I call thee to go."

After this, resolutions of sympathy with the Bishop in this, his hour of affliction, were adopted and ordered telegraphed to the Bishop.

A number of members asked for leave of absence, and the names of a few of the alternates were entered.

Reports from Standing Committees called for, and a number of reports were made and passed to the calendar.

Special Committees made some few reports.

The Committee on Public Worship announced a long list of appointments for Sunday, covering a wide circle of country.

The list of Conferences was then called for appeals, memorials, petitions and resolutions to be referred to committees. This is the last day for this call.

The report of the Committee on Temperance, pending when the Conference adjourned yesterday, was taken up, and it was again the subject of lively and animated discussion. After an hour in discussion the paper was recommitted.

At this point Bishop Lane, of the Colored M. E. Church, was introduced as fraternal delegate from that church. Bishop Lane then addressed the Conference.

The Conference then adjourned.

TENTH DAY.

Conference convened at nine A. M. Religious exercises conducted by Dr. Godbey. Bishop Haygood in the chair. Minutes of Saturday's session read and approved. Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald took the chair.

Special order of the day, the report of the Committee on Bible Cause, was taken up, read, and, pending vote of adoption, Dr. Hunt, secretary of the American Bible Society, addressed the Conference in the interest of the cause.

The fraternal delegates of the M. E. Church, the Methodist Church of Canada and the British Wesleyan Conference took formal leave of the Conference in brief, pithy and appropriate addresses, which were felicitously responded to by Bishop Fitzgerald.

The motion to reconsider the report adopted establishing the lines between the East Texas and North and Northwest Conferences was lost.

The regular order of business taken up, and reports were called for from committees.

A motion was adopted naming Thursday, the seventeenth, for the election of book agent, editors of church papers, book editor and editor of Review.

Report of Committee on Sunday-schools recommended that a suitable song book or hymnal be published for the use of the Sunday-school, which was adopted.

Beware of little concessions, little acquiescences, little indulgences, little conformities to the world. If vital religion is ever driven out of the soul, it will be as the Canaanites were driven out before the Israelites—by little and little.—H. Melvill.

The Advocate for Twenty-Five Cents.

We will send the ADVOCATE from now until the first of August for twenty five cents. This period embraces the session of the General Conference. The ADVOCATE will contain reports of the proceedings of the General Conference. All Methodist people ought to keep posted in regard to the action of the General Conference. Let all our subscribers make this offer known and constitute themselves agents for the paper. Let it be remembered that the cash must accompany each name. We will do no book-keeping for anybody on this proposition. This offer is made only to new subscribers.

For the next ninety days we will send the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE and the Memphis Commercial both for one year for $2.25. This offer applies to old subscribers as well as new, provided they pay their subscription to June, '95.

The Louisiana Lottery.

The old Louisiana Lottery dies hard. Driven from New Orleans, where it was long entrenched and thought to be immovable, it has taken up its quarters nominally at Honduras, but actually at Port Tampa, Fla., where it is doing considerable business. Attention has been directed to this move recently in the press, and public sentiment demands some decided action to circumvent it. We are glad to note that a bill has been introduced by Senator Hoar, which is designed to meet the new phase of its operation. This measure proposes to prohibit the importation of lottery tickets into this country, and to empower the Postoffice Department to return any kind of a letter addressed to a lottery agent. This is legislation in the right direction. It would prevent an outside agency from accomplishing underhandedly what it is forbidden to do openly. Gambling institutions have no regard for moral principle, and will resort to any means to effect their ends. Laws can not be too carefully framed against their nefarious business. —Picayune.

Chauncey M. Depew estimates that ninety per cent. of the defalcation and thefts and ruin of youth among people who are employed in places of trust are due directly to gambling. When it is remembered what an appalling proportion of the year's criminal record of the country is represented by this class of crimes, the dire nature of the gambling evil can be appreciated. But gambling is not confined to the roulette, rouge et noire and faro tables—it enters too much into the commercial life of the country. Betting on stocks is just as much gambling as betting on cards or horses. It is a vice which blunts the moral consciousness and takes even stronger hold on the individual than drink. The young man who would conserve his moral welfare must avoid the first temptation to gamble as he would the month of hell.—Young Men's Era.

Men give me some credit for genius. All the genius I have lies in this: When I have a subject in hand, I study it profoundly. Day and night it is before me. I explore it in all its bearings. My mind becomes pervaded with it. Then the effort which I make the people are pleased to call the fruit of genius. It is the fruit of labor and thought.—Alexander Hamilton.

The Religious Paper and the Home.

The weekly visits of the religious newspaper can not be too highly valued in the home. The Religious Telescope thus speaks of the benefits from this source: "The regular weekly visits of a live religious newspaper in a home where children are growing up is a molder of character for good, the power and value of which it is impossible to compute. Young people grow up very largely the creatures of their environment. Surround the children with the influences of a pure, harmonious, attractive home, well supplied with wholesome religious reading matter, and they, in nearly every case, will grow up noble-minded, honest, upright citizens. But let the home be low, coarse, vile, unattractive, supplied with dime novels and vulgar, fictitious reading matter, and they are almost certain to grow up with low ideals of human life, and fall into the ways of vice and crime."

Our Pianos and Organs.

The musical instruments which we are offering as premiums are manufactured by the Williams Piano and Organ Co., Centerville, Iowa. This is a large establishment which has branch offices in other cities. The descriptions we give of the instruments are taken from their catalogue. Our subscribers may write to them for catalogues and prices, if they choose. We will give them as good terms as they can get from the manufacturers themselves. Notice that if the requisite number of subscribers can not be procured, the instruments can still be had. Get as many subscribers as you can, and then write us for terms.

Our Lord and Master lived for thirty years in uneventful obscurity, and died at the end of thirty-three years with every appearance of failure; and you and I are reminded by this example of the Lord that we are not to seek great things for ourselves; that we are not to be concerned by what men think of us; that our sole concern is in God's sight to be judged from day to day by his clear judgment; and we have also learned that we are called upon to face danger and persecution, or even death, if it is in maintenance of what is right and true. We have the noblest Example in all the world for turning away from every attraction of life and taking up our cross, rather than shirk the conflict.—R. F. Horton, M. A.

Mrs. Mary M. Wilkinson.

Mrs. Mary M. Wilkinson, daughter of Bishop John C. Keener, died Friday afternoon, at 4:15 o'clock, aged fifty-one years. She was buried from Carrollton Avenue M. E. Church, South, Saturday afternoon, at half-past four, Revs. Ahrens, LaPrade, Faunt LeRoy, Clay, F. S. and F. N. Parker taking part in the services; and the body was laid to rest by the side of her son, Christian K., in Carrollton Cemetery.

RESOLUTIONS OF SYMPATHY.

That in the death of Mrs. Mary M. Wilkinson, we feel that the church in New Orleans has sustained a great loss in the removal of one of its choicest spirits and most active workers; that the society in which she moved is deprived of one of its most valued members; that the home of our senior Bishop is bereaved, indeed, by the removal to her home above of the daughter who has been its cheer and its benediction; that we sympathize with the Bishop and his family in their great sorrow, and pray that all the consolations of the gospel may abound unto them in this time of need.

By order of N. O. Preachers' Meeting.
F. N. PARKER, Sec.

NOTES.

After the next session of the Mississippi Conference all of Louisiana this side of the Mississippi river will belong to the Louisiana Conference. The preachers in the ceded territory will have the privilege of choosing between the two Conferences.

Mrs. Mary M. Wilkinson, daughter of Bishop J. C. Keener, died on Friday afternoon. The Bishop had been telegraphed for, but did not reach home until after her death. The General Conference, on hearing the sad tidings, adopted, by a rising vote, resolutions of sympathy with the Bishop and his family.

Mr. Wm. P. Wayne, son of the late Rev. Benj. Franklin Wayne, has entered the evangelistic field and held his first service at the First Baptist Church, on Magazine near Washington Ave., on May 13. The subject was, "What are you waiting for?" taken from a portion of Matthew xxii, 4, namely: "All things are ready; come unto the marriage." Mr. Wayne has been engaged for some time past in writing religious verse for his future work.

Rev. F. B. Meyer on Bible Study.

The following is from a little book of extracts from Mr. Meyer's writings, selected by Rev. B. Fay Mills:

The whole of Christian living, in my opinion, hinges on the way in which Christian people read the Bible for themselves. All sermons and addresses, all Bible readings and classes, all religious magazines and books, can never take the place of our own quiet study of God's precious Word. We may measure our growth in grace by the growth of our love for private Bible study. And we may be sure that there is something seriously wrong when we lose our appetite for the Bread of Life. Perhaps we have been eating too many sweets, or taking too little exercise, or breathing too briefly in the bracing air which sweeps over the uplands of spiritual communion with God.

There are a few simple rules which may help many more to acquire this holy art, and I venture to note them down. May the Holy Spirit himself own and use them!

1. Make time for Bible study. The divine teacher must have fixed and uninterrupted hours for meeting his scholars. The more you read the Bible, the more you will want to read it. It is an appetite which grows as it is fed. And you will be well repaid. The Bible seldom speaks, and certainly never its deepest, sweetest words, to those who always read in a hurry.

2. Look up for the teaching of the Holy Spirit. No one can so well explain the meaning of his words as he who wrote them. Tennyson could best explain some of his deeper references in "In Memoriam." If, then, you want to read the Bible as you should, make much of the Holy Ghost, who inspired it through holy men. As you open the Book lift up your heart and say: "Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law. Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth."

3. Read the Bible methodically. On the whole there is probably no better way than to read the Bible through once every year. There is a very good plan for doing this in the life of the sainted McCheyne, who drew it up for his people. Or it may be done by reading daily, in a Bagster's Bible, three columns of the Old Testament, two of the New Testament, and one of the Psalms. This system will more than do it.

4. Read your Bible with your pen in hand. Writing of Frances R. Havergal, her sister says: "She read her Bible at her study table by seven o'clock in the Summer, and eight o'clock in the Winter. Sometimes, on bitterly cold mornings, I begged that she would read with her feet comfortably to the fire, and received the reply, 'But then, Marie, I can't mark my lines neatly; just see what a find I've got.' If only one searches, there are such extraordinary things in the Bible." She resolutely refrained from late hours and frittering talks at night, in place of Bible searchings and holy communings. Early rising and early studying were her rule through life.

None, in my judgment, have learned the secret of enjoying the Bible until they have commenced to mark it neatly. Underlining and dating special verses, which have cast a light on their path on special days; drawing railway connections, across the page, between verses which repeat the same message or ring with the same note; jotting down new references, or the catch-words of helpful thoughts—all these methods find plenty of employment for the pen, and fix our treasures for us permanently. Our Bible, then, becomes the precious memento of bygone hours, and records the history of our inner life.

5. Seek eagerly your personal profit. Do not read the Bible for others, for class or congregation, but for yourself. Bring all its rays to a focus on your own heart. Whilst reading, often ask that some verse or verses may start out from the printed page as God's message to yourself, and never close the book until you feel that you are carrying away your portion of meat from that hand which satisfieth the desire of every living thing. It is well, sometimes, to stop reading, and seriously ask, What does the Holy Spirit mean me to learn by this? What bearing should this have on my life? How can I work this into the fabric of my character?

Above all, turn from the printed page to prayer. If a cluster of heavenly fruit hangs within reach, gather it. If a promise lies upon the page as a bank cheque, cash it. If a prayer is recorded, appropriate it, and launch it as a feathered arrow from the bow of your desire. If an example of holiness gleams before you, ask God to do as much for you. If a truth is revealed in all its intrinsic splendor, entreat that its brilliance may ever irradiate the hemisphere of your life like a star. Entwine the climbing creepers of holy desire about the lattice work of Scripture. So shall you come to say with the Psalmist, "Oh, how I love thy law! it is my meditation all the day!"—Exchange.

Woman's Work.

Our editor of the Woman's Missionary Advocate again kindly reminds us that, in raising the sum of $100 000, all the dues, thank-offerings, special gifts, funds for life members, and in fact all amounts that are intended for the foreign work, are included.

She asks the question: "Why so many members and so few workers? 'Two cents a week and a prayer!' One hour a month! May God forgive us if we do only the least that will constitute us a member of the Woman's Missionary Society.

"It seems a little curious that there are many good workers in the church who stand aloof from the missionary society, and yet it is almost invariably the case that a faithful, energetic worker in the latter is always found in all the other departments of church work, and usually in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. This seems to imply that the missionary work is so inspiring, and places one on a plane so elevated and in such a broad expanse of light, that all other duties are by this revealed, and those who work by this light are impelled to gather the ungleaned sheaves that lie all around them."

Mrs. Siebe, Crystal Springs, writes: "I know you are thinking of me as being very remiss in duty. And really I have made very slow progress in my work a district secretary. I have only organized at Terry and Gallman, and those are in working condition." She made efforts at other places, leaving literature, and has been invited and contemplates more visits, with hopes of success. It is desired to hold the district meeting when Mrs. Lambuth can be with them probably in April. She has urged the women to give ten cents each month if they can not have, or keep up, an organization. This is good advice. Surely there are some in every charge who would help that much. Some women shrink from assuming obligations because of a feeling of unfitness. This proves the wisdom of the establishment of the training-school.

We glean from Miss Bennett's circular letter: "A great spiritual awakening has come to our church, and to-day she stands equipped for service with such an army of loyal, consecrated women and children as the world has rarely seen. But they have learned that it is not the Father's will that his children shall be sent out untried and untrained to battle with the powers and principalities of darkness, but that they shall put on the whole armor of God (Eph. vi, 11-13)." "In this institution the women of our church, and Christian women of any denomination, desiring to qualify themselves for the best service in the Master's vineyard, either at home or abroad, in the mission stations of foreign lands, Sunday-school, kindergartens, or the wretched tenement-houses and city slums of our own land can, under good and wise instructors, obtain a broad and intelligent knowledge of God's Word, an increase in faith, and make themselves familiar with the great need and with all departments of home and foreign work, receive a good course of training in elementary medicine and hospital nursing, and last, but not least, by work among the sick and afflicted, the poor and the outcasts of Kansas City, test their own ability and fitness for entering this work in foreign or home lands. My sisters, are there not some among you, in your society, your church or your neighborhood, whose hearts go out with such a longing to be true and faithful co-laborers with Christ that they will enter the training-school at once, and qualify themselves for the best service with him? If you desire further information on this point, the principal, Miss Maria L. Gibson, of Kansas City, will gladly give it you. The expense is not heavy, and to make it lighter, to put the opportunity within the reach of all our women, we are striving, by God's help, to build up a good endowment fund."

"To-day, in the midst of all this financial depression, the world is spending thousands, yes, millions of dollars in worldly pleasures and the indulgence of selfish desires. Neither the saloon nor the theater closes its doors. Great pugilistic shows and wickedness in all its grosser forms draw their support alike from the rich and the poor and revel in wealth. Shall our economies begin at the house of the Lord? Surely we who have named the name of Christ, who have enlisted under his banner, will not, can not draw back or refuse to give that which is his.

"We have prepared no literature for the Easter service; but I beg you to let me urge that, if your pastor does not object, you prepare your children for a special meeting, and in your own society and church, if possible, hold a praise and prayer service, give information with regard to the school, and gather the 'free-will offerings' from all who will make them."

Miss Sallie Smylie, Meridian, reported: "I have returned from my district meeting and feel fully repaid for all the trouble and anxious feeling I had before going. We had twenty-five in attendance, and a more pleasant meeting I never attended. The church was beautifully decorated and so appropriate for Easter, and the people of Enterprise did entertain us so nicely that we all feel like we want to have another meeting there. We all felt benefited by the meeting, and I am much encouraged from reports of the different societies. I hope some good was done, and that the Meridian district will make a good report at Conference. I do hope that other district secretaries will have as hearty co-operation of societies as I have."

We are in possession of something good from Jackson district, but will wait for a full report. We appreciate the kind invitation to attend the district meeting.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. S. Woodward, Meridian, Miss., May 5: "Our meeting at Central Church closed on Thursday night, third instant. Not less than 150 conversions and reclamations, most of whom were already members of the church. About thirty accessions to Central, and several to each of the Methodist and other churches of the city. It has been one of the most gracious revivals that I have attended in a quarter of a century. Bro. McIntosh goes to West End, where his tent is being erected."

Rev. C. F. Emery, P. C., Lumberton, Miss., May 6: "Last night we closed here a series of protracted meetings, which were begun at Poplarville, March 30. Bro. C. H. Ellis, the evangelist from New Iberia, La., did the preaching. At the close of the meeting there, I began a series of meetings at Purvis assisted by Bro. G. D. Anders, who preached a week, when Bro. Ellis came up and closed for us. Bro. Ellis has done the preaching for us at this place, and the result of the entire work has been to greatly revive the people of this circuit. Many church members were converted, backsliders were reclaimed and twenty-six persons joined the church. Praise the Lord for the victory!"

Rev. D. Scarborough, Meridian, Miss.: "We have just closed a two-weeks' meeting here in South Side Church with gracious results. A great many conversions, twelve accessions, backsliders reclaimed, and the church revived. Old feuds have been settled, family altars erected, and the congregations increased. Bro. T. B. Holloman, B. F. Lewis, W. W. Hopper, I. L. Peebles and Joe Jones expounded the Word. All of these brethren labored faithfully, and God was with them. Bros. F. M. Keen, R. S. Woodward and D. A. Little were with us part of the time, and rendered efficient service. We praise God for what has been done, and are looking for greater things yet to come. Our church here is growing. God is with us. We have received twenty members up to date; others who have joined yet to be received. Pray for us."

Rev. B. T. Crews, Mansfield, La., May 5: "I have just closed a meeting of four weeks' hard work. It was the hardest fight I have ever had. There were ten professions; five who were already members of the church, and five who were not members. Four of them joined our church, and the other one will join the Baptist Church. Dr. McVoy, the president of our college, did his full share of work, and is highly appreciated by the church and citizens. Bros. S. S. Holladay and J. B. Williams were with me part of the time, and did faithful and efficient preaching. They both made many friends. We have an Epworth League of more than forty members. I shall continue to break soil and sow the seed for a rich harvest in the Fall. Many of the members were quickened into richer experiences in the meeting just closed."

A Card.

District Parsonage, Alexandria, La., May 10, 1894.

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Davies desire to return sincere thanks to the good people of Alexandria and Pineville for their Christian courtesy and kindness.

Kobe Industrial School for Girls.

Dear Brethren: Let us gladden the heart of our dear mother in Israel (Mrs. Lambuth) by bringing up the list of cash and subscriptions for this much needed enterprise—the cherished hope of her we know so much in our hearts. One thousand dollars is needed imperatively. Money could not be better invested. A little Christian self-denial will open the way to your free contribution. Then it will reflect such blessing to your spirit. The last cash offered was by a single lady in Nashville, who out of small sums hardly earned gave $5, and felt an inexpressible spiritual blessing as the result. If you have not the cash, send on your name, as good as your note, for any sum—the more the better to all concerned. It will be reported by Dr. Black, 112 Camp street, New Orleans. Yours in hope,

J. P. DRAKE

AN ABSOLUTE FACT.

Sufferers from Head-ache have an assured relief in PRESTON'S HEAD-ACHE, the only known remedy which can be guaranteed to cure every type of Headache in 15 minutes.

Contributions for Kobe Industrial School for Girls.

The following amounts have been contributed to inaugurate a work greatly needed, and promising gracious results to Japanese womanhood. Let the amounts run up to at least $1 000 very speedily. Report all subscriptions to Mrs. M. I. Lambuth, at Mission Rooms, Nashville, Tenn.

Cash previously reported by Mrs. Lambuth, $115. Land in Anthony, Fla., when sold, worth $50.

I wish to report the following amounts received since last report: Mrs. S. L. Weiher, $1; Mrs. R. A. Harris, $2; Pine Grove Sunday-school, $2 60; J. D. Rowan, $1; Mrs. Bettie Legrand, $1.

Many thanks to the givers, and an earnest prayer for God's blessing upon them. We need money very much to carry on the good work. May God open the hearts of liberal ones to give as the Lord has prospered them. Send it on, one and all.

Marry This Girl—Somebody!

MR. EDITOR: I stained a blue silk dress with lemon juice; what will restore the color? I am making lots of money selling the Climax Dish Washer. Have not made less than $10 any day I worked. Every family wants a Dish Washer, and pay $5 quickly when they see the dishes washed and dried perfectly in one minute. I generally sell at every house. It is easy selling what every family wants to buy. I sell as many Washers as my brother, and he is an old salesman. I will clear $3,000 this year. By addressing J. H. Nolen, 60 W. Third Ave., Columbus, Ohio, anyone can get particulars about the Dish Washer, and can do as well as I am doing.

Talk about hard times; you can soon pay off a Mortgage, when making $10 a day, if you will only work; and why won't people try, when they have such good opportunities? MAGGIE R.

PAINT cracks.—It often costs more to prepare a house for repainting that has been painted in the first place with cheap ready-mixed paints, than it would to have painted it twice with strictly pure white lead, ground in pure linseed oil, forms a permanent base for repainting and never has to be burned or scraped off on account of scaling or cracking. It is always smooth and clean. To be sure of getting strictly pure white lead, purchase any of the following brands:

Strictly Pure White Lead

"Southern," "Red Seal," "Collier."

FOR COLORS.—National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, a one-pound can to a 25-pound keg of Lead, and mix your own paints. Saves time and annoyance in matching shades, and insures the best paint that it is possible to put on wood.

Nothing Succeeds Like Success,

And the success which is most satisfactory and receives the greatest praise, is that which is won by a man or an article after others have failed.

The fact that previous efforts have not succeeded, proves the difficulty of the task. Hood's Sarsaparilla has been marvelously successful in curing all troubles originating in impure blood after other remedies and prescriptions have failed to have any effect whatever.

Therefore we say to those who feel almost in despair because, after long years of illness, they have failed to recover the coveted health, do not be discouraged, but give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial.

Far be it from us to raise false hopes in the hearts of the sick and suffering. We do not claim that Hood's Sarsaparilla will cure everybody or everything. It will not accomplish impossibilities. But the experience of thousands of others who have found health in Hood's Sarsaparilla when all other means had proven futile, justifies us in thus presenting fairly and plainly the facts in regard to this medicine and to urge upon you that you place it in your confidence.

An Appeal to the Young People of Mississippi.

Dear Young Friends: Millsaps College needs a large hall for young men of limited means. We must build it. The hall is a necessity. Would it not be a handsome work for the young Mississippians to furnish the agent with money to build this hall? If we can get at the work right, we can do it. I want the young Methodists of Mississippi to send me five thousand dollars. Let us go to work in earnest. Let the young people from five to twenty-one years of age send me from fifty cents to one dollar each. Let every church and community be represented. The name and amount will appear in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. May our Father inspire your hearts, dear young friends, to help us build this hall! Let me hear at once from you. Your friend,

I. W. COOPER.

HOME CIRCLE.

EVERY INCH A MAN.

She sat on the porch in the sunshine
As I went down the street,
A woman whose hair was silver,
But whose face was blossom sweet;
Making me think of a garden
When, in spite of the frost and snow
Of bleak November weather,
Late, fragrant lilies blow.

I heard a footstep behind me,
And the sound of a merry laugh;
And I knew the heart it came from
Would be like a comforting staff,
In the time and the hour of trouble,
Hopeful and brave and strong:
One of the hearts to lean on
When we think all things go wrong.

I turned at the click of the gate latch
And met his manly look.
A face like his gives me pleasure,
Like the page of a pleasant book.
It told of a steadfast purpose,
Of a brave and daring will;
A face with a promise in it,
That, God grant, the years fulfill.

He went up the pathway singing,
I saw the woman's eyes
Grow bright with a wordless welcome,
As sunshine warms the skies,
"Back again, sweetheart mother!"
He cried, and bent to kiss
The loving face that was lifted
For what some mothers miss.

That boy will do to depend on;
I hold that this is true,
From lads in love with their mothers
Our bravest heroes grew.
Earth's grandest hearts have been loving hearts
Since time and earth began,
And the boy who kisses his mother
Is every inch a man!

A Royal Road to Self-Improvement.

Each one of us has been told of the power evil habits have over us when they have once gained a foothold, yet comparatively few persons recognize the fact that good habits have an equally strong influence.

Many of our young people become discouraged in their efforts for self-improvement because it is a long time before improvement is apparent.

Instead of trying to improve in all possible ways at once, it would be better to give attention to some one thing until you have conquered an evil habit or acquired a longed-for grace of character.

An excellent plan is to consider what you most desire to improve in, and then give daily attention to this for a month. Do not fret because you are not making as much progress as in other things. Some one thing thoroughly mastered is going to be a great help toward mastering something else.

You will be gradually learning to concentrate your thoughts, and at the same time learning self-control more rapidly than is possible ordinarily.

Choose a motto, or some central thought; think of it daily, and live up to it for a month. At the end of four weeks you will be surprised to see how seldom the old temptation assails you, or how easy it is to perform a task which formerly was distasteful.

If any disagreeable household duty is assigned you, it will soon cease to ruffle your spirit if you perform it at a regular hour. Try this. So long as you groan over it, and put it off from hour to hour, you will spoil each day of your life. Each pleasure is marred by the consciousness of this neglected duty which must be attended to, willingly or unwillingly.

Our burdens cease to be such if we rise in the morning with a determination to do cheerfully whatever is given us to do. Select the task you dislike or dread most, and attend to it at the earliest possible moment. The worst over, you will step round with a light heart as you perform the duties which remain.

The cultivation of good habits is as important for you as the conquering of evil ones. It may be that you are of a temperament which is not susceptible to strong temptations. You may have a negative goodness, and be inclined to indifference to what is going on around you. Then your object should be to cultivate an interest in others, and in some special pursuit. This will add much to your happiness and to the comfort and welfare of your friends.

On the first day of each month decide what you will give particular attention to, and then write down a motto, whether it be a quotation, or framed by yourself. Tack this card to the inside of your closet door, or somewhere else where you will be sure to see it every day. The frequent reminder will be a great help.

Here are some which have been tried with noticeable good effect: "Do not interrupt others in conversation unnecessarily." "Be unselfish." "Have courage to speak the truth." "Do not drink." "If you have been to blame, do not try to throw the blame on some one else. 'If she hadn't done so-and-so, it wouldn't have happened.'" "When you have used an article, put it back in its place; especially if it is one used by the family in common." "Remember that by your conduct persons judge of your home training and home influences." "Be careful to meet your engagements promptly." "Be punctual at meals."

What a boon to housekeepers if each member of the family would be punctual! The domestic machinery comes to a standstill when meals are kept waiting for some dilatory person, and not only is good cooking spoiled by not being served as soon as it is ready for the table, but the housekeeper's disposition is apt to be ruined. She has to see that certain work is done; she is expected to have appetizing meals prepared; when all her pains-taking is in vain, she is fretted by the disappointments, the apprehensions that "nothing will be fit to eat," and by the consciousness of the impossibility of having things go smoothly when inconsiderate persons protract the time set apart for meals. If you have never noticed how many things in a household hinge upon one another, do so now. You will soon understand that there is "a wheel within a wheel," and regret that you ever added to family cares by your thoughtlessness.

"Whatever is worth doing at all is worth doing well."

"Help others." There is an infinite variety of ways to do this. You may share household occupations with mother or sister; give pecuniary aid to the needy; try to keep those around you in a state of cheerfulness; if unable to nurse sick relatives or friends, you can yet minister to them by giving them an occasional half-hour, tell them some interesting news, and divert their minds. If you have a real desire to be helpful, you will soon find many ways to carry out your wish.

Let your friends feel that you can be depended upon to keep your word. It will be a comfort for them to have some one to turn to in time of need, and it will be a deep and lasting pleasure to you to know they have confidence in you.

If you will try my plan for a year, I am very sure your immediate friends will be surprised at the progress you make in building up a noble character. A club of young ladies have tested its merits, and are delighted with the result.

Of course, individual tastes and aspirations will govern the selection of the monthly mottoes. One young lady took for her first motto: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." So faithfully did she obey it, that at the end of three weeks a relative said to her: "What a change has come over you! It seems as if we could tell the very day you made up your mind to do thoroughly everything you engaged in. You make me think of a text." She quoted the above, and her niece then told her of the plan she had adopted.

You will have time to try this, for you need only to read your chosen sentence while making your toilet; and by pondering it a short time, you will not be likely to lose sight of it during the day.

This is a royal road to culture, for once a good habit is formed, you can give you attention to another subject with the assurance that you need not take up the last one again.—Ladies' Home Journal.

THE OLD HOME.

BY MARY A. DENISON.

You'll keep the old house, darling,
When I am lying low,
For when I married Bessy Lee,
I brought her here, you know.
Though it's homely and old-fashioned,
In every stick and stone,
There never was a spot so sweet
As this we call our own.

Each in its corner fitting,
Her arm chair stood, and mine;
Here is her little knitting stand,
With polish warm and fine;
And everywhere her presence
Seems angel-like to glide.
There were not such a home and wife
In all the country side.

There's moss upon the shingled roof,
There's mould upon the eaves;
But cooing doves have made their home
Among the woodbine leaves,
And on the hearthstone, broad and deep,
The firelight shines as bright
As when I brought my treasure home,
Upon my wedding night.

We've welcomed all our children,
As precious pledges given;
And some have lain within these arms
When beckoned back to heaven.
They sleep just near the little church,
Away from noise and strife;
But here they seem to gather still—
My babies and my wife.

So keep the old house, darling—
It was not made to sell;
Its memories are full of joy;
Your mother loved it well.
Though it's homely and old-fashioned,
I never wish to roam;
I could not find a spot so dear
As this, our own sweet home.

Leaving Children to the Care of Nurses.

BY MARIA M. VINTON, A. M., M. D.

There is no duty of the mother so important, so sacred, as that of personally caring for her children, especially when they are very young. Duties to society, to education, to philanthropy, should all be secondary to this home duty.

What excuse can be offered for the woman who hires a nurse for her children and then gives up all her time to so-called duties and pleasures which call her outside her home and away from the supervision of the nursery? It is not easily possible to secure for money, however liberally one may be able and willing to spend it, a person who will equal in refinement and education the child's own mother.

The care of children has been regarded as one of the lower occupations, and few educated girls will take the position of nurse. Yet the brain and the thought-power of a child develop far more rapidly during the first two years of life than at any later period, and the child's disposition may be easily spoiled by injudicious handling. The difference between a fretful, cross child, making himself a nuisance to all around, and a sweet-tempered, laughing baby, is largely a matter of regularity and careful management. The impressions received, the language spoken, and the direction taken by the child's mind, are those of the persons with whom he comes most in contact. It is for this reason that French and German nurses are often sought, that the child may easily and naturally learn a foreign language. One hour with the mother will not counteract the effect of twenty-three hours with the nurse. Even granting that the care of an intelligent nurse over the physical wants of a child is of more value than that of a mother (which I do not believe), the direction of mind is far better taken charge of by the mother. This is not advocating a precocious education for the baby, but simply that the budding mind may have the best atmosphere to unfold in.

Let me give a few examples of the false impressions that the little ones often receive from their nurses. Many children live in constant terror of the "bugaboo" who catches naughty ones in the dark, or the man under the bed who will come out after them if they are left alone. Or they are taught to fear mice, spiders, worms or other harmless lower animals. This fear is never natural to children, but is taught them at so early an age that they seem to have been born with it. A child who sees a worm for the first time feels only interest and curiosity about it. He laughs and wants to put his finger on it, to see how it feels and what it will do. Some ignorant person says, "the worm is nasty" or "the worm will bite you"—and the child ever afterward fears that he may be bitten or poisoned by a creature that has no weapons against the human race and whose habits are intensely interesting to many older as well as younger people. There is nothing more ridiculous than to see a girl scream and run away from a tiny spider. I know a lady who was laid up three weeks with a sprained ankle, the result of her frantic attempts to escape from a little mouse, who was doubtless far more frightened then she. Yet I can not remember the time when I had the slightest fear of these creatures. My mother taught me that they were harmless and interesting. Teach a baby under two years this fearlessness, and his mind will never be influenced against his early teachings.

Little children are naturally cruel from ignorance, and need a gentle mind to teach them that an insect or a kitten can feel pain as well as they. The girl, at six years old, who drags her kitten around the yard by a string tied round its neck, began with a nurse who did not teach her to care for and protect all beings weaker than herself.

Can we trust the nurse to guide and develop the early sense of right and wrong? Too often she comes from a family or a race in which these distinctions are far from clear in the minds of the elders. The child soon learns that nurse does not always tell the truth, that her word can not be depended upon, and he naturally imitates her in this respect. We see little children pushing one another away from the best place, seizing the best piece of cake or the largest orange. It is but natural to the human mind. But this little seed grows into the great tree of selfishness and carelessness of the interests of others, of which we see so much in adults. Some children scream and howl whenever their wills are crossed in any way. A firm hand to break this habit means comfort and peace for the family in future. These lessons of fearlessness, of unselfishness, of kindness and self-control can not be learned too early. The child who lacks these lessons develops into an excitable, high-strung, nervous being, a curse to himself and a constant anxiety to his parents. —Nursery Guide.

Mary's Lesson.

One day, lovely and bright with Spring sunshine—and there was no school that day—Mary's father invited her to take a ride with him, as he was going far up in the country to look after some woodland. But he was to call for another man, a neighbor, who had the promise of going too.

The little girl was delighted, and, dressing herself quickly, she helped her father harness the horse and fix the carriage. She thought she was a great help, and so she was, for she brushed out the carriage very neatly, and held the harness, piece by piece, for her father, to save his steps, as he was lame. It was a narrow buggy, and her father said, "Mary, perhaps we shall find there isn't room for three when we take in Mr. Owens. What shall we do then?"

"I don't know, father," was the quick reply, "unless I get out to make room."

"Well, then," said he, "we will see when we get there; but if it is too crowded, I should like for you to give up your ride for this time, as it is necessary that Mr. Owens should go with me."

"All right, father, I will!" said the dear child.

Sure enough, when they reached their neighbor's it was discovered there was not room for three, and Mary obeyed her father without saying another word. She stayed and played with Ella Owens till the carriage came back, and had a beautiful time. This was a good example for Ella, for she was not in the habit of minding so easily. "I should think you would make a fuss," said she, "unless you didn't really want to go."

Mary's answer was, "I wanted to do just as my father wanted me to."

Happy Mary! This loving obedience to her father helped her to exercise the same towards her heavenly Father, and she grew up to be a sweet Christian woman.—Exchange.

SMALL BUT EFFECTIVE,
Was the little Monitor that met the Merrimac at Hampton Roads. So too are Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, effective in conquering the enemy—disease. When you take a pill it's an important point to have them small—provided they have equal strength and efficacy. You find what you want in these little liver pills of Dr. Pierce. They're put up in a better way, and they act in a better way, than the huge old-fashioned pills. What you want when you're "all out of sorts"—grumpy, thick-headed and take a gloomy view of life, is these Pellets to clear up your system and start your liver into healthful action. Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels, are prevented, relieved and cured. Put up in sealed glass vials, and always fresh and reliable.
JAMES WILLIAM CRAIG, ESQ., of Georgetown, Ky., says: "My wife thinks your little 'Pellets' are the greatest pills out."

CARTER—JOHN W. CARTER, son of Joseph and Lucinda Carter, was born in Jackson county, Miss., Sept. 3, 1839, and died March 31, 1894. He joined the M. E. Church, South, when young, and was converted when about nineteen years old. He was steadfast in faith from then until his death. He said to his wife in his sickness that he had made all necessary preparations for death a long time ago.

He was afflicted for over three years with cancer in the upper jawbone, but he bore all of his sufferings with great patience. He would often call for the angel hands to bear him to his home in heaven. He said shortly before his death that he had made his preparations for death long ago, and that he was waiting the Lord's time to take him to glory. He was a kind and affectionate husband and father. He was never heard to speak a cross word in his family. He was a kind neighbor. He took a great interest in the church, and was willing to work in any way in his power for the advancement of the kingdom of Christ. He was a good singer, and loved to exercise his gifts in singing the songs of Zion. He tried to sing just before he died, but was unable. He loved the twenty-third Psalm, and would oftentimes repeat it. He also loved to think over the last chapter of Revelation. He requested his wife and children and all of his friends to meet him in heaven. Look up, bereaved ones; he awaits you in the skies. J. H. HOLLAND.

THOMAS—NATHANIAL BUTLER THOMAS, son of John S. and Mary Thomas, was born near Florence, Ala., Oct. 13, 1825, and died near Delhi, La., Feb. 13, 1894. He was twice married, both times in Lafayette county, Ark. He married Miss Mattie Nix, Nov. 15, 1849. She died in 1865, leaving an only child eight years old. Eighteen months afterward he married Miss Mattie G. Lewis, with whom he lived most happily till his death. He united with the Methodist Church, South, in 1877, under the ministry of Rev. N. S. Cornell, whom he loved devotedly to the end of life. Four years ago his only son died, leaving a wife and five children, whom he took to his own home and cared for with the tenderness of a father.

Bro. Thomas was inflexibly upright in character, of strong convictions and unbending will. He was to be trusted anywhere. As a husband and father he was tender and devoted; as a friend, ever true. In a ministry of twenty years the writer never found a better friend than he. He loved his church, and was a liberal supporter of its institutions. A good, true man; he lived well, he died right, for his end was peace. J. D. HARPER.

MOODY—MARY FANNIE MOODY, daughter of Mr. T. H. and Julia S. Moody, was born in Jackson county, Miss., on Feb. 28, 1891, and departed this life at Cross Roads, Jackson county, Miss., on Feb. 3, 1894.

Little Mary suffered greatly for three weeks; but she bore it all with great patience. She will suffer no more, for she is now where sickness and sorrow, pain and death, are unknown. Yes, she is with the blessed Christ; he who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of Heaven."

Weep not, father and mother, brothers and sisters: little Mary is "at the beautiful gate, waiting and watching for you."

J. H. HOLLAND.

DERAMUS—MRS. SARAH A. DERAMUS was born in Bienville parish, La., Feb. 1, 1848; converted and joined the church in the Winter of 1865; was married to Wesley J. Deramus, Jan. 4, 1866, and died near Hemphill postoffice, La., Feb. 28, 1894.

She was a good woman. She had been sick a long time, but her faith was that of Job—"Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him." Her last words were: "I am trusting in Jesus. I want to go home." She was the mother of ten children. She leaves a husband and nine children to mourn her loss. May God bless the bereaved ones! P. C. GRACE, P. C.

RAWLS—Dr. D L. RAWLS was born in Hinds county, Miss., in the year 1823. He was educated in Granville, Ohio. His medical education was received at what is now Tulane University in New Orleans, during the years 1851 and 1852. Many years of his professional life were spent in and around the town of Crystal Springs, Miss. He removed to Terry, Miss, in 1871, and died there in March of the present year. He was married, Feb. 2, 1854, to Miss Anna Patton, daughter of the late Francis and Myra Patton. His wife and three daughters now survive him. He was converted early in life near old Crystal Springs under the labors of Rev. Samuel L. L. Scott.

My acquaintance with him began in 1861. For some years from that date I was his pastor, and since then I have known him quite intimately. As a husband he was faithful and true; as a father, affectionate and devoted; as a steward and member of the church, zealous and deeply pious; as a physician and friend, sympathetic, frank and sincere. He died in peace and resignation. His friends have a well-grounded hope of meeting him in heaven.

J. W. MCNEILL

RAMSEY—SARAH ELIZABETH GEORGE, wife of E. N. Ramsey, was born in Jackson county, Miss., May 18, 1842, and died near Ocean Springs, Miss., Feb. 24, 1894.

It can be said of her as of one of old—"She walked in the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless." She gave strict attention to the rearing of her children in piety and godliness. She was greatly beloved by her children. I visited her several times as a pastor, and always found a hearty welcome. I was delighted with the Christian spirit manifested in conversation and in the general tenor of her home life. When it was possible for her to attend the services of the church she was always in her place, ready to contribute in every way possible to the cause of Christ. She was loved by all who knew her. She was the mother of eleven children, two of whom preceded her to the grave.

Her grief-stricken husband says: "Though we are full of sorrow and grief on account of our loss, we know that the victory is won, and the seeds of kindness sown by her will grow and flourish." She was buried at Ocean Springs.

RODT. SELBY.

HUNT—MRS. C. JANE HUNT, wife of F. W. Hunt, of Scott county, Miss., was born May 22, 1818, and died at her home in Hillsboro, Miss., March 20, 1894. She joined the M. E. Church, South, at the age of fourteen, and lived in the same for eight years, after which she joined the Missionary Baptist Church, and lived in it until her death.

Those who knew Sister Hunt best loved her most. She was the child of much affliction, in all of which the presence of her Lord was her conscious support. The last weeks of her life were especially afflictive. Perhaps there was no time in those last days in which she was free from pain—often times very severe and exhausting. With her husband and seven children, and a long train of friends, we followed her body to its last resting-place, and there, amid a multitude of friends and loved ones bathed in tears, we preached her funeral, with the blessed assurance that she is at rest.

May God bless and keep the loved ones left behind till they, too, shall be introduced into the glorious rest which remains for the people of God! Her Methodist pastor,

C. C. EVANS.

FAIRLEY—NAILL FAIRLEY was born on March 15, 1818, and died Feb. 11, 1894. He was a member of the M. E. Church, South, about forty-five years, and during all that time he lived a consistent Christian life. He was noted for his truthfulness and honesty. When he saw that his end was near he had no fears in regard to his future state. He called his wife and children to him, and said: "Good-by, wife and children; I will have to leave you. I am going to heaven, and I want you all to meet me there. We are all one family now, and if you will live right while in this life, we will be one family in heaven." He said to his married daughters: "Mothers, raise up your children right, and bring them to the altar of God while young." He asked all that were standing by to sing and pray, and as there was no one to lead in prayer, he prayed himself. Then he sang two hymns, after which he passed quietly away.

May his loved ones all follow his footsteps and at last meet him in the beautiful city above!

J. H. HOLLAND.

HOLMES—Mr. JOHN O. HOLMES, son of William and E. C. Holmes, was born in Oglethorpe county, Ga., March 2, 1847. His parents moved to this State in 1859, and settled in DeSoto parish, some thirty miles southwest of Shreveport, where he grew up and lived until his death, March 19, 1894. He joined the M. E. Church, South, during 1868, during a meeting held at Bell Bower by Bro. R. S. Trippett and Bro. Scott, L. P., at which time he was happily converted. He was married to Miss Emma C. Chaffin during 1872. They had ten children, two of whom died in childhood; the others are still living.

Bro. Holmes was a friend to the poor and a helper of the helpless. He was an enterprising and useful citizen, and will be greatly missed in the neighborhood. He was an affectionate and tender parent and husband, providing well for the family. May God comfort, protect and sustain the deeply bereaved wife and children! ROBERT RANDLE, P. C.

PIANOS AS PREMIUMS.

READ THE DESCRIPTION BELOW OF STYLE 10.

The list price of this instrument is $330. We will furnish this elegant instrument as a premium for new subscribers. If this offer interests you, write us for terms. You may be surprised at the terms we can give you.

STYLE 10.

Seven and one-third Octaves: Chaste Design; Overstrung Scale; Heavy Iron Frame; 3 Strings; Carved Trusses; Improved Sounding Board; Perfect Repeating Action and Sliding Music Desk. Height, 4 feet 4½ inches; length, 5 feet 2 inches; depth, 2 feet 4½ inches.

In offering this piano to the public our object is to provide for the existing demand for an instrument which, although taking up but a small amount of room, possesses the same quality of tone, the same high grade of action, work and material found in our larger pianos, at the same time a plainly but thoroughly well-finished exterior, enabling us to offer it at a price within the reach of everyone who wishes to secure a perfect piano for a small amount of money. This style is a favorite with ministers, as it takes less room and is more easily moved than the larger instruments.

Made in Rosewood, Ebony, Walnut or Mahogany finish.

Boxed with good Plush Stool, Embroidered Cover and Instruction Book. Every instrument warranted for five years.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-third annual camp meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 11, next, and continue for eight days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates will be obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the camp meeting to begin their journey on July 4, and remain on the grounds until the end of August. Tickets on sale from July 4 to 21. All trains to stop at camp ground station from July 11 to 25, inclusive.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations, before the rush, at the opening of the camp meeting, should address communications to J. H. Campman, chairman Tent and Lodging Committee, 84 Baronne St., New Orleans, La. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to Capt. A. C. Danner, chairman, Mobile, Ala.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations, free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half-rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding-tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Lodging Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution toward defraying the expense of the camp meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous and in the interest of the salvation of souls.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Thirty-one lawyers graduated from Tulane University, this city, on May 12.

The Louisiana Legislature convened, on May 14, in biennial session. The session is limited to sixty days, and will terminate on July 12.

On the opening day of the Legislature of Louisiana, May 14, Senator Don Caffery was elected to the United States Senate for six years.

The Brooklyn Tabernacle was burned on May 13, and with it a Methodist Church, the Hotel Regent and about twenty residences were totally destroyed. The loss is about $2,000,000

The annual convention of the National Negro Democratic League will be held at Indianapolis commencing July 3. State convention will be held in various States on the first Tuesday in June to select two delegates and two alternates to represent each State at the national convention.

The exertions of the Louisiana senators and senators from Georgia and South Carolina have secured from the tariff managers a promise to retain in the Tariff bill the rice schedule as it stands in the Wilson bill, and not to press the amendment which was recently proposed by the committee reducing duties.

The beautiful bronze statue of Christopher Columbus executed by the Spanish sculptor, Sunol, was unveiled with becoming ceremonies in the Central Park on May 12. The statue is located at the southern end of the "mall" and almost immediately facing that of Shakespeare. Here the ceremonies took place in the presence of a numerous and deeply interested gathering.

It is now expected to have the electric power from Niagara Falls ready for delivery in Buffalo as early as the first of October. The electricity generated by the huge turbines set in the tunnels will be raised to a potentiality of about 30,000 volts, and transmitted to Buffalo by underground wires. The company proposes to furnish power in Buffalo at about two-thirds the cost of steam power of equal efficiency.

The Louisiana delegation in Congress seem to be exceedingly pleased at the conservative course of the planters, and believe that it will strengthen their hands in their future efforts in behalf of sugar. They now hope that the members of the House of Representatives, finding that sugar planters are not disposed to make unreasonable demands, will not press the hostile measures recently introduced, and will modify their present opposition to a reasonable sugar tariff.

A large party of prominent Atlanta men, accompanied by a number of representative men from other cities of the South, left in special cars for Washington, where they go to present to the House Appropriations Committee the aims and purposes of the Cotton States and International Exposition, to be held in the Fall of 1895 and to urge Congress to aid the enterprise by making a government exhibit, and by an appropriation.

FOREIGN.

Secretary Gresham's paper upon Samoa has given great satisfaction in Berlin. It is concluded that the United States government will support the German protectorate.

In the vote on the budget, on May 10, in the House of Commons, the government had a narrow escape. The motion to reject offered by Judge Lawson, progressive conservative, was negatived by a vote of 308 to 294. All the Parnellites present voted against the government.

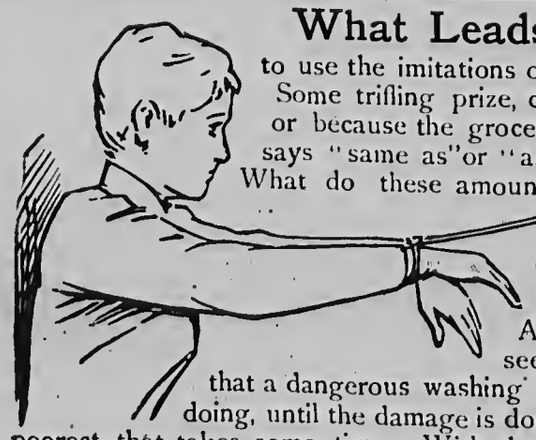
Emperor William of Germany believes in the religious observance of Sunday. During his recent visit to Italy a theatre in Venice gave a special performance in his honor on a Sunday, but the audience waited in vain for the Emperor and King Humbert to put in an appearance.

The Rev. Dr. Lunn, who recently headed a party of English clergymen on a pilgrimage to Jerusalem, has issued a circular letter to the prelates and leading clergymen in England, asking them to co-operate in prayer at the respective services for the unity of all the Christian churches, in accordance with the recommendations of the recent Church Reunion Conference.

Arrests continue to be made in Russia as the result of the discovery by the police of the organization known as the Friends of Political Liberty. One hundred persons, a majority of whom were students, were arrested in one day on the charge of being either members of the organization or indirectly interested in its work. It is certain that many of the prisoners will be transported to Siberia.

The past week has developed the fact that the Liberal majority in Parliament is rapidly crumbling, and on the division on the second reading of the budget the government's majority was only fourteen, due to the defection of some of the radicals and all the Parnellites. The McCarthy section of the Irish party voted solidly with the government, and this loyalty was the only thing which saved the government from defeat.

A celebrated Frenchman said: "Perfection consists, not in doing extraordinary things, but in doing ordinary things with an extraordinary spirit."



What Leads You

to use the imitations of Pearline? Some trifling prize, cheap prices, or because the grocer or peddler says "same as" or "as good as?" What do these amount to, if your things are ruined in the washing? They may be. And you can't see the damage that a dangerous washing compound is doing, until the damage is done; with the poorest, that takes some time. With these imitations that nobody knows about, you have to take your own risk. Be on the safe side, and use only the original—Pearline. Millions of women can tell about that. Ask some of them, and satisfy yourself. Get their experience.

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 302 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

Two Good Schools Under One Management.

The attention of our readers is directed to the advertisement of the Bowling Green Business College and the Southern Normal School, of Bowling Green, Ky., which appears in this issue. While these schools are under one business management, yet they are two separate institutions. All branches taught in Business Colleges and Normal Schools are provided for. Both schools are having a very large patronage. Pupils may enter at any time.

How It Acts.

After using Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism, according to direction, for ten days, Mr. John W. Boyenton, of Hampton, Va., writes that he can walk and attend to business, which he could not do before. This Remedy has a remarkable record of cures—not only relieving pain, but restoring all the functions of the crippled limbs. If you want a cure, send $5 to the Drummond's Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and they will ship to your express address two large bottles of their remedy, with full directions for use. Agents Wanted.

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. ARRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

CHRISTIAN CONTENTMENT.

(Philip. iv, 11-13; Psalm xxxvii, 1-11.)

Many complain that they are creatures of unfortunate circumstances. But, leaning on the Lord, we are privilege, to mould our affairs. Children of God are not slaves, but masters of the situation.

1. Opulence does not make rich, nor indigence poor.

(1) Many possessing much of this world's goods are nevertheless poor. Are wretched because they have not more.

(2) Others, very poor, are really rich, because they are content with their lot. Being satisfied, they are wealthy.

2. Honor and high station do not always make happy, nor the reverse unhappy.

(1) Many are happy in very humble walks of society. Said Alexander the Great to Diogenes, living in a tub: "If thou would'st accept my bounty, thou would'st not have to eat herbs and roots." The philosopher replied: "O Alexander, if thou would'st be content with herbs and roots, thou would'st not have to be emperor."

(2) The tree on highest summit bears most of the hurricane's fury. High station in life and great danger go hand in hand.

3. To be content, satisfied, happy, we must be rich in God. Not outward circumstances, but our inward individual condition determines our real weal or woe.

(1) Content, if we possess the peace which passeth all understanding. Are saved from unrest, fretting, chafing.

(2) Content, if we acquire the pearl of great price. "The wealth of India" a mere bagatelle compared to our treasure.

(3) Content, if we are indeed children of God. Thought becomes bewildered when contemplating this wondrous relation. God, our Father.

(4) Content, satisfied, happy, when true gratitude for God's unspeakable gift transfuses the soul.

VOL. 41.—NO. 21. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, MAY 24, 1894. WHOLE NO. 1970.

Rev. W. C. BLACK, D. D., Editor and Publisher. } PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH. { ENTERED AT THE POST-OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

FRATERNAL ADDRESS.

Bishop Keener brought forward the Rev. Henry Wade Rodgers, LL.D., who made the following speech:

Mr. President, Fathers and Brethren: The Methodist Episcopal Church has commissioned me, in company with my distinguished associate, to carry its fraternal greetings to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. In obedience to the commission, we bring to the church which you represent the salutations of two and one-half millions of Methodists, to whom you are brethren beloved. Mercy unto you, and peace, and love, be multiplied. The Methodist Episcopal Church salutes the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and thanks God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, that he hath so greatly prospered you.

The Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, were born of the same mother. They were rocked in the same cradle. They ought to have the most fraternal interest in all that pertains to each other's welfare. The church we represent has sent us as her messengers to tell you how she has watched your growth and rejoiced in your prosperity. She has heard the bugle sounding the advance in the Southern camp, and she has seen your great army, a mighty host more than a million strong, marching forth under the crimson standard, winning glorious victories for the cross of Jesus Christ. Through faith you have been enabled to subdue kingdoms and to work righteousness. The church we represent has sent us to tell you how she has been thrilled by your achievements. She rejoices to know that the rate of your growth has outstripped the growth of population, and that it has equaled that of any other Methodism in the world. Surely, you have a right to say that the great Head of the church has placed the seal of his divine attestation upon you as a church of the living God.

As we have rejoiced with you in your prosperity, so we have mourned with you in your hours of sorrow. A great man fell in Israel when Holland Nimmons McTyeire was gathered to his fathers. As you shed tears over the bier of Matthew Simpson, we wept over the grave of McTyeire. You mourned him as the senior Bishop of your church; we mourned him as the senior Bishop of American Methodism. American Methodism mourns him still. His voice will not again sound forth like a trumpet blast to rally the host, but the memory of him will abide in the North as well as in the South.

"The memory of the just Smells sweet and blossoms
When they sleep in dust."

McTyeire has gone home to everlasting glory; but who shall say that this council of the church is not even now encompassed by a cloud of witnesses, and that McTyeire and Simpson and Wesley are not here?

It becomes our pleasant duty to inform you as to the present condition of the church which sent us here. In doing this, we are messengers of good tidings, of great joy. The membership of our church numbers 2,524 053. In the quadrennium, ending in 1892, the increase in our membership was 442,—, or more than the entire Methodism at the end of the first half century of its existence.

We have 28,392 Sunday-schools, with 1,369 782 scholars. The number of our traveling ministers is 16,444, and the number of our local preachers is more than 14,000. Our churches number 24,—, and the value of our church property amounts to $104,754,268. Our church leads the churches of all denominations in the amount of its contributions to the cause of foreign missions, the amount of its contributions for the last year being $1,473,898.76. In addition to this, we raised the sum of $169,585 for home missions, making a grand total of $1,643,484. The sales of our Book Concern amounted last year to more than $1,000,000. Our educational institutions number 197, and hold property to the amount of $26,—,191. The number of students in our educational institutions is more than 40,000. The largest of these institutions, Northwestern University, has almost 2,500 students, being exceeded in numbers by only two universities in the United States—Harvard University and the University of Michigan.

We invite your congratulations on what we have been enabled to accomplish in calling into being a new force within our church, one which even now stirs us with new life. One of the marvelous expressions of the activity of our branch of Methodism during the last quadrennium is the Epworth League. I take the greater pleasure in calling your attention to it, as it is practically a layman's movement. It represents the new generation in the church, and, personally, I am happy to have been born late enough in the century to number myself among them. The Epworth League has 15,000 chapters, and 850,000 members, or one-third of the entire church. It ought to become to the Methodist Episcopal Church what the Immortal Tenth Legion was to Julius Cæsar. The name of this young peoples' movement is fragrant with the youthful associations of those two young men who went out from the Epworth rectory to turn back into spiritual channels the indifference and skepticism of their age. We have learned with the greatest pleasure that in the State of Kentucky there has been held a union convention representing almost equally the young people of both churches. If in God's good providence this new organization shall help on the spirit of fraternity among us, I am sure it will have your prayers as well as ours.

Sirs, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has led the way in two great reforms, for both of which I stand here as a layman to express gratitude. From the time of its organization in 1784, to 1872, the laity had no representation in the councils of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In this we conformed to the ideas of Wesley, who would not suffer laymen to participate in the government of the church. "We are no republicans, and never intend to be," he declared. For more than fifty years the question was debated whether the laity should have any representation at all in our General Conference. The debate, sometimes bitter in spirit, resulted in giving to the laity in each Conference the right to send two delegates to the General Conference, with the exception that Conferences entitled to but one ministerial delegate were to be entitled to only one lay delegate. In accordance with this principle, there sat in the last General Conference of our church, assembled in Omaha in 1892, 315 ministers and 189 laymen, the ministerial outnumbering the lay delegates by almost two to one. I scarcely need tell you that condition of affairs is unsatisfactory to the laity of our church. Accustomed as we are to republican principles in the administration of affairs of the State, we fail to understand why an equality of representation should be denied to us in affairs of the Church. And so the last General Conference was asked to take action on this question, and did so, recommending by the necessary two-thirds vote that the number of lay delegates be made equal to the ministerial. This sent the subject to our Annual Conferences, where it must be approved by three-fourths of the members composing them. The laity are not represented in those Conferences, and so far as the vote has been taken, the defeat of the measure seems to be foreshadowed. Indeed, its defeat in the Annual Conference seemed probable, for of the ministerial delegates in the General Conference, 197 ministers voted aye and 108 nay, the necessary two-thirds being obtained by the practically unanimous vote of the laity. Your church, more democratic than ours, adopted nearly thirty years ago the principle for which the laity of our church are now contending. You were told that the presence of laymen in equal numbers in the General Conference would give rise to dangerous experiments in church legislation. You have not found it so. Bishop Haygood, respected and admired in the North as well as in the South, told us, some years ago, that your laymen, by participating in the business of the church, "had become better informed on all questions that concern the welfare of the church. Better knowledge of the church, its work, its plans, its methods, and its needs, has developed in them a deeper interest in all its enterprises. It has quickened their zeal, increased their faith, and enlarged their liberality in the support of all the institutions of the church." If it is safe to predict future events, it is safe to say that sooner or later the Methodist Episcopal Church will accept the principle your church had the courage and wisdom to adopt in 1866. The difference between us will be that in your church the ministers, on their own motion and without agitation, voluntarily surrendered one-half of the entire legislative power of the church, while in ours the change will be accomplished only after agitation and pressure.

The second of the great reforms which you have worked out in advance of us is that of lay representation in the Annual Conferences. I am persuaded that in this also ultimately we shall follow your example.

There is another question, sirs, which is agitating our church, and by which many are disturbed. I refer to the question relating to the admission of women to the General Conference of the church. It seems not improbable that this movement will finally result in their admission. Whatever differences of opinion may exist among us on this subject, we are all agreed in recognizing the great work which the women of our church have accomplished in the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies. Mrs. Browning declares in Aurora Leigh that "God made woman to save man by love," and let us bid her God-speed in the fulfillment of her mission. Women's love for God and humanity led them to establish these two societies which have become a blessing to the church and to the race. As for myself, I am not much troubled by questions as to woman's sphere. I do not care now to inquire whether Miriam was within her sphere when she went before the people of Israel along with Moses and Aaron, or whether Deborah was within hers when the children of Israel came before her for judgment. I only know that the women have achieved much, and I rejoice in the thought that they will achieve much more. They are a great spiritual and intellectual force in the world. It was the ear of an English woman that caught the wail of the children in the factories, and as the pen of Elizabeth Browning wrote "The Cry of the Children," it "shook England with its unutterable pathos." It was the ear of an American woman that caught the wail of the slave, and as the pen of Harriet Beecher Stowe wrote "Uncle Tom's Cabin," it evoked a storm that swept slavery forever out of sight.

It was to a woman that Jesus Christ first appeared after his resurrection. The messenger whom he sent to make known to his disciples the fact of his resurrection was a woman. The first person in Europe to be converted and baptized was a woman. The last at the cross and the first at the sepulchre was a woman. It is only a woman's love that "beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things." You remember the vision of the dreamer who stood by the side of a darkly flowing stream and saw the hosts as they passed over into the heavenly land—

"Of women there seemed an innumerable throng,
But the men I could count as they passed along."

Let us honor the women, South and North, for their virtues and for their devotion to the cause of Jesus Christ.

We congratulate ourselves and you that in Church and State there is a new North and a new South. Peace and harmony reign where once war and discord abounded. There was a time when we did not understand each other, and, therefore, lost respect for one another. But now, thank God! we have come to know each other and to respect each other. Nay, we have come to have fraternal regard for one another. In 1848, when your church proposed to our church to enter into fraternal relations, we rejected your proposal. The night that followed was long and dark. But finally a morning star appeared and foretold a better day. In 1874 our church sent fraternal messengers to your General Conference in Louisville, and you received them cordially and in much brotherly kindness. And in 1876 you sent your ambassadors to our General Conference in Baltimore, and we welcomed them in love. From that day to this your church and our church have maintained fraternal relations. The messages you have sent us we have cherished. The eloquent words in which your ambassadors have expressed your sentiments toward us have charmed and captivated us. The spell of their eloquence, the music of their voices, like that of silver bells, is with us still. We rejoice that these fraternal relations exist between us, and we earnestly hope that nothing may occur to interrupt them. "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!"

Those who last year looked upon the superb and matchless pageant of the White City, on the shores of Lake Michigan, had their hearts touched as never before with a sense of the brotherhood of man. Those white and magnificent palaces, beautiful with the genius of the past and present, filled with the splendid treasures of every people, bound us to our brother man of every clime. Above all, the representatives of every nation, living, working, praying for the realization of the same hopes, the same desires, the same achievements, set us all to thinking, as we had never done before, of the kinship of the races, the brotherhood of man, the Fatherhood of God. And when that wonderful Parliament of Religions with one accord lifted its voice in the prayer, "Our Father who art in heaven," the glad truth spoke to all hearts that though there are diversities of gifts and differences of administration, yet there is the same Spirit, and the same God which worketh all in all. Let us thank God that we live in an age that is beginning to receive an answer to that prayer of Robert Burns:

"Then let us pray, that come it may,
As come it will for a' that,
That man to man the world o'er,
Will brothers be and a' that."

Brethren beloved, Methodism has been disparaged because of its divisions. More than any of the great Protestant bodies we are divided. Why it should be so I can not tell. Our differences are not differences of doctrine. There never has been in the Wesleyan ranks a division as to doctrines. Bishop Simpson at the opening of the First Methodist Ecumenical Conference, in London, in 1881, proudly declared that "All over the world Methodist theology is a unit." And he at the same time denied that there was any radical differences in usages among us. The class meeting, the prayer meeting, the love-feast, the watch-night, are known, he said, everywhere in Methodism, while the itinerant ministry, and the Quarterly and Annual Conferences, exist in almost every branch. If there are no radical differences among us in doctrine and usages, why should the great Methodist family remain divided into many branches? Division, or separation, is not becoming in the followers of John Wesley, whose spirit yearned for a closer union among all Christians. He longed for an open and avowed union between all who believed in the fundamental truths of original sin and justification by faith. Such a union did not come in his day, and will not in ours. But all the while there has been developing more and more a spirit of practical catholicity. There are men living in this country to-day who can very well remember a time when the Methodists and the Presbyterians would have no more dealings with one another in matters ecclesiastical than in the olden time the Jews would with the Samaritans. If God's time has not fully come, we can praise his name that the time of ecclesiastical intolerance is fast passing away. And if we can not hope to see a union of all Protestant bodies, let us at least hope that we may live to see all the branches of our great Methodist family draw closer and closer together. It is said that a town can be named in the United States having less than ten thousand inhabitants, in which there are a Methodist Episcopal Church, a Methodist Episcopal Church, South, a Methodist Protestant Church, a United Brethren Church, and an American Wesleyan Church. How can we justify ourselves at the bar of public opinion? What defense have we to make for scattering our resources and paralyzing our strength? What answer are we, who pray, "Thy will be done," giving to our Savior's prayer for the visible oneness of his disciples on the earth? I stand here to enter at least my individual protest against family divisions. I will not pronounce them unchristian, neither will I say that they are unWesleyan, but only that they appear to me unseemly and unfortunate.

In the Methodist Ecumenical Council, which assembled in Washington in 1891, the delegates there assembled represented twenty-four different Methodist organizations. There were thirteen distinct branches of Methodism represented from the United States and seven from England. As I listened to one of the English delegates express the wish that the warm sunshine of God's love and presence might melt the icy differences which divide the Methodist Church, and fuse its sections into one grand unit of power and blessing to mankind, I felt like uttering a fervent amen. We are all brothers. We possess the same doctrines and the same traditions. We sing the same songs and pray to the same God. Let us kneel at the same altar. Let us show that we are sons of Wesley and the sons of God.

The question of slavery divided the Methodist Church in the North from the Methodist Church in the South in 1844. The same question divided the States in the Union in the North from the States in the Union in the South in 1861, nearly twenty years after the division in the church. The great question of slavery had been found embarrassing by the makers of the Constitution, and as time went on it became more and more perplexing. In the North the question involved a theory; in the South it involved a condition. Those who were confronted by a theory and those who were confronted by a condition could not agree in opinion, although they were equally intelligent, equally honest, equally sincere. As the discussion proceeded bitterness was developed, prejudices sprang up, and finally enmity was engendered. Then there came the clash of arms, and the men of the North and those of the South were arrayed against each other on the field of battle. When the conflict ended; when the last gun had been fired and the smoke of battle lifted; when the streams "which had run red with blood of brethren had resumed their course, clear and placid as crystal, to the sea," the men of the South, sitting amid the desolation of their homes, and the ashes of their cities, accepted the result in good faith, as bravely and as honestly as they had fought for the maintenance of what they had conceived to be their rights. The men of the North and those of the South came out of that conflict respecting each other. You, of the South, came back into the Union of the States swearing allegiance to the flag of our common country, and ready to defend it on land or sea against any foe that might assail it. And ever since we have had "a union of hearts and a union of hands," and one flag, that with the starry sheen.

What has been accomplished in the nation has been accomplished only in part in the church. The question of slavery, upon which we originally divided, has been settled for a generation, and for a generation we have had a cemented union of the States. The separation of 1861 has been united. The separation of 1844 continues open. Are we to confess that a church divided is more to be desired than a church united? Are we to confess that what statesmen could accomplish in the State churchmen could not bring to pass in the Church? Must we confess that we are one as respects our country, but not as respects our church? I can not doubt but that in some future day, perhaps not so far distant as some of us now imagine, the separation of 1844, like that of 1861, will be drawn together, and that as fellow-churchmen, as well as fellow-countrymen, we shall march together again shoulder to shoulder, keeping step to the music of the union.

Sirs: At the General Conference of your church, held at Atlanta in 1878, your venerable and saintly Dr. Pierce, replying to the address of our fraternal delegates, asked them to say to the brethren in the North, "When they can outlove me, I want them to send me word." It would be ungracious in me to say that the Methodist Episcopal Church outloves the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; but I stand here to declare that you do not love us more than we do you, and to declare that we are ready to show our love for you by a union with you. I adjure you, my brethren, that when you think you can outlove us, send us word.

In 1865 our Board of Bishops expressed a hope that the day was not far distant "when there shall be but one organization, which shall embrace the whole Methodist family in the United States." In 1869 your Board of Bishops was waited upon by a deputation from our Board with authority to confer on the subject of reunion. But your Board disclaimed authority or disposition to say anything on the propriety of reunion. In 1870 a deputation came to your General Conference, assembled in this very city of Memphis, with authority to treat with you for union. You received them kindly, and tendered them your high regards as brethren beloved in the Lord, but announced it as your judgment that the true interests of the church of Christ demanded the maintenance of your separate and distinct organization. In 1874 your General Conference authorized the appointment of a commission to confer with a similar commission from our church "in order to remove all obstacles to formal fraternity" and "to adjust all existing difficulties." We understand that the sentiment in your church is for fraternity, or possibly for federation. We rejoice that we have reached the platform of fraternity, and we do not propose to leave it except for one of federation, or of union. We shall not leave it because we may not happen to agree in thinking that union is now desirable. We have learned to be able to disagree, while at the same time we respect and love. While we may not all agree in thinking that union is desirable, I am somehow persuaded that some time in the twentieth century we shall become one in name even as we are now in doctrine. Renan has said that the work of the twentieth century will consist in taking out of the waste-basket a multitude of excellent ideas which the nineteenth century has thrown into it. This century may throw the idea of union into the waste-basket, but it will be picked out by the century that follows.

A few days ago you adopted a resolution that the history of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, descends in regular order from the establishment of Methodism in the United States, and not from the time the division was made by the national body. Such a declaration, it seems to me, is but a natural deduction from the declaration unanimously made by the Cape May Commission of 1878, when it agreed that "each of said churches is a legitimate branch of Episcopal Methodism in the United States, having a common origin in the Methodist Episcopal Church organized in 1784."

The separation of 1844, much as it was deplored by good men on both sides, could not have been avoided. The North could not yield, and the South could not give up. Had the ministry of the South conceded what the ministry of the North asked them to concede, they could not have returned to the sunny plains of the Southland. Had the ministry of the North remained silent and consented to receive a slave-holding Bishop, they would have made, as one of them declared, "the whole of the North a magazine of gunpowder, and the Bishop a fire brand in the midst." In that Conference of 1844, participating in the great debate, was Stephen Olin, one of the princes of American Methodism, gigantic in person, commanding in intellect. Born in the North, for many years he had been a resident in the South. He knew the convictions and the prejudices of both sections. Surveying the situation, he declared that he saw no probable escape from the disaster that threatened. "But," he said, "if our difficulties are unmanageable, let our spirit be right. If we must part, let us meet and pour out our tears together." The Conference voted to observe the next day as a day of fasting and humiliation before God, and prayer for his blessing on the committee charged with the responsibility of trying to reconcile the conflicting views. The committee reported that they were unable to agree upon any plan of compromise. It is impossible to reconcile unreconcilable views. Separation was inevitable, and with practicable unanimity we agreed to part. The division of 1844 was not like that of 1828, nor like that of 1842. It was a separation and not a secession. The history of the church, from its organization at the Christmas Conference of 1784 down to the Conference of 1884 is, therefore, as much your history as it is ours. It is the common heritage of both churches.

The labors of Asbury and Coke, who marshaled the hosts of Methodism in Virginia and the Carolinas, as well as in New York and Pennsylvania; of Freeborn Garrettson, who left his impress on the church from North Carolina to Nova Scotia; of Jesse Lee, a Virginian by birth, but the founder of New England Methodism; of Reuben Ellis, the North Carolinian, who traversed the colonies from Pennsylvania to Georgia; of Henry Willis, whose labors extended from Charleston in the South, beyond the Alleghanies in the North; of Peter Cartwright, of Kentucky, one of the founders of Methodism in the Northwest Territory; of David Young, born in Old Virginia, in manners a gentleman of the Virginian school, one of the founders of Methodism in Tennessee and Ohio; of Jesse Walker, the Daniel Boone of American Methodism, the western boundary of whose labors always continued to be "the last Methodist cabin toward the setting sun"—all these are yours as well as ours. These are the men of whom it may be said that they went forth into the darkness ere the sun of the morning had tinged the horizon, and with "giant stride and swing" planted our common Methodism, scattering the seed in the South as well as in the North. The story of their journeying, of their perils by sea and their perils by land, of their perils by their own countrymen, of their perils by the heathen, of their perils in the wilderness, of their weariness and painfulness, their watchings and their fastings—all this is a part of the history of your church, and of ours. It is a part of the glory of your church, and of our church. John Wesley, who had the world for his parish; Charles Wesley, who wrote, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul;" Whitefield, the most eloquent preacher of the Christian ages, who went before, preparing the way for Wesley's itinerants; the saintly Whatcoat; McKendree, of whom it has been said, "There was thought in all his words, and wisdom in all his thoughts;" the delicate Summerfield, who was said to talk "like an angel from heaven," and upon whose lips "bees from the flowers had shed their honey;" Cookman, slight in figure, but with silvery voice that thrilled his hearers with his magnificent eloquence; the scholarly Olin, of unsurpassed humility and of irresistible intellect; Bascom, with his wonderful imagination and powerful eloquence, preaching sermons that were pronounced "beautiful mosaics;" Capers, brilliant, generous, eloquent, and of commanding influence; Soule, dignified in bearing, often speaking in irresistible power words that bore down on his hearers "like the storm on the bending forest"—all these, who fill our admiring vision, and others whom I might name, belong to you and to us. These are they who made the old Methodism splendid. They were the gifts of God to our common Methodism.

Let us thank God for the church of our fathers; for its precious name, its holy memories, its blessed faith, its hopes, its works. In all its branches may it keep the faith, work righteousness, and be the messenger of peace on earth, good-will to men, until the kingdom of this world shall have become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ.

Methodists, North and South, do you hear what the leaders are saying? They tell us that "the age of ages is in its morning." They tell us that "the battle is already set, and that we have been chosen to stand as color-bearer for the advancing columns." They tell us that "the mighty Captain, with his name Lord of lords and King of kings upon his vesture, has assumed command." Soldiers of Christ, sons of Wesley, men who served with Simpson and McTyeire, close up the ranks, lock shields, let the battalions move as a solid phalanx, onward, steadily onward, courageously onward, into the midst of the battle. Fear not, the ancient glory of our arms shall not be tarnished, but shall glisten more resplendent ere the sun reaches the meridian, and when it sinks beneath the horizon, we shall have planted our victorious standard on the heights.

TRUST.

BY EDWARD P. SELDEN.

How much of life is left for me,
How many days, or months, or years,
I know not, for I can not see
The future, with its smiles and tears.

It is enough, from day to day,
To know that God guards all my way.

He sees the future and the past
As clearly as the present hour,
And knows my life from first to last,
And holds it in his love and power.

True Womanhood.

A woman of true intelligence is a blessing at home, in her circle of friends, and in society. Wherever she goes she carries with her a health-giving influence. There is a beautiful harmony about her character that at once inspires a respect which soon warms into love. The influence of a Christian woman upon society is of the most salutary kind. She strengthens right principles in the virtuous, incites the selfish and indifferent to good actions, and gives even to the light and frivolous a taste for food more substantial than the frothy gossip with which they seek to recreate their minds. An ideal woman, wherever found, is the same kind, obliging, tender being; inclined to be cheerful, timorous, and modest. She does not hesitate to perform any hospitable or generous action, even upon the lowest of humanity. She is not gay or haughty, but full of courtesy, and the gentle tendrils of her heart twine around all that is beautiful and true as the roses and jessamines cling to the staff.

Man is the creature of interest and ambition. His nature leads him into the struggle and bustle of the world. He seeks for fame, for fortune, for space in the world's thought, while the true woman's whole life is the history of affections. The heart is her world. It is there her ambition strives for empire; it is there her avarice seeks for hidden treasures. She sends forth her sympathies on adventure; she embarks her whole soul in the traffic of affection. Woman has exercised a most remarkable judgment in regard to great issues. When Columbus laid a plan to discover the new world, he could not get a hearing till he applied to a woman for help. A true woman equips man for the voyage of life. She is seldom a leader in any project, but finds herself useful as a helper. Though man executes a project, she fits him for so doing, beginning in childhood. So everywhere man performs, but woman trains. Every person leaving his mark on the world is but another Columbus, for whose furnishing some Isabella, in the form of his mother, has made noble sacrifices. The perceptions of woman, especially in cases of emergency, are quicker than that of man. Her patience and fortitude, her piety and devotion, are strong. If she was first in transgression, she was also first in prayer. She stood by the expiring Jesus when boasting Peter and the other disciples had forsaken him. She was last at his tomb, she embalmed his sacred body, and she was the first to discover that he had risen from the cleft rock and triumphed over death and the grave.

Under affliction, the fortitude of woman is proverbial. Nothing can be more touching than to behold a woman who had been all tenderness and dependence, and alive to every trivial roughness while treading the prosperous path of life, suddenly rising in mental force to be the comforter and supporter of her husband under misfortune, and abiding with unshirking firmness the bitterest winds of adversity. "As the vine which has long twined its graceful foliage about the oak, and been lifted by it into sunshine, will, when the hardy tree is riven by the thunderbolt, cling round it with its caressing tendrils, and bind up its shattered boughs, so it is beautifully ordained that woman, who is the mere dependent and ornament of man in happiest hours, should be his stay and solace when smitten by sudden calamity." A mother of this type will make her impress upon the world's history. You will not find her children among those who lounge about the streets or on the highways, engaging in the so-called innocent games, in desecration of the Sabbath; but she will gather them at the house of God, or around the hearthstone, where the little twigs are bent and their lives molded for eternity. Such care is requisite to children, that they may avoid the pernicious influence of such associations to which many are too prone to yield. She will seek those whose language is chaste and good, whose sentiments are pure and edifying, whose deportment is such as pure and well-regulated and correct morals dictate, and whose conduct is directed and restrained by the pure precepts of religion. Then how we should, as mothers, linger at the cross for guidance! Habit in a child is at first like a spider's web. If neglected, it becomes a thread of twine; next, a cord of rope; finally, a cable—then who can break it? True motherhood means a great deal. The mother can make the tears of the deepest sorrow to be the seed-pearls of the brightest crown. See what home becomes with religion as its life and rule! Human nature is there checked and molded by the amiable spirit and lovely character of Jesus. Often do I sigh for the sweet, deep security I felt when, of an evening, nestling in my mother's bosom, I listened to some quiet story suitable to my age, read in her tender voice. Never can I forget her sweet prayers uttered for my safety; never her kiss of peace at night. I can only view her now in an angel form among the seraphs of heaven. Years have passed away since we laid her in her narrow bed; yet, still her voice whispers from the grave, and her beautiful influence is still felt. Nothing softens the heart and opens the gushing fountain of love more than the exercise of filial gratitude. It is like the showers of Spring that cause flowers to rise from seeds that have long lain dormant.

Alcohol and Morals.

The nature of conduct depends, of course, very much upon the discriminating powers of the intellect; and if these powers are deteriorated by alcohol, one avenue to inebriate vice and crime is made manifest. As a matter of fact, alcohol acts upon the moral nature in several ways. Its paralyzing impressions are not of equal force in every part of the nervous organism. Sensibility is not reduced everywhere to a common level. There is disintegration or incoherence of powers rather than simple depression—some attributes being disturbed and disabled more than others. The explanation seems to be this. The grosser faculties and propensities of the physical man are more fundamental and established than the refined sensibilities of his moral nature. Hence, while the inhibitory properties of alcohol exert comparatively small power over the brutish instincts of the animal man, they may easily deaden the moral feelings. Criminal proclivities are relieved from the obstructions and protests of conscience. Alcoholic anæsthesia destroys the moral sense, while it has very little effect upon the more sturdy and deeply rooted instincts of the animal nature.

In his work, "Alcoholic Inebriety," Dr. Joseph Parish declares: "Crimes are undoubtedly committed by persons who are under the influence of drink. One amongst such persons takes his draught of whisky in just such quantity as suffices to harden his conscience and nerve his arm for the intended deed. He may be the possessor of a criminal mind—a criminal first, and a drinker afterwards. On the court records he has no right to appear as a drunkard." The well-known jurist, Noah Davis, New York, asserts: "There can be no doubt that the vast majority of crimes, especially those of personal violence, find their cause in drunkenness. In point of fact, many persons first subdue their conscience by preparing to commit crime through drink." This is the testimony of a learned physician and a learned lawyer to the influence of alcohol on conscience. And they add: "It not only deadens the sensibility of conscience, but it does so to such a degree that it makes possible crimes darker than any born of a criminal mind unaided by the co-operation of alcohol. When the influence of strong drink is so decisive in strengthening the determination in the commission of great crimes, how effective it must be in fortifying the interest in the commission of small ones. It is not to be supposed that this process of subduing conscience is applicable to criminals only. Alcohol paralyzes the conscience of anyone who partakes of it, let his motives in drinking be what they may. The occasional inebriate may drink alcoholic liquors without any clearly defined purpose, certainly without the slightest intent to commit an unlawful act. Yet the poison affects him as it does others; it renders conscience torpid, insensible, and he is peculiarly liable to be led into irregular and disgraceful conduct."

Among moral obliquities that arise from the alcoholic habit, theft and lying may be noticed. The lying of inebriety has its birth mainly in the dipsomaniacal diathesis, and is very commonly resorted to under a nephritic stress, either with the object of obtaining the means of intoxication, or of concealing the intent to become intoxicated. The dipsomaniac may be easily inveigled into other vices when drunk, but they are vices having some direct interest or collusion with his morbid constitution. He will not usually be apt to steal. Should he do so it may be surmised that he is verging on paresis, or, at least, that his intoxication has temporarily assumed the fearless that properly belong to paralytic dementia. There is another point of view whence the characteristic injuries inflicted on morality by alcohol may be observed. It is known that certain brain-centres and brain-fibres are the physical bases of the manifestations of the moral nature. When, therefore, alcohol disturbs and distracts the whole nervous system, its evil influence is as certain to impress the moral as it is the intellectual or the motor capacities.—T. L. Wright, M. D., in Quarterly Review.

"Church Entertainments."

Not long since I received by mail a package of tracts, from one of which I quote as follows:

"My people have committed two evils; they have forsaken me, the fountain of living waters, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water." (Jer. II, 13.)

"A Hard Time Social will be given by the ladies of the Baptist Church of Bath, at the church, this (Friday) evening. The gentlemen are expected to appear in ragged or patched garments, and the ladies in calico dresses. A cup and saucer will be given to the gentleman wearing the most dilapidated clothing, and a mush and milk set to the lady appearing in the most poverty-stricken costume."

The above announces the entertainment of a worldly, backslidden congregation. Does any spiritually-minded person believe that such silly sociables, or that money raised for gospel work by the arts and tricks of traffic, can be anything but "a stench in the nostrils of Jehovah?"

When we see the depths of worldliness to which preachers and people will resort, as it is claimed, to raise money for the gospel, we are constrained to believe that an earthquake revival, beginning at the pulpit and making a clean sweep through the congregation, is just what is needed.

Certainly, if they were true children of God, there would be no room either in their hearts, heads or buildings for such transactions as grab-bags, raffling, games of chance, donkey shows, kissing matches, courting sets, and the many snares and devises used. If the love of God was in their hearts, all needed means for gospel purposes would pour out of their purses as free-will offerings to him who loves a cheerful giver, and who, in grief and displeasure, drove out of the temple those who made a market-house of it.

The above words may seem rather plain and harsh to some, especially to certain preachers; yet they are true. I am a bitter enemy to these plans of raising money for church enterprises, and I do not propose encouraging them one iota. Nowhere in the Word of God do I find these church entertainments authorized, but I find Scripture enough to condemn them. God loves a cheerful giver, and he never intended for his cause to be helped by such methods.

Whenever a church resorts to strawberry festivals, oyster suppers and such like for the support of any church enterprise, it has, in my opinion, forsaken the fountain of living waters and hewed out broken cisterns which hold no water.

The tract further says, "People invariably become like what they are nourished upon, and the result of this conformity to carnal devices is sadly manifest among preachers and people.

"Jesus drove out of the temple those who made a market-house of it. How, then, must he look down to-day upon the shameful transactions carried on by his professed followers, under the garb of religious work?

'In many temples now, where it is claimed his gospel is preached, would he be unwelcome.

"The church and the world, in many localities, are walking hand in hand. The pastor may see it, but unless he is a godly, consecrated man, his fear of offending, or retarding the payment of his salary, binds his hands and stills his tongue. Poor man! May his eyes become open and his heart fired for truth and purity, lest he stand condemned in that day when 'every man's work shall be made manifest.' May God give his people that religion which reaches the purse and brings out the money, a free-will offering to the Lord!

"Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God." F. B. ORMOND.

A Letter from Rev. J. L. Futrell.

MR. EDITOR: I find it needful to write to friends in Mississippi, and as I am due you a letter, allow me to write to both. Some of our friends are quite solicitous for our welfare "in that very cold climate." "It is too cold for you," etc., is a sample of their expressions in letters received. Let me tell you that the mercury has not been below thirty degrees above zero but two or three times this Winter. Twice it went down to eighteen in the most exposed places. Grass has grown in our yards all Winter. Our great trouble here is rain, rain. It does not seem to me there has been three days together since the first of October but that it has rained. True, it seldom rains hard—people seldom stop for it—but it is so continual while it does last. Then from about May or June to September or October you seldom see a cloud even. It is then the land of sunshine and flowers.

One would imagine that with so much rain there would be much sickness. We have a town of nearly 2,000 people, and the country is thickly settled all around, yet a doctor told me that he was satisfied he could do all the practice that all three doctors we have have done this Winter.

Land is high here. You seldom hear of any cleared land for less than $40 or $50 per acre. Timber land is lower, but costs from $20 to $30 per acre to clear it. It is so densely covered with scrub oak, which has all to be grubbed up, else it would never die.

The main crop in this—Williamette—valley is wheat and oats, so that lately, as the price of these have gotten so low—forty cents and twenty cents per bushel—the farmers are in bad plight. It revealed a fact I did not know before; that a large number of them have mortgages on their places. Since coming to this—Polk—county, I have found another business which flourishes, viz., hop raising. Nearly all kinds of people engage in it. Even our best people, even if they do not have a "hop yard" themselves, go and help pick hops. No one seems to think there is any wrong in it. It is gathered, dried, put into bales like cotton, and shipped away, and they seem to think no more about it, only that it is a sure crop to bring much money into the country.

Friends ask, If it be so warm in the Winter, what must it be in the Summer? As cool and pleasant as any country you ever saw. In fact, we object to its pleasantness, seeing some of our Southern plants and vegetables can not mature. We can not make corn to amount to anything, no sweet potatoes scarcely, tomatoes only in September and October. But most other things grow to mammoth proportion. What would you think of a cabbage eighty pounds, beet thirty pounds, strawberry ten inches in circumference, limb on a tree twelve feet long as one season's growth, and yet these are facts in Oregon, and so common that they cease to create wonder. Peach trees bear in their third year, though they belong to Southern Oregon, as they do very little here. This is peculiarly a prune and pear country.

With all these wonders and wonderful things, we don't think we like this as well as we do Mississippi, though it might be with us as with many others we have known; if we were back there we might wish and long for the climate of Oregon. There are few who live here awhile, but return here if they go back to their old homes again.

Some say, "I can not understand how it can be so mild a climate, and it so far north." Well, our country is warmed by the Japan currents just like Europe is by the Gulf Stream. Then, in Summer, we have the sea and mountain breezes. Of course, if you get up in the mountains here, you may find snow from ten to fifty feet deep, and the mercury twenty to sixty degrees below zero. J. L. FUTRELL.

The Value of a Love for Good Books.

In a late Contemporary Review the Chief-Justice of England, Lord Coleridge, has an article on "Education and Instruction," which is full of good things. The paper was read last June as an address to the pupils and teachers of an industrial school in Yorkshire, and it contains the matured counsel and the ripened wisdom of one of the leading legal minds of England. Hear what he says to the young people about their special school tasks:

"Now, in what you will have to observe, my first counsel to you is that you attend faithfully and carefully to the prescribed course. However dry any of your studies may seem, however useless parts of it may appear now, pursue the course nevertheless, faithfully, earnestly. You can not shirk it, you can not glide over it superficially, without disturbance and injustice to the institution, without great loss to yourselves. I remember that at Eton and Oxford many things in the course of study were uninteresting and apparently useless at the time, seeming foreign from the interests of actual life; but I have found them often the best preparation for the work I have had to do. Faithful, uncompromising work in the prescribed course is excellent discipline, and the advantages of discipline are reaped in after days."

Later in the address Lord Coleridge dwells with noble enthusiasm on the worth of good books in their relation to the growth of the character in the love and practice of righteousness. This testimony is valuable not only for its intrinsic wisdom, but for the beauty, tastefulness and force with which it is expressed:

"Speaking as an old lawyer, especially, I may say that few things compare in usefulness with a retentive, accurate memory. It is in youth that this faculty is formed and trained, and one of the best methods of strengthening it is the habit of learning by heart passages we admire from authors, both in verse and prose. What we learn in youth we are apt to remember well; mental impressions at that period of life do not easily fade; and although they are easily received, they are indelibly retained; and if they are impressions of noble thoughts clothed in noble language, we are laying up a store of intellectual pleasure at one end of life for enjoyment at the other. Many of us live to grow old. If we do, our minds, if not ourselves, grow lonely; the interests of the world fade away, and the fashion of the beauty of it vanisheth, and a time comes when we feel that

"'Tis meet that we should pause a while
Ere we put off this mortal coil,
And in the stillness of old age
Muse on our earthly pilgrimage.'

At such times the recollection of great thoughts of lovely images, of musical words, comes to us with a comfort, with an innocent pleasure which it is difficult to exaggerate.

* * * * * * * *

"Whether for present use or future comfort, I can not too earnestly recommend your acquainting yourselves with good books. They are the best of companions. In sickness, in misfortune, in sorrow, in sleepless nights and days of pain, you will find your recollection of great and wholesome literature a constant solace and refreshment. And as a man is known by the company he keeps, still more truly is he known by the books he reads and the authors he loves. Read only the best books, and never read bad ones. Good books will serve you for the work—the serious and earnest work—which is the lot of all true and good men.

* * * * * * * *

"One word, if I may, to counsel you to live faithfully and in earnest. Blessed are the pure in heart. It can never be too early to begin. The temptations of youth, of middle life, of old age; all life has its temptations, all can be conquered. Do not believe those who tell you that such an achievement is impossible. It is perfectly possible, as many have proved. I can have no kind of reason to mislead you, and my age ought to give me, at least in this matter, some authority. Nothing will more help you to it, nothing will tend more to keep you from evil, than the company of good books and the thoughts and counsels of good men. They will fill you with good thoughts, and good thoughts bring forth good deeds, and good deeds are the only true happiness of life."—Southern Advocate.

Impure Literature.

"Art" and "literature" are dignified and conservative terms, and should be applied to that which ennobles, cultivates, and develops the mind and soul of man. The custom of applying either of these terms to the foul conceptions emanating from debased natures, which appeal to animal passions, or the groveling things of life, even though the touch of genius is employed in committing them to paper or canvas, is to be deprecated.

It is a misnomer to use the terms "art" or "literature," when speaking of an obscene painting or book. True art is never unclean. Lanier wrote: "Let any sculptor hew us out the most ravishing combination of tender curves and spheric softness that ever stood for woman; yet if the lip have a certain fullness that hints of the flesh; if the brow be insincere; if in the minutest particular the physical beauty suggest a moral ugliness, that sculptor—unless he be portraying a moral ugliness for a moral purpose—may as well give over his marble for paving stones." He who has not yet perceived how artistic beauty and moral beauty are convergent lines which run back into a common ideal origin, and who therefore is not afire with moral beauty just as with artistic beauty—he is not a great artist.

There is a strong competition existing between many modern scribblers as to which one can write the filthiest story and at the same time escape the penalties of the law. There seems to be no public sentiment against this soul-degrading practice. The inconveniences of the law is all that holds many blackguards in check. So-called reputable publishers in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, and other large cities, have recently seemed to be in rivalry as to which one could find among ancient nastiness, and books suppressed in foreign lands, salacious matter to reproduce in this country. Such unclean things these so-called decent men make their stock in trade, and sell for personal gain.

The principal thought in many cases is to get a publication vile enough to sell. Let one of these respectable dealers in filth be arrested, and a great outcry is made about "lack of judgment," "interfering with classical literature," etc. Again, classical literature is freely translated, robbed of its beauty in the original, and sold in garbled and cheap editions as a substitute for modern filth suppressed. This is done under the specious plea of "a classic." These dealers do not discern that literary men and students require the original tongue, and that these cheap garbled translations are of no value to them as literary work. To attempt to suppress this sugar-coated indecency is to call down upon the one who attempts it the wrath of thoughtless and ignorant persons. The moral purity of the more than twenty-two millions of children is not thought of. As though any interest could transcend the duty of keeping our children pure!

Parents must be more watchful over their children. Teachers more on the alert at school, to detect the hidden enemy. Editors more patriotic to defend the community from these insidious invasions of personal rights—the right to bring up our children pure. Courts more rigid and severe in punishing these moral scavengers. And good citizens more liberal in providing means to defeat the conspiracies of corrupt men to overthrow the safeguards of religion and morals. The hope of this nation is bound up with our youth. "Be not deceived. God is not mocked; for whatever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."—Anthony Comstock.

The Newspaper and Public Morals.

The influence of the newspaper is everywhere acknowledged. By some it is claimed to be the greatest power among men, having surpassed the platform and the pulpit; and in some respects this probably is true. It tells the news, carries information, shapes public opinion, and influences the morals and religion of the people. Indeed, it is scarcely possible to estimate its power, or indicate all the directions in which it is exerted. Such tremendous influences, such opportunities and dangers should not be trifled with. There is too much at stake to have this power used wrongfully, or even carelessly.

That there are great differences between newspapers as concerns the question of morals, there is no doubt. Some are conducted with very considerable care, while others are sensational in the extreme and disgustingly salacious. The latter class seem never quite so much at home as when publishing the minute and filthy details of some social scandal. And even the best of our secular papers go too far in this direction. Such reading is not fit for the family; it is not fit for anyone. The imagination and heart are contaminated by the contemplation of such things. Newspapers should never prostitute their power by descending to such things. And if they do, they should be shut out of every respectable home.

But it is said the public demand such things, and the papers must furnish what the people want. Newspapers are the servants of the public, and not its masters. And this consideration has great influence with newspaper publishers. What the people want they will furnish them. But is this a wise or safe standard? The people, a very considerable number of them, enough to make it quite profitable, want literature so low and vulgar as to be denominated "obscene," and to be forbidden by the civil law. Ought these people to have what they want? Even the law forbids this. And it is a serious question whether much of what appears in the secular press, and to which we now complain, does not come under this head, and is not forbidden by the statute. But suppose it does not, have men who are good citizens, many of whom are husbands and fathers, who are leaders of public opinion, and wield great power over public morals, no higher standard than that? Will they go as far as the law allows in the direction of vice? Will they parade private vice before the public simply because the public, or part of it, wish such things? These are standards far too low for the government of men holding such responsibilities as these.

For making these strictures we will be called prudish and puritanical. These things, it will be said, are human experiences, known to exist, and there can be no great harm in publishing them. But it is not prudishness which demands the hiding of vices. It is simply due regard for the morals of the people. Familiarity results in tolerance. Vice often seen loses its hideousness. The ways of vice often uncovered are already plain when the hour of temptation comes. Young and innocent minds and imaginations are fatally corrupted. In short, the evil influences of such publications can not be estimated.—Pittsburg Advocate.

Remedy for Hopelessness.

Do you ask me how I shall write to my hopeless friend? I shall tell her I am so glad that God is not hopeless. He has a great many hopeless children on his hands, but he is not discouraged, though they are! It is said of him, "He shall not fail nor be discouraged till he hath set judgment in the earth." Oh, when I think of God's poor children, sick children, insane children—then I remember that Jesus came to tell us of the heart of God! You have seen the picture of the poor broken lamb in the arms of the Good Shepherd. His love and his long suffering never end. He can wait. But you know in all three parables, the lost sheep, the lost piece of silver, the prodigal, they all sought till they found. There are many lost sheep, but no lost Savior! So I have hope when I see him as he is for my hopeless friend. I shall see him when all the shadows have passed away. Oh, yes, there is hope in God and in what God is! I have lived long enough to see mercy in much that terrified me. And as soon as you come to see that you are in everlasting arms, surrounded by everlasting love, you have then an unchangeable Friend. Your inner life will begin to grow, and though it may not yet be Summer in your life, it will be on the way to it.

So you see you have only to believe in God, and all this blessed peace and joy will come to you. But it always will be joy in believing, and always the absence of joy in doubting. If we would only show as much common sense in our life that is not to end as we show in the life that must end, we would be far happier. We know enough to cultivate what we desire to have in profusion in things earthly; but do we cultivate faith, and hope, and love? Do we make believing in God a business?—Exchange.

Here is Your Chance.

During the next sixty days we make the following offer:

For $2.50 we will send the ADVOCATE one year and a copy of Christian Womanhood. The price of the ADVOCATE is $2; the price of the book, $1. This book has had an extensive sale, the sixth thousand being now on the market. This offer applies to renewals as well as new subscriptions, provided the renewal extends the subscription to January, '95.

The following notices, selected from a vast number that have appeared in the church papers, will give some idea of the character of the work:

The best thesaurus of facts concerning womanhood with which we are acquainted.—Dr. O. F. Deems.

We hope it will be read by every man and woman in the church.—Florida Advocate.

We hope it will be extensively circulated and carefully read.—NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Heartily recommended.—Dr. John E. Edwards.

This volume is the result of patient investigation and thoughtful study of the whole question treated. In the formulation of the case and in analyzing the testimony a vigorous, well-poised, legal mind is brought to bear. Dr. Black, moreover, establishes the points of his discussion as a skilful general establishes his lines in the face of an alert enemy. As he begins, so he closes, leaving the impression that a master in Israel has written bravely and tellingly of Christian womanhood, maintaining his position at every turn. The book is needed, and will long be in popular demand.—Sunday-School Magazine.

How It Acts.

After using Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism, according to direction, for ten days, Mr. John W. Boyenton, of Hampton, Va., writes that he can walk and attend to business, which he could not do before. This Remedy has a remarkable record of cures—not only relieving pain, but restoring all the functions of the crippled limbs. If you want a cure, send $5 to the Drummond's Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and they will ship to your express address full large bottles of their remedy, with two directions for use. Agents Wanted.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

LETTUCE DRESSING.—One-half pint cream or rich milk, one-half pint good vinegar (weak), one small teacup of sugar, three eggs well beaten, a lump of butter size of an egg, one teaspoonful of ground mustard. Pepper and salt. Mix all together cold, and cook until thick as custard.

BANANA SOUFFLES.—Peel and pound six bananas to a pulp; mix with it the juice of two lemons, rub it through a sieve, add a pint of whipped cream sweetened, then freeze. Have ready some paper souffle cases; pack the banana-ice into these in a charged ice-cave, for two and a half hours.—Exchange.

COCOANUT PUDDING.—Take the crust off a loaf of bread and grate one quart of crumbs, and pour over them one quart of boiling milk. Let it stand until cold; then mix with it six eggs beaten, with two cups of sugar, and one grated cocoanut. Flavor with vanilla and bake in a crust. Corn-starch can be used instead of bread-crumbs if preferred.—Woman's Work.

BAKED APPLE DUMPLING.—Make crust as for nice biscuits; roll out in circles large enough to enclose an apple; pare and remove the cores; then pinch the crust closely over each one. Place them in a butter dish or pan, cover and bake slowly until the apples are done. To be eaten with butter and sugar, rubbed to a cream and flavored with nutmeg or lemon, or with a rich, hot sauce.

BEST SPONGE CAKE.—Four and a half cups of sugar, six cups of flour, nine or ten eggs, and one and a half cups of hot water. Pour the water on the sugar and let it come to a boil. Beat the eggs separately, the whites in the vessel in which the cake is to be made; then add the beaten yolks and beat together until very light. When the sugar boils, pour it on the eggs in the smallest possible quantities, beating hard all the time to keep from cooking the eggs, until the mixture is cool. Then sift in the flour, to which three light teaspoonfuls of baking powder must be added. Use whatever flavoring you prefer and pour immediately into pans and bake in a quick oven twenty or thirty minutes.—Woman's Work.

AGRICULTURE.

BY REV. J. W. McNEIL.

Strawberries.

The best time to plant is in the Spring. There is little gained by planting in the Fall, the crop of the Fall planting usually being so small that it does not pay to pick it.

Our method of cultivation is simple. We har off as we do when scraping cotton; the plants then are scraped, and left in drill from eighteen inches to two feet apart. The question may be asked, Why not leave them closer in drill? For the reason we prefer new plants to form on the row; they are preferable to the old ones. When the vines begin to run, if properly handled, the runners trained on the ridge, they can be set as close as desired.

If the land is not sufficiently rich, before we return the soil to the plants after scraping, we apply cotton seed meal at the rate of about three hundred pounds to the acre in the side furrows, the object being to stimulate the plants to make them supply enough of new growth or plants to have the ridges well set. This fertilizing is done in the Spring for the purpose just mentioned; never in the Fall. The soil is then thrown back to the plants about as we would when hilling cotton, leaving the ridge not too high. The after cultivation consists in keeping the land clear of weeds and grass, using the small sweeps of the Planet Junior Cultivator as often in the middle as the case may demand, and clearing the drill with the hand and hoe. We continue this cultivation until September. After that time what foreign growth that may grow up is of little harm, but rather a benefit when killed by frost, to act as a mulch to protect the berries the following Spring from the ground. During August, while cultivating, is the time to apply bone meal as a top dressing at the rate of from two to four hundred pounds to the acre. The cultivation at the time with the sweeps and the hoe on the ridge works the bone meal into the soil all that is necessary. Six weeks after, or about the first of October, we apply cotton seed hull ashes about two hundred pounds to the acre. This again is done as a top dressing. The ashes of their own nature sink and leach through the soil, hence is more benefit if applied in this way than if put under the soil. This finishes the cultivation.

One other matter we have discovered: that hogs, if properly handled, are of benefit to a strawberry farm during Winter. They destroy all weeds and Winter growth, and do not the strawberry plants. To prevent them from rooting, their snouts should be ringed, and if any one of them will persist in rooting after being ringed, put in the second. The foregoing is about all that is necessary until gathering season.

Raising Corn.

The following facts we got in a letter from Mr. J. C. McAllister, now of New Orleans, upon the matter of raising corn. He says:

I learned how to make corn before the war. I threw up my ground in beds the usual way; in the water furrow I ran a bull tongue twice; I reversed the beds, ran a harrow over them; opened and drilled my corn; made twenty-six bushels per acre when the average crop was about seventeen.

He says again:

I learned during the war how to use pine straw for manure, by putting it in cow pens and horse lots, when well tramped down, taking it up under sheds.

He states of this plan that he informed a Mr. James Little, once of Amite county, Miss., who tried the experiment, and as a result made on ten acres of land six hundred and sixty-five bushels of corn; had the matter published in the old Brandon Republican about 1868.

Now, we have never seen pine straw used as a fertiliser, never supposed it of much value to land, only to change its physical condition; yet if it is a fact, as above mentioned, that it will produce such results, our farmers in the pine woods have a source of wealth incalculable.

If Mr. James Little is still living, he will confer a great favor by giving all the facts in connection with the crop he made; the kind of soil, whether anything else was used with the pine straw, and this mere tramping by the stock, etc.

Mr. McAllister says furthermore:

I learned another fact before the war. Every farmer that had corn and meat to sell had money to lend. All the old negroes knew this to be a fact."

[We can vouch for the last statement made.—EDITOR.]

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

HYGIENE.

The Medicinal Value of Hot Water.

One of the best remedies for biliousness, dyspepsia, and loss of appetite is to be found in the contents of the steaming tea-kettle. Many, like Naaman, will undoubtedly turn away from this simple, inexpensive, easily-to-be-obtained medicine with distrust. It would be exceedingly difficult to induce them to give it a trial. The very fact that it is free to all, "without money and without price," makes it seem of no value to them; and instead of using a medicine that has been frequently proved to be both safe and effectual, they prefer to go on dosing themselves with doubtful and injurious drugs.

The testimony of one lady for whom a goblet of hot water an hour before eating was prescribed by her physician is to the effect that it acts as a gentle cathartic, promotes healthy action of the liver and kidneys, and, as a natural consequence, cleanses the tongue and creates an appetite.

Another lady, for whom three cups of hot water an hour and a half before each meal and one hour before retiring were prescribed, asserts having noted that a little while after drinking it she finds herself so hungry she can scarcely wait the hour that must elapse before her meal. This lady states that for fifteen years previous to the time when she began drinking hot water, she had rarely known what it was to feel hungry or to relish her food. She had also observed that when away from home where she could not obtain hot water before meals, her appetite departed in spite of the fact that various delicacies to tempt it were provided for her. She also testifies to the efficacy of hot water as a cleanser of the system, as a cure and prevention of gravel and similar diseases, and to its favorable action upon all the digestive organs. In common with another experimenter, she further affirms that it is decidedly stimulating; that after drinking it one feels decidedly refreshed and strengthened.

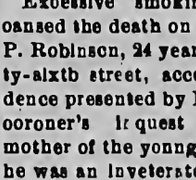
Others have proved hot water to be an effectual remedy for sick headache and pains in the stomach or bowels, caused by indigestion.

Judging from this array of evidence, would it not be as well for our bodies, and better for our pocket-books, if we patronize the tea-kettle more and the doctor less?—Christian at Work.

Excessive smoking of cigarettes caused the death on Monday of George P. Robinson, 24 years, 528 North Thirty-sixth street, according to the evidence presented by Dr. Mattern, at the coroner's inquest yesterday. The mother of the young man testified that he was an inveterate smoker of cigarettes. Dr. Mattern gave evidence that his post-mortem examination disclosed the fact that the heart was soft and flabby, and that the ventricles of the brain were filled with water, though the exterior was dry. The aorta had contracted. The nicotine of the cigarette had caused "smoker's heart," he testified, which had in turn produced dropsy of the brain. Dr. Mattern said last evening that Robinson had been in awful agony for a few hours before his death. He complained to his mother that his head felt as if it would burst, and for relief she applied ammonia as a counter-irritant. Such a strong solution had been used that the skin of the forehead was burned as if by scalding water.—(Philadelphia Press.) The "smoker's heart" should induce him to save the foolish young smokers from smoking themselves to death.—Picayune.

Scrofula in the Neck

The following is from Mrs. J. W. Tillbrook, wife of the Mayor of McKeesport, Penn.:



Willie Tillbrook.

"My little boy Willie, now 6 years old, two years ago had a bunch under one ear which the doctor said was Scrofula. He finally lanced it and it discharged for some time. We then began giving Willie Hood's Sarsaparilla and he improved very rapidly until the sore healed up. Last winter it broke out again, followed by Erysipelas. We again gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla with excellent results and he has had no more trouble. His cure is due to

Hood's Sarsaparilla

He has never been very robust, but now seems healthy and daily growing stronger."

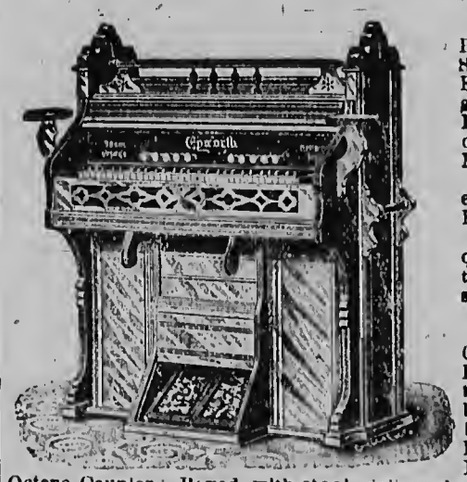
ORGANS AS PREMIUMS.

We have made arrangements to offer a rare bargain in the way of organs as premiums to our subscribers. The organs which we handle are the Epworth Organs. These have not heretofore had much sale in Mississippi and Louisiana, though they have had an immense sale throughout the North and West and also in some of the Southern States. Do you want a small organ for your church? If so, read the description given below of Style No 102, and see how it would suit you.

STYLE 102. THE EPWORTH CHAPEL ORGAN.

HEIGHT, 51 IN.; WIDTH, 23 IN.; LENGTH, 48 IN.



Best Low-Priced Chapel Organ.

Walnut case; Hard Wood Panels; Finished Back; Lamp Stands; Handsome Fret Work; Full Length Music Desk; Engraved Ornaments; Hand Rubbed; Oil Finish; Pedals covered with Brussels Carpet; Metal Guards on Pedals.

This is the Organ for Churches and Sunday-schools, where a First-Class Action is Desired.

In a good, plain case, the quality of action and tone being the same as in the higher priced styles.

Style 102, 12 Stops.

EPWORTH CHAPEL—Five Octaves, containing four sets of Reeds of two and one-half Octaves each. STOPS—Principal; Dulcet Diapason; Diapason Forte; Vox Angelica; Principal Forte; Cremona; Melodia; Echo Horn; Celeste. Metal Octave Coupler. Boxed, with stool, delivered on board cars at factory.

The catalogue price of this is $87. We will give it as a premium for one hundred subscribers. Send us the cash $200, for the subscribers, and you get the organ free. If you can't get one hundred persons to subscribe personally, perhaps you have well-to-do members of your church who will pay for several poorer members, thereby bestowing a blessing upon them by giving them a religious paper and at the same time helping to procure an organ for your church. If you don't exactly like Style 102, then read the description of Style 302.

IMPROVED STYLE 302 "SPECIAL." EPWORTH CHAPEL ORGAN.

TWELFTH GENERAL CONFERENCE.

ELEVENTH DAY.

Conference convened at the appointed hour, and was opened with religious exercises led by Dr. Campbell, of Texas. Bishop Fitzgerald in the chair. The Minutes read and approved.

Bishop Wilson took the chair.

The reports of Standing and Special Committees called for, and a number made and passed to the calendar.

The calendar was then taken up, and various and sundry reports of greater or less importance were adopted. Many, most of these, reports recommended "non-concurrence." The tone and temper of the body is eminently conservative.

The report of the Committee on Colportage stirred an animated and an extended discussion, in which some of the ablest speeches were made that have yet been made on the floor of this—twelfth—General Conference. The report of the committee was adopted.

A report of the Committee on Revisals, recommending the transfer of all matters pertaining to local preachers from the Quarterly to the District Conference, was followed by a minority report, and thereupon we had another long and strong discussion.

The majority report was adopted, and so the licensing of local preachers, recommendations for orders and for admission on trial into the traveling connection, goes to District Conference.

It was moved that when we adjourn we adjourn to meet at 8 P. M. This carried.

The report of the Committee on Education was taken up and read and the discussion of it was deferred.

The Conference adjourned with benediction.

TWELFTH DAY.

Conference convened at 9 A. M., and was opened with religious services conducted by Dr. Kennedy. Bishop Granbery in the chair. Minutes of last night's session read and approved.

Bishop R. K. Hargrove took the chair.

Reports of Standing and Special Committees called for, and a number made and passed to calendar or approved, as the nature of the reports required.

The Committee on Revisals reported "non-concurrence" in the case of a resolution asking for a change in the marriage ceremony, whereby a lot of sentiment would be incorporated in connection with the wedding ring. This stirred a big tangle.

The report of the Committee on Missions brought out an extended discussion. On this subject Dr. John Mathews, known to most of the ADVOCATE readers, made a telling and characteristic speech. Your readers know what that means. We have only two Missionary Secretaries for the next four years.

The Conference dispensed with the assistant secretary of the Board of Church Extension.

Report No. 5 of the Committee on Temperance was adopted by an overwhelming vote.

Conference adjourned with the benediction.

NIGHT SESSION.

The session was occupied in discussing the report of the Committee on Education, and the Conference adjourned with this report still pending. The report will doubtless be adopted with slight modification.

THIRTEENTH DAY.

After the usual devotional exercises and the reading of the Minutes, several committee reports were read and placed upon the calendar.

At ten o'clock balloting began for General Conference officers. The following was the result of the election: Book Agents, J. D. Barbee and D. M. Smith; editor Nashville Advocate, E. E. Hoss; Church Extension Secretary, David Morton.

The Conference then proceeded to the election of Book Editor. John J. Tigert lacked only about twenty votes of being elected, and was elected on the second ballot by a good majority.

The first ballot was taken for Missionary Secretary. No election.

The Conference adjourned at the usual hour.

NIGHT SESSION.

Conference met at 8 P. M., and was opened with religious exercises conducted by Dr. Paul Whitehead. Bishop W. W. Duncan in the chair. Minutes of the morning session read and approved.

Bishop E. R. Hendrix took the chair.

A second ballot was taken for Missionary Secretaries.

The report of the Committee on Epworth Leagues, made the order of the day for this hour, was taken up.

The second ballot resulted in the election of Rev. H. C. Morrison for Missionary Secretary.

Another ballot was then taken for the other Missionary Secretary.

The order of the day was resumed. Much discussion occurred on the item as to whether we should have an Epworth League Book Editor and Secretary in one man or a man for each of these offices.

The third ballot resulted in the election of W. R. Lambuth as Missionary Secretary.

The Constitution for the Epworth League was amended, and, pending other amendments, the Conference adjourned.

FOURTEENTH DAY.

Conference met at 9 A. M., and was opened with religious exercises led by Dr. Rush, of Baltimore. Bishop Hendrix in the chair. Minutes of the last session read and approved.

(It should have been mentioned in last week's issue that the appeal of Rev. G. A. Mandeville from the decision of the Louisiana Conference was, after careful consideration, reversed by the Committee on Appeals; hence Bro. Mandeville is restored to all his privileges in the church and as a member of the Louisiana Conference.)

Bishop Key took the chair

The regular order of business was then taken up.

A resolution of sympathy with, and of the highest commendation of, Rev. W. P. Harrison, D. D., now just closing a long term of service as Book Editor and editor of the Review, was adopted.

Many reports were made by the several committees, the majority of them for non-concurrence in the several resolutions and memorials considered.

The report of the Committee on Church Extension made a highly complimentary report of the condition and work of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

A report from the Sunday-school Committee in regard to Children's Day collections stirred quite a lively debate, but the report was adopted.

The report of the Committee on Education, creating a Board of Education, stirred an animated and extended debate, which took a wide range. The report was adopted.

NIGHT SESSION.

Conference met at 8 P. M., and was opened with religious exercises by Dr. Newton, of Japan. Bishop Key in the chair. Minutes of previous session read and approved.

Bishop A. G. Haygood took the chair.

The report of the Committee on Episcopacy, referring to the passage of the character of the Bishops, was taken up, and after some efforts to recommit the report, which were unsuccessful, the report was adopted.

A Committee of Five was ordered to select the most important items on the calendar to be brought forward.

A telegram was received from Bishop Jno. F. Hurst, of the M. E. Church, expressing gratification at the action of this General Conference in endorsing the American University.

The report of the Committee on Epworth Leagues, still pending when the Conference adjourned Saturday night, was again taken up. The adoption of this report stirred many of the brethren to make their best speech. The report was finally adopted.

The Conference adjourned with the benediction by Bishop Haygood.

FIFTEENTH DAY.

Conference met at 9 A. M., and was opened with religious exercises by Dr. Jones, of South Carolina. Bishop Haygood in the chair. Minutes of the previous session read and approved. In the matter of approving the Minutes there appeared to be a difference of opinion between Dr. Paul Whitehead and Dr. J. F. Mangum as to whether the "moon is or is not made out of green cheese."

Bishop Fitzgerald took the chair.

A resolution of sympathy and condolence with the family of J. B. Lawrence, "Uncle Larry," of Virginia, who died this week, was passed.

It was resolved that when we adjourn we adjourn to meet at 3 P. M.

Many leaves of absence were asked for.

Reports from Standing Committees called for. Many reports were presented and passed to the calendar.

The Committee on Appeals reported that the case of Rev. D. C. Kelley, of the Tennessee Conference, was reversed.

The report of the Committee on Chapters vii and viii of the Discipline. These chapters, as before when the report of the commission appointed by the last General Conference was up for consideration, provoked much discussion and many amendments. The chapters were finally adopted as a whole.

A ballot was taken for Sunday-school Secretary. While the tellers were counting the vote Dr. J. J. Tigert and some scores of others entered a protest against the manner in which Chapters vii and viii of the Discipline were pushed to final adoption. A Committee of Three was ordered to reply to this protest.

No election for Sunday-school Secretary. Another ballot taken. No election on the second ballot for Sunday-school Secretary. Another ballot taken. On the third ballot Rev. W. D. Kirkland, D. D., editor of the Southern Christian Advocate, was elected. Dr. Kirkland is well known to the church, and has already given full proof of his eminent fitness for this important and responsible position.

The report of the Committee on Federation, suggesting a long step towards this desirable end, brought out a substitute and a brief, but suggestive, discussion. The report of the committee was adopted.

Benediction by Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Conference met at 3 P. M., and was opened with prayer by Dr. E. K. Miller. Bishop Fitzgerald in the chair. Minutes of the previous session read and approved.

Bishop Wilson took the chair.

A ballot was taken for Secretary of the Epworth League.

The report of the Committee on Boundaries was taken up, and as usual brought out much discussion. Every "inch of ground was warmly contested."

The first, second and third ballot for Secretary of Epworth League resulted in no election.

NIGHT SESSION.

After the usual devotional exercises, balloting for Epworth League Secretary was resumed, and S. A. Steel was elected.

Balloting began for Secretary of Education. On the second ballot W. W. Smith, of Virginia, was elected.

A number of reports which we will not attempt to itemize were adopted.

SIXTEENTH DAY.

Conference convened at 9 A. M., and was opened with prayer by Dr. Wilson, of Memphis. Bishop J. C. Granbery in the chair. Minutes of the previous session read and approved.

Bishop R. K. Hargrove took the chair.

Drs. Paul Whitehead and Collins Denny were appointed a Committee of Two to revise Chapters vii and viii of the Discipline, to correct such grammatical and rhetorical errors as may be found in them.

Bishop Keener, on behalf, presented the dissent, or veto, of the college of Bishops to paragraph 260 of Chapter vii of the Discipline, as this chapter was adopted on Saturday. This paragraph, as understood by the Bishops, is violative of the constitutional right of preachers to be tried by their peers. Much discussion grew out of this, but it all blew away in wind.

A resolution was adopted fixing the first Thursday in May, 1898, as the day for the meeting of the next General Conference.

The Conference provided that members of an Annual Conference may be allowed to go to school without losing place and standing in the Conference.

Strong resolutions were passed in regard to a more careful regard to the observance of the Sabbath. This is a matter of prime importance, and deserves the careful and prayerful consideration of all our people.

The question of a quorum was called in question and a test vote taken, and it was found that a quorum voted.

The "ayes" and "noes" were ordered on the matter of taking a paper from the table, and this call occupied much time.

A motion to adjourn sine die at 1 P. M. to-day stirred some discussion. This motion was lost.

Conference adjourned with the benediction by Bishop Hargrove.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Conference convened at 3 P. M., and was opened with prayer by Dr. Downing. Bishop Hargrove in the chair. Minutes of the previous session read and approved.

Bishop Duncan took the chair.

A petition was presented from the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, asking the rulers of the world to prohibit the introduction of strong drink into Africa. This petition was endorsed by the Conference.

Report No. 8 of the Committee on Itinerancy, made the order of the day for this hour, was taken up and adopted.

Resolutions of thanks to everybody for kindness and courtesy in all matters of entertainment and accommodation were passed.

A committee was ordered to examine and see if any changes have been made in the Articles of Religion since 1784, and to report to the next General Conference.

Some reports on minor points by several of the Standing Committees.

It was provided that applicants for license to preach can be examined by a committee appointed by the presiding elder before the District Conference. This will allow of more care in the examination of candidates for the ministry.

A report giving the pastor charge of all the services in his church was adopted.

A strong resolution condemnatory of the Louisiana Lottery was adopted.

Sundry committee reports were adopted.
